CHAPTER XV.

A Sweet Parting.

He screamed and threw her out Holton's neck.

He was pale but determined, sought the girl's hands, while dragged gently at her arms.

Garcia, accompanied by several staff, broke through the Cubans and stopped near the girl.

The days went on. It now seemed assured that the surrender was but a matter of short time, and Holton spent the period in enjoying a well-earned rest.

At length, on July 15, General Toral and his staff rode out to San Juan to where General Shafter and General Miles and their staffs awaited him under the famous tree.

After a long discussion General Toral and his officers turned and rode toward the city, and the American generals returned to their lines.

At headquarters Holton found that the conference of the generals had ended. General Miles was preparing to go with his men to Porto Rico, leaving Shafter, with his Fifth Army corps, to gather alone the fruits of his victory.

The men were jubilant, but many were beginning to succumb to the physical effects of their life in the wet trenches. Cuban fever was raging in every command, and men who, when Holton first saw them, were the embodiment of vigorous health and manly strength, were now lying helpless in the crowded hospital camps, their faces emaciated and yellow.

As for Holton, his health remained excellent. Natural resources had kept the fever in his blood at low ebb, and now he was confident that the last traces had been kicked out of his system. He looked rather expectantly for orders from the admiral recalling him to the squadron, but none came, and so he settled himself down to await developments, hopeful that his recent strenuous career had ended, and that for a time at least he might anticipate days of comparative ease.

On the 17th of July, General Shafter, his staff, brigade commander, and a goodly body of troops left the trenches and, with bands playing and flags flying, marched up the trail leading into Santiago, where the surrender took place before the two armies. Then the march continued into the city.

The Spanish soldiers, some twenty-two thousand men (Holton had underestimated their number), were to be shipped to Spain, and nothing remained to be done but to assume the reins of military government and set things in order.

house. Here he waited. Why he knew not. What had come over him? Something inside was dampening the ardor with which he had set out on this important journey, and placing his spirits under a pall of utterly unreasonable foreboding.

An incubus of doubt, almost of dread, settled upon him, and try as he would he could not shake it off. And yet what nonsense! Here in the broad light of this beautiful, scintillating day to feel emotions which might be natural to a schoolgirl when alone in the dark!

At length, with sudden resolution, he came out of his hiding-place, mounted his horse and rode boldly up the driveway. He alighted at the door-step, tethered his steed alongside the two other ponies, and mounting the steps, rang the bell, the echoes of which he could hear jangling and clattering throughout the house.

Awaiting a reply to his summons for some time, and receiving none, he pulled the bell again, now with irritable energy. Almost on the instant the door was flung open and Miss La Tossa, still in her hunting suit, and accompanied by Pierre, stood before him.

She looked at him with cold, inquiring eyes, and Holton with a gasp stopped short. "Why—why—" His voice failed him.

As the girl still regarded him with cold, vacuous eyes, Holton flushed angrily. He drew himself up very stiffly. "I—I beg pardon," he said. "I fear I—I came here under some sort of a misunderstanding."

A gleam of an expression crossed the girl's face. "Pierre," she remarked to her attendant, who stood rigidly at her side, "this is the gentleman we met near Sevilla, is it not?"

Pierre glanced at Holton, his face filled with an expression of savage hatred. "It is, senorita," he replied. "Yes, we met this gentleman at Sevilla, Pierre, and he said several things. Did he not, Pierre?"

"Yes, senorita." "And, Pierre, what did he say?" "He said that the Americans were to remain faithful to their promise, and that Cuba, after Santiago was captured, was to be placed in the control of the Cuban army."

"Yes," the Cuban girl had not glanced at Holton, who stood listening, rigid and angry. "Yes, Pierre," she repeated; "and so Santiago was captured by the Americans—and the Cubans. And did the Americans keep their promise, that sacred promise?"

CHICAGO IN RUNNING FOR WESTERN HONORS

Michigan Aggies Down Badgers and Chicago Stops Purdue Eleven.

The Michigan Aggies lived up to their reputed strength on the gridiron by defeating the University of Wisconsin Saturday by a score of 12 to 7. The Michigan farmers played Wisconsin off her feet and clearly outclassed the Badgers in the first half when all the scoring was done by the Aggies.

Allis has flown thick and fast from Wisconsin since the Aggies' victory, and it may be that the Badgers were run off their feet early and that the breaks favored the Michigan outfit, but nevertheless the Lansing eleven scored a decisive win with two touchdowns and went home to hang up the scalp of Wisconsin alongside that of Michigan, garnered a week ago Michigan is another team that has sprung a surprise on the coaches by showing fight.

