OFFICES OF ADSIT CO. ESTABLISHED IN CITY—INCORPORATED MON.

MANUFACTURERS OF ADSIT TELEPHONE LOCKOUT DEVICE INCORPORATE UNDER MICHIGAN LAWS—LOCAL MEN AT HEAD OF NEW CONCERN.

INCORPORATED IN SUM OF $300,000

WILL MOVE IN HEADQUARTERS HERE IMMEDIATELY—SALES CAMPAIGN TO BE PUSHED FROM OFFICES IN CLEARLY BUILDING.

The incorporation of the Adsit Telephone Lockout company, intimation of which was given some time ago in statements from local men interested in the concern and from Thos. W. Hicks, sales manager, was effected yesterday and the Adsit company has now become a Michigan corporation.

General offices of the company will be located in Escanaba, in the Cleary building on Ludington street and it is intimated that the transfer of the company from Minneapolis, Minn., will take place some time in the future.

Escanabans are named as president vice-president and secretary-treasurer of the concern which is incorporated to manufacture a device for "locking" out party line cross talk. It is planned to bring the plant and headquarters to this city; this much having been practically assured a month back during the progress of negotiations held here.

The officers of the concern are: J. C. Kirkpatrick, Pres. M. K. Bissell, vice-pres. H. W. Reade, Sec.-treas. Thos. W. Hicks, sales manager.

The incorporation articles were signed yesterday during the progress of a meeting at National Pole company's offices here and at which the following men, interested in the company were present: J. C. Kirkpatrick, H. W. Reade, M. K. Bissell, M. N. Smith of this city and Franklin Adsit, inventor of the device which the concern will make and Grant Adsit, both the latter gentlemen of Minneapolis.

Capitalized at $300,000
The Adsit company is incorporated in the sum of $300,000, according to statements made today in an interview with Mr. Reade of the company. It is understood the company is assembling the machines at this time and will not manufacture them here until some time later on, but eventually their manufacture will be undertaken in Escanaba. The company will move into the temporary offices in the Cleary building at once, it is stated and the work of pushing the sales end will be done here.

Entire Continent be Defended In New Plan Evolved by U.S. Army and Navy Strategists

Washington, Jan. 4.—The possibility of a combined attack by two foreign powers to break down the new Pan-American doctrine evolved from the maintenance by the United States and the acceptance by South and Central American republics of the Monroe doctrine is one of the fundamental basis for the national defense plans formulated by army and navy strategists. They believe it essential in the formulation of a national military policy, it was learned tonight, to provide against the eventuality of an assault upon the doctrine by either an Asiatic or a European power, or even by an alliance of two such powers, which might hurl forces simultaneously at the Atlantic and Pacific coast.

A navy equal in strength to those of any two world powers except Great Britain and an army prepared to fight for the integrity of the Pan-American ideas anywhere in Pan-America is the ultimate aim of the plan of the military experts.

Ten Years to Prepare
Ten years is the time the navy general board believes the United States has in which to prepare for a readjustment of world forces which will follow the European war.

In setting 1925 as the time when the United States navy should equal any afloat—which means reaching the two power standard of the British navy—the board estimated that much time would elapse before the shock of the present war passes sufficiently to permit any of the belligerents to look to South or Central America for colonial development or trade aggression.

Plans of the army war college would be consummated in six years. The army officers take the position that the United States must have sufficient troops and troop ships to land forces in any threatened Pan-American country to meet an invader. All these preparations, it is now known, have been presented by strategists to the administration as essential to the support of the Monroe doctrine, so that the United States may be able to act alone, if necessary, to preserve its ideal of no entangling alliances. Such ideas, the military students have stated, impose new duties on the United States, duties that require something more than a policy of mere passive resistance.

The Pan-American Ideal
While the administration branch of the government has submitted to congress a definite plan which contemplates an increased expenditure of more than a billion dollars on the military and naval establishment in the next six years, all other agencies of the government are acting to unify and harmonize the Pan-American nations.

To students of diplomacy, the Pan-American declarations of President Wilson in his opening address to congress the declarations for Pan-American unity made to the Pan-American scientific congress here by Secretary Lansing and the general efforts for unity of all the Americas on a basis of friendship and equality, take on added significance when considered in connection with the administration's preparative plan.

