

British Plans For Cutting Off The Food And Supplies To Germany Are Announced—German Cruiser Lost

SUMMARY OF THE DAY'S WAR NEWS

The latest developments in the war situation shows the Germans to be starting another move in the direction of Przemysl, the Galician stronghold. In an effort to relieve the garrison of that city which has been subjected to the attacks for several months. Mystery is said to envelop the latest move of von Hindenberg in Poland, his moves being capable of several different motives.

DRESDEN GOES TO THE BOTTOM; LACK OF WAR MATERIAL A PROBLEM

GERMAN CRUISER DRESDEN LOST—NO DETAILS OF SINKING—BRITISH WAR SECRETARY DISCLOSES SITUATION.

London, March 15. (Special, 4:15 p. m.)—The British Admiralty announced this afternoon that the German cruiser Dresden had been destroyed.

No further details of the sinking of the Dresden have been received up to the time of going to press this afternoon.

London, March 15. (Special, 4:15 p. m.)—The British Admiralty gave a brief review of the war situation in the house of Commons, last night in which he said that only trench fighting had been possible for the past several weeks, but that the morale of the British army had not been affected thereby.

He stated that the attacks of the English at Nueve Chappelle had been successful and that the British troops had taken the offensive in that region.

The secretary referred to the Indian troops and to their gallantry and speaks in glowing terms of the French soldiers, especially in the Champagne where they had "shown the evidence of a powerful trophy." He said the situation at the Dardenelles was well in hand and was progressing satisfactorily.

The progress in equipping England's new armies has been retarded by the failure to get labor and materials necessary for that purpose, he stated.

"The supply of war material is a serious matter and is causing considerable worry," he stated.

HINDENBERG, MYSTERY LEADER

London, March 15.—Mystery envelops the advance of General von Hindenberg into Poland, but it is the opinion of the British military observers that the vast forces along the Niemen and Vistula rivers cannot be longer kept from a decisive encounter unless it undergoes a decided change.

Operations in the east indicate that the Germans are successful in the forest of Augustowa while the Russ have fallen back to Grodno.

Last night's Paris statement says that the British successes in Nueve Chappelle have been of more substantial character than at first believed. The French are making more progress in Belgium.

CRIME WAVE FAILS TO FOLLOW DOPE LAW HERE

While the newspapers of Illinois, Detroit and other places in this section, and in fact over the entire mid-west, are filled with accounts of the establishment of emergency hospitals for "dope fiends," who, when deprived of their customary "sniff" and "shots" of morphine, cocaine and other dope, go wrong, this city is said to be free from that condition.

The police of many cities have been kept busy since the enactment of that law, on an effort to curb the crime wave that has followed. There has been no trouble from this source in Escanaba, according to the police.

WOMAN'S CLUB TO ASK "HEALTH WEEK" OF CITY

Communication Will Be Presented to City Council, Tomorrow

According to information contained in a communication to be presented to the health department of the city council, at its meeting of tomorrow night, the Woman's Club health committee will ask that a week be set aside during the month of May to be known officially as, "Good Health Week."

The women ask that an appropriation of a comparatively small sum, $100 or less, be made for this purpose. It is also understood that the state health department will send a comprehensive exhibit here on that occasion. The expense that will be incurred in only in the renting of a suitable hall where the exhibit can be placed when it arrives. Accompanying the exhibit will be several lecturers, their expenses being paid by the state.

It is believed by members of the health committee who have this project under their wing, that it will result in the greatest of good to the community, and they are certain that the wisest possible method will be taken in it by the citizens of Escanaba.

The Communication—The following is a copy of the petition that will be presented to the council, tomorrow: The Health Department, City Council, Escanaba, Mich., Gentlemen:

The Escanaba Woman's Club is making plans for a "Good Health Week," in May, the date to be set later, at which time the State Health department will co-operate by sending an exhibit with an attendant in charge of same, as well as four lecturers.

Education along these lines is needed in every city and that Escanaba is no exception was proven when the health car sent out by the state last summer was visited by great crowds of people, when it was in this city for but a few hours.

It is reasonable to suppose an exhibit of greater scope, to be shown for a week, in a location accessible to everyone, will draw a large attendance and do much to instruct the public in preventing disease by proper living and sanitation.

The lecturers who will be here with this exhibit are all experts in their special lines of work and their talks should prove of great value to the public.

That this exhibit is in great demand in the lower part of the state was proven when an attempt was made to secure it for this city in April, there being no open time in that month.

Slight Local Expense—The expense of shipping the exhibit. (Continued on page six)

BRING GLEE CLUB HERE

According to announcements made today, the final arrangements for the coming of the Wennerberg Male Chorus, of Augustana college, Ill., have been completed and the big group of singers from the Illinois school will appear in Escanaba on April 9, at the Swedish Lutheran church.

Early in November, plans were made to bring the glee club to this city but were not fully completed at all. With the chorus is a violinist of note, who will present a splendid program in addition to the numbers by the chorus and by the reader who will accompany the group.

LINCOLN BEACHY KILLED

Famous Airman Drops 3,000 Feet at San Francisco—Body in Bay

(By Associated Press.) San Francisco, March 15.—The spectacular career of Lincoln Beachy, said to be the most daring and spectacular of American aviators came to a close yesterday when his machine collapsed three thousand feet in the air over the Golden Gate and he dropped into the bay. His body was recovered two hours later, strapped into the seat of the machine. He had been unable to free himself after dropping into the water. A new machine, of the monoplane type, which Beachy used for the first time, proved his death trap. The fall followed a sensational perpendicular drop, which he had often performed in his trim little biplane.

The opening of the Escanaba Health Institute, scheduled for Wednesday, March 17, has been postponed for a few days, stated Dr. P. J. Flanagan, of the institute today. An unforeseen delay in the completion of work is the cause, he said. The opening date, however, will be announced in a day or two.

PERTINENT FACTS IN MICHIGAN'S HISTORY

The death of Michigan's "boy governor," Stephen T. Mason, occurred in New York city on Jan. 4, 1942. In 1841, shortly after his retirement from politics, Mason removed from Detroit to New York, where he engaged in the practice of law. Two years later he was stricken with scarlet fever and succumbed to the disease.

News of Mason's demise was received in Michigan with manifestations of genuine grief. Impromptu memorial services were held at Detroit with all departments of the state government participating.

Gov. Mason's body was buried in an obscure New York cemetery until 1905, when the Michigan legislature appointed a commission to superintend its removal to Michigan. On June 4, the body was transferred to Detroit, where, with imposing civic and military services, it was buried in Capitol park, on the site of the state's first aptol building.

Auditor General Fuller Makes Statement in Rate Matter

Auditor General O. B. Fuller of this city, in favor of allowing the railroads an increase in rates. He states, in a published article of recent date in the Lansing State Journal, favors "a law that allow the railroads to operate without loss."

