BULGARS DRIVE BRITISH FROM MACEDONIA

ALLIES EVACUATE TWO SERB TOWNS; BULGAR TROOPS NEAR BORDER

LATEST REPORTS SHOW BULGAR PURSUERS OF ENTENTE FORCES WITHIN FIVE MILES OF THE GREEK BORDERS—GREECE REPORTED READY TO WITHDRAW FORCES ALONG SALONIKA FRONT AND AT RAIL LINES.

TURKS HARD HIT BY WINTER WEATHER

Berlin, (wireless to Sayville) Dec. 13.—The British forces have been expelled from Macedonia and the Bulgarians under Gen. Toriedoff have occupied Dorian and Gievegle. It is declared that two British divisions were nearly wiped out in the advance of the Bulgars.

(By Associated Press.)

London, Dec. 13.—The difficulty of the efforts of Greece to maintain her neutral stand in the face of the allied retreat onto Salonika and the pursuit of the Bulgarians and the Germans continues to be the chief matter of interest at the entente capitals. The latest decision of the Greek government according to Athens despatches, is to withdraw considerable bodies of troops from danger of contact with the entente forces at Salonika and the Germanic allies on the north front, leaving only small groups for policing purposes. Whatever the future holds for Greece, her efforts to clear the situation has disposed of any idea that allied forces on Greek territory are to enjoy privileges with anything like Greek support. The Greek army at Salonika will be reduced in numbers to secure liberty of action to the entente troops there. At the same time troops along the line of the railroads will be withdrawn to prevent complications where German or Bulgarian troops enter Greek territory.

8,000 BRITISH KILLED

As far as is known the hard fought attacks on the British in Macedonia has been delivered by the Bulgarians without the assistance of the Germans. A despatch to the Times says the Bulgarians left 8,000 dead on the field after two assaults on the British lines.

"On the second attack," the despatch says, "our artillery and rifle and rapid fire attack was opened on the advancing mass at 500 yards range. The Bulgarians faced the murderous hail on the run for 500 yards and then turned and fled which flight soon became a helter skelter rout."

FLANK MOVES POSSIBLE

The possibility of various flank movements through Greek territory by the Germans is seen in the permission of Greece to allow the country to become a field for the belligerents. It is rumored that British troops are already landing at Kaval and that the first detachment of Serbs has been brought to Salonika. Allied squadrons continue to pay close attention to the Greek coast and restrictions on Greek commerce continue unabated. In the western field there has not been any developments of importance.

ALLIES EVACUATE TOWNS

London, Dec. 13.—The Salonika correspondent of Reuters, in a despatch dated, Sunday, relative to the fighting in Serbia says: "The evacuation of Dolran and Gievegle was completed today and the Bulgarians are reported to be within five miles of the Greek frontier, following slowly in the wake of the retreating allies."

Johnson Bros. are Acquitted

According to information reaching here today, Oscar and John Johnson of Negaunee, brothers accused of murdering a third brother, were acquitted yesterday morning after the jury had been out since four o'clock Saturday afternoon. The verdict was returned at 9:45 o'clock Sunday morning. The jury found the men were justified in their act which it was claimed was in self-defense. The case has attracted wide attention in Upper Peninsula circles because of the unusual features involved.

GOODFELLOW COMES FORWARD TO HELP SHOELESS YOUTH

Another chapter has been written in the story of the boy who appeared in police court Friday morning and told his story. This chapter was written Saturday when a "goodfellow" called at the Mirror office with an offer to provide the boy with shoes.

A good fellow is one who gives with no thought of return and the spirit of real giving, which is akin to good fellowship, is defined as that giving that does not content itself with an exchange of gifts, but reaches out to give where no return can be expected.

Our hats off to the good fellow, who by the way was the only one who responded to the S. O. S. of the poor unfortunate youngster. Our hats off to the Charity Committee of the Woman's Club, for it is they who have undertaken to help him.

The youngster could not be located Saturday afternoon but if he will appear at the Mirror office he will be put in touch with the "Good fellow" and something will be done for him.

This is the Christmas spirit, that should prevail in our hearts now. Are we falling short of the "life worth while" when we let these little life appeals get beyond us. "Peace on Earth—Good Will To Men."

Let's think of the other fellow and the Christmases that some folks are going to have. Let's let our "Merry Christmas" mean something more to us than a mere greeting!

SPLENDID NEW SCHOOL BUILDING DEDICATED

Recently Completed St. Joseph's Parochial School Thrown Open for Use—Bishop Eis Dedicates Building

GREAT PARADE PRECEDED THE FORMAL CEREMONIES

New School Replaces One Destroyed by Fire a Year Ago—Is an Up-To-Date Structure

St. Joseph's Parochial school, one of the most modern school buildings in the northwest, was fittingly dedicated yesterday afternoon in the presence of several hundred people.

Shortly after 2 o'clock the marshal of the day, J. A. Allo began to form the parade and as it marched from church to church and as the societies and congregations of the Catholic churches in the city joined, it grew larger and when the scene of the dedication was reached the line contained nearly all the Catholic population of the city.

In the morning a solemn high mass was celebrated in St. Joseph's church by the Rev. Rudolph Bonner, provincial superior of the Franciscan Order of Cincinnati. His assistants were Rev. F. X. Barth of St. Patrick's church, Rev. Father Lefebvre of St. Anne's, and Father Basil Henze of Calumet delivered the sermon. Rt. Rev. Bishop Eis of Marquette was in the sanctuary.

