Greek War Party Believed to Have Won Election by Overwhelming Vote—May Cast Lot With Allies

(By Associated Press.) Although recent press despatches state that the Italians who crossed the Isonzo river and are pushing on towards Trieste, skirting the head of the Gulf of Trieste, an official despatch from Rome today gives no further mention or reference to advances there.

Elsewhere on the front the Italians are claiming victories over the Austrians. The Italian war office charges the Austrians with furthering and fostering brigandage in the territory occupied by Italy.

Although Berlin and Vienna assert the Russ line was broken down, it is said officially at Petrograd that the Russ recaptured, Sunday, almost all the advanced positions of the enemy north of Przemysl.

In the region of the Cone river successes for the Germans are conceded. The Turks claim a victory over the Russ in Transcaucasia. The fighting took place at a position opposite Olki near the border.

Reports that the British battleship Agamemnon had been sunk has been officially denied, according to a London despatch.

Greek War Party Winners. London, June 15.—It is apparent that the former premier of Greece, Venizelos, and his party has won an overwhelming victory in the recent elections. It is claimed that two-thirds majority was given the war party and the British press are of the opinion that the turn of the vote indicates a decision to cast Greece's lot with the allies.

Heavy Italian artillery has bombarded Malborgeth, one of the pivots of the Austrian defense between the Carnic Alps and the Upper Isonzo. Tarvis, an important railroad junction nearby, is also threatened.

Big Force Against Italians
Innsbruck, June 15.—Twenty-five thousand Austro-Hungarian troops left Trent yesterday and are now advancing against the invading Italians on the Riva-Roverto front.

In the vicinity of Gorz and Gradisca heavy fighting occurred recently. The Austrian casualties were 1500 while the Italian losses were nearly as heavy. A new ammunition depot was destroyed at Tolmanio by the Italians.

Austro-Hungarian troops are using dynamite in the Alpine passes to break up the roads and blowing rocks and starting avalanches upon the advancing Bersaglieri. The height dominating Caporetto has been taken by the Italians.

Allies Bombard Rhine City
Karlsruhe, Baden, June 15.—Five hostile aircrafts bombarded Karlsruhe today for forty-five minutes. Several persons were killed and many wounded but the damage done has no military importance.

Karlsruhe is on the Rhine river 75 miles from the French frontier. It is a city of 100,000 population and has a number of important public buildings.

Votes Big War Fund.
London, June 15.—Premier Asquith, on moving a vote for 250,000,000 pounds ($1,250,000,000) informed the house of commons that the expenses for the next three months would be no less than $15,000,000 daily.

MEYER SAYS AMERICAN NAVY IS DETERIORATING

FORMER HEAD OF THE NAVY DEPARTMENT DECLARES PRESENT NAVY INADEQUATE AND POORLY MANNED

ATLANTIC FLEET ALONE NOW NEED 5,000 MEN

Recent Review in New York Harbor a Merc Parade of Ships is Statement Made by Meyer

New York, June 15.—George von L. Meyer, who was secretary of the navy in President Taft's cabinet, addressing the Peace and Preparation Conference of the National Security League at luncheon today, asserted that the American navy is deteriorating, outlined the respects in which he believed such to be the case and urged that investigation of the national defense and a comprehensive plan for the future should be made obligatory upon the next congress.

Lack of battle cruisers, airships, aeroplanes and men, lack of a naval reserve of experienced men, lack of a comprehensive policy of national defense, lack of general knowledge of the navy's condition, reduction of complements of some ships to make other and newer ships and general unpreparedness on the part of many battleships and other fighting units were enumerated as instances of naval inferiority. Mr. Meyer said, in part:

"Not Ready for Service
Of the thirty-three battleships we have, only twenty-one that are fitted for service without long delay. Furthermore, we have about seventy miscellaneous fighting ships not prepared for service in case of emergency.

"We lack battle cruisers, airships and armed aeroplanes.

"Our submarines are in a crippled condition.

"The complement of all torpedo destroyers has been reduced from fifteen to twenty-five per cent to get men to commission new boats. This (Continued on Page Six.)

NO PEACE IN SIGHT IN CHICAGO STRIKE

SECOND DAY OF STREET CAR STRIKE IN ILLINOIS FINDS SITUATION UNCHANGED

GREAT CROWD BREAKS WIRE FENCE TO TRAIN

Strike Leaders Urge Carmen Not to Let Whiskey Get the Upper Hand in the Situation

(By Associated Press.)
Chicago, June 15.—A burst of real June sunshine cheered the great army of Chicagoans who went to work this morning in automobiles, vans, delivery wagons and other vehicles. Some of the younger generation used roller skates.

Suburban steam trains, upon whom were thrust the burden of the situation in a large degree provided more accommodations and event that failed to meet the requirements.

Tears Down Fence
At Groos park, a station on the Northwestern suburban line, a large crowd who could not get aboard early trains or even buy tickets, broke through a wire fence surrounding the right of way and swarmed out on the station platform and aboard the train.

Thirty persons clambered on the coal tender and ten more got in the engine cab. Others roared on the running boards and still others in the cowcatcher of the engine.

Take Situation Easily
The situation was accepted by the people in a good natured manner and railroad men took it in the same spirit. Some cars on the elevated lines started this morning, but carried no passengers. No attempts were made to run surface cars early nor was any promise of a resumption of service made.

There is no definite promise of peace anywhere in sight yet, and from appearances the situation is not changed over the way it stood yesterday.

Taboo Whiskey
President Quinlan of the Surface men and the leader of the elevated line strikers are urging the men to remain sober.

"Don't let whiskey get in the way and spoil the strike," said Quinlan in a speech.

Attempts to Wreck Trains
Chicago, June 15.—An attempt to damage or wreck a later train was made today. Two men standing on an elevation attempted to throw a big plank onto the track ahead of the train, but the cramped quarters delayed them so that the plank struck the rear coach and then bounded to the track. Detectives got a good description of the men.

Another train was made a subject of an "air raid" when a man standing on a roof at 18th street throw a brick through the windows of a passing train. No one was hurt.

STATE BOARD MAN GIVES PLAIN TALK

D. E. McCURE OF STATE BOARD OF HEALTH TELLS NEEDS OF GROWING COMMUNITIES IN HEALTH LINE

LIST OF COMMITTEE MEMBERS ANNOUNCED

Will Bring Prominent State Health Officials Here June 27 to July 3—Hear Discussions

Escanaba's first "Good Health Week" campaign, and which, according to Hon. D. E. McClure of Lansing is the first campaign of the kind ever started in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, got under way with an interesting session last night.

Mr. McClure, who is a member of the state board of health was the moving spirit in the campaign opener at the city hall. He told of the things the "Health Week" will aim to accomplish and detailed the methods by which it is to be done.

According to Mr. McClure, the movement has met with success in lower state points where instituted and he expressed the sentiment that the efforts here will result in as great good being accomplished within the environs of this city and county as in other places.

Hear Other Addresses
Short addresses bearing on the subject of the coming campaign heard from Rev. Guy V. Hoard, Supt. King of the city schools, Mrs. J. B. Wilkinson, G. T. Werline, F. L. Baldwin and Dr. Girard. Supt. King told the promoters of the movement that the schools were theirs and for them to direct, the schools would act.

Following the discussions and talks Dr. H. W. Long of the general committee, in charge of the session read the lists of committees, prepared by the promoters and which embraces a large number of workers. Five committees were designated as follows: (Continued on Page Six.)

BRYAN STATEMENT ON WAR CAUSES READY

(By Associated Press.)
Washington, June 15.—Former Secretary Bryan did not issue his promised statement on the "causeless war," and its lessons to us, but has announced that he was working on the preparation of a statement which will be given out in three parts, tomorrow.

"I shall submit the first part, dealing with the war and what it does to neutral nations. The second part will be the causes of the war and the third the means for a restoration of permanent peace. The article will be furnished to all papers without discrimination," said Bryan.