The following is a copy of the statement issued by Mr. Fuller to the State Journal: Lansing, Mich., March 1, 1915.

As a member of the senate in 1907, when the two-cent fare bill was before the legislature, I opposed a flat rate of two cents and was in favor of an amendment allowing certain railroads in the upper peninsula to charge three cents and railroads of the class of the Pere Marquette and Ann Arbor railroads to charge two and one-half cents. However, when this amendment was defeated, I voted for the bill. I favor a law which will allow the railroads to operate without loss.

HEAR HEAVY FIRING AT DUNKIRK; YOUNG TURKS FACING BAD SITUATION

BELIEVED BRITISH BOMBARDING DUNES AT DUNKIRK—CONSTANTINOPLE SAID TO BE IN TURMOIL—DRASTIC MEANS TAKEN AGAINST GERMANY BY BRITISH.

Paris, March 15.—Violent cannonading has been heard at a point north east of Dunkirk, according to a despatch from the correspondent of the Havas agency at that place. It is the belief that the British Warships are bombarding the sand dunes in the vicinity of that city.

The British government plans to co-operate with the allies in cutting off the trade with Germany and from that country were announced today in London. The plans contain some drastic provisions for holding ships carrying cargoes to and from Germany and for confiscating goods of German origin, whether coming or going.

An authoritative denial was given today that Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria had refused to give any territorial concessions to Italy.

Today's reports show that there has been but little important fighting in the western theatre of war.

The Germans have made attempts again in France and Belgium, and in the Argonne region, which according to the French reports, have all been repulsed. German reports state that some progress has been made here.

New Phase Revealed. A new phase of the eastern campaign developed today in the statement by the Austro-German forces in Galicia to force their way towards Przemysl the Galician stronghold which has stood before the drive and attacks of the Russian troops since shortly after the start of the war in the east. The resistance of this city to the Russ attacks has been one of the striking episodes of the war.

A Paris paper says that Premier Venizelos of Greece, before resigning had offered the services of 8,000 Grecian troops in the Dardenelles expedition that was proposed. Venizelos is against the stand of the Grecian government for neutrality. Bulgaria is said to be considering the expediency of entering the war and is at the present undecided as to whether she will enter on the side of the allies or with the Turks.

London says that the steamers Floritana, cadlands and Hartdale, previously reported sunk by submarine or mines, have been torpedoed by German submarines and are now on the bottom.

In France and Belgium the offensive operations are said to be forced by the allies.

YOUNG TURKS IN QUANDRY

Paris, March 15.—The Havas agency says: "News reaching here from Constantinople says that the young Turks are finding their position difficult. Many Germans now in the city and who have sent their families to places of safety are trying to convince the population that the Dardanelles are impregnable.

"The cruiser Sultan Selim, formerly the German cruiser Goben, undoubtedly is out of commission. A rent 18 yards long in her armor is visible, evidently caused by a Turkish mine.

Admission to the event will be thirty-five cents for adults and ten cents for children. It is announced that the first show will start promptly at 7:15 o'clock and the second at 8:30 o'clock. In addition to the musical numbers above, the film story of the old Irish love story, "Arrah La Pough" will be shown in three reels.

Manager Jacobs announced today that the regular bill of vaudeville would be given in addition to the above program.

HEAR CONFERENCE REPORT AT BAPTIST

A splendid report on the recent Boys' conference at Calumet was read to the members of the First Baptist church Sunday morning by Charles Sherlock, delegate from the Sunday school of that church. Mr. Sherlock touched upon the big things of that meeting in a very clear and interesting manner.

A MOTHER "DIES IN INFANCY," SAYS A HEALTH REPORT

It is queer what some people will do and say, and sometimes write, but it remains for the recorder of the vital statistics of the state to make public some of the best of these things.

SOME JOKER, THIS COUNTY CLERK IS

On a recent evening, the phone rang in the office of one of the city's newspapers. "Hello," called the man on duty at the desk.

"Here bane a party, maybe you can vant it?" queried the voice, unmistakably that of a person of Swedish extraction.

"Sure," came the ready response. Then came a string of jargon, telling, presumably, of a party that was held at the home of a local family, by the small daughter.

Finally the age of the child was given, and a moment later again mentioned but different in both instances. "What was that? Thought you said she was nine years old," said the reporter.

A hearty laugh followed this sally and the telephone hung up.

Somewhat skeptical of the story, it was laid aside. Some time later, County Clerk Pepin walked in and shortly spoke of the above story.

A grin spread across the face of both clerk and newspaperman. "Some kidding," said the newspaperman. The county clerk was the joker.

SENATE HOLDS UP BILL

Proposed Measure Would Bar Contractors Planning Own Work.

Lansing, Mich., March 15.—The bill prepared by the state architects' association, introduced by Senator Verderer to control those practicing the profession of agriculture, struck a snag in the senate Thursday.

The chief objection seems to be that it will, if enacted, bar contractors who while well enough versed in the art of drawing plans, are not graduates of some architectural school. This point was raised by Senator Wood, and Senator Verderer admitted that contractors would be excluded.

Senator Hanley, who was in the chair, took the position that the bill referred only to those who held themselves out to the public as architects. Senator Foster also took this view.

CHAPTER XXVII.

"A Traitor to John Dorr."
RUTH GALLON awakened at dawn and looked about her, trying to remember what had happened and where she was. Slowly there came back to her the scenes of riot in Bham, the assault on the hotel and their own subsequent flight.

Around her the natives lay in postures of sleep. Not far away, within arm's reach, John Dorr was still unconscious of the new day.

Apart sat Sir Donald, rife on his knees, bowed in drowsiness after his night's vigil.

She called over to Faversham, and he roused himself, apparently much embarrassed that he had been found watching over the slumbers of his company.

A moment later the whole camp was up, and breakfast was soon dispatched. "Now for a council of war," the baronet said presently. "So far we have made good our escape from the fanatics, and I believe now it would be wise to turn back and seek civilization again for the sake of Miss Ruth."

"Oh, I am good for any amount of this kind of travel," she exclaimed. "And I am wild to go ahead and find the idol and the plans."

"So far as we know, they are in Bham," Faversham remarked, with some prudence. "I don't intend that you shall risk your life again in such foolishness."

John Dorr had steadily grown more and more suspicious of the Englishman's attitude, and he now bitterly resented his assumption of guardianship over Ruth, the more so that he realized Faversham had extricated her once from a tangle of his making and was undoubtedly right when he proposed that she be placed in safety.

His first impulse was to insist that Ruth follow his plans, but second thought told him that he would be playing an unworthy part. "Where shall we take her?" he demanded.

"Back down the river to some city where there are Americans," was the response. "Bombay would be best of all."