Coach Zuppke, of Illinois, who is not spending much time expaining the possibilities of his team, is making rapid progress toward a record year for the Illini. Illinois already has easily beaten Kentucky, Missouri, North western and Indiana, and may continue in this vein until Thanksgiving day put an end to the football season for another year.

Wisconsin is still in the running for "big nine" honors, but the stock of the badgers has dropped many points since their defeat Saturday, and their tie game with Purdue. Several wagers have been recorded in Chicago that the maroons defeat Wisconsin this year, and all preliminary signs point to such a happening.

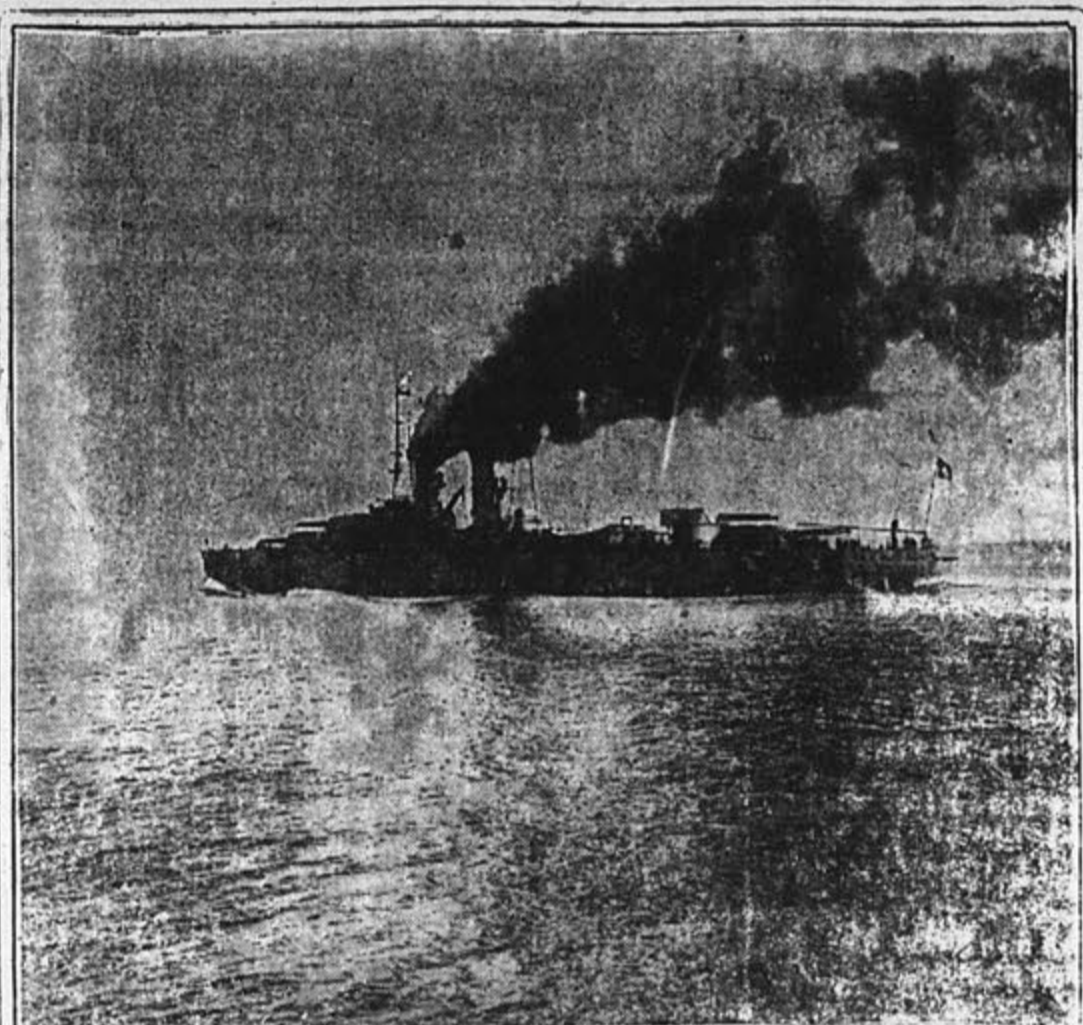

Minnesota did not have more than a workout with North Dakota, and still is to be judged as to its possibility against Chicago and Wisconsin. The gophers were unusually strong this year, and with a host of veterans on the lineup, and there are many who still believe that the big honors will go to the North. Minnesota meets Wisconsin Saturday at Madison, and it is safe to say that there will be some battle before that game is relegated to history.

Poor old Northwestern is having the worst time in its gridiron history. Coach Grady has been up against it from the first day, as almost every practice has disabled one man or another until he was not sure who he could rely upon. The team has been shattered and torn until now it resembles a hospital more than a squad of warriors.