DIVER PETITIONS BRITISH GOVERNMENT TO RAISE THE EMDEN

Kobe, Japan, June 15.—Teisuke Shimizu, a veteran Japanese diver, has petitioned the British authorities for permission to refloat the famous German cruiser Emden, known as "the terror of the South Seas," which was destroyed by the Australian cruiser Sydney off Cocos Island in November, 1914. Mr. Shimizu says he is confident he can get the Emden off the rocks. Skilled colleagues have signed his petition. The diver won historic laurels in 1883 while engaged in salvage operations on the sunken ship Anzenmaru on the coast of Japan. A great storm arose and the British merchantman Carnarvonshire was wrecked nearby. Single handed, Mr. Shimizu rescued the crew against fearful odds. In recognition of his bravery the British government presented him with a watch. The ensuring publicity attracted attention to his signal success in diving and salvage operations.

Hundred Acres on Each of Three Farms to Bear Crop—3500 Bushels of Seed Used

One of the largest fields of potatoes planted in this section in the past few years has been set by the I. Stephenson company on its three farms along the banks of the Escanaba river.

Three hundred acres of "spuds" has been planted, about one hundred acres to each of the farms. The largest field is of 115 acres.

Used 3500 Bushels of Seed
Over 3,500 bushels of seed potatoes, was used in planting the fields. In order to keep the plants clean and free from bugs a horse spraying outfit will be put into commission. Cultivation throughout will also be done by means of the horsepower machines.

By the use of the machines it is possible, states an employe of the company to use a very small crew to work the whole plot of three hundred acres.

IDEAL OF COURAGE.

Heroism is universally admired. Even a villain, through some great act of bravery in a good cause, is forgiven much. We see one plunge into the flames to rescue the life of a human being and our hearts thrill with admiration. Even to save the life of an animal, at a risk, calls forth heartfelt approval. Presence of mind and prompt action in case of accident is accounted heroism. It should be accorded its due meed of praise. It arises from impulse and the action is often quicker than the thought and the impulse is a good one, springing from the unselfish wish to help one in difficulty. There is a heroism of a higher and more spiritual figure that has not received so general a recognition. This is the heroism that makes a man stand by what he thinks is right, in the face of ridicule; to be firm though men laugh at and reject him; to be true though friends grow cold, or he suffer loss. It is the courage that makes a man give a decisive "No" when tempted to a dishonorable act. Every act is heroic which keeps a man honest when another course would be easy, and promises gain. This is the kind of heroism to teach children. Teach them to know true bravery from foolhardiness and bragadocio; to respect the courage that dares ridicule unshaken. It is a greater gift than wealth. Men who have the courage of their convictions and are without fear in a righteous cause are the men to be most highly honored.

"He's a lucky guy," a current vernacular expression has it. Like most such colloquialisms, it grew out of the spirit of the times. Luck is on all lips. "People really believe it. "My, if I was as lucky as Smith," says Brown, "I might be able to get along and have the good times he does. But I've never had any luck." And Brown is sincere in thinking that there is something in what he is saying. For things have seemed to come a little hard for poor Brown, as compared with the easy sailing for his friend, Smith. One has worked as hard, he thinks, as the other, been as frugal, and yet the other has many times the fortune of the former. The case of the two brothers with an equal area of ground side by side, planted with the same seed, comes quickly to mind. One reaped a rich harvest and made money, the other got hardly enough to pay for the planting. Of course, it may be that the successful brother cultivated his ground with more care, selected his seed and planted it more scientifically, kept his soil more thoroughly worked during the growing season than the other, but this escapes the unsuccessful one. He put in as much time, as hard licks, and cannot understand the disparity of results.

Besides the privilege of having newspapers and novels read to him, while he works, the Cuban cigar-maker demands another indulgence—that of cheering his labors with cigars provided by the firm, says London Chronicle. Every morning six high-grade wrappers are handed to him for his own use, and in these he folds as much as he likes of the tobacco supplied him for the day's work. The cigars thus made and consumed are said to cost the Havana tobacco industry a sum of close on to five hundred thousand pounds a year. Gustavo Beck, head of the world-famed firm, Beck & Co., once declared that he would willingly make over his factory and plantations to his employees if in return they undertook to give him the cigars they rolled for themselves.

JESS WILLARD WILL BE WATCHED

In Next Bout Fans Expect to See Great Fighting Machine.

THEY MAY BE DISAPPOINTED

Average Ringsider Falls to Realize Pugilists' Troubles—Patrons of the Sport Are Prone to Mistake Ring Generalship For Cowardice.

When Jess Willard enters the ring again it will be interesting to note how his new honors affect his fighting style. Willard always has been inclined to wait his opponents out instead of forcing matters. When he was merely one of the white hopes this was held to be a fatal fault, although Johnson, an even less aggressive man, was considered perfect.

It is hardly likely that Willard will change his style to any great extent, but no doubt the point of view regarding his tactics will change. At any rate it has never been the fashion to criticize the champion heavyweight, on the principle that the king can do no wrong, no doubt.

Willard proved in his battle with Johnson that he has a very useful style for fights over the long distance. In ten rounds no decision he may not show up any better than he did before, but the memory of his showing at Havana will prevent him from being roasted as he was after most of his early battles.

As a matter of fact most of the flood of adverse criticism that Willard was compelled to suffer was a result of a common mistake. Very few persons are able to appreciate the difficulties that confront the novice boxer. As a rule, when he falls to tear in regard to consequences, ringsiders at once suspect his courage. If a better understanding existed of the game from the boxer's point of view fight followers would be a great deal more sympathetic.

When to attack and when to defend is something that can be learned only by actual practice in the ring. The first lesson the novice learns by bitter experience is to conserve his strength. Once he becomes exhausted through overexertion he is lost, no matter how much natural skill he may possess.

That deadly tired feeling is the one thing that all boxers fear. According to observers of the war there are few cowards in the world. Certainly there are few cowards in the ring; for if a man lacked courage he never would elect to follow such a strenuous sport long enough to reach a stage where he began to attract attention. But no matter how courageous he may be, no boxer who once has become thoroughly exhausted ever cares to repeat the experiment.

That is why so many hang back when it is apparent to the outsider that a little more exertion would bring victory. He is not afraid of his opponent's blows, but he would be more than foolish to neglect the warning given by overtaxed heart and lungs. The least mistake on the side of overconfidence is likely to lose a bout already practically won.

AN ARMLESS GOLFER.

Buffalo Boy Also Skates, Plays Good Billiards and Writes.

In all probability the unique competitor in sports is Thomas McAuliffe, a Buffalo youth, who, despite the misfortune of being armless, is nevertheless regarded as a golfer of no mean ability. While the armless youth, who is only twenty-two years of age, has an enviable reputation as an exponent of the links game, at which he specializes, he is quite adept at handling the cue in his peculiar way and plays an admirable game of pool or billiards.

In addition to these accomplishments McAuliffe is also a speed skater of concealed ability in Buffalo, notwithstanding the fact that he is deprived of the added momentum the average skater derives from the rhythmic swinging of his arms in perfect harmony with alternate positions on the skates. McAuliffe tells of his ambition to go through college and how, despite his

HERZOG ORDERS REDS TO LAY OFF ON GOLF.

A new order by Manager Herzog has created consternation among the golfing contingent. The Red leader has decided that playing golf all the morning does not tend to activity in the afternoon, and he has forbidden any of the players to play the ancient game except on off days.

Recently George Twombly had it all arranged to go out on the links and try his skill, but the expedition had to be called off. Twombly is now a regular, and Herzog figures that he should keep all his energies for the pastime which pays his salary.

handicap, he hopes to accomplish this valuable education by hard work.

McAuliffe is probably the only armless golfer in the world. He has labored hard to overcome the difficulties resultant to his mishap and acquired proficiency in golf, and his efforts in this direction at last appear to have been rewarded.