The recent announcement that the ambassadors from Argentine, Brazil and Chile had been selected by the United States to represent it on the commissions provided by the peace investigation treaties with France, Great Britain and Italy is regarded as one of the significant factors in this connection.

AMERICAN SURVIVOR OF PERSIA GIVES DETAILS OF SHIP'S TORPEDOING

CHARLES GRANT OF BOSTON, ONE OF THOSE SAVED FROM SHIP DISASTER IN MEDITERRANEAN SAYS TERRIBLE SCENES WERE ENACTED AS SHIP SANK.

SALOONS FILLED WITH GLASS AND STEAM

WAS AT LUNCHEON IN SALOON WHEN TORPEDO HIT—AMERICAN CONSUL MCNEELEY AT TABLE WHEN CRASH CAME—LAST SEEN IN WATER.

(By Associated Press)

Alexandria, Egypt, Jan. 4.—Charles Grant of Boston, one of the two Americans known to have been aboard the British liner Persia when the ship was torpedoed in the Mediterranean has arrived in Alexandria. Mr. Grant, so far as is known, the only American from whom can come the story of the sinking of the Persia, gave the Associated Press a most complete detailed story of the destruction of the ship.

"I was in the dining saloon of the Persia at 1:05 P. M.," he said.

"I had just finished my soup and the steward had just asked me what I would have next when a terrific explosion occurred. The saloon was filled with flying glass, smoke and steam, from bursted boilers. There was no panic aboard and we all went on deck as calmly as though in a drill, and to the boats which were lowered on the starboard side because the list of the ship was too great on the other side to lower the lifeboats there.

Helped Get Boat Away
"The last thing I did was to help out away Capt. Strickley's boat. As the vessel was listing so badly then I slid down the side towards the water from the starboard rail one of my shoes got caught in a rope and I lost it. After getting into the water I climbed upon some wreckage.

"The last I saw of the Persia her bow was in the air, and after floating about until four o'clock in the morning I was picked up by a boat, which had returned to search for survivors. This boat became overcrowded and the passengers were distributed about among the four boats which had been lowered away from the ship. These boats were fastened together by lengths of line.

Searches For Succor
"Our boat left the others to search the more frequented steamer lanes and after rowing for a number of hours we sighted a cruiser and called to her 'we are English,' and explained that we were survivors of the Persia and told her where the others were to be found. The occupants of the other boats were taken off by the cruiser.

"Robert McNeely sat at the same table with me on the voyage and was not seen after the explosion probably because of the fact that his state room was on the port side. Terrible scenes were enacted as the ship was struck. Many were screaming, others bidding friends good-bye while others sang hymns."

Escanaba Typographical Union to Hold Annual Feast Jan. 16.
Members of Escanaba Typographical Union, No. 278 will hold their second annual banquet and business session in the Elk's cafe on Sunday, January 16. The event is also in celebration of Franklin Day.

BOWLS 22 GAMES IN SUCCESSION
What is regarded as a record, unique in the annals of sport in this section was made New Year's day when J. Willard Waldstrom of the Fair Store bowled steadily for eight and a half hours at the Delft alleys, bowling in that time 22 consecutive games. It is said that Mr. Waldstrom was endeavoring to drive an attack of grip out of his system and that he hit up on this method of doing it.

Alabama Raises Much Fine Fruit
The Mirror is in receipt of a line box of fruit, which was sent as a New Year's gift, by G. E. Smith, who with Mrs. Smith is now in Irvington, Alabama. The fruit was evidently picked when it was ripe, for all of it had a finer flavor than fruit that has to be picked green. The shipment was made up of grape fruit, kumquats and Satsuma oranges. The latter being what is commonly known as kid-glove oranges.

Eugene Augar has returned from an extended trip through Mexico. During his sojourn in the land of turmoils his observation lead him to believe that peace will be established there shortly.