Chicago, Oct. 29.—There will be no strike of the 1,500 telegraphers of the Rock Island system. Points at issue were adjusted today after two weeks of conferences conducted through G. Wallace W. Hanger, an assistant commissioner of mediation and conciliation.

Concessions were made by both sides, the principal one being made by the railroad company, which granted an increase of 5 per cent in wages, or $45,000 a year.

NEW DREADNAUGHT MAKES GOOD IN SPEED TRIALS.

The new dreadnaught, Texas, the newest and largest addition to the American Navy, had her recent speed trials during the battle practice of the Atlantic Fleet off the Virginia Capes, and came up to the requisite tests in good shape.

Not only is the Texas the largest vessel in the Navy, but she is also the most powerful in both offense and defense. Her armor plate is as heavy and as near perfection as it is possible to put on a ship at the present time, and she carries a heavy battery and more guns than any ship afloat.

In her trial tests she blew out an engine valve, but this slight accident will only keep her out of commission a short time.

MAPLE HOLDING ITS OWN

Though at one time in the early history of the country an average of 6000 maple trees were destroyed in clearing the ordinary New York or Pennsylvania farm, maple is today, according to the department of agriculture, one of the most widely used and valuable native hardwoods.

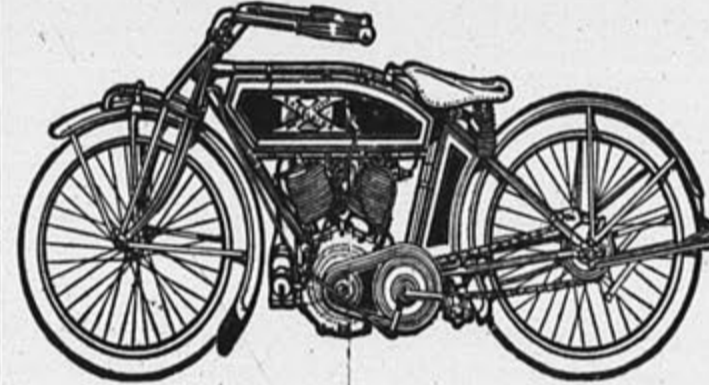

Sugar maple stands near the top of the list of furniture woods in this country. The so-called "birds eye" effect, the department explains, is probably due to buds which for some reason cannot force their way through the bark, but which remain just beneath it year after year.

Maple, the department goes on to say, is one of the chief woods used for agricultural implements and farm machinery, being so employed because of its strength and hardness.

Seven species of maple grow in the United States, of which sugar maple, sometimes called hard maple, is the most important. The total cut of maple in the United States annually amounts to about 1,150,000,000 feet.

If ever a play will give an audience its money's worth, it will be "The Pink Lady," which comes to the Peterson on Sunday, November 2. Rich and warm it is one of the best musical offerings of a decade and when all the ephemeral nonsense and soulless music that masquerades under that

One of the first acts of the Americans was to release political prisoners from confinement, and then as evening fell the lights were lighted, the bands played in the patio of the palace, the Venus restaurant overflowed with American officers, the streets were crowded with men, women and children.

Meanwhile what were the Cubans doing? Many of them had their homes in Santiago and naturally they were anxious to return to them, and had fully expected to do so. Now by official mandate of the Americans they were barred from the gates.

Holton knew enough of the fiery temper of these men to realize that Garcia and the other commanding officers must sway great authority over their soldiers if they were to hold them in leash under such a situation as this.

CLOVERLAND BOOSTED BY A SPECIAL WRITER

Staff Correspondent of Milwaukee Newspaper Finds This Section Ideal

G. E. Vanercook, special correspondent for the Milwaukee Evening Wisconsin, boasts Cloverland in an article in yesterday's issue of that newspaper. He says:

"Cloverland! Where is Cloverland? It is the Upper Peninsula of Michigan."

This slogan, descriptive and encompassing, is a watchword influence in the development of a new agricultural empire. An empire hundreds of miles in extent, fertile, capable of cultivation and with a lavish promise of reward for those who engage in farming.

There are fifteen counties in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan included under the name of Cloverland. While other sections of our country possessing but one natural resource, may be deemed favored in Cloverland there are three basic opportunities, three golden chances for success resting upon nature's original gift to man. This section has its mines of proven wealth in iron and copper, its remaining forests of hardwood timber, and, immeasurably more valuable than both, its millions of acres awaiting farm development. The settlement of these lands means the furnishing of homegrown food supplies to feed the thousands of workers in mine, forest and factory. The workers are here. The farmers are not in sufficient numbers to feed a constantly increasing industrial population.