He acquired the knack of writing with a pencil when the pencil, which he held in his mouth, slipped and was caught between his cheek and shoulder. He immediately tried to write with the pencil in that position, but during the first few weeks of his attempts his efforts could not be deciphered or read. He continued to practice diligently, however, and finally perfected his intricate way of writing, until now he is able to write rapidly and so plainly that it can be read by anybody.

His method of playing golf is similar to that employed in writing. He holds the club between his cheek and shoulder, and with the stick in this position has gone around the links of the Buffalo Country club in 108 strokes, a truly remarkable feat, considering the fact that eighteen is bogey there. The Buffalo club's course is one of the best bunkered and trapped in the country.

With the combined swing and jerk of the body and shoulder he is able to give the ball an effective stroke.

HOW A KNOCKOUT FEELS.

Sam Robideau Says It Makes One Sick All Over.

How does it feel to have a knockout blow landed on your chin? Sam Robideau, who felt a K. O. from Charley White's fist recently in Philadelphia describes the sensation this way:

"I was going very good and was full of confidence when he came into a clinch. I distinctly remember White grabbing me around the neck and pulling me toward him. I tried to pull away, and the next thing I knew I fell.

"My head hit the floor with a bang, and whether or not this was the cause of my defeat I do not know. What I do know is that upon arising I was not myself. My arms and legs appeared dead and were not the least responsive to any movement I tried to make.

"They tell me that I fell with my head low. If I did it was the act of a person doing something he did not know he was doing. I heard the shouts of the crowd, but could not understand what was going on, try as I might.

"Therefore I am confident this fall was in full measure to blame for my defeat. I think that Charley White is one grand fighter, but I think I am entitled to a return date with him in view of the fact that I have engaged in nearly ninety battles and never been previously knocked out."

JACK COOMBS IS PUZZLED.

Can't Figure Out Yet Reason Why Mack Gave Him His Release.

"Why Coule Mack gave me my unconditional release last winter is still a mystery to me," says Jack Coombs. "He treated me so kindly during my illness that I can't quite figure why he let me go.

"I wasn't a high salaried player, and it seems to me that he might have taken me south with the Athletics this spring just to find out whether or not I would have been of any use to him this season.

"Of course I am not kicking, for Brooklyn has given me a chance to come back, and I feel that I still have a few more years of baseball left in me. I would like to have repaid Coule Mack for his kindness to me when I was bedridden in the hospital."

DOOIN PROVES BIG AID TO REDS

Brainy Backstop of Great Assistance to Cincinnati.

GREAT COACH OF PITCHERS

Ex-Manager of Phillies Considered One of Best Handlers of Twirlers in the Game Today—Although Thirty-four, He is as Capable as Ever.

Charles Dooin should be of immense assistance to the Cincinnati team this season. The world is full of backstops, but the crop of catchers is lamentably small. Dooin is a catcher.

Look over the list of receivers in the National league and name the number that come under the label of "brainy;" not many—Archer, Brennan, Killfer, Gibson and Dooin and maybe one or two others.

For the most part National league catchers are young and hold their posts because of hitting ability and the fact that their manager can't land any better balanced men.

More than one hard hitting catcher in baseball in the major leagues still has much to learn about generalship and tactics. They have the mechanical ability, but nothing else.

But a stolid receiver will break up the best team on earth. If there is any place where brains are needed it is behind the bat. That's the reason men like Jim McGuire, Duke Farrell, Conley Mack, Billy Sullivan, Ira Thomas, Pat Moran, Charley Ganzel, Wilbert Robinson and others caught as long as they could stand on two legs.

Now, Dooin is essentially of the type of the sterling array of catchers that has been named. It is not generally known that he received his first coaching from Buck Ewing, regarded by many as the greatest catcher that ever squatted behind the plate.

Both Dooin and Ewing are natives of Cincinnati. They lived in the east end, where there are acres of vacant lots which in summer time are filled with youthful tossers. When Buck bossed the Reds he had to pass one of these lots on his way to the trolley car for the park.

Seeing the youthful Dooin in action, he was at once impressed with him and stopped long enough to give him a few hints. He drilled him how to hold his hands, judge fouls and other points. Ewing made it a practice to stop for a few minutes every day to give Dooin pointers, and when he developed he pointed for him a place with a fast independent team in that city.

So it is little wonder that Dooin ought to be a great catcher when it is considered that in his boyhood days he was coached by the best of them all.

Dooin will be thirty-four years old this summer, and as he is in perfect condition he ought to catch star ball for the Reds all year. Relieved of managerial worry, he ought to come back strong. There is no reason why he shouldn't, for his arm is as powerful as ever.

With a brainy chap like Dooin handling them, Herzog's pitchers ought to be much improved.

CLAIMS HIGH HONOR

is Chief of Otees and Keeper of the Palladium.

Indian Says Sacred Pipe Was Made by the "Great Spirit"—Possesses Wonderful Properties, According to Legends.

Pawnee, Okla.—Richard Shunatona, an Indian here, claims the distinction of being not only chief of the Otees, but also that of being keeper of the sacred palladium of the tribe. Richard is much interested in the traditions of Indian tribes, and thinks that the traditions of the Otees should be printed and preserved as part of the history of the passing of red races.

"Through the far-back times," says Shunatona, "my ancestors were keepers of our sacred palladium. It consists of a sacred pipe or calumet molded in the form of an image person, bison hair, and some genuine green tobacco. The great spirit, Wacodah, broke with his own hand a piece of red stone and out of it made a pipe head. A stem is made and when his pipe is filled from this pipe of peace the smoke rises gradually to the top of heaven and breaks against it, signaling all nations there is peace. The bison hair is the emblem of our family clan, besides being in memorial of some member who was transformed into a bison. There are two distinct clans under the Otee tribe, the Bison and the Bear, in which there are several families under each clan. In plain English, the bison is our coat of arms and our family is called the Bison clan, or Ah-lu-qwah.

"Four men migrated from another world to this earth and on their journey one was transformed into a bison, and his companions slew and left him. On the first day one of them went back and found that their slain companion had changed his position. The second day another went back and found he had changed to still another position. The third day another went back and found a strange plant growing from his sides. That plant was tobacco.

"The sacred palladium is used for various purposes, usually with reverence and respect. All family names are derived from this story.

"The greatest part of the rites of our palladium, and the most essential part, is the ceremonial of the peace pipe in making peace and friendship between parties. It binds in bonds of friendship strong and inseparable as that of Jonathan and David. A peace treaty was made by and between the Otee tribe of Indians and the United States government June 24, 1817. In statute 7, page 154, you will find the name of Schon-ga-tonga, or Big Horse, at the head of the chiefs. Our family descended from that man, and he kept the faith.

"The sacred palladium, or calumet, used on that memorable day is still in our family. I am the keeper now, for my uncle conferred on me the title of priest on his dying bed. The standard of the title is rapidly vanishing, for each day brings its changes and we are entering a new era. My people, who were well versed to retain all the songs, the monuments and the story of the sacred palladium, are no more; and in my day there is no need of my performing the rituals of any function, because we do not have them. You can no longer learn from the priest all the sacred teachings unless you are a member of the priest's family. The father teaches the son and no one else. The heritage left us does not belong to the present day and age. And I, for one, welcome the inevitable change and acknowledge with grace the white man's superiority and bow obedience to his ceremonies, because they are now practically universal."

STILL LOSE THINGS IN PARIS

War Brings No Relief to Lost Property Department at Prefecture of Police.

Paris.—The lost property department at the prefecture of police has not found its labors sensibly diminished by the war, although the population of Paris has been reduced by mobilization. M. Dubois, the head of the service, says:

"Of ten objects brought here as having been found nine have been lost by women, and as the female population of Paris has not been affected by the war, our work has been almost as great as usual. In September, when the great exodus occurred at the approach of the Germans, the number of articles brought in dropped from the average of 5,000 or 7,000 to 4,356, but since the victory of the Marne the normal average has been resumed."