"But that would leave me so far away!" Ruth protested. "I know John will insist on keeping after the plans, and I don't want to be left out of everything."

John Dorr joined Sir Donald in arguing that there was little sense in going on a wild goose chase and that she would be far better off with good people of her own race.

"But who?" she demanded at last. "We don't know any one."

"I do," Faversham put in quickly. "I know some awfully jolly Americans, too, missionaries. Then there's your American consul, you know."

It was settled at last, and they returned by easy stages to Bham and thence down the river.

Sir Donald was as good as his word, and Ruth found herself invited to stay as a guest at several houses.

She chose that of the American consul, a middle-aged gentleman, who, with his wife, presided with true eastern hospitality over a little group of business men and missionaries.

Mrs. Reynolds received the girl with open arms. Hasted to the story of her adventure and thanked God devoutly that Ruth was at last under the protection of fellow countrymen. "To John her language was plain: "What in the world do you mean by dragging this young lady over half creation and making her run all sorts of risks?"

"Nonsense!" said Mrs. Reynolds warmly. "You even let her discharge her maid. And of all the awful things—it's a wonder you haven't got her killed before now?"

John tried to explain that Ruth was a woman's girl used to looking after herself and that she had insisted on coming along.

"But that would leave me so far away!" Ruth protested.

"And I'm sure there is no place I'd rather leave her," Dorr said gratefully.

To the consul he confided briefly that he was still determined to find the idol and get the hidden plans.

"You may be too late," was the quiet response. "A man named Wilkerson and another man and a lady have already gone up country, and I am informed that they are on the same quest."

"All the more reason why I should hasten," Dorr answered. Every hour may be precious. I must see Sir Donald immediately."

To his surprise, Faversham was very cold about the second excursion.

"So long as it was a case of getting Miss Gallon and yourself out of a bad scrape, I did my best," he told Dorr.

"But I agree with your consul—an excellent fellow—that what you propose is ridiculous. The priests have ample warning, and I am informed that they took measures to secrete the idol. You can gain nothing by further search."

John argued with some temper, but Sir Donald was immovable.

And, as he most evidently had sound common sense on his side, Dorr could not afford to lose his temper.

"I suppose you'll help me out by letting me have that old servant of yours?" he said finally.

"Anything!" said Faversham cordially. "But I must certainly warn you once more that I shall feel guilty in even letting you go."

John's jaw stiffened.

"I guess it would be beyond your power to stop me."

Faversham shook his head. "A word from me to the authorities and you would find yourself not only debarred from such a foolhardy expedition, but politely yet firmly made to leave the country."

John grinned.

"I suppose that's right," he agreed. "But you won't be a spoil sport, will you?"

The baronet shook his head. "No, I won't. But I can't go myself. I'll stop here and have an eye out for Miss Gallon. Then if a rescue expedition is in order I can be here to head it."

For the moment John was blinded by a blaze of jealousy.

While he was risking his life for Ruth's sake Faversham would sit comfortably within the protection of his club and plot ways of winning Ruth.

He curtly accepted the offer of the servant and went off to make his preparations. These made, he sought Ruth.

He found her in a strange state of excitement. Evidently the consul and his wife had not spared pains to impress upon her the dangers of the proposed expedition.

"They're old grannies," was John's disrespectful comment. "Ruth, you know that without those plans we're helpless to make 'The Master Key' into what your father wanted it to be. I set out to get those plans, and I've not come this far to turn back."

"I know," she said miserably. "But everybody says it is all foolishness. Sir Donald—"

"Oh, that quitter!" he interrupted. "I know he prefers sitting around making love to you to doing something really worth while."

There was the glimmer of a smile on Ruth's lips as she answered meekly. "Then you don't think that sitting around and making love to me is worth while?"

For a moment John stood and stared at her. The blood rushed into his face.

Then the full meaning of her light evasion of his real meaning struck him like a blow between the eyes.

His heart was filled with love for her, a love that had grown and increased since the hour when he had first seen her at old Tom Gallon's door.

He had thought that his devoted service to her interests, his constant attention to the slightest detail that could insure her future happiness, would have published that love to her.

He was minded to tell her now, to forego all else in order to woo her for himself.

"Ruth," he began. But some subtle change in her manner froze the hot words on his lips.

"Well," he went on, controlling himself by a tremendous effort and trying to speak lightly, "I'll be off. Thank heaven you'll be safe here."

There was a struggle in Ruth's breast too. Yet the memory of her promise to Faversham stilled her.

In that long and terrible moment she realized that John Dorr was all in all to her. Yet she was bound to another who had risked his life on the strength of her promise to marry him, and she could not speak what was in her heart.

She tried to look John bravely in the eyes, and the tears would come in spite of her.

He had accepted her promise without undue exactions. He had seemed to be waiting till he and she could speak more definitely.

Faversham was by no means dull, and he played the part of a kind friend during the first days of John's absence.

He knew that Dorr was in love with Ruth, and he strongly suspected that her feelings for him had once bordered on love.

He would tear open no old wounds. He was devoted, cheerful, always at her call, but never insistent on his privileges.

The American consul liked him from the first and told his wife that Ruth would be a fool if she preferred a bare-brained idiot to a solid gentleman with no nonsense about him and assured position in society.

Mrs. Reynolds, having been rebuffed when she sought Ruth's confidences, merely stated it as her opinion that all girls were alike, a dogma the consul was too wise to argue.

But he gave Sir Donald the freedom of the consulate and saw to it that he had every chance to visit with Ruth.

Now, the baronet was not only no duillard, but he had been bred in a school that forbade him to linger too long before claiming Ruth openly as his fiancée.

At exactly the right moment he offered her a gorgeous ring and pressed his suit ardently. He said nothing of the promise he had exacted, and Ruth for very shame's sake accepted the ring and the ensuing congratulations of Mr. Reynolds, his wife and their friends.

Deep in her heart she felt herself a traitor to John Dorr, alone on his perilous errand, gone into the hills without even a stray word of his safety coming back.

It was not long before Dorr, through his servant's ready tongue, learned of the flight of the priests with the idol, their subsequent defeat by Wilkerson and that man's escape, together with Drake. There was but one thing to do—follow Wilkerson.

The native guide received the news of their change of objective with unobscured contentment.

Sir Donald's commands alone had forced him to disobey his own instincts. But in a matter that lay wholly between white men he saw nothing alarming to his own safety or personal dignity.

However, he warned John over and over again that the sacrifice had roused certain fanatical tribes to a pitch where they would ask few questions of wandering Europeans, but seek instant vengeance.

John's prayer was that Wilkerson and Drake might escape till he himself could overtake them.

Otherwise the idol would undoubtedly vanish once more into limbo.

Wilkerson himself was having a difficult time of it. The men with him were almost openly rebellious, and at every attempt to retrace his road to the coast he found himself cut off by wandering bands of hillmen whose attitude was too threatening to be mistaken.