To secure farmers who will work the surface of the land and under most favorable natural as well as unequalled industrial conditions, transform Cloverland into one of the best producing sections of the country, is the problem and effort of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau. This organization consists of the business men, farmers, mine owners, land owners and in fact, of all interests and individuals having the welfare of Cloverland at heart. Col. Charles W. Mott, for many years general immigration agent for the Northern Pacific railroad, and one of the best known as well as most efficient men in the entire country, is secretary-manager and the directing agent for the association.

Farm Development Delayed.

That the agricultural development of this section should have been neglected for so many years, in face of the demonstrated success of the farm wherever throughout Cloverland the attempt has been made, is due to the fact that the entire population, almost has since earliest days, been interested in mining and lumbering. The copper country to the north and the intervening ranges of iron mines, with an output aggregating hundreds of millions of dollars in value, is a sufficient inducement to stimulate the industrial activity of any set of men. Then too, nature most lavishly furnished this entire Upper Peninsula with a growth of pine and hardwood timber which in quality and value could not be equalled. It is the old, old story with ever the same result. The pine has been stripped from the land and floated down the streams and rivers. In more recent years and under more modern methods, the railroads have been used to transport logs to factory points elsewhere. Big fortunes have been made bigger because of nature's gift in forest values to the Upper Peninsula. Notwithstanding the vast acreage cut during more than half a century of lumbering, the largest tracts of hardwood timber to be found anywhere on the continent, are still located in the counties of Cloverland. Up to recently, directly and indirectly, the entire population has been too busy taking the iron and copper from the storehouses under the ground and the timber growing on the ground, to give much attention to the incalculably valuable as well as assured profits from farming. Just about enough along this line has been done to most successfully prove what can be done.

THE PINK LADY.

Messrs. Fisher and Stevens will present the most popular of all musical comedies of the present generation, "The Pink Lady" at the Peterson on Sunday, Nov. 2.

"The Pink Lady," written by C. M. S. McLellan, with music by Ivan Caryll, has taken its position as the greatest musical comedy produced in years. With a rattling good story, full of honest fun, with music that is a delight, an excellent cast including many pretty girls, it is not to be wondered that its success has been so conspicuous. It is best described as a happy medium between the better class of musical comedy and opera bouffe, with the fun evolved from the humorous complications of the story.

In the way of magnificence of scenery and costumes nothing presented in years can compare with "The Pink Lady." The beautiful gowns worn by the young ladies of the company are the latest creations of the most fashionable shops in Paris and will have an especial appeal to the women who attend the performance of "The Pink Lady", who will naturally be interested in knowing what will be worn by fashionable people on this side of the water during the coming season.

The delightful musical comedy will be seen here with many of the New York and London company, including Olga DeBaugh, Elsa von Bostel, Louise Kay, James McElhern, George Harvey, John Mundy, Russell Lennon, Alfred Derry, Alice Muffet, Lucie Carter, Charles Hines, Lee Townsend, Abott Adams, Jack Hall, Mortimer Meyer, and the famous pink of perfection singer and dancing girls. This company includes a number of the favorites of the long runs at the new Amsterdam Theatre in New York and the Globe Theatre in London.

BUILT RIGHT.

Stomach, Nerves and Thinker Restored by Grape-Nuts Food.

The number of persons whose ailments were such that no other food could be retained at all, is large and reports are on the increase.

"For 12 years I suffered from dyspepsia, finding no food that did not distress me," writes a Wis. lady. "I was reduced from 145 to 90 lbs., gradually growing weaker until I could leave my bed only a short while at a time, and became unable to speak aloud."

"Three years ago I was attracted by an article on Grape-Nuts and decided to try it.

"My stomach was so weak I could not take cream, but I used Grape-Nuts with milk and lime water. It helped me from the first, building up my system in a manner most astonishing to the friends who had thought my recovery impossible.

"Soon I was able to take Grape-Nuts and cream for breakfast and lunch at night, with an egg and Grape-Nuts for dinner.

"I am now able to eat fruit, meat and nearly all vegetables for dinner, but fondly continue Grape-Nuts for breakfast and supper.

"At the time of beginning Grape-Nuts I could scarcely speak a sentence without changing words around or 'talking crooked' in some way but I have become so strengthened that I no longer have that trouble." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

"There's a reason," and it is explained in the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pks.

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

HOUSEKEEPERS Must be Watchful

For great efforts are being made in this vicinity to sell baking powders of inferior class, made from alum acids and lime phosphates, both undesirable to those who require high-grade cream of tartar baking powder to make clean and healthful food.

The official Government tests have shown Royal Baking Powder to be a pure, healthful, grape cream of tartar baking powder, of highest strength, and care should be taken to prevent the substitution of any other brand in its place.

Royal Baking Powder costs only a fair price per pound, and is cheaper and better at its price than any other baking powder in the world.