A Rubber Armor Plate.

Andrew Setzinger, a Pittsburgh policeman, has invented a shock absorber for battleships and other armored vessels. By his method the armor plate is lined with a rubberlike substance, thickly studded, and made by a process which he has invented. According to Mr. Setzinger, when a projectile penetrates the armor plate, even should it pass through into the ship, the hole cut out will close up through the action of the rubberlike substance, which vulcanizes from the heat caused by the friction from the projectile. This will keep the water out. This process, it was said, has been tested on a small scale and found efficient. It was stated that a foreign government is now arranging for a test of it with large-caliber guns.

MAKES BEDSPREAD AT 82

Mrs. Gregg Did It, Too, Without the Assistance of Eyeglasses.

Kansas City, Mo.—Mrs. Samuel Gregg, 521 South High street, Independence, has just completed the making of a bedspread containing 810 pyramidal-shaped pieces of cloth alternately blue and white. Although eighty-two years old, Mrs. Gregg did the sewing entirely by hand and without the use of eyeglasses. She and Mr. Gregg celebrated recently the sixty-fifth anniversary of their wedding, which took place near Hiekman Mills, this county.

URGES QUARRANTINE AS PREVENTATIVE OF SPREAD OF CHOLERA

Massachusetts Health Office Would Establish Stations on Frontiers.

(By Associated Press.) San Francisco, June 15.—"Asiatic cholera spreads as fast as man can travel, and when a country is menaced by the disease, passage of the frontier must be prevented except at certain specified quarantine stations," said Surgeon A. J. McLaughlin, Commissioner of Health of the commonwealth of Massachusetts, in an address before the American Society of Tropical Medicine, here today. "In the interests of commerce and passenger traffic, quarantine stations should be established at all important points through which passenger and freight traffic ordinarily crosses frontiers. "The successful prevention of the introduction of cholera depends upon accurate information and delimitation of the infected territory, efficient facilities and personnel for inspection at seaports, and points on frontiers where important roads or water routes cross the frontiers, and modern quarantine stations."

Mr. McLaughlin outlined the procedures to be taken for the detection of the cholera vibrio, laying particular stress upon rapid and accurate methods.

BIG TRADE BALANCE SEEN DESPITE WAR

London, June 15.—During the months of January, February, March and April of this year, British ports show the following returns, notwithstanding submarine blockades: Imports, 281,676,312 pounds sterling; exports, 116,770,328; re-exports, 31,729,362. This brings British trade for four months to over two billion dollars, although the chief European customers were involved in war. The returns show an increase of $115,000,000 over the corresponding period of last year.

STRICT RULES COVER LETTING OF CONTRACTS

Berlin, June 15.—The Prussian ministry of war has issued a circular to the military authorities laying down the principle that all firms tendering for war contracts must do so through their local chamber of commerce or industrial associations, which must supplement the bid with a certificate testifying to the good faith of the firm and to its respectable standing and productive capacity. Where the bidder is the direct producer of the goods, the factory inspector must also certify that his technical equipment is adequate to the task and that he satisfied all legal requirements as to rate of wages, hours of labor and conditions of employment.

"If the above rules are carried out," adds the circular, "we may confidently expect that all unfair employers and unfair middlemen will be eliminated from the contracting business."

SHOW MASOLEUMS IN STATE OF DECAY

Peking, June 15.—President Yuan-Shih-kai has received a petition from the governor of Shensi for authorization to proceed with repairs on the decaying mausoleums of the Chow Dynasty which are located in Hsienyang district of that province. These edifices epitomize styles of Chinese architecture of thousands of years ago in addition to preserving the tablets of rulers and sages of ancient times, and it is desired to save them both from vandalism and destruction by the elements.

143,000 VICTIMS OF WHITE PLAGUE DURING THE YEAR OF 1913

Seattle, June 15.—Tuberculosis in all its forms carried off during the year 1913 over 143,000 victims in the United States, which signifies the presence of approximately 1,430,000 consumptives with an economic loss of at least $214,000,000 per annum, according to the figures given by the president of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, Dr. George M. Kober, of Washington, D. C., in his annual address at the meeting here today.

"Great and grave as the problem may appear," he said, "there is certainly hope we consider that the death rate from this disease has been reduced from 326 per 100,000 population in 1880 to 146.6 in 1913, which means that if the former rate had been continued, the number of deaths from this cause would have been 323,027 instead of 143,000 in 1913, equivalent to a saving of 179,027 during one year."

HEALTH WEEK STARTS

(Continued From Page One.) General, publicity, program, music and finance. Dr. Long also read a list of the speakers who will come to this city during "Good Health Week," June 27 to July 3.

Among the prominent state health officials who will participate in the event in the role of lecturers is Dr. Kellogg of Battle Creek, the big food manufacturer who is the first speaker to come here. The secretary of the board of health, bacteriologist, Dr. E. T. Abrams of the U. P. laboratory, state sanitary engineer and the president of Michigan's state society for the prevention of tuberculosis.

Community Building Nation's Job At the start of the meeting, Dr. Long introduced Mr. McClure who launched into a lengthy and interesting dissertation upon the needs of such a move as that now under way. "The job of community building is a nation's job" asserted the speaker. "Community building demands health building and this is where the citizens of communities are tested," he added. "We must depend upon the conscientious laboring man, the thinking business man and the mothers for any furtherance of a move that embodies education in health and sanitation."

Urges Full Time Officer One of the features of the board of health man's address was the suggestion of the full time health officer idea. "If you are not already in possession of a full time health officer, all you can do is to plug along steadily till you do get one," he concluded.

Entire County be Covered It is planned to make the movement cover the entire county and members of the publicity committee were named from various sections for that purpose.

The CZAR'S SPY

The Mystery of a Silent Love
Chevalier WILLIAM LE QUEUX
AUTHOR OF "THE CLOSED BOOK," ETC.
ILLUSTRATIONS BY C-D-RHODES

SYNOPSIS.
CHAPTER I—The yacht Lola narrowly escapes wreck in Lehigh harbor.

CHAPTER II—Gregg visits Capt. Jack Durnford of the marines aboard his vessel, and is surprised to learn that Durnford knows, but will not reveal, the mystery of the Lola.

CHAPTER III—In London Gregg is trapped nearly to his death by a former servant, Olinio, who repeats in time to save him, but not to give a reason for his treachery.

Martin Woodroffe did not rejoin the house party at Rannoch. Although I remained the guest of my uncle much longer than I intended, indeed right through the shooting season, in order to watch the Leithcourts, yet as far as we could judge they were extremely well-bred people, and very hospitable.

Her father, on the other hand, seemed to view me with considerable suspicion, and I could easily discern that I was only asked to Rannoch because it was impossible to invite my uncle without including myself.

same spot at the same hour—five o'clock.

The place where he halted was on the edge of a dark wood on the brow of a hill about three miles from Rannoch. Leithcourt never went there direct, but always so timed his walks that he arrived just at five, and remained there smoking cigarettes until half-past, as though awaiting the arrival of some person he expected.

In my youth I had sat many a quiet hour there in the darkening gloom and knew the wood well, and was able to watch the tenant of Rannoch from points where he least suspected the presence of another.

"Oh, yes, he was always fond of walking. He used to take me with him when we first came here, but he always went so far that I refused to go any more."

She never once mentioned Woodroffe. I allowed her plenty of opportunity for doing so, chaffing her about her forthcoming marriage in order that she might again refer to him. But never did his name pass her lips. I understood that he had gone abroad—that was all.

Often when alone I reflected upon my curious adventure on that night when I met Olinio, and of my narrow escape from the hands of my unknown enemies. I wondered if that ingenious and dastardly attempt upon my life had really any connection with that strange incident at Leghorn. As day succeeded day, my mind became filled by increasing suspicion. Mystery surrounded me on every hand. Indeed, by one curious fact alone it was increased a hundredfold.