Other priests in the sanctuary were: Rev. Father Eugene Buttermar of Peoria; Rev. Father Eusebius of Peoria; Rev. Father Beauchene of Pat Rock; Rev. Father Bennett of Gladstone; Rev. Father Souard of Rapid River; Rev. Father Blin of Schaffer; Rev. Father Stahl of Bark River; Father Marceau of St. Anne's church; Rev. Father Feldhaus, assistant pastor. (Continued on page two)

140,000 GROSS GLASS BOTTLES FOR BRITISH

(By Associated Press.) Wheeling, W. Va., Dec. 13.—An order for 140,000 gross of glass bottles for the British government has been awarded to glass makers of this city and Williamstown. Delivery to be made as soon as possible. The bottles to be used for sending liquid food to soldiers in trenches. The trade in American bottles has been so pronounced that trade experts predict a trade of a million gross.

PEACE PARTY SPLITS OVER RESOLUTIONS

Members of Ford Junketing Party Object to Resolution Condemning Wilson Policy

On board the Oscar II, at sea (via wireless to the Str. Noordam) Dec. 13.—A resolution condemning the preparedness policy of President Wilson brought a protest from part of the Ford Peace party. The resolution was drawn up by Rev. Jenkins Lloyd Jones and Rev. Charles Aked who asked it be signed by members of the peace party as their platform. Some of those who opposed the signing of the resolution were S. S. McClure of New York and Judge Ben Lindsay of Denver, and they based their refusal on the grounds that the plan was unpatriotic. An appeal to the rulers of Europe, addressed to each individually and suggesting that the warring nations arrive at a basis to establish a magnanimous and honorable peace, was sent by wireless signed by Henry Ford.

TILLMAN REFERS IN CAUSTIC TERMS TO BRYAN AND "TEDDY"

SENATOR TELLS CONGRESS ROOSEVELT IS "A GIANT FROM MOTHER GOOSE" AND THAT "BILL BRYAN IS SIMPLY OBSESSED WITH HIS OPPOSITION TO PREPAREDNESS" BIGGER ARMY NEEDED, HE BELIEVES.

SEES GREATER NEED OF NAVAL INCREASE

(By Associated Press.) Washington, Dec. 14.—Declaring William J. Bryan as "simply obsessed" and Theodore Roosevelt as a "giant in Mother Goose," Senator Tillman today addressed the senate on national defense and assailed what he characterized as the greed of the war munitions makers of this country. He upheld Secretary Daniel's plan for increase of the navy.

"The question of preparedness requires grave consideration and prompt action," said the senator.

"There are all sorts of opinion form all sorts of persons, some bad and some good and some unthinkable of adoption except by the wild men of Borneo. Bryan is bitterly opposed to any and all means of defense and he is simply obsessed and has just simply lost his poise. Theodore Roosevelt on the other hand roars and snorts like the bull of Bashan and clamors for war and for large armies and a manent. He reminds one of the giant in Mother Goose, 'Fee-Fi-Fo-Fum, I smell the blood of a German. Bring him alive, or bring his dead, I'll break his bones to make my bread.'"

The senator said he realized the necessity of a great army but that the navy should come first.

HALT PASSENGER CARRYING

Washington, Dec. 13.—A bill to prohibit the carrying of passengers on vessels with munitions and a resolution to come out for national defence on the part of American manufacturers was introduced today by Senator Kenyon.

FAIR OFFICIALS BE ELECTED JANUARY 12

Final Work Been Done on New Grand Stand and Fence at Fair Grounds—Other Work Progressing

The annual meeting for the election of officers of the county fair association will take place on January 12 in the city hall. A full set of officers and directors will be elected at that time.

Work on the new race track at the fair grounds is progressing rapidly and the grandstand and fence surrounding the grounds have been completed, when finished the race course will be one of the best in the upper peninsula.

With the improvements finished and ready for use, Delta county will be in possession of one of the best plants for county fairs anywhere in the peninsula. The securing of these things has meant the expenditure of much hard labor and persistent efforts on the part of fair and county officials.

tor of St. Patrick's church and Rev. Father Julius and Rev. Father Dooley of St. Joseph's church.

After the arrival of the parade line at the school, the formal dedication ritual was performed by the Rt. Rev. Bishop Eis. He was followed by Mayor B. J. MacKillican who spoke for some time in an interesting vein. The Rev. Father Eusebius Wagner of Peoria, Ill., a former pastor of St. Joseph's church delivered the dedication address.

When the list of speakers had finished the pupils of the school unfurled a large American flag while the band played "The Star Spangled Banner." This concluded the afternoon's program and the building was thrown open for public inspection.

A very interesting history is given in connection with the dedication yesterday afternoon. Following is a partial history of the destruction of the old school and the building of the school dedicated yesterday.

The Old School.
Aware of the need of uniting religious education with instruction in the secular branches of knowledge, the Rev. Eugene Buttermann, shortly after his appointment to the pastorate of St. Joseph's church in 1883, turned his attention to the erection of a parochial school. After much labor on his part and many sacrifices on the part of the people, St. Joseph's congregation, then consisting of all the Catholics in Escanaba, succeeded in building a frame school house at a cost of $4,000.

The building was finished and ready for occupancy in Sept. 1884. That month witnessed the arrival of seven Sisters of Notre Dame, among them Ven. Sr. M. A. Lagouri as Superior, which office she held for nearly twenty years. In their charge and under the care of zealous pastors, St. Joseph's school flourished and advanced toward that perfection to be desired in a Catholic school. Within eight years the number of pupils had increased to such an extent, that Rev. Francis Lings found it necessary, for the accommodation of all, to erect an additional small building between the school and parsonage. In the year 1903, Rev. Eusebius Wagner, then pastor, had a stone foundation placed under the school and he added to the school's convenience by installing steam heating, stoves having been previously used. And as the years rolled on, the school continued to accomplish its object, until Dec. 17, 1914, when it was completely destroyed by fire.