WASHINGTON AWAITS DETAILS OF PERSIA INCIDENT—TENSE SITUATION NO EASIER TODAY

Chairman Stone of Foreign Relations Committee Called in by President to Discuss Case—Cabinet Meet Cancelled

Government Depending Largely Upon Information Expected to Receive from Consuls and Ambassador Penfield

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Jan. 4.—President Wilson called in Chairman Stone and members of the foreign relations committee today to discuss the crisis growing out of the torpedoing and sinking of the liner Persia by a submarine, with the loss of one American life. Following the conference Secretary Tammly gave out the following statement:

"The president and secretary of state are taking every means possible to all the cold facts in the matter and will act just as soon as all this information is obtained."

Depends Upon Reports
The administration is depending largely upon inquiries which Ambassador Penfield at Vienna has been instructed to make and which the consuls are gathering elsewhere to determine the nationality of the submarine, and to develop facts in the case generally.

Cancels Cabinet Meeting
The president cancelled the cabinet meeting for today because the state department had not yet gathered the complete information on the sinking of the Persia.

Secretary Lansing will bring all information to the president at his office just as soon as received and keep him informed of every development.

OFFICERS HUNT FOR WOMAN'S ASSAILANT

MAN BY NAME OF SAVAGE ALLEGED TO HAVE ATTACKED POLISH WOMAN, ALONE IN HOME
Asked For Place to Stay During Night—Turned Away by Woman, Returns and Breaks Into Home

A story of a dastardly assault upon an unprotected Polish woman, residing at Bark River was brought to the attention of local officers late last night and today Deputy Sheriff Carl Huss of Bark River is searching the vicinity of the village for a man by the name of Savage, who is wanted by the authorities in connection with the attack.

Savage, it is alleged, knocked at the home of the woman, who was alone at the time, and requested a place to stay for the night. He was turned away but came back, it is said and forced his way into the home. He is alleged to have attacked the woman and then fled. Children of the neighborhood heard screams from the little home and investigating found the conditions. The victim was not seriously injured, however.

Prosecutor Rushion stated this afternoon that a warrant charging Savage with a statutory crime would be issued tomorrow. In the meantime efforts are being made to locate the man near Bark River.

VIOLENT ARTILLERY FIGHT ON THE YSER

MEAGRE REPORTS OF FIGHTING SIFT THROUGH WIRES TODAY—FRENCH REPORT ENEMY BOMBARDED BATTERIES ALONG THE YSER CANAL BUT WITHOUT IMPORTANT RESULTS.

(By Associated Press)

London, Jan. 6.—Announcement was made in the House of Commons today of the resignation of Sir John Simon, secretary of State for Home Affairs.

London, Jan. 4.—During a review of the Russian army on January 2, Emperor Nicholas delivered an address to members of the order of St. George in which he praised those representatives of his army and said, "I will not conclude peace until the last enemy has been expelled from the land and then only with the full accord of the allies."

Paris Reports Heavy Fighting
Paris, Jan. 4.—The official communication given out today follows:

"Late last night and today violent artillery fighting has been going on along the Yser front. The enemy bombarded several groups of men to the rear of our lines but without important results and without silencing our batteries which had secured the range of the guns bombarding the barracks."

King Peter Holds Audience
Athens, Jan. 4.—King Peter of Serbia aboard a cruiser at Salonika yesterday gave audience to General Sarraill, commander of the French forces at Salonika and the British commander.

Cannot Regulate Prices
Hanover, Germany, Jan. 4.—In passing on a petty case of an owner of a delicatessen shop, charged with violating the municipal prices regulated by the city, the supreme court rendered a decision which may become of importance to the whole empire. The owner of the shop was convicted of selling Brunswick sausages at a higher price than that fixed by the municipality. She appealed on the grounds that the city had no right to regulate the prices of imported stuffs. Her contention was sustained. The court holds that a municipality may establish prices on home products. There will probably be greater confusion everywhere until the necessary legislation can be passed as practically all municipalities have established maximum prices.

Anticipated Attack on Administration's Foreign and Submarine Policies Not Materialized
Washington, Jan. 4.—An expected attack on the Administration's foreign and submarine policies failed to materialize in the senate today when that body again convened after the holidays this morning at ten o'clock and then immediately adjourned until tomorrow. The reason assigned for the adjournment by leaders of both sides was that seven members who had expected to have business to present did not have it ready. The motion on which the senate adjourned was the notice of the death of Justice Lamar. International situations occupied the chief place in the minds of the members of both houses.