Late one afternoon, when I had been out shooting all day with the Rannoch party, I drove back to the castle in the Perth car with three other men, and found the ladies assembled in the great hall with tea ready. A welcome log fire was blazing in the huge old grate, for in October it is chilly and damp in Scotland and a fire is pleasant at evening.

Muriel was seated upon the high padded fender—like those one has at Rannoch—which always formed a cozy spot for the ladies, especially after dinner. When I entered, she rose quickly and handed me my cup, exclaiming as she looked at me:

"Oh, Mr. Gregg! What a state you are in!"

"Yes, I was after snipe, and slipped into a bog," I laughed. "But it was early this morning, and the mud has dried."

"Come with me, and I'll get you a brush," she urged. And I followed her through the long corridors and upstairs to a small sitting-room which was her own little sanctum, where she worked and read—a cozy little place with two queer old windows in the colossal wall, and a floor of polished oak, and great black beams above. As my eyes wandered around the room they suddenly fell upon an object which caused me to start with profound wonder—a cabinet photograph in a frame of crimson leather.

The picture was that of a young girl—a duplicate of the portrait I had found torn across and flung aside on board the Lola!

The merry eyes laughed out at me as I stood staring at it in sheer bewilderment.

"What a pretty girl!" I exclaimed quickly, concealing my surprise. "Who is she?"

My companion was silent a moment, her dark eyes meeting mine with a strange look of inquiry.

"Yes," she laughed, "everyone admires her. She was a schoolfellow of mine—Elma Heath."

"Heath!" I echoed. "Where was she at school with you?"

"At Chichester."

"Long ago?"

"A little over two years ago."

"She's very beautiful!" I declared, taking up the photograph and discovering that it bore the name of the same well-known photographer in New Bond street as that I had found on the carpet of the Lola in the Mediterranean.

"Yes. She's really prettier than her photograph. It hardly does her justice."

"And where is she now?"

"Why are you so very inquisitive, Mr. Gregg?" laughed the handsome girl. "Have you actually fallen in love with her from her picture?"

"I'm hardly given to that kind of thing, Miss Leithcourt," I answered with mock severity. "I don't think even my worst enemy could call me a flirt, could she?"

"No. I will give you your due," she declared. "You never do flirt. That is why I like you."

"Thanks for your candor, Miss Leithcourt," I said.

"Only," she added, "you seem smitten with Elma's charm."

"I think she's extremely pretty," I remarked, with the photograph still in my hand. "Do you ever see her now?"

"Never," she replied. "Since the day I left school we have never met. She was several years younger than myself, and I heard that a week after I left Chichester her people came and took her away. Where she is now I have no idea. Her people lived somewhere in Durham. Her father was a doctor."

"Then you have heard absolutely nothing as to her present position or whereabouts—whether she is married, for instance?"

"Ah!" she cried mischievously. "You betray yourself by your own words. You have fallen in love with her, I really believe, Mr. Gregg. If she knew, she'd be most gratified—or at least, she ought to be."

At which I smiled, preferring that she should adopt that theory in preference to any other.

She spoke frankly, as a pure honest girl would speak. She was not jealous, but she nevertheless resented—as women do on recent such things—that I should fall in love with a friend's photograph.

There was a mystery surrounding that torn picture; of that I was absolutely certain. The remembrance of that memorable evening, when I had dined on board the Lola arose vividly before me. Why had the girl's portrait been so ruthlessly destroyed? Hour by hour the mystery surrounding the Leithcourts became more inscrutable, more intensely absorbing. I had searched a copy of the London directory at the Station hotel at Carlisle, and found that no house in Green could hear the boughs cracking as they forced their way through them.

Of a sudden, while standing there not daring to breathe lest I should betray my presence, a strange sound fell upon my eager ears.

Next moment I realized that I was at that place where Leithcourt so persistently kept his disappointed tryst, having approached it from within the wood.

The sound alarmed me, and yet it was neither an explosion of fire arms nor a startling cry for help.

One word reached me in the darkness—one single word of bitter and withering reproach.

Headless of the risk I ran and the peril to which I exposed myself, I dashed forward with a resolve to penetrate the mystery, until I came to the gap in the rough stone wall where Leithcourt's habit was to halt each day at sundown.

There, in the falling darkness, the sight that met my eyes at the spot held me rigid, appalled, stupefied.

In that instant I realized the truth—a truth that was surely the strangest ever revealed to any man.

HER LENTEN SACRIFICE

By JOHN DARLING.

(Copyright, 1915, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"There is only one thing that I really do not like to do," said Geraldine.

"Then that's the thing for you to do, my dear; that ought to be your sackcloth and ashes this Lent," said Miss Craft, spinster, and Sunday school teacher of Geraldine Bonner and other girls not yet old enough to vote. "What is it?"

"Darning! I hate to darn stockings!"

But before the beginning of Lent she had decided to darn stockings for anyone who would pay her 20 cents an hour all through the penitential season, and to this end she wrote little notes to her friends and placed a tiny card of advertisement in the church leaflet. She hoped, down in her soul, that she would not find much work to do, but she had determined to take whatever came her way.

One family after another engaged her services for one or two or three or even five or six hours a week, and before she could realize it Geraldine had given up nearly all of her own time. This in itself was a great sacrifice, for the skating was good and she loved to skate. Her little box of money, which she was saving for her Easter offering, was getting heavy.

The family in which Geraldine found the most darning to do was a family of father, mother, four sons and a small daughter. The mother kept no servant and had eyes that would not admit of her darning or doing close work at night. Hence, Geraldine's newly established profession fitted in conveniently with the schemes of the family need.

The week before Easter Geraldine felt that she could do the darning for the Foster family in less than two hours, and on the day on which she was to go to that home she had planned to have an afternoon's skating.

To her surprise and disappointment when she arrived in the cheerful sewing room, Mrs. Foster showed her a basketful of socks.

"I'll try to get them all done for you, Mrs. Foster," she said, cheerfully. "This is my last week, you know."

"I do know it—to my sorrow," replied Mrs. Foster. "Oh, James, come in. Miss Bonner, this is my son who has loaded you down with extra work, James, Miss Bonner, who has been helping me for a few weeks with the mending."

James Foster let his eyes dwell longer than was necessary on the lovely face of Geraldine Bonner as she sat in the sunlight in his mother's tiny sewing room. He stepped over to her low rocker and put out his hand. "I am glad to have the pleasure of meeting you—and sorry to have brought you more work," he said, his frank, pleasant smile accompanying his words.

"Oh—don't mind the work. I—well, I'll tell you how much good it has done me, some day, perhaps," Geraldine answered.

"You're fond of darning?" asked James, sitting down on the edge of the machine. He was tall, and the edge of it made a not uncomfortable seat for him.

"Fond of it?" asked Geraldine. "If I were I shouldn't be doing it as a Lenten sacrifice, should I?" she laughed.

"Hardly—would she, mother?" Mrs. Foster shook her head. "No, son, I guess not. But I'll say for Miss Bonner right here and now that she might love the work dearly, for she has never been anything but cheerful and happy over it, and it has been a pleasure to have her here."

Geraldine made a bow over her work and Mrs. Foster hurried off to attend to numerous duties. James, being at home on a visit, could think of no pleasanter way of spending that vacation time than in sitting in his mother's sewing room watching the sunbeams play in and out among Geraldine Bonner's curls as she bent over the homely task of darning.

All afternoon he remained near the girl and at the end of three hours when she had finished the two had become more than mere acquaintances. They were sure that they had found several points of meeting and that they should see each other often while James was at home.

Geraldine was busy during the week, but on Sunday when she made her Easter offering of many dollars earned by herself in performing a task she did not like, she looked up to see James Foster opposite her in church. Afterward he walked home with her in the spring sunshine and they said much to each other that did not pertain to darning socks.

Later, when he returned again to his home town to visit, he asked her to marry him. "I dare to do it, dear, since I know you are a girl who can make sacrifices—otherwise I could not ask you just now. I haven't much to offer."