The New School
But almost immediately preparations were begun for the erection of a new school—a school that would be up-to-date, meeting modern requirements of education, healthful and sanitary, far surpassing the old school in size and convenience. Thanks to the generous spirit of the people and their desire to further the interests of Catholic education, this hope has been realized and we have a school that is in every regard a credit to St. Joseph's parish.

Features of the New School
It is a three-story brick building containing eleven commodious classrooms; an office, a spacious club-room with library, baths, shower-baths, etc.; an auditorium with stage. In a fire proof section of the first floor are two large boilers for the heating. The lighting, heating and ventilation are excellent in every regard. The electric wiring throughout the building is conduit work. Pipes have been placed in the school for a vacuum cleaner, to be installed in the future.

V. Rev. F. X. Barth, V. Rev. Hy. Buchholt and Father J. Corcoran, graduates of St. Joseph's school, donated a beautiful statue of St. Joseph, to be placed in the main entrance. At present there are fourteen Sisters of Notre Dame connected with the school.

Members of the Building Committee: Victor Bloomstrom, Peter J. Gross, Frank Kraus, John Gross, Rev. Erasmus Dooley, Rev. Julius Henze.

What to Do for Eczema

Greasy salves and ointments should not be applied if good clear skin is wanted. From any druggist for 25c or $1.00 for extra large size, get a bottle of Zemo. When applied as directed, it effectively removes eczema, quickly stops itching, and heals skin troubles, also sores, burns, wounds and chafing. It penetrates, cleanses and soothes. Zemo is dependable and inexpensive. Try it, as we believe nothing you have ever used is as effective and satisfying.

TAKE THE PLACE OF "SHAMS"

"Overpillowslips" Are a Great Improvement Over the Old-Fashioned and Unsatisfactory Articles.

The old-fashioned "sham" is fast disappearing, and in its place we have the envelope sham, or the "overpillowslip." Shams were always unsatisfactory things to keep in place, all sorts of laborious devices being needed to keep them up. Besides, they were exactly what their name implied, "sham," imitation, and any imitation is always bad (remembering, of course, that the exception only serves to prove the rule).

The new shams, if you insist upon calling them so, are really pillowslips made a size or two too large, so that they will fit easily and quickly over the ordinary, everyday slips. These large slips are sometimes quite elaborate, although they may be left quite plain. The object is to preserve for the pillows an immaculate appearance during the day. The large slips are put on the pillows when the bed is made, and are removed at night, the ordinary undercases still remaining upon the pillows to receive the wrinkles and the actual wear. Have a care, too, that the new "shams" do not conceal unwholesome utility cases, or the sham will have become a despicable thing.

COLORS IN SKATING SUITS

Striking Combinations Favored—Corduroy and Velveteen Are Most Popular.

The vogue for colors continues to be stronger than ever, especially in suits for wear in skating, which, as we have stated ere this, is expected to be a popular sport this winter, says the Dry Goods Economist. Some of these suits are made of corduroy and velveteen, others of a combination of velvet and cloth. A few novelty suits just bring out have leather coat and cloth skirt. Striking combinations are favored for skating wear such as a coat of black, navy or dark brown with a skirt in stripes in a plaid or a large check or in some light plain color, such as white, castor, Quaker gray, dark red, plum, purple or army blue. The coats of these suits are usually made very short. Some are in box effect, others flare, and some have the fullness in the pelum. The skirts are very short, are made with a decided flare and are often trimmed with bands of fur around the bottom.

CHARM OF FLOUNCED SKIRTS

Fluffy Appearance Is Very Becoming to Some of the Females of the Species.

The flounced skirts are charming in this black, whether two, three or five tiered or composed of many rows of little ruffles. A rival of these models is the petal pointed skirt which, at first plain edged, now often has its points outlined with a narrow frill, sometimes plaited, sometimes gathered. A charming version of this idea was seen a few days since. At first sight it seemed to be composed of haphazard points and frills, but there was really a definite plan in the arrangement. There were three tulle skirts, one over the other, cut into different shapes, the two top ones edged with ruffles. Their placing is very clever, and the dainty widening at the hips was insured by a bit of haircloth—orn braid it is now called—which was placed under the tulle.

A Stick of Perfume.

Dainty perfumed sticks of a soap-like substance are intended to replace liquid perfume for traveling. These sticks are about the size of the lip rouge pencils and are to be rubbed on the skin or handkerchief to give a dainty and lasting fragrance. These are all of the popular odors.

SUGGESTION FOR GIFT APRONS

May Be Made Extremely Effective When They Are Composed of Two Materials.

The practice of true economy always gives a pleasant feeling of satisfaction. The woman who is able to make gifts for birthdays and other anniversaries has a splendid opportunity to experiment with economy.

Some of the prettiest gift aprons can be made of two materials. For instance, by using barred muslin for the upper part of an apron and fine handkerchief linen for the bottom, or pocket portion, of the apron one can very successfully combine two materials for a sewing apron. The edge of the apron can be finished with lace edging which almost anyone has lying unused in the box of odds and ends.