"If you would only drop that idol," said Drake for the twentieth time, "they would be satisfied to take it and let us go."

Wilkerson laughed and shook his head. "That idol is going back to the States with me," he returned.

"But why in heaven's name?" demanded his companion. "You know that these people will never let us alone so long as they think we have it. You have the plans. What more do you want?"

"It brought me good luck and old Tom Gallon had luck," was the response. "Do you think I don't want to keep it? It's my mascot."

Yet a couple of night alarms shook Wilkerson's resolution, and he agreed with Drake that they should surrender the image.

Here they were confronted with a new difficulty. None of their men had been allowed to know of the presence of the idol, and Drake asserted that to inform them now would be dangerous.

It seemed unwise merely to drop it by the wayside, as it might escape notice, and no good would be done and the condition made that the white men should be allowed safe conduct to the city.

How to do this occupied their minds until the day when they found themselves really attacked in force and had to take refuge in a native hut.

Here their position was so perilous that they had no time for anything but preparations for defense.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

"THE Snake in the Image."
"THEY mean business this time," Drake growled as they did their best to barricade the single door and window. "I believe those hills are full of them."

"And our own bullets aren't up fighting with good grace, either," Wilkerson confessed. "These half whites have no sand."

"It's an odd thing," Drake said when the afternoon had passed without an assault, "that we hear firing, but none of it is directed at us."

"That's so," Wilkerson responded thoughtfully. "I wonder who it can be?"

He was soon to know, for after nightfall John Dorr and his single attendant rode furiously up to the hut and tried for admittance.

A few scattering shots told that they had been discerned in their flight.

For the moment Wilkerson did not recognize his old enemy, disguised as he was in native costume, but when he was sure he reluctantly opened the door and admitted him.

"That idol is going back to the States with me."

he stared at the man opposite him.

"Wilkerson!" he gasped.

"Yes, it's me," was the snarling response. "What are you doing here?"

"Some hillmen took us for enemies and chased us pretty much all day long," Dorr explained. "We saw this hut, and when it was dark enough to conceal our movements we made for it."

"And now you can make for some other place," Wilkerson said, handling his revolver meaningly.

John laughed.

"I feel myself that the place is too small for both of us. But it's white men against native now. If they get me they'll get you. Our only hope is to stick together now."

"I'll see you dead first!" snarled the other.

But Drake spoke up and silenced him.

"While you two are fighting for the benefit of the servants those hillmen are preparing to assault the hut."

A long look through a crack showed the hillmen closing up about them, and Wilkerson gave in with a bad grace.

He was glad of the help, however, when the firing grew hotter and they were hard pressed in the hut.

The natives proved themselves arrant cowards, and it depended on the three white men to defend the place.

This they did with such success that their assailants slowly withdrew.

"Now is the time for a sortie," said Dorr. "We've got to drive them clean away from here or else we'll be as badly off as ever."

Wilkerson and Drake agreed, and John promptly led them out in a wild rush against the nearest hillmen.

These were so surprised at the boldness of the maneuver that they fled, and soon the coast was clear except for a few too badly wounded to join in their comrades' flight.

Now that the immediate peril was past, Wilkerson and Dorr found themselves again antagonists.

But both were so wearied that by one accord they silently consented to a truce.

Yet Wilkerson could not resist taunting his rival.

"It looks as if you were always a little late," he said, throwing himself back in a settle while John dropped upon a stool by the table.

"I heard you got the idol," John replied in a dull tone.

"Yes, and what was in the idol too?" Then, despite Drake's gestures of remonstrance, he went on: "I got the deeds and the master key and the idol and the plans Tom Gallon robbed me of. I guess I'm ahead in this game."

John nodded, his fatigue so great that he was unable even to reply.

"I guess that's right," said Wilkerson in an altered tone. "We'll catch a little needed sleep and get away before daylight. Time enough then to talk."

For a little while both men kept their eyes open, watchful each of the other. Wilkerson was the first to laugh and say: "What's the use? I've got the things and the men to defend them. I'm going to sleep. You'd better do so too. Drake will keep watch."

John nodded carelessly and laid his head on his hands, folded on the table. A moment later he was asleep, and not long afterward Wilkerson's saturnine visage was turned to the shut oily ceiling.

Drake sat in a corner on the pack sacks, his revolver in hand.

CIVIC CENTERS

While the Woman's Club is working along the line of social and civic betterment, in various phases of the questions, their work naturally tends towards the civic center idea, in some measure. This is a phase of work that is being taken up larger and larger each year by organizations of this character, and the influence is becoming felt in an increasingly large area. The average citizen is becoming more and more interested in the civic or social center idea and one constantly hears talk of this nature, wherever he may be in attendance at a gathering of representative men or women.

A particularly clear and concise delineation of what a civic center means to any community is contained in an editorial of the Chicago Tribune, appended below.

The idea of a civic competition; in this case for the various sections of a rapidly growing American metropolis, is related and its advantages set forth in plain statements. Why not a civic competition in Escanaba along the same lines, though of course modified and changed to suit the peculiar conditions that are found here.

The Tribune says:
City and town planning is a recognized art. Governments have taken cognizance of it; national conferences have been held to advance it; periodicals are published to push it. Why not also neighborhood center planning? A city is not a circle or square with one center; it may have several or many "centers." These centers grow up naturally in obedience to movements of population, local needs, real estate enterprise, individual visions and calculations. Chicago has several neighborhood centers, but none was planned. New sections of the city are growing fast without proper provision for park and playground space, for public and private halls, for channels of neighborhood expression. Is there not an art of neighborhood center planning?

A competition arranged in conjunction with the public properties exhibition in the City Club is an attempt—the first of the kind—to furnish an answer to this question. The competition is not of the dandy or wonderland variety. Some of the competitors have studied local hints and local possibilities. Others have drawn on significant experience elsewhere. The aim is to inspire and guide alike, purely private and communal effort. Any neighborhood needs a church, a branch library, a dance hall, a theater, a playground, a school, a chain of stores, a club. Why not anticipate such needs and build according to a plan combining economy and beauty, utility and art? Why not foster the social and aesthetic life of a neighborhood instead of trusting to mere chance and sporadic activity? Why should not neighbors, officials, and artists come together and plan a neighborhood center somewhat ahead of crying need and certain profit? These things can be done and should be done. The object of the competition and prize is to stimulate enterprise along the lines indicated.

CLEAN-UP WEEK

The city is gradually—yes rapidly—approaching the break of winter with spring. The mind of the thoughtful and neat housewife is turning towards the clean-up following the winter season, desiring to get their rums and rugs scrubbed out once the last at the earliest opportunity and clean them before relaying. She will inspect the corners and nooks of her home with a broom or dust cloth, or as some one has said, in this age of modernity, she will take a vacuum nozzle and search out the dust laden corners and remove the offending accumulation.