Geraldine disagreed on that point, but she promised to marry him.

THINKS HIS IS A TENIERS

Dakota Pastor Has Painting 300 Years Old—May Be Famous Missing "Smugglers."

Liebon, N. D.—A painting by David Teniers, which is supposed to be the famous missing "Smugglers" and three centuries old, is owned by Rev. Dr. N. O. Heller, a Presbyterian pastor, here.

Teniers was a celebrated Flemish painter of the seventeenth century, his most famous works being the "Smoker," the "Card Players" and "Smugglers." The last named was lost years ago.

Doctor Heller was a student in Scotland 20 years ago and was given a tip that the famous painting was in a farmhouse. He investigated and became convinced of the authenticity of the painting and purchased it. He took it to Chicago, where it was inspected by Arthur Dawson, the well-known Teniers expert, who pronounced it genuine.

CLEAR 30 YEAR MYSTERY

Dying Convict Confesses Murder of Squire Kindt, Who Was Taking $1,100 to a Bank.

Allentown, Pa.—Through the deathbed confession of Henry Truxen, an inmate of the Western penitentiary, the disappearance of Squire Francis Kindt of Leighton, in 1885, was cleared up. Squire Kindt left home to place $1,100 in the bank in Easton.

Truxen confessed to his cellmate, Robert E. Boyer, that he, with two other men, murdered him and buried his body on the mountain near Millport.

Howard Kindt, a son, living in Brooklyn, N. Y., obtained Boyer's parole and took him to Millport a few days ago. Boyer gave the directions he had received from Truxen, and the bones of Squire Kindt were found. Arrests may follow.

street was registered as occupied by the tenant of Rannoch; and, further, when I came to examine the list of guests at the castle, I found that they were really persons unknown in society. Leithcourt seemed to possess a long pocket and smiled upon those parasites, officers of doubtful commission and younger sprigs of the pseudo-aristocracy who surrounded him, while his wife, keen-eyed and of superb bearing, was punctilious concerning all points of etiquette, and at the same time indefatigable that her mixed set of guests should enjoy a really good time.

Next day I shot with the Carmichaels of Crossburn, and about four o'clock, after a good day, took leave of the party in the Black Glen, and started off alone to walk home, a distance of about six miles. It was already growing dusk, and would be quite dark, I knew, before I reached my uncle's house. My most direct way was to follow the river for about two miles and then strike straight across the large dense woods, and afterwards over a wide moor full of treacherous bogs and pitfalls for the unwary.

My gun over my shoulder, I had walked on for about three-quarters of an hour, and had nearly traversed the wood, at that hour so dark that I had considerable difficulty in finding my way, when—of a sudden—I fancied I distinguished voices.

I halted. Yes. Men were talking in low tones of confidence, and in that calm stillness of evening they appeared nearer to me than they actually were.

I listened, trying to distinguish the words uttered, but could make out nothing. They were moving slowly together, in close vicinity to myself, for their feet stirred the dry leaves, and I

SHOCK CAUSED HIS DEATH

Soldier's Lungs Burst by the Explosion of Shell That Fell Within a Yard of Him.

The London Lancet tells of several cases of soldiers who have been killed by shells, although the men were not touched.

"M. Sencert," it says, "reports to the Societe de Chirurgie the case of a man who was killed without being hit, though he was less than a yard away from the point of explosion of a bursting shell of large caliber. He had not even been grazed by any metallic fragment and had no external wound, but at the necropsy both his lungs were found to be burst."

"Many deaths under similar circumstances have been noted since the outbreak of the war, for which various more or less complicated explanations have been given. Fulminating toxic gases from the explosion and sudden nervous shock have been suggested as causes. M. Sencert points out that these hypotheses are unnecessary and that a purely mechanical cause is a sufficient explanation."

SAYS NATION DEPENDS ON STRONG CHILDREN

Seattle, June 15.—The child was the theme of discussion at last night's session of the advisory council of the National Association for Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis. One of the papers submitted was by Dr. George M. Kober, the president of the association, who said:

"When we remember that about one-third of the population consists of children up to the age of fifteen years, and that the physical and mental vigor of a nation depends on the environment of childhood and youth, when the whole organism is in a state of plasticity and susceptibility, we can not fail to appreciate the importance of laying the foundation for a strong and vigorous race at the earliest period possible.

"Since an inherited predisposition plays an important role in the spread of tuberculosis, a rational prophylaxis is suggested and that parents must be healthy, and that marriage with tuberculosis persons should be prohibited.

"Prenatal care should include proper instruction of the mother in personal hygiene, rational food, improved housing and factory conditions. Excessive work and insufficient or improper food are most important causes of premature and delicate babies.

"A healthful home is essential. Preference should be given to individual homes or apartments, in tenements not exceeding two stories. Dark, gloomy and damp houses should be avoided where the death rate is often double or treble that of health-

SPEAKER DECLARES INFANT MORTALITY IS STILL TOO HIGH

Seattle, Wash., June 15.—In a paper on "The Child and the Community," head at last night's meeting of the Advisory Council of the National Association for the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis, Dr. Edward O. Otis, of the Tufts College Medical School, Boston, said:

"It is largely to the families of the newer Americans, to the social groups where the families are large, that we must look for the future maintenance of our American population. The problem of the community is to see how many of the children in these families can be saved.

"Infant mortality, even in those cities where the death rate is lowest, is still far too high; and one of the principal measures in reducing it is the provision of clean milk. Hereafter mention must be paid by the community to the protection of the milk supply through an efficient system of milk inspection. Certified or pasteurized milk must be furnished to mothers for their young children through milk stations, or some such agency. School lunches should be provided when the child is underfed and anaemic."

NEAT TRAVELING COAT

CAN BE DEVELOPED IN A VARIETY OF MATERIAL.

Styles Just Now May Be Said to More Nearly Meet the Requirements of the Wearer Than Any Previously Introduced.

Coats for motoring and traveling more nearly meet every possible requirement demanded of them than have any heretofore introduced. They are roomy throughout, comfortable, smartly tailored and express a chic ensemble that could not be improved upon.

Here, for example, is one that may be developed in club-checked or blue serge, covert cloth, pongee, or even linen crash. The collar can be left open as well as closed by unbuttoning the right overlapping front of the coat and turning it back in a triangular lapel.

The front of the coat shows a broad belt introduced from the sides through oblique eyelets. A double-breasted effect is maintained both in the blouse and skirt portions, which brings the line of closing well over the left side.

The flared upstanding collar is held erect by a band that encircles the base of the neck, then turns downward, following the line of closing of the blouse. It fastens with a row of flat nickel buttons.

The skirt of the coat is gathered beneath the belt, but at the sides and in back the lengths from shoulder to hem are in one piece flaring below the waist.

Note the clever pockets which so consistently repeat the buttoned band arrangement of the collar.

There is a new summer fabric that would be splendid for this model should it be used as a dust coat, and that is khaki-kool, a new khaki-colored raw silk weave particularly recommended for coats and suits.

BUREAU SCARFS IN SUMMER

Should Be Lighter, Both in Material and Color, Than Those Used in Winter.

Even bureau scarfs should be of a more simple character during the hot months. All fussy things, including scarfs, should be carefully packed away with the blankets and of you have such antiques) feather beds. Strips or lengths of voile make excellent scarfs. These may be plainly hemmed or hemstitched about the edges. It is a pretty idea to introduce into the bureau scarf the dominant color of the bedroom. Suggesting this color to be a cool blue, then the color in the scarf may be blue, and perhaps mixed with a little green foliage. Make a colored border about the scarf, either by stenciling or stitching in blue thread. Various designs and stitches can be used for this purpose. If there is not time to embroider the scarf in color it is possible to obtain the voile already stamped with colored flowers that need no retouching, so that the effect is very like stenciling. The curtains might be made to match.

EASY TO MAKE BRIGHT SPOT

Single Cushion, in Gay Colors, Will Do Wonders in Improving Appearance of Room.