Another effective apron can be made of two heart-shaped pieces of material, the smaller heart being of figured material and forming the bib, while the larger heart forms the lower portion of the apron and is of plain material. On such an apron a belt of beading should be attached and black velvet ribbon run through. The touch of black always adds character to figured materials.

SIMPLICITY MARKS WEDDING OF PRESIDENT AND MRS. NORMAN GALT

Bride, One of Washington's Most Beautiful Women, Has Never Looked More Lovingly and Attractively.

THE wedding of the president of the United States and Mrs. Edith Bolling Galt at the bride's Washington home on the evening of Saturday, Dec. 12, electrifies an entire nation, peculiarly susceptible to the heart appeal to a country witnessing the marriage of its first citizen.

With a ceremony so simple and with attendants so few one can scarcely believe that the wedding means a new life for the president and a new "first lady of the land."

Mrs. Galt, one of the most beautiful women in Washington of the old Virginia stock, never looked more lovely than she did as the date for the wedding approached. And even the most cynical recognizes the genuineness of the elation and buoyancy of the president, who under the spell of his bride has been literally "made over."

On Dec. 28 the president will be fifty-nine years old. Less than a year ago the trace of a very eventful year was written unmistakably into his face and physique. Especially did he show the stress and travail which he has undergone during the last five years. Today, apparently without a care in the world, he looks less than fifty. His air of austere reserve has melted away, and he is all graciousness. Nobody can doubt that under the influence of the simple, gracious, companionable woman he has won, "the year at the spring" for him. Moreover, he developed an enthusiasm in his courtship that proved a delight and surprise for those who thought they knew him best.

The "Something Blue."

The same turquoise bracelet worn by other brides of this administration—Mrs. Francis Bowes Sayre and Mrs. William Gibbs McAdoo—adorns the arm of the president's bride. It is the property of Miss Margaret Wilson and supplies the "something borrowed and something blue" necessary to carry out the old bridal superstition.

The "something old" is a piece of rare old rose point from a famous Bolling collection. The wedding gown, of course, provides the "something new." The Galt home in Twentieth street was put in spick and span order for the ceremony and the festivities incident thereto. The floral scheme is on an elaborate order, having been worked out by experts of the White House conservatories.

The tall mirrored mantel in the drawing room, which has been done over in American Beauty tints, is banked with lilies of the valley and Killarney roses. The tall palms which have formed part of the decorations at all White House weddings since that of Nellie Grant have been placed in the drawing room.

The dining room, the scene of the wedding feast, is one of the most interesting rooms in the house. The long mahogany table, an heirloom in the bride's family, has been polished to ultra brightness. The old fashioned buffet is laden with gifts of scores of friends and with the hand wrought silver of the Bolling family.

The country has never witnessed functions more brilliant than those which will be held in the White House after the return of the president and his bride from their honeymoon. She is a gracious and brilliant entertainer, although she has taken little part in social activities during the past eight years. Of course there will be trouble in arranging the diplomatic dinners because of the European war, but the president's bride is somewhat of a diplomat herself and will find a way out. Many receptions have been planned, and Washington society is rejoicing.

Washington has often noted with complimentary phrases the bride's taste in dress. Her friends have allways remarked her ability to dress distinctively and becomingly. Back of this ability lies a talent cultivated in the girlhood days. Money was not overabundant in the Bolling family. There was enough to give everybody the education due the standing of an old and influential Virginia family, but cash to buy trousseaux and lib for a family of girls remarkable for their beauty and popularity was not always available, wherefore Miss Edith Bolling began to utilize her gift for line and form and for color and design. Twenty-five years ago in Wytheville, Va., the new first lady as a girl in her teens developed a great reputation in the large family connection for her ability to buy, to cut out, to fit and to make up divers frocks for divers occasions. So, too, with hats. She has great skill in the building of a hat. She can "poise a wing" or twist a ribbon into a bow with the skill of a trained hand.

Not Fond of Jewelry.

"She has less jewelry than any member of the family," said one of the connection the other day. "I should say she had no favorite gem. The opal is her birthstone and is seen in the handsome bodice jewels, brooches or rings she possesses. She never cared for jewels, even as a young girl."

The bride is fond of flowers. No matter what the blossom, its color, its fragrance, its shape, its size, she is fond of flowers. The president's earliest remembrance took the form of exquisite clusters of orchids, sometimes white, sometimes yellow, sometimes mauve. Huge clusters of rich red roses sometimes replaced the orchids, and again bunches of lilies of the valley beautified the smart toilets in which she appeared either in public or in the drawing rooms of her friends. A few books showed the president's thoughtfulness from time to time. While not either bookish or a "blue-stocking," the bride is a remarkably well informed woman. She has made nine or ten trips to Europe, and each time she has gone she has stopped for periods varying from six months to a year. She is keenly observant, and she delights in leisurely touring about in infrequent paths.

A Simple Woman.

"You may take it from me, Edith never does anything for effect or because it is considered 'the thing to do.' She is in love with the man Woodrow Wilson. The glamour of the White House did not attract her or influence her judgment in a matter so intimate and vital," was one comment.

This side light is further emphasized in her manner of traveling. She selects her route and her companion, makes her arrangements and sets out sanely. According to another of her friends, she is one "of the most alive and vivid women" imaginable.

An alive and vivid woman she appears in her travels. Two years ago, with Miss Alice Gertrude Gordon, she made a tour of Spain—not the Spain of the cities, but the bypaths of the unfrequented Spain.