Civic households; entire cities are taking to this idea more and more as the years roll by and the civic pride of that household is aroused in presenting a clean and sweet city at the first signs of the spring.

A clean-up week for Escanaba is suggested. Other communities in the Upper Peninsula have taken hold of the idea and are carrying it to a successful culmination. The Escanaba Woman's Club has prepared a petition to be presented to the city council at their meeting of tomorrow, asking for this very thing; that a week be set aside, to be designated as "Good Health Week," the tentative date being set for some time in the month of May.

However, what is needed in the civic way along this line, should be put under way at the present time—now—when the accumulations of the winter; the refuse and other material, that has been discarded and thrown into alley or back yard, can be cleaned up and disposed of.

This is imperative if the health of a community, and its sense of pride is to be maintained.

It is suggested that the Mayor be asked to issue a "Clean-Up" proclamation, setting the date for that event, whether one day or two or three days as soon as is consistent with the preparation of plans for such an event.
That great good can be accomplished in the cleaning up of the city and especially in the business section, is undisputed; it has been proved in innumerable other cities where the plan has been carried out.

Talk Clean-Up Week—ask your neighbor about it, then carry it into execution.
Let the citizens of Escanaba make this the cleanest as well as the most progressive of the Upper Peninsula cities. It must be done NOW.

The Child Welfare committee of the Woman's Club has broached a most timely and pertinent question in the recent announcement that they would work towards a plan for the securing of a full time health officer.
Cities of a size much smaller than Escanaba, and faced with sanitary and health matters of considerably less consequence have their paid, full time health officers. That their work has certainly paid for the expenditure involved, is patent, as a casual glance at the records of such cities will show.

A close supervision of every problem that comes up, definite and decisive action can be only had under such a system. A part time officer, no matter how efficient he may be, is handicapped in that he must, if he wishes to provide a living and competence for himself and family, continue his practice and devote the greater share of time to that end.

On the other hand, a full time health officer will have the opportunity of making a careful study of the questions that require solution in the city, and to do such other work as would naturally fall to the lot of such an officer.
There is chance for a consolidation of various other offices now in existence, only because of no central health head, with large enough authority. This a matter for thought, and it is intimated that such a move, if instituted would carry considerable support.

With the advent of the first warm weather, the roller skaters among the younger element are beginning to mass their strength in force. Each sidewalk in the residence section that is free of snow and ice, which most of them are at this time, has its quota of skaters. In some cases, especially at night the youngsters, perhaps without thought of the consequences, organize in bands of two or three and speed down the walks. Was to the unlucky pedestrian who happens to be so unfortunate as to get in the way of that dashing, speeding string of humanity.
The small folks must have their fun; they must be given an opportunity to exercise those growing bones and muscles, but there must also be a regard for the rights of others in that plan. During daylight skate to your heart's content, but please—during the evenings, after dark has fallen, be a little more careful and considerate of those who are forced to be out after dark.

A federated Young People's organization, composed of the societies of various city churches. The primary reason for this organization is to stem or to make towards the stemming of the rum tide, looking towards a salubrious city and county and state.
Great enthusiasm was manifested among the three hundred young, representing people of the city, assembled at the Methodist church, yesterday, and if an organized effort is made it is not doubted that a great good will be done.

We told you so—had a good idea that the weather man was shamming when he slipped up that nice weather last week. A little snow this morning and maybe some more tonight has no doubt sent that lonely robin seen last week, scurrying into some warm nest.
Escanaba church people will welcome to their midst a new face today. The ministerial association has gained a new member and it is hoped that the pastor of Rev. R. Stanley Brown in Escanaba will be filled with pleasure and plenty of good things.

The German ambassador at Washington says the Etel's captain had a right to sink the American ship Frer. Sure—that what they all say. Go ahead and sink some more of 'em,—then look out for your Uncle Sammy.

THE MASTER KEY
His mind went back to his first days of acquaintance with her in New York.

"I'll see you dead first!"
and he seemed again to feel the soft threads of the web she wove about him.
She had found him a young man at the precise point where a woman may either make or mar one for life.
He had been an easy prey for her tigerish desire for a slave. He had spent his little money lavishly upon her, without thought of other reward than to be near her, until Wilkerson had appeared out of the darkness of her past.
Even then he had still been faithful to her, obeyed her every behest, risked life and liberty in her service, even aided Wilkerson in an endeavor whose success meant that he (Drake) would be cast aside as no longer useful.
And now he sat on guard in a but in a far country among a crowd of aliens whose very tongue was gibberish to his ears.
On guard for whom? For what?
That Wilkerson might finally succeed and win Jean Darnell of the tawny eyes and luxuriant beauty.
In that moment—was it to be too late?—Drake came into his own. The mine and its wealth were as much his as Wilkerson's.
The plans were his as much as Wilkerson's.
Yet the man asleep on the settle had taken everything to himself and would continue to do so.
And Jean?
Drake laughed silently.
He knew her price. He remembered his last conversations with her, those half confidential talks when she had innocently warned him to keep a watchful eye on Wilkerson.
He had been given to understand that it was the gold she wished. And he (Drake) had the key to that gold in his own keeping for the while.
He set his teeth when he realized how Wilkerson despised him, had counted him altogether as a mere pawn in the great game.
He had not even troubled to conceal from him the hiding place of the plans!
They were once more within the grasp, for Wilkerson had boasted that he had put them back and would leave them there till he reached America again.
He recalled his words: "Let the idol keep 'em for me, just as it did for Gallion. It's a poor idol that won't serve two masters."
And the idol lay there wrapped in the bundle under his feet. The price of Jean Darnell!
The thought worked in his mind actively. He could not restrain from following it out to its logical conclusion.
Why should it be Wilkerson who returned with the plans and claimed her? Why should he (Drake) continue to play the slave?
A moment while they slept and the plans were his; then when Wilkerson unsuspectingly presented the idol and pulled out its eye there would be nothing!
It would be George Drake who held the master key to Jean Darnell's eye.