If your living room or your bedroom is in need of a bright spot, get to work and make a cushion of bright-colored material. It is surprising how one solitary cushion will change the whole atmosphere of a room. A cushion made of old-rose poplin, denim or silk would just sing with joy and happiness if you would place it amid your surroundings. Through the center of the cushion sew a strip of white poplin on which large old-rose flowers are printed. Around the edge of the cushion sew a strip of narrow old-rose silk fringe. Should you find that old rose will not harmonize with your wall paper or your hangings, select a color that will blend with them—bright green, blue or yellow will have the same cheerful effect as the old rose.

60 PER CENT SCHOOL CHILDREN HAVE SOME PHYSICAL DEFECTS

Seattle, Wash., June 15.—Twenty million school children in the United States spend 100,000,000 hours, or 11,415 years, each school day in school houses in the United States," said Sherman C. Kingsley of Chicago in a paper read before the Advisory Council of the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis last night, to emphasize the need of proper ventilation of schools.

"Medical inspection in the public schools, he said, "has disclosed the fact that more than 60 per cent of the school children have physical defects of one kind or another, serious enough to interfere with school work. It is our theory in America that every child should have at least that modicum of education comprehended in the grammar school. We know that less than half the children ever attain this standard. Children are in our school seats who cannot see the blackboard, or hear the teacher's voice, who because of nose and throat difficulties cannot breathe properly even such air as is usual in school rooms. Such children are constantly dropping out of school because of discouragement and lack of interest, often taking with them the handicap that spoiled their school experience, to become in turn the cause of failure in after life.

High Rents in Cities.
The enormous rise in London rents, among rich and poor alike, during the past five years is shown by statistics issued by the board of trade. Lord Allendale, who three years ago paid $5,560 a year for his house in Piccadilly, now pays $8,250. The rent of the United Service club, which until 1904 was $725, is now $19,150; and that of Lloyds bank, at the corner of St. James street and King street, is $15,000 a year. One must, however, go to New York to find the most highly rented tenant in the world—Mr. Murray Guggenheim, who pays $25,000 a year for his residence at the corner of Fifth avenue and Eighty-first street.

Food Problem in Austria.
The Austrian minister of education says that all school children required for work in the fields will be allowed unlimited leave in absence from the schools, which will be closed during the summer months if necessary. It has been proposed to introduce several days' compulsory abstinence from meat weekly in Austria. The population has been enraged at hearing the results of the requisition of corn in Hungary, where, it is said, stores sufficient for the needs of the whole of the dual monarchy have been discovered.

HAD FISH BY TON

Blowing Up of Wreck Stuns Many Hundreds.

Coast Guard Cutter Yamacraw Destroys Menace to Navigation, and Crew Have More Fish Than They Need.

Savannah, Ga.—How the men of the United States coast guard cutter Yamacraw caught 853 pounds of fish, ranging from one to two pounds to huge denizens of the deep weighing 320 pounds, while blowing up the wreck of an abandoned schooner off the coast of Florida several days ago, was told very interestingly by Lieutenant Alexander, who is temporarily in command of the cutter during the absence of Captain Henderson.

The Yamacraw left Savannah on Sunday, April 18, in response to a wireless message from a steamskip, which stated that the topmasts of a sunken schooner had been sighted about 30 miles to the eastward of the St. John's river entrance. The cutter arrived at the scene of the wreck at daybreak the next morning and immediately set to work to blow up the wreck, which was a menace to navigation. A squad of men was sent out in one of the cutter's small boats, and mines heavily charged with gun cotton were lowered on each of the three topmasts which were seen protruding from the surface of the water.

At the first shot one of the masts was demolished far below the water-line, and almost immediately the surface of the water surrounding the wreck was thick with fish of various sizes. Many of them were badly stunned, and another small boat was sent out to gather them up. From the first shot 11 snappers weighing 23 1/2 pounds, five horse mackerel weighing 141 pounds and 65 1/2 pounds of small fish were taken into the second boat, according to Lieutenant Alexander.

The charge lowered on the second mast was then fired, and as the blast hurled the demolished "stick" high into the air another crop of stunned fish appeared on the surface of the water.

Most of the fish, Lieutenant Alexander said, seemed to be badly stunned. Others, he said, seemed to be unharmed, but all of them flopped around on top of the water, apparently unable to go below the surface. Lieutenant Alexander said he believed some of the fish had been blown up from a depth of one hundred feet, and that the lack of water pressure to which they were accustomed at that depth prevented their getting below the surface again. Most of them were easily caught and pulled into the boats.

The fish caught following the second shot were one snapper, two or three medium sized fish and a huge jewfish weighing 195 pounds. These were hauled into the third boat which had been sent out from the cutter. At the third shot the men thought for an instant they had blown up a whale. Upon closer examination, however, it proved to be a second jewfish, considerably larger than the first. This monster, which proved to be six feet one inch in length, four feet three inches in girth and weighing 220 pounds, was roped and towed by one of the small boats to the side of the cutter, where a block and tackle were used to hoist it on deck. The huge fish was still alive after it had been hoisted over the side of the cutter, and grappling hooks similar to those used by laborers on the cotton docks were employed to drag it to a point where it could not flop overboard.

The second jewfish was the biggest that any of the officers or men on board the Yamacraw had ever seen. After it had been killed it was butchered, and some of the men ate portions of it and declared that it was fairly edible.

After destroying as much as possible of the wrecked schooner, which the officers were unable to identify, the Yamacraw steamed northward again and entered Charleston harbor the following morning.

Advice for Auto Owners

Conducted by L. K. EDWARDS

Questions and Answers Covering Matters of Importance to the Man Who Runs a Car Address Questions to Auto Editor, Daily Mirror.

My rear axle makes a noise, especially when turning a corner. I have had new housing and gears put in, also new bevel gear driving pinion. When I screw the pinion as tight as I think it ought to go it binds. What is the matter?

This condition is due to the shifting of the large differential gear, so that it moves away from and toward the driving pinion. The cause of this is usually a loose truss rod, which permits the housing halves to separate. The left half of the housing should be removed and the bolts reset and tightened, and then the truss rod taken up as far as possible to form a rigid construction. If you are not familiar with the work do not attempt it and under no circumstances should you try to readjust the gears to compensate for the loose rod.

Are chain carbon removers as good as the scraping method?

Much has been said against this method of removing carbon from the cylinders, but it has been tried with very satisfactory results, no harmful effect on the motor being noticeable. It certainly is a quick and effective method and equal in every way to the result obtained when the cylinders are removed and scraped. Many people are afraid that if they use this method there is danger of the chain catching in the valves or that small pieces of the chain will become broken off and score the cylinders. Both experience and careful thought on the subject, however, will show that there is no possibility of the chain catching in the valves of any poppet valve motor. Of course it would not do to use the chain in a rotary or sleeve valve motor, because it would get caught between the edge of the valve and the edge of the ports and be ground to pieces, and at the same time the valve would be injured. Furthermore, there is no possibility of small pieces of chain breaking off and scoring the cylinders for the reason that the chain is not brittle. It will bend before it will break. Nor is the material hard enough for the remover to scratch the cylinder as it is hattered about. The chain will only remove the carbon from the top of the piston, the cylinder head and that part of the bore that is above the piston travel. The valve pockets must be scraped, but as these are easily accessible this is not an objection.

How are platinum points fastened to screws of a magneto?

One method is to hard solder the points in place. The first step is to cut two small slots at right angles in the end of the two members carrying the points. Then by the aid of the brass solder the points are fastened in place.

Kindly tell me something about long and short intake manifolds. Which is the better?

The short manifold usually is better, showing superior results at low speeds with wide open throttle and equally good results at high speeds. When the throttle is wide open at low speeds, a condition existing when the car is on a heavy pull, the liquid gasoline in the manifold must be lifted a greater height in the long manifold, and hence there is a chance of loading up, due to the liquid fuel dropping back against the throttle. The condition really is caused by the air velocity being insufficient to carry the fuel to the motor. With a short manifold the fuel need not be lifted very high, and hence there will be no loading up or collecting of gasoline in the manifold.