Senator Fall of New Mexico had ready a resolution calling upon the president to state as to what government he was going to credit Henry Fletcher who was recently appointed ambassador to Mexico. He will introduce the resolution tomorrow and it is said it is expected to be made the basis of an attack by the republicans. Other senators who share the views of Senator Fall say the government has no knowledge of conditions in Mexico and that the president's last message to congress described a state of anarchy.

REPORT SHOWS 1915 A YEAR OF WARMTH

According to the meteorological summary issued by H. H. Spindler, observer in charge of the local weather station, every day in the year of 1915, in this district averaged 1.2 degrees warmer than the normal. The general belief has been that the past year was particularly cold and wet but the weather records show to the contrary. Each day of the month of December averaged 2.7 degrees warmer than the normal for December in this district. The average daily temperature last month was 24 degrees, while the normal December temperature at this station is 21.6 degrees. The lowest temperature recorded here last month was one degree below zero, on Dec. 28, while the highest record of the month was 36 degrees on Dec. 7th. In spite of the general belief to the contrary the amount of rainfall in this district in 1915 fell short of the normal, there being a total deficiency in precipitation here for the year of 3.62 inches. In December, however, there was more precipitation than normally for that month, the record for last month being 2.93 inches while the normal record for December is 1.7 inches. The prevailing winds of last month were from the northwest and the greatest wind velocity of the month was 27 miles an hour on Dec. 7th. There were but four clear days in December; 11 being partly cloudy and on 16 days of the month the sun failed to appear. Leo Enterbitzen left for Chicago last night after spending the holidays with his parents here.

FAKES CATCH MANY

$239,000,000 Taken From Public in Four Years.

Post Office Department Issues 56 Fraud Orders in Last Year in Effort to Stop This Wholesale Victimization.

Washington, D. C.—Investigations conducted by government officers show that fraudulent schemes have taken from the public more than $239,000,000 in the last four years. In an effort to reduce this wholesale victimization the post office department has issued 56 fraud orders in the last year. The issuance of such an order denies the person named in it the use of the mails.

In one case the inspectors reported that during the last year a man received $46,500 from the sale of a metal finger ring, called an electro-chemical ring. It was sold for $2 to some and $4 to others.

"The following diseases," reads that faker's "literature," "are caused by acid in the blood and are cured by this ring, which takes from one day to two weeks after the ring commences to work. The ring and acid create an electro-chemical action, removing the excess of acid, which cures these diseases and will keep them cured. Bright's disease, St. Vitus dance, adenoids, gout, cancer."

Many other diseases were named.

A fraud order was issued against a woman because she claimed to be able to give any person of great avoirdupois a form like Venus without any discomfort. "Weigh just what you want to weigh," "Eat all you want to eat," "Reduce yourself and be as happy as I am," were some of her arguments. The department found that in 105 replies from patrons who took the remedy prescribed 75 were dissatisfied, some claiming to be bigger than ever.

One man claimed to have a list of 400 widows, all matrimonially inclined, some of them having such additional attraction as $20,000, who wanted to get in communication with life companions. The advertisements were written in Polish and appeared in Polish newspapers. The man established his acquaintances by inserting this advertisement:

WIDOW, 23, WITHOUT CHILDREN, looking for a friend for life; must be energetic and willing worker; have income of $150 a month.

As soon as anyone replied a photograph of a good-looking Polish woman was sent to the inquirer. On the back of it appeared the words: "Am a widow, twenty-three years old. Have butcher shop and employ four men. Have no children. Willing to love a good man and also a good worker."

Another man had wonderful powers of observation when his palm was crossed with gold, according to representations made persons in many parts of the country. To one person who remitted $12.50 on a payment of $37.50 for a "gambling hand," this man wrote: "I take pleasure in sending you my gambling hand and all that goes with it. When you get it sew it up in a piece of soft leather and carry it in your pocket with your money. Let no one handle it and keep it as dry as you can. I will send you nine candles, to use one at a time—Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. Light it and set it down on a brick. Do not touch it for one hour, then throw ashes on the floor and pass your foot on them."