THE MASTER KEY

His mind went back to his first days of acquaintance with her in New York.

vicious heart
By he dreamed, open eyed, staring into a future where he played the master and not the slave.
And in his waking dream he touched the bundle and felt beneath the robe covering the hard contours of the image.
Again it ran through his head like a call: You have the price of happiness beneath your hand.
Slowly he yielded to the temptation. Gradually, with eyes constantly fixed on the motionless forms of Wilkerson and Dorr, he got the bundle between his knees; then he unloosed the fastenings tremulously.
The idol came out under his hand, and he stared at it, fascinated by its ugliness and the thought of the secret that it held.
No wonder that at every sight of it natty bowed in abject worship.
It held wealth, power, love, happiness!
He shook it softly. Yes, the plans were still within; he could near the rustle of the folded papers.
He peered around the hut, and, finding all asleep, he set the idol on his knees and bent over it.
He pulled at the eye which he had seen Wilkerson draw out. It came with difficulty. Then he held it up and looked into the dark orifice. There was nothing there.
He was about to throw the idol down in disgust when a glimmer of something bright within the head caught his attention.
He stooped over again and then froze into immobility. The spirit of the vile god was moving within.
The point of light grew into intense brightness. It approached the dark eye socket and glowed therein with frightful fire.
Drake's whole body oozed sweat; his hands clenched unwillingly about the form of the idol. He could not thrust it away.
Then the socket was filled, and the devilish eye bulged outward, phosphorescent, gleaming with wickedness. Drake felt his heart burst in his bosom. Then the snake that had lain so long hid within the hollow of the image struck forth and, having struck, slipped away.
"God!" whispered Drake, with thickened tongue, and jammed the moving eye back into place.
Then he huddled the idol itself into its bundle, laced the thongs with stiffening fingers.
"God!" he whispered again. Then he fell across the bundle dead, without a sound to waken the sleepers.
It was three hours before the dawn that Harry Wilkerson awoke and looked about him. All the rest were still asleep.
He rose softly and peered out of the window. It was very dark outside, and he could see nothing.
He turned his gaze within and saw Drake huddled over the packs apparently sound asleep.
"The fool!" muttered Wilkerson. "I've got all out of him I want. But I suppose I've got to take him along a way yet."
He resolved to be rid of the young man so soon as he was through with Dorr. Then he paused, in deep thought, his ugly brows bent on the unconscious object of his hatred.
An instant was sufficient for him to make up his mind. He silently went to work and bound John firmly in his seat.
Then he tried to waken Drake. In shaking him he made sufficient noise to stir the natives, and they sat up and stared, sleepy eyed.
But when Wilkerson raised the swollen, discolored face and shrank back

CHANGES AFFECT MAJOR LEAGUES
Over Fifty Ball Tossers Have Been Moved About.
ONE PLAYER HAS QUIT.

"Home Run" Baker Only Pill Pusher to Announce His Retirement—A Number of Diamond Stars Went Over to Feds; Others Sent to the Minors.
More than fifty players and managers who were with major league clubs at the close of last season have been released or traded, jumped to the Federals or announced their retirement. The one man who has announced that he doesn't want a good job this year is Frank Baker. He is in a class by himself.
On the other hand, Harry Lord, third baseman of the Chicago White Sox, who retired last season, has come back to the agonies of being a big leaguer.
Of the managers, Hank O'Day of the Chicago Cubs has been succeeded by Roger Bresnahan, Pat Moran has taken Charlie Doolin's place, Bill Donovan has taken the position at the head of the New York Highlanders, which was vacated by Frank Chance, and Clarence Rowland, an unknown, has taken charge of the Chicago Americans in place of Jimmy Callahan, who lost out shortly before Kid Gleason was also notified that he would not be needed this year.

Some of those who have been traded are Sherwood Magee, Robert and Doolin of the Phillies, Eddie Collins of the Athletics, Bert Nelbow of Cincinnati, Milton Stock, Al Demaree and Adams of the New York Giants, Dugy of the Boston Braves, Napoleon Lajoie of Cleveland, High and Pipp of Detroit, Olson of Cleveland and Bodie of the Chicago Americans.
Walter Johnson of the Washington team jumped to the Federals and back again, as also did Ivy Wingo of the St. Louis Nationals. Others who signed with the Federals are Plank and Bender of the Athletics, Lee Magee of the St. Louis Nationals, Konetchy of Pittsburgh, Mann and Deal of the Boston Braves and Austin of the St. Louis Americans.
Pitcher Ed Reulbach received his unconditional release from Brooklyn before signing with the Federals. "Germany" Schaefer, the clown of the diamond, was unconditionally released by Washington and may sign with the New York Highlanders.
Other players who were unconditionally released were Billy Sullivan, the veteran catcher of the Chicago White Sox; Jack Coombs, Tommy Leach, Bill Sweeney, Eddie Stack and Charlie Smith of the Chicago Nationals; Roy Miller, Josh Devore, George Witte and Mike Donlin of the Giants.

Mike Mitchell was sent to the Richmond International league team. Claude Derrick was released to Louisville, as was also Bert Danfels. Other players who were sent to other clubs were Joe Kelley and Ham Hyatt of Pittsburgh, Earl Yingling of Cincinnati and Clarence Wares and Eddie Miller of the St. Louis American team.
Caldwell, who deserted the New York Highlanders last season, but who did not do any pitching for the Federals, has returned to Wm. Bill Donovan's team.

This does not complete the list of the changes made in the major league clubs since the close of last season, but it is enough to give the fans who have not been keeping their eyes glued to the sporting pages some idea of the many shifts made by the players in the last four months.

INTERNATIONAL SPORTS DEAD

With England at War, United States Will Have to Go it Alone.
International sports will be absolutely dead this year, according to indications. So far the following important events have been called off, owing to the war:
The Henley regatta.
The Davis tennis competition.
The British national golf championship.
All important racing fixtures in Europe.
The international yacht race.
About the only international events to be expected even remotely will be between the United States and Canada, except in a few cases of isolated individuals.

The most likely feature of the last named variety seems a battle for the world's lightweight title, with Freddie Welsh of Great Britain risking his laurels.
A Bit Tired.

Unknowingly Wilkerson had left him not only to famine and thirst, but to sudden death. He bowed his head and cried in agony, "Beth! Beth!"

John Led Them Out in a Wild Rush Against the Nearest Hillmen.

with a muttered oath, the natives rose as one and thrust him aside from the door and pushed through, panic stricken.
Only John's servant remained, kept to his post by the fear of St. Donald's wrath. But he could not repress a gesture of terror.
"It is the god!" he whispered.
At this John wakened and, finding himself bound, struggled violently.
"Not yet!" spat Wilkerson.
"Here's where you stay!"
In the instant Dorr realized his helplessness. He did not even reconstruct when Wilkerson drove his servant out with curses and bade him begone and fired a shot after him for emphasis.
Nor did he speak while Wilkerson hastily chose the pack containing the idol, kicking Drake's body out of the way, and left on the run.
Sneak was useless. He crept down at Drake's contracted form. Beside it lay a little serpent, its bright eyes fixed on him, its head waving to and fro.