What is the approximate saving in current when using the two headlights switched on as dimmers instead of switched on full?

This all depends on the method of dimming used. If the lamps are dimmed by connecting them in series then the current consumption is cut in half if the resistance in the wires is neglected, and since this is small it may be. If two bulbs are used in the headlight, a large one in focus for country driving and a small one out of focus for city driving, the saving may be much greater, the small bulb taking about a fourth the current of the large one.

I am troubled with fire coming from the exhaust cut out underneath my car when running rapidly and shutting off quickly; also when pulling hard. It is not the regular exhaust from the engine, but a large blaze like gasoline fire which comes clear to the ground and spreads out several feet each way. Can you explain it?

It is difficult to say exactly what is causing this trouble without seeing the car. However, it may be that the valves are improperly timed or the mixture may not be correct. If the valves have been reset lately it would be wise to make certain that the timing is correct, but if they have not been reset they probably are all right. If the mixture is at fault it is a simple matter to adjust the carburetor. Possibly there is carbon in the exhaust pipe or it may be that you are running with the spark too late.

My front axle is bent about one and one-half inches from the spring seat to the outer end of the axle, a distance of about ten inches. How should it be straightened?

This axle should be heated to a cherry red heat and then straightened. The heat should be applied at the bend only, and as this is ten inches from the king pin bushings there is no reason why the latter should be heated and therefore no danger of them becoming enlarged. In fact, it is doubtful whether they would be enlarged even if exposed directly to the heat. It is not necessary to give the axle any heat treatment after it is straightened.

What is the cause of inner tubes becoming cemented or fastened to the casing so it is very difficult to remove them?

This is caused by neglecting to use enough tire talc between tube and casing. Whenever a tube is placed into a casing always sprinkle talc over the inside of the tire. Talc is a white powder, which is cheap, and may be bought at any supply store.

AFTER FIVE YEARS

Escanaba Testimony Remains Unshaken

Time is the best test of truth. Here is an Escanaba story that has stood the test of time. It is a story with a point which will come straight home to many of us.

Mrs. A. V. Lindquist, 1401 Escanaba Ave., Escanaba, says: "I suffered from backache for years and had a dull, heavy ache across my loins. I tried many remedies and consulted doctors, but didn't get relief. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from the Mead Drug Co., removed the trouble."

OVER FIVE YEARS LATER Mrs. Lindquist said: "I use Doan's Kidney Pills occasionally and find them just as represented."
Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Lindquist had. Foster-Milburn Co., Props., Buffalo, N. Y.

days, a Holstein that later was found to be twenty years old. She gave more milk than any of the grade cattle, despite her advanced years, and that was the way Mrs. Crooks got interested in the breed. After she had paid off the debt on her herd and had begun to make a good-sized profit on the business she made a trip to Denver and picked up a bunch of Holsteins for $300. About three years later she sold that same bunch of Holsteins for three times that amount, and from her books she saw that she had realized $5,000 on stock sold from them and about $2,000 on cream and milk, despite the fact that she was such a distance from a good market. And that profit was in addition to all the skim milk that had been fed to the calves and swine on the ranch. Her Cows "Almost Human." "I sold those cows because we were so far from a market," says Mrs. Crooks. "But I was so lonesome after they were gone that I made up my mind then and there that I'd always have a few Holsteins on the place after that. They're almost human. I never go out to the corral but what the cows gather around me without my speaking a word to them. Sometimes I take a wire brush and brush them down. If they think that one cow is getting too much attention the others will push her away and stick their noses in my hand and lick my boots." Mrs. Crooks was born in Kansas City. After she finished her schooling she worked in a number of business offices and then came to Colorado, where she taught school for several years before her marriage. Her home is a log cabin, but she has scenery all about her, and a stretch of river flows through the ranch. Cottonburst-on-the-Gunnison she calls the place.

SHE RUNS RANCH END OF BUSINESS

In Overalls Mrs. Crooks Attends to Crops and Milk and Butter.

RIDES LIKE A WESTERNER

When the Hired Men Get Slack or Lazy She Goes Out Into the Field and Shames Them — Her Cows Almost Human.

Denver.—Mrs. Angie Crooks tried everything from teaching school, reading proofs, clerking, bookkeeping and running a photograph gallery up to and including matrimony and still found happiness elusive.

Then she went to ranching. From handling the milk and butter of a few grade cows she has gone into the business of breeding fine stock. She owns 20 head of fine Holsteins from the leading families of the Holstein world. She lives all year round in the open and, arrayed in overalls, she superintends the planting and harvesting of crops and the irrigating of 480 acres of fine grain land in addition to looking after her "pota." And she's happy.

Mrs. Crooks and her husband have a fine ranch of 480 acres near Gunnison, Colo. The man devotes himself to a general cattle business, but to his wife has fallen the work of running the ranch and a thriving dairy business. She does it with a vigor that keeps roses in her cheeks, though her hair is graying, and makes her eyes sparkle with the zest of life. She rides like the out-and-out westerner that she is. She can run any piece of machinery on the farm, and when she thinks that the "hired hands" are getting a little slack or lazy, she goes out into the fields and works with them until, for very shame, they must fall into the pace she has set. Yet she measures only five feet four, she loves pretty clothes and with the business of buying bulls that brought her to Denver recently she combined a shopping tour and reveled in the new styles.

Homesick for the Ranch. "I've never been homesick for the place where I was reared. I've never been homesick for any human being, my mother or father or my husband. But I'm homesick for the ranch," she said here to a questioner. Mrs. Crooks was city born and bred. It was 12 years ago that she went to ranching. She says quite frankly that she married her husband because he was a cowman and therefore promised to fulfill the desire of her life for a ranch home. They hadn't anything but prospects to get married on, and after they were married she ran a photograph gallery and her husband worked as manager of the state fish hatcheries until they had capital enough to purchase a few acres near Gunnison, Colo., and a cow. The cow Mrs. Crooks insisted upon having even though there were numerous other things that they had to do without to have her. That cow was the foundation of a thriving dairy business and a venture in breeding stock which has proved both profitable and agreeable.

The cattlemen of the state have made her president of the Colorado Holstein club. "I don't see why more women don't go into the business," she says. "Women have plenty of business ability and they pay much more attention to detail. On a ranch they save money in little ways that a man won't bother about. And that is what makes for success." Beginning of Dairy Business. It was because she couldn't bear to waste anything that Mrs. Crooks began selling the surplus milk given by their own cow. Soon she had as many customers as she could supply and was making a good profit. Then one day her only competitor announced that he was going out of the dairy business. All of his patrons immediately flocked to Mrs. Crooks, and she agreed to take care of them, "though God only knew where I was to get the milk," she says. She bought up all the milk cows that she could and acquired with the rest of the bunch a relic of good old tries to mail his horse. Animal Was Light Enough, but Too Bulky to Send by Parcel Post. Newton, N. J.—Charles A. Walker, proprietor of the Gray Horse Hardware company, walked into the Newton post office and said to Postmaster George N. Norris: "George, how heavy do you go on parcel post packages?" "Well, go as heavy as 50 pounds, Charlie," the postmaster answered. "Come on down to the store, George," Walker suggested. "I want official advice." So the postmaster and merchant went to the hardware store and, pointing out a paper mache horse in front of the establishment, Walker asked: "Do you think they'd take him by mail? You see, I have him stamped and addressed to Hartford, where I want to send him for repairs and fittings for harness."

High Price for Unborn Calf. The price of $5,000, agreed upon between W. H. Tichnor of Oconomowoc, Wis., and F. L. Ames of North Easton, Mass., for the purchase of a Guernsey calf, is probably the highest on record. The peculiar feature of the contract is that the calf was yet unborn.