Not all the persons against whom fraud orders were issued played on the suspicious, ill health or the sentimental side of persons to get their money. Some were very practical. A Kentucky man got various concerns to send him farm implements, for which he never paid.

A northwestern "company" used this advertisement: "Girls do you want to earn $100 and have your photo used in advertising a new brand of chewing gum? Send 2-cent stamp for particulars." After a response was received the correspondent was advised that it was a competition and that an entrance fee would be required.

A New Englander sold "lucky stones" at $1 each, which he purchased by the thousand at from 2 1/2 to 15 cents apiece. According to the report of the federal authorities, which resulted in a fraud order being issued, he "induced people to believe that the flaws were not flaws, but were peculiar marks of the so-called lucky stones, which he called magic mirrors. He stated that because of the flaws those favored mortals who are gifted with the illumination of the astral light can, by the aid of this peculiarity, read on the surface of the stone the reflection of the past and the promise of the future."

The post office department files show that in the last fifteen years the man took in more than $300,000 on his scheme; in recent years the business amounted to $44,000 annually. He had a supply of 10,000 stones on hand, his usual reserve stock.

A fraud order was issued against a concern which had sold 45,451 "oxy-gen" belts.

Canada's Giant Trees.

The 225-foot long "spar" of Douglas fir, a gift from British Columbia, which is to be erected as a flagstaff in Kew Gardens, in England, is typical of hundreds of similar pieces of timber which grow in the forests of western Canada. The Kew Gardens flagstaff, which was taken down owing to its insecure condition in December, 1913, and which was 160 feet in length, also came from British Columbia.

said to be Frank Schulte of the Chicago Cubs, one of the hardest hitters in the game and who probably would show marked improvement if he were transferred to the Braves.

Keeping Up the Family Name. Nothing like keeping all the money in the family. When the Davenport club sold Pitcher Barnes to the Boston Nationals, his job at Davenport was promptly seized by his younger brother, who had been pitching semi-pro ball around the small towns in Kansas.

TAUGHT SON TO PITCH.

Mamaux, Pirate Star Heaver, Owns Most of Success to His Father. One year ago last spring Mamaux, the Pittsburgh pitcher, was heard of only because he happened to be tried on the same team with Pitcher Papa. When Papa was released the joke-smiths forgot about the other end of the joke. Now Mamaux is the sensation of the National league.

Mamaux is successful through hard work, practice and study. He is bred and trained to pitching. His father is John Mamaux, a Pittsburgh manufacturer of tents and awnings. In his younger days he was a star semi-pro hurler. He preferred business to a big league career.

When his son, Albert Leon, was old enough to grip a baseball the elder Mamaux took him into the yard and began showing him how to pitch. In school Albert was the best pitcher in the class. At sixteen he was pitching against teams of grown men. He and his father attended big league games together and studied pitchers and batters.

Mamaux started his professional career with Wilkesburg, in the Allegheny County league, was secured by Pittsburgh, tried in the spring of 1913, sent to Fort Wayne of the Central league for seasoning and recalled to Pittsburgh for trial in the spring of 1914.

Fred Clarke, Pittsburgh manager, when asked that spring about the youngster said, "He's going to be one of the best pitchers in the country."

"What's he got?" "Brains." Mamaux has been Pittsburgh's best pitcher this season. He measures six feet, weighs 170, is quiet and unassuming. He is the best musician in baseball. He plays a violin in concert work in the winter.

DALE INVENTS NEW CURVE.

Cincinnati Twirler Originates Slow Curve Which Baffles Batsmen.

Baseball experts have agreed that it will take something new and startling to revive the old time interest in baseball. It remains for Gene Dale, the youthful Cincinnati Reds' pitching wonder, to spring a replica of Mathew son's fade away. Walter Johnson's bullet ball, Russ Ford's emery twister and other famous inventions of the box.

Dale has invented a slow ball curve which he uses with baffling effect. Many pitchers have slow balls, but they don't curve. Dale's floats over the pan and executes an amazing twist as it reaches the batter.