THE ONLY ground for dispute about the Real Tobacco Chew is when a man doesn't get it. He depends on it for himself, he boosts it to others and nothing will take its place for daily comfort.
A little chew of pure, rich, mellow tobacco—cut fine, short shred—seasoned and sweetened just enough, cuts out so much of the grinding and spitting.
Take a very small chew—less than one-quarter the old size. It will be more satisfying than a mouthful of ordinary tobacco. Just nibble on it until you find the strength chew that suits you. Tuck it away.
Then let it rest. See how easily and evenly the real tobacco taste comes, how it satisfies without grinding, how much less you have to spit, how few chews you take to be tobacco satisfied. That's why it is The Real Tobacco Chew. That's why it costs less in the end.
It is a ready chew, cut fine and short shred so that you won't have to grind on it with your teeth. Grinding on ordinary cut tobacco makes you spit too much.
The taste of pure, rich tobacco does not need to be covered up with molasses and licorice. Notice how the salt brings out the rich tobacco taste in "High-Cut."
One small chew takes the place of two big chews of the old kind.

WELSHMEN TO BE MADE MEMBERS OF BIG GUARD

London, Feb. 28. (Correspondence.)
Welshmen as a rule are short it is not anticipated that there will be any difficulty in recruiting the battalion.
The Scots Guards have a thistle as their emblem and the Irish Guards a shamrock, and already there is discussion whether the Welsh Guards shall have a leek or daffodil (the two names are the same in Welsh) or a Red Dragon, which is essentially a Welsh emblem, is one of the supporters of the Prince of Wales' arms and is used on national occasions.
Welshmen are delighted with the fact that a battalion of Welsh guards is to be added to the men of extra height who for years have been quartered at the Wellington barracks opposite Buckingham palace and have performed guard and escort duty at all military functions. Although

Young Spotts Shows His Father How to Shoot at Traps
IF there is a secret in the handling of a shotgun young Ralph T. Spotts, the fourteen-year-old son of the champion, Ralph H. Spotts, has surely discovered and applied it. Shooting against thirteen others, including his father, at the regular weekly shoot of the Larchmont Yacht club, New York, held recently, he walked off with four prizes out of the seven matches. His first win was the February cup. He had a previous leg on it, and when he turned in a full score recently Spotts won the prize. There were eight titles in the shoot for the Larchmont trophy, and in the shoot of young Spotts was the victor. Eight more (out of full score) of twenty-five were returned in the next match for the Accumulation cup, and in that the boy was the winner in the shoot of, and in the 100 "bird" handicap. One of which was shot at, he made was the winner. Remember his son and father were against again. It was found that he had broken it himself out of the

MAKE CHICAGO MEDICAL CENTER OF THE WORLD. PLAN JUST ANNOUNCED

VAST GRADUATE SCHOOL IS PLAN TO BE FOLLOWED UP WITHIN SHORT TIME—WILL FORM UNION OF MEDICAL COLLEGES.

(By Associated Press.) Chicago, March 15.—Chicago is to become the medical center of the world. From the lowly position of "plague spot of the world," assigned to it from a medical standpoint by Dr. Simon Flexner only a few years ago, Chicago has ascended to the point of seizing from London, Paris, Berlin, and Vienna their laurels as world magnets for students of medicine and surgery. Beginning May 1, all of Chicago's medical, surgical, and allied resources are to be formed into the most comprehensive graduate school of medicine and sanitary science ever known, it is said. Already 200 representative medical teachers of the city have subscribed definitely their willingness to share in the movement. Under State Control. The project has been incorporated under the title of the Graduate School of Medicine of Chicago, and eventually is to be under the control of the large universities of the state, having medical departments. Cooperation of President Peter Reinberg of the county board in making it possible to utilize the enormous clinics afforded by the county hospital and other county institutions, is regarded by physicians as being principally responsible for the movement which now is regarded as an assured success. The organization committee of doctors appointed by President Reinberg, which yesterday made public the plans as far as they have progressed, is composed of Drs. E. Willis Andrews, John E. Murphy, John R. Pemberton, Daniel P. Teter, William E. Evans, and Franklin H. Martin.

LOUHR DOES TO ASK SUPPORT OF PARTIES IN THE 1916 CAMPAIGN

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE COMMITTEE HAVE MADE PLANS TO MAP-OUT PROGRAM FOR THE COMING YEARS WORK—WILL MEET THIS WEEK.

Washington, D. C., March 15.—The national legislative committee of the Anti-Saloon League of America will meet in Washington on March 19 to outline the program of the league with reference to national issues for the next year.

At this meeting the question of seeking or encouraging the endorsement of one of the three great national political parties will be discussed. In all likelihood the committee will go on record as opposing such an endorsement, because it believes that the success of the anti-saloon movement during the last few years, as during the last year and a half, has been due to the studied avoidance of party alignments.

Plans for 1916 Campaign. Although the Anti-Saloon League will not attempt to enter party politics during the national campaign in 1916, it expects to participate in that campaign with the vigor which has characterized it in recent state political fights. It will have as its leading issue the question of adopting an amendment to the federal constitution preventing the sale or interstate transportation of intoxicating liquors in any form. It will carry on its fight in the national campaign just as it has in state contests by attempting to educate particular constituencies in its doctrine to such a degree that they will send to congress representatives and senators who are opposed to the saloon and who will support the measure favoring national prohibition.

O'LEARY AGAIN WINS IN RELAY RACE AT THE PETERSON RINK

Veteran Pedestrian Wins Race at Rink in Easy Manner O'LEARY ISMIS "A man is as young as he feels, if he feels young." "If you're sick, you're lazy." "There is no such thing as a cure—it's just readjustment." "If you are in a hurry—walk—it's cheaper and it gives you health—and makes the railroads mad."

Dan O'Leary, world's champion heel and toe artist for the past twenty or thirty years, again demonstrated that the old-young-man still has lots of "pep" and go in his frame, when he defeated a three man team of roller skaters at the Peterson rink, last evening before a large crowd of spectators. "That speed pill sure did the work," said Dan today, as he discussed the race of yesterday. "Didn't even make me sweat." is the way he put it. However, despite the three man team against him, O'Leary was not forced to extend and won in 8:16, eight minutes slower than when he registered on Thursday evening when he defeated a local man in 5:08. Twenty-six laps were walked in the course of the grind. John Novak and Clinton Oliver acted as judges and timers of the contest. O'Leary was three laps to the good at the flag on the final. Berube, Plath, and Groth were O'Leary's opponents. To Green Bay Today. Dan came to The Mirror office today shortly before he left for Green Bay where he says he will stage a contest at a rink there during the week. "Just trim your lamps for me in the summer," said Dan as he started for the door. "Because I'm certainly coming back to Escanaba for a solid month of rest," he added as he left. With a wave of the hand he was gone, a sprightly, young looking figure. SHOWS STRENGTH OF HABIT

All the Devastation of War Has Not Caused French to Deviate From Regular Ways.

It was Carlyle, we believe, who remarked the narrow orbit of great events. While mobs were tearing at the stones of the Bastille, groups of men in other parts of Paris bagged over copper coins, quarreled over the depravations of house cats, discussed poetry and philosophy or matched predictions on the weather. The fall of the Bastille was to echo down the ages.
But the world of accustomed ways continued its way unchecked.