Between Miss Gordon and the bride the warmest friendship exists. Called to General Gordon's deathbed, her promise to "look after Gertrude" has resulted in a devoted friendship cemented by long periods of travel in far-off lands. Sentimental only is the tie of "guardianship" which many in Washington, even the closest of friends, consider exists between Miss Gordon and the president's helpmate. However, so devoted is she to her young companion "Altrude" (a play on the given names of Alice Gertrude) that even her business affairs have many times received the steady influence of her oversight.

Fine "Poor Man's Wife."

To turn to the purely domestic side, she is an excellent housekeeper, and she has a reputation for retaining not only the good will but the co-operation of her domestics. She herself can work out a menu admirably, and if the necessity arose she could personally "get up" a palatable dinner. She is clever at the Sunday evening supper table in distinctive feature of southern households, and her burling of the chaffing dish on these occasions conduces to the good digestion which waits on appetite.

She is a familiar figure in the Washington markets, her smart little runabout many times being filled with the more perishable fruits of her domestic shopping.

Altogether she would make a "fine wife for a poor man." She is open handed and generous, a devoted church woman and until quite recently a member of St. Thomas' Episcopal church. She now attends St. Margaret's, where her brother, Richard Wilmer Bolling, is an usher and where her mother, Mrs. W. H. Bolling; her unmarried brother, John Randolph Bolling, and her sister, Miss Bertha Bolling, also attend.

Fond of Young People.

"To show the younger contingent a good time" is one of her attributes. Not less is she considerate of the aged. Many instances of her looking up the invalid and elderly and taking them for drives about the parks are recorded. The mother of a young southern woman employed in one of the government departments came to visit her daughter, whom the president's bride had frequently met. Almost daily throughout the visit she appeared either in the afternoon or morning and acted as chaperone.

As to her accomplishments, the bride, possessing an avid mind and having traveled extensively—she has passed some time in every country in Europe and has traveled throughout the United States, Canada and Alaska—is thoroughly in touch with the thought and development of the life of the day. She speaks French well. She is a talented pianist. Her fine mezzo soprano voice, while untrained, is admirably suited to ballad singing. She is fond of singing. So also is the president, who himself has a good voice.

Finally she is well poised, "very human" and thoroughly unaffected and sincere. Not only charmingly pretty, she has the distinction of manner and carriage which will admirably conform to the role she is soon to assume—that of the White House and first lady of the land.

Brothers Numerous on W. and J. Team.

It is a remarkable fact about Washington and Jefferson football team that in the last twenty-five years fourteen families have contributed two or more brothers to the teams.

FOR THE HOUSEHOLD PET

Easily Arranged Domicile That Will Be Greatly Appreciated as His Sleeping Place.

For a small pet dog that lives indoors an ordinary kennel is scarcely necessary, but at the same time he requires some kind of "home" of his own, in which he may sleep at night.

We give a sketch of a convenient article for this purpose that can easily be made of any strong wooden box of a suitable size, which will, of course, be determined by the size of the dog it is intended for.

The lid of the box may be dispensed with, as it will not be required, and the interior of the box is lined with flannel, the material being fastened in place with tacks. The exterior of the box is smoothly covered with some pretty inexpensive cretonne, which is also fastened on with small tacks, the material being first of all secured to the edges of the box, then drawn tightly across the sides and tacked on underneath. The edges are afterwards finished off with narrow ornamental braid and brass-headed nails, driven in close together. Prior to covering the box, part of the front must be cut away, and the dotted lines in the small sketch on the right of the illustration indicate the portion that should be removed.

To complete the "home," and make it very comfortable, a piece can be cut from an old fur mat to fit into the bottom of the box.

Quaker Wit.

"Somewhere in France" there is at work a group of English Quakers, whose cool courage and tireless devotion in rescuing and tending the wounded on many a battlefield have won them, despite their peace principles, the hearty respect and liking of both "Tommys" and "plou-plous." Among them is one young man whose ancestors for several generations have been notable more for wit and spirit than for the virtues of stoutness associated with drab coats and broad hat brims.

It was a member of that family, a century or more ago, that found himself by chance in a carriage with a very fine lady attired in the low-necked, short-sleeved muslin dress then in the height of fashion, adorned by a profusion of jewels and trinkets, and protected only by a lace shawl as light as a cobweb. A chilly wind blew up suddenly, and she exclaimed, shivering, "What shall I do to get warm?" "I really don't know," said the Quaker, sympathetically, "unless thee put on another breastpin."—"YOUTH'S Companion.

AUTOMOBILE QUERIES AND ANSWERS

Why do we preheat fuel? Is this step necessary with present day gasoline?

The only reason for preheating fuel is to thoroughly vaporize it. In other words, for a given volume and a given mixture a great amount of heat units will be contained in the cooler charge provided that both are completely vaporized. The reason for this is that the heat expands the charge, thereby permitting a smaller number of units of discharge to be contained in a given volume. The fact that some of the heat units which would ordinarily be lost are returned to actual use by preheating the charge is a factor in the situation and does reduce the difference between the two conditions, but it is doubtful if as many heat units would be given up in this manner as would be lost by having a preheated charge. The practical side of the question, however, is one which must be looked upon. With the gasoline that we are now getting it is necessary to use heated air if the best results are to be attained; otherwise the fuel will not be vaporized, especially during cold weather.

Is there any inexpensive method of locking the wiring on a car so that it may be entirely switched off?

The most inexpensive method of providing a lock for the electric current on a car is to insert a lock switch at a point which will break all connection or to place an ordinary switch inside the tool box or some other part of the car which can be locked up.

Which is the more economical, to use the motor as a brake coming down a hill and save gasoline and brake bands or to use the service brake in order to save the mechanism of the car?