Recently Dale struck out Stengel and Wheat of the Brooklyn team when they were up with one out and the bases full.

NEW THROWING RECORD.

Miss Ruth McCabe Leads Girls in Hurling Ball 209 Feet 5 Inches.

What was said to be a new world baseball throwing record for a girl was made recently in Tacoma, Wash., by Miss Ruth McCabe when she threw a ball 209 feet 5 inches. Miss Dorothy Smith of Vassar college is said to have established the best previous record in 1911 with a throw of 204 feet. Miss McCabe is a fourth year student in high school in Tacoma.

Florida is trying alfalfa growing.

Jean Dubuc Pitching Great Ball For Detroit Tigers

JEAN DUBUC is pitching the best ball of his career for the Detroit Tigers this year. In fact, his work in the box has been excellent by few in the American league. Should the Tigers capture the pennant much credit must be given to Jean. At one time Dubuc was a member of the Cincinnati Reds, but was let out. He has splendid control and a fine collection of curves. Dubuc is also one of the hardest workers in Ban Johnson's circuit.

SOME SPICY SPORT CHATS.

No Chance For Mile Meeting Between Jones and Taber.

FORMER HAS REALLY RETIRED

Ex-Cornell Speed Marvel, Now an Engineer, Has No Time to Train—How Football Was Cleaned Up—Feds May Make Another Raid.

Stories circulating in the grapevine telegraph circuit have it that John Paul Jones, holder of the present amateur record for the mile—excepting Norman Taber's exhibition—will meet his much talked of rival in the coast athletic meet. An athlete took the trouble to run down this rumor and pin it to earth.

He declared that Jones takes a practice run now and then for his health, but that this is as far as his athletic enthusiasm goes. Jones has been a very busy engineer since leaving Cornell university.

This retirement of Jones seems to leave the mile event at Taber's mercy, holding strictly to form as shown by figures. But Norman will know he has been to a real race before he trims Jole Ray of Chicago and Ivan Meyers of DePaul university. Ray turned his mile in 4 minutes 16 seconds and a fraction, while Meyers did it in 4 minutes 19 seconds and a silver. That's good running any old time.

Taber won't have the pace to carry him at record speed as he did when the relays were set for him. With everybody starting from scratch there's not many sprints left in competitors after running seven furlongs.

Sports, like communities, pass through their frontier days. College football went through its period and in the refining process eliminated almost entirely the individual and team brutalities which twenty years ago were thought absolutely essential to the existence of the sport. But after nine years of adaptation, practically all of the unnecessary roughness has been taken out of the sport, while manners and methods on the field have been revolutionized.

It has actually been found, in football, that the club which coaches its men to harry the individuals of opposing teams, to get on their nerves and to resort to roughness not contemplated in the rules, lost both time and efficiency as compared with a club that went about its business.

Today coaches tell their men to ignore all attempts of opposing players to provoke them to anger, and even advise players to take abuse, and even blows, without retaliation, because no team can play football and carry on a fight at the same time—to say nothing of possible disqualification.

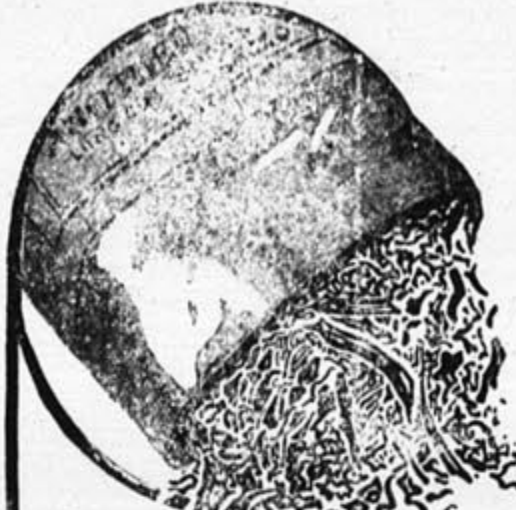

Baseball is just passing through the refining process. Those who like to see baseball instead of pop bottle displays, rag chewing contests with umpires and fist fights between players hope that John K. Tener will join Ban Johnson in the cleanup process, and that James Gilmore will set his No. 12's down hard on all the Fed rough stuff.