An American, lately returned from Europe, reports that the most astonishing thing about the war to him was the absence of signs of war.

"When you travel by rail if you did not know that war was in the country you would never suspect it unless you wondered why a red-hatted, blue-coated guard, with a rifle carelessly swung over his shoulder, was noticeable now and then by cross-road or near the bustness of an important railroad bridge.

"The big black and white horses are plowing in the fields, the red and black cattle and the sheep and hogs are grazing in the fields and pastures.

"As you approach Paris at night, you see families dining by uncurtained windows in blazing light. You are astonished after your London experience of semidarkness to find the boulevards ablaze and no apparent fear of aerial enemies or sky invasions, although aeroplanes and Zeppelins and bombs may be flying and fighting only 80 miles away.

"The inhabitants, young and old, picnic in the Bois de Boulogne.

"You smile and jots with the people in their curiosity excursions.

"War, for all its earth-shaking, devastating, upheaving violence, is yet weaker than human habit.

URGES VALUE OF HOSPITAL

Medical Expert Declares Mother Love Cannot Take the Place of the Trained Nurse.

"Skillful home nursing is a great blessing," says Dr. H. W. Hill of the Minnesota Public Health association.
"Everyone wishes that every mother might be a skilled nurse, for such services are required at least three to four times by each child for serious infections as well as for many minor troubles. But skillful nursing in the home is beyond most mothers. Despite all loving desire to do the best for their sick ones.

"When actual knowledge of the care of really sick persons is needed, and especially where infectious cases are concerned, not only is the greatest mother's training insufficient for the patient's best welfare, but lack of practice as well as inexperience tells heavily on the mother in her efforts to prevent the spread of infection to others. A trained nurse is invaluable in such cases, but even better is it that the sick one should be removed to a hospital. This is especially true in the patient suffering from tuberculosis and measles because of the other members of the family being at risk.

SAYS CIVIL SERVICE LAWS BEING IGNORED BY POSTAL DEPARTMENT

A READER OF THE MIRROR SEND COMMUNICATION REGARDING BANK RIVER POST OFFICE SITU-ATION—SAYS DISCRIMINATION PRACTICED.

Charging that discrimination was practiced to the practical ignoring of the civil service laws, regarding postal employees, the following communication has been received at this office under the signature of a well known man of the city and county. He says:

A few years ago a Civil Service law of the United States was passed and by virtue of that law, fourth class post offices were placed under the Civil Service. The Democrats throughout the United States were very clamorous for such a law because, as the Republican party was in power, it gave the Democrats the same opportunity to be appointed postmasters when any appointment was to be made. The purpose of a Civil Service law is to protect officers from being removed from office without cause. So long as the postmaster of a post office of the fourth class was competent and qualified for the position and conducted the office with efficiency and in a proper manner it was supposed that he was protected against removal just because some other person wanted the office. The Democratic administration at Washington and especially the post office department, have ignored the Civil Service law by calling for examinations to be held for postmasters of the fourth class. We are having some illustrations of the violations of the Civil Service law in this county. The appointment of a Democrat as postmaster at Bark River is a good illustration.

Mr. J. B. Frechette has been postmaster at Bark River for several years and has given the best of satisfaction. He has kept the office in his mercantile store building, which is large and spacious, and centrally located. The appointee's store room is small and located at the west end of the town, the records of the P. O. department at Washington show that Mr. Frechette had always conducted the office satisfactorily to the post office department and the patrons of the office. There never has been any honest question raised as to Mr. Fre-chette's qualifications for the office, or to his efficiency in conducting the same. A Democrat wanted the position, and when that fact was brought to the attention of the officers of the post office department an examination was called to be held in the month of August, 1914. This examination was held of course for the purpose of evading the Civil Service law. Four persons took the examination, the records of the Civil Service commission at Washington show that Mr. Frechette stood 5.80 points higher than any other applicant. This shows that the examination was a farce and was not considered by the post office department in making the appointment.
The appointment was made in the face of the fact that, Clergymen, members of the town board, physicians, business men, trades men and eighty per cent of the patrons of the office petitioned the post office department for the retention of Mr. Frechette as postmaster but that had no influence and no doubt was not considered by the department. This shows how stuperous the members of the Democratic party have been in advocating a Civil Service law. The post office department at Washington has been turned into a political machine and the principal record it is trying to make is to see how many Democrats can be appointed postmasters throughout the United States. This makes the Civil Service law a farce and a nullity and this method on the part of the post office department in ignoring the Civil Service law would only tend to shake the confidence of the people in our laws.

"A READER"

War and Copper.
Since the commencement of the twentieth century nearly 3,000,000 tons of copper have been extracted from their ores, and have been consumed in the chief manufacturing countries of the world, and now the demands of war are further diminishing the world's copper supplies. The value of this metal, at an average price of $40 per ton for the whole period, is $480, 000,000, or nearly two thirds of our national debt. How long can the earth continue to supply this enormous amount of copper, or to keep pace with the increasing rapid growth in the demand of the war world? It would certainly seem quite probable that within the next twenty years all the "known" ore reserves of the existing mines will be worked out, and that people now are ignorant of vast untold amounts of copper which have been discovered, and more costly metals before all the century is passed away.

ROAD BUILDING IN OKLAHOMA

State Superintendent of Public Instruction Takes Steps to Teach Boys Art of Construction.

"Not to be outdone by Missouri and Kansas, the state of Oklahoma is to take up educational work in road-building," said R. E. House of Muskoge, while in Washington recently.
"Governor Major of Missouri and Governor Hodges of Kansas stirred the imagination and ambition of the boys of Missouri and Kansas by getting out on the roads and handling pick and shovel in the making of roads. Oklahoma is going to begin at the beginning and teach the boy in the school how to build good roads. The state highway commissioner is co-operating with the state superintendent of public instruction, and the latter has taken up the matter with the county superintendents.

"When the federal government had spent thousands of dollars to encourage scientific farming and when so few farmers adopted the methods advanced, the officials changed their plans and went after the boys in the schools. They sought to teach the new methods to the older persons through the boys in the schools, and they succeeded.

"If the farmers were made to realize the advantages of better farming methods through their boys in the schools, it seems to me there is little doubt they can be brought to appreciate the great advantages that will result from improved roads. For that matter, however, the farmer ordinarily understands that good roads are advantageous. Education in the benefits of good roads perhaps would be more profitably undertaken in the public schools of the big cities. It is the state legislatures and the federal government that have failed to appreciate the profits that will accrue from good roads. It is far better to spend money on good roads than on great armies and navies, and it would seem that the highways had better be made passable before the government undertakes to make the rivers navigable, for there is more traffic over the country roads than on the rivers.