It would not seem, in view of the fact that using the motor as a brake is more or less injurious to the gears because the multiplication of power consequent upon changing the step down reduction to a step up causing more abrasion of the teeth, to be the correct thing to do to habitually use the motor as a brake. It is better by far to use the brakes in the way in which they are intended. One should not abuse even the surface brakes, but should always endeavor to bring the car to rest gradually with as little use of the brakes as possible.

My disk clutch slips or lets go entirely whenever it is called upon to undertake a pull after it gets warmed up. Can you suggest any possible remedy?

In cases where a disk clutch has been found to slip in the manner which you describe washing the clutch in kerosene has often been found to remedy this condition, though it is sometimes necessary to run it for miles with nothing but kerosene as a lubricant. After it is washed, put one-half kerosene and a flat lubricating oil, making about one and one-half pints in all, in the clutch box. The use of a fiber grease, not too much at a time, but often, in the gear set will give much better results. Of course if the plates can be adjusted so that they fit more closely together, this will probably remedy the condition.

There is an irregular miss in my motor which is particularly noticeable at high speed. What may be the trouble?

The causes of an irregular miss at high speed are myriad. A sticking valve or a weak valve spring may produce this trouble. If so the former can be found by inspection, and the remedy is some oil on the valve stem unless the stem is warped by the heat, in which case it will need to be trued up in a lathe, while the latter can be found out by inserting a screwdriver between the coils of the valve springs, one by one, while the motor is running at high speed. If the missing stops when this is done the valve spring is weak and should be replaced. The action of the screwdriver between the coils of the spring is to increase its compression strength.

Sooted spark plugs, loose connections, spark plug points too near together, improper contact of the distributor brushes due to weak springs or worn brushes, breaker points too near together, leakage of current due to worn insulation, or possibly loose magneto parts of worn bearings, are the causes of irregular firing that may be produced by the ignition system.

Missing at high speeds can be blamed on the fuel system if there is dirt in the carburetor line or on the spray nozzle or float chamber. It may also be caused by the sticking of the float or the auxiliary air valve.

What final ratio is considered best on cars with 33 by 4 inch tires, and what speed should be obtained from this ratio?

The size of the tires is not the all important factor in determining the proper gear ratio, as there are many other points to be considered, such as the most efficient speed of the motor, the weight of the car, etc. These may so alter the proper gear ratio that the mere size of the tires becomes insignificant in determining the final result. With this in view, it is impossible to state that any given final reduction is best for a given tire size.

I have changed the 30 by 3 inch front wheels and tires on my car to 30 by 3 1/2 in order to have the same size all around. How much more than a mile will I have to travel before the speedometer registers one mile?

Unless you have replaced the entire wheels you should not have changed your 30 by 3 for 30 by 3 1/2, as the rim profile for a 30 by 3 tire is different from that of a 30 by 3 1/2. In changing your equipment from 30 by 3 to 30 by 3 1/2 on the same wheel it would be necessary to cut the felloe of the wheel one-half inch all the way around and buy a new rim of different profile. Without changing either the wheel or the rim you can use a 31 by 3 1/2 tire, in which case the distance traveled by the car would be 3.33 per cent greater than the speedometer reading would show. If you change the wheels and rims and use the 30 by 3 1/2 size in place of the 30 by 3 your speedometer reading would not be affected.

What is the setting of a magneto on racing cars in general?

In general, the timing for a racing motor is advanced from one to two teeth on the timing gears, ahead of touring practice. The exact number of degrees of advance will depend upon the make of magneto, and hence no definite rule can be laid down for this, but where it is common touring practice to have the full retard occur on upper center in a racing motor, the full retard position will be advanced one or two teeth on the timing gears.

Can you give me a formula for a solution to be used in soldering aluminum as muriatic acid is with sheet iron?

The flux generally used with aluminum is chloride of zinc, but with the solder you speak of this might not prove to be the best.

Where is the best place for the spark plug in any type of engine?

The best place in the combustion space for a spark plug is at the point of purest mixture. This will vary with different types of motor, owing to the differences in shape in the combustion chambers. The reason for this is that where the charge is less diluted by scavenged gases it will burn quickest and surest.

Some engines stop almost immediately after the switch is cut off, while other engines seem to lose their momentum gradually. Why is this?

When the switch is cut off on an engine it is merely a matter of bringing to rest the moving parts which are no longer propelled by the explosion of the gases in the combustion chamber. Only one influence is probably great enough to be considered as the opposing factor to the movement of the motor, and this is the internal friction. When this has exerted its influence to such an extent that the motor is unable to turn itself over against the compression of the cylinders it will come to rest. The compression is not an opposing factor unless the momentum is insufficient to carry the motor over top center, because when it is carried over top center the expansion of the compressed air gives up practically all the power which was utilized in compressing it. If the compression were used before the engine will be unable to turn itself over the dead point. With these considerations it will be easily seen that a motor with tight bearings, tight piston rings and high compression will come to rest much quicker than one which has the opposite conditions.

What factors determine proper valve dimensions?

The method for determining the proper size of the valve depends upon the gas velocity through the valve and the piston speed. Gas velocities are calculated on the basis of piston speed and a full opening of the valve.

When an inflated tire is in a stationary position at which point is the highest pressure?

The pressure is the same throughout the tire. It is one of the fundamental physical properties of gases that when a mass of gas is enclosed in a vessel it exerts a uniform pressure against every square inch of the surface of the vessel and also that at any point in the fluid mass the pressure is the same in every direction. Were this not so the gases in the tire would not be in a state of equilibrium, and hence, although the tire was stationary, the gases would be under constant motion, as the part having higher pressure would tend to flow toward that having a lower pressure.

What are the various types of axle suspensions and drives used?

There are only two ways of attaching an axle, one being above and the other beneath the springs. Both are very common practice in America and are used in various combinations with different methods of drive. For instance, in the Hotchkiss system of drive, where all the drive and torque are taken through the springs, it is practically universal practice to mount the axle under the springs, and in the various modifications of the Hotchkiss drive, where supplementary torque stays, etc., are used, the axle is generally over the spring. On cars where the torque and drive struts are taken by various kinds of tubular arrangements the axle is found over and under the springs in representative cars.

NEGLECTED ART OF COOKERY.

Domestic economy is being strenuously preached in England, and there is no country in the world, except our own, where it is more needed. The English are more extravagant in domestic service, but in the waste of good food the two countries have much in common. But it has not yet been sufficiently recognized in England that the foundation for the reform demand is better cookery. In that country culinary art has deteriorated because left to the mercy of untrained cooks. Women of a class that in other countries is accustomed to deal expertly with the affairs of the household feel it necessary for the sake of gentility to let the servants do everything, which means that things which require some skill and knowledge are apt to be badly done except in great houses where high-priced experts are employed. There are out-of-the-way corners where the old traditions of English cookery are still to be found, but English critics are the first to admit that as compared with continental standards the British kitchen is both inferior and wasteful. There is sound economy in culinary skill, both in serving food and in getting the most out of the human machine, and patriotic Englishwomen can do much in this field to help their country.

The reason why most people think that cats are not affectionate is because they fail to understand a cat's method of expression. They assume that a cat must have the same technique of affection that a dog has. Because a cat does not wag his tail and jump up and down on one's knees, he is assumed to be lacking in feeling. Cats often like to have their backs stroked, but this is put down by cynics to pure selfishness. The truth is that cats scorn the ordinary demonstrations. Their sentiments are on a higher scale. They give human beings credit for a finer sense of sentimental values than we really have. A cat considers that the highest compliment he can pay his owner is to remain near in long silences. What greater tribute than that can there be to genuine companionship?

The last report of the commissioner of education undertakes to reassure persons who are fearful of the spread of disease through books, by recording the results of a recent investigation at Yale university. During the cleaning of the library, a chemical analysis of the dust was made. About half of this was found to be mineral matter, while the other half was organic, including paper fiber, wood fiber and molds. No mouth bacteria were found and, in general, the analysis showed the harmlessness of the dust.

SERGE USED AS TRIMMING

In Combination With Charmeuse, As in This Design, It is Very Effective.

A very pretty combination of charmeuse and serge is shown in this night blue frock which should prove serviceable for fall wear. The serge is used for the bodice in jumper style.

Trimmed With Serge.

while the set-in sleeves are of the silk. Narrow self-tone souteache bands the outer edge of the jumper and wide souteache bands the cuff. A little vest of white chiffon with buttons of pearl gives brightness to the frock. The wide flaring skirt of charmeuse is trimmed with bias bands of serge which is bound with narrow souteache braid.

Ribbons for Sympathy.

We are getting used to the military influences at work on fashions. We have seen the hat modeled on a German military headdress and we have seen the Italian military hat. Braided suits galore have passed us.

Now comes the military influence in ribbons. Some of the shops sell striped and plaid ribbons with the colors of the different regiments in the British army. There is the ribbon with the colors of the army medical corps, and the ribbon with the colors of the Scottish fusiliers and many, many other ribbons.

These ribbons are in the width for hat bands and belts and can also be used for many other sorts of trimming.

MARINE WINS BIG FORTUNE

Wealthiest Enlisted Man in United States Retires After Thirty Years in Corps.

Seattle, Wash.—Sergeant Major James Deaver, United States marine corps, wealthiest enlisted man in the United States, was retired here recently after thirty years continuous service with Uncle Sam's sea soldiers, possessing real estate, stocks, bonds, mortgages, and personal property valued at more than one hundred thousand dollars.

Deaver had no capital when he entered the marine corps in 1885 and has been dependent entirely on his pay as an enlisted man and his own efforts in the accumulation of wealth. He will continue to draw from the government about $70 a month retired pay for so long as he may live.

By strict economy Deaver managed to save several thousand dollars in the first fourteen years with the marines, and when he was transferred to Seattle in 1899, predicted that this city would one day be the metropolis of the great Northwest. He wisely invested his savings in Seattle realty when values were low. He sold his holdings several times and reinvested opportunely until his wealth passed the six figure mark.

The wealthiest enlisted man resides with his wife and young son in their beautiful home at 4226 South Alki street, overlooking the waters of Puget Sound.

Sport Veils Attractive.

The sport veil is in an innovation. Time was when veils were barred with sport costumes, but this year no costume is quite what it should be without a veil, either one of the big mantilla veils that float gracefully from the wide-brimmed hat brim or a neat, closely-pinned black veil, which protects the hair from blowing about. Sport veils are of white mesh in flared, octagon or the new trellis mesh, and it must be admitted they add greatly to the smartness of a good-looking white sport costume.

Our Dressy clothes do this Spot the dog, is saying to himself: "What chance have I got?" No man who is careless about his clothes has a chance against the man who is always well dressed. Not in society alone, but in BUSINESS and every walk of life, the man who puts on the "good front" wins out over the man who neglects his appearance. Dress better; you'll succeed better.
We dress men and young men BETTER. Come PRICE our clothing; you'll BUY all right, and be our customer always.

ALLIES EVACUATE CITY

 necessary for them to evacuate several positions as the trenches became flooded. The bodies of Turks and dead mules were washed into allied trenches and prisoners taken were poorly clad, and the correspondent said that the Turks are now on half rations waiting for things to become better.

The colonial troops, including the Maoris from New Zealand withstood the snow and cold although many had never seen snow before. The British authorities believe that, owing to the hardy physiques of the colonials, they will get through all right. Turkish activities have been comparatively unimportant and such attacks were not pushed. Sever weather is expected in January and February.

CONSTANTINOPLE HAS HAD A BOOM

City Has Grown Far Beyond Walls of Ancient Capital.

MANY IMPROVEMENTS NOTED

Germans Soon to Have Express Trains Running Between Berlin and Turkish City Via Vienna and Sofia—Their Efficiency in Conducting War Strikingly Illustrated.

Nothing better illustrates the German system of conducting the war than the manner in which their railways are operated. In a couple of days after the fall of Warsaw the Germans had through express trains in operation between Brussels and the Russian city, going through Berlin. Now, since they have opened the way to Turkey, the German railroad officials are ready to establish through service between Berlin and Constantinople via Vienna and Sofia. A glance at the map illustrates the magnitude of this achievement, as the distance is approximately 1,200 miles.

Interest in the war is now centered around the Turkish capital and in Greece, and many close observers are of the opinion that the result depends on the outcome in the Balkans. Thus Constantinople is one of the most interesting cities in all Europe at this time.

Constantinople extends far beyond the ancient walled city of the emperors, which only covered the promontory known today as Stamboul. This promontory, bounded on the north by the poble Golden Horn, which, extending some miles inland, forms perhaps the most magnificent harbor in the world, and on the south by the blue waters of the Marmora, is indeed the most enchanting part of the city, but the present population, estimated at about a million and a quarter, could not be housed within its borders. Facing the eastern side of Stamboul, on the Asiatic shores of the Bosphorus and Marmora, stand the ancient cities of Calcedon (Kadikewy) and Chrysopolis (Scutari). These now form part of Constantinople. Across the Golden Horn to the north, up the slopes of the hill crowned by Galata tower, built by the Genoese, houses upon houses are so crowded together that, looked at from the sea, it would seem as though there were no streets to separate them.

Many Villages on Shores.
 The shores of the Bosphorus are strewn with villages, some insignificant, some fairly considerable, all of them part of the city. To the west, beyond the Leven towers and the magnificent marble gate through which the emperors rode in splendor, numerous other villages have sprung up, and today Constantinople may be said to extend to a length of some twenty miles. The coast running south from Kadikewy and the Princes Islands is also included in the city, so that in width, too, there is a very great difference since the days of the Turkish conquest.

Constantine founded his capital in 324, and for 1,100 years it was a Christian city. Walking the narrow streets today one comes across here a mosque which was once a Christian church, there a Greek inscription, here a column with beautiful capital, there the foundation of a once gleaming bronze column. But most wonderful of all stands that noble edifice, the church, now mosque, of St. Sophia. Built on the top of the first hill, immediately behind the site of the emperor's palace, it dominates the city. Its dome, outlined against the horizon, catches the eye from every point of view.

What has St. Sophia not seen? The crowning of emperors with all the pomp and ceremony, emperors riding in state into the spacious ladies' gallery, quarrels, intrigues and, lastly, a conquered emperor fleeing to it for refuge from the invading Turk. All these form a succession of events whose narrative holds one in spell. The conquering Turk did not in any way lessen the romance of the life in the city, and today the charm is still there. Who, having once threaded his way through the fascinating bazaars, does not picture again the quaint shops with vendors sitting cross legged on the floor, the curious old arches, the oriental crowds in their gay colors?

Since the revolution and counter-revolution of 1909 much has been done to improve the general aspect of the city, and also to facilitate communication. A splendid new bridge has been thrown across the Golden Horn, streets have been widened and paved, electric trams have taken the place of horse trams, public parks have been opened in various parts of the city, the Turkish postoffice has been reorganized, and last, but not least, a telephone system has been established.

The Turk is polite to a fault. He is often shocked by the brusqueness of the westerner. His sense of humor is large. His inimitable way of story telling is proverbial. Those who have known him intimately have found him a generous host, a kindly neighbor and a good comrade, but as a ruler quite incapable of falling in with modern methods.

Charles Brown has returned to Milwaukee after a weeks business visit here.

CENTENNIAL TO SPREAD THE HABIT OF SAVING.

Anniversary of Founding of First Savings Bank to Be Observed.

Next year is the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the first savings bank in the United States, and a movement has been inaugurated to observe the centennial by a nation wide campaign for the promotion of thrift among all classes. Preparations have been begun for undertaking the campaign on Jan. 1, and the plan is receiving the support of prominent bankers and public men.

In sixty-two cities of the country, each with a population of more than 25,000, the campaign will be conducted through the local chapters of the American Institute of Banking; in the smaller cities and towns, through banks which are members of the American Bankers' association; in the states, through the secretaries of the State bankers' association. The industrial workers will be reached through the National Civic Federation and the immigrants through the national Americanization committee.

Inasmuch as immigrants, as a rule, are accustomed to government savings banks in their own countries and deposit their money here in the United States postal savings institutions, the government officials in the postoffice banks will assist in fostering in the foreign element a feeling of confidence in savings banks. The bureau of commercial economics at Washington will supply lectures and motion picture films to be used for thrift meetings.