Federal league players are worrying over the new threats that the Feds intend to make another raid on the major leagues. Many of the Fed players have the ten day release clause in their contracts. The gossipists insist that if the proposed raids land a number of high salaried stars room will be made for them by releasing other Fed players, who will be compelled to accept lower salaries or remain idle. The Federal league promoters claim that their proposed raid, if successful, will force organized baseball clubs to increase their payrolls, thereby running the risk of going into bankruptcy.

Braves Are After Schulte. Manager George Stallings, it is understood, is anxious to get another cleanup hitter, and is said to have a deal on whereby he will get a veteran fielder who is still a star hitter. This is

The bolero is such a smart little garment that it can be worn separately and made of any desired material. Provision also is made for a little tailored jacket to wear with the skirt. To make the bolero, however, first close underarm and shoulder seams as notched. Tuck, creasing on lines of slot perforations in front and back; stitch 1 inch from folded edge. Turn hem in right front and single small "o" perforations. Face collar and sew to neck edge. Notches and center-backs even. Adjust pocket lap to position on right; front, upper edge along crossline of small "o" perforations.

The skirt is attached to a waist whose underarm and shoulder seams are closed first when beginning to make. Then turn the hem in front. Face the neck and gather lower edge of front and back between double "T" perforations; sew stay to lower edge of waist, center-fronts and center-backs even, small "o" perforation in stay at under-arm seam; large "O" perforation in stay indicates center-front. Close sleeve seam as notched. Close seam of turn-back cuff as notched. Sew to lower edge of sleeve as notched. Small "o" perforation in cuff at sleeve seam. Sew sleeve in armhole as notched. Small "o" perforation at shoulder seam, easing fullness. Next slash skirt to left center-front on double "oo" perforations and finish edges for opening. Close center-back seam. Turn hem at lower edge on double "oo" perforations. Pleat, creasing on lines of slot perforations, bring folded edges near center-front and back to the centers and bring the remaining folds to corresponding small "o" perforations; press pleats. Sew to lower edge of waist, over stay, center-fronts and center-backs even. Line and adjust belt to position as illustrated. This frock is pretty in rose colored cloth, with a black string tie. Sizes 8, 10, 12, 14 and 16 years. Price 15 cents.

A rather unusual bolero is featured on this frock with box pleated skirt and pointed belt. A jacket may be used instead of the bolero however, provision being made for same in the pattern.

Clothes for juniors are characterized by the smartest of style combined with comfort and freedom. This little dress, suitable to development in serge, cloth or linen, has a separate bolero cut off in square effect above the belt of the box-pleated skirt. The bolero closes at the left side of the front and in medium size the dress requires 4 1/4 yards 44-inch material.

Pictorial Review Dress No. 6524. 15 cents.

THE WAR A YEAR AGO TODAY

Jan. 4, 1915.
Russians occupied Suzawa and again threatened Cracow.
Turks ravaged Persian territory.
British ships shelled Dar-es-Salaam, German East Africa.
French aviators dropped bombs near Brussels.
Germans put Young Turks under oath to support existing regime.

SOCIETY WOMEN STUDY ART

Avowed Idea Is to Develop American Style in Dress and Home Furnishings.

Young women well known in society have entered art schools this autumn for the purpose of studying interior decoration and costume designing, says the New York Times. Some of them are to use their knowledge in the adornment of their own homes or in giving individuality to their own wardrobe, while others intend to embark on professional careers. Their attention has been drawn to this new phase of activity largely through the European war, for they see before them opportunities of developing American tastes and American ideals in both fashions and in the furnishing of their homes. Frank Alvah Parsons, the director of the New York School of Fine and Applied Art, said recently that in every direction this fall women of well-known New York families were showing their interest in practical work along artistic lines to a degree which he had never known. This was, in his opinion, due to the many changes which were developing from the European conflict and the wish to find a substitute for merely social activities. Other schools where the practical arts of decoration are taught are also receiving students of social prominence from foreign countries as well. This is due to the fact that the opportunities for study in Paris and other European art centers have been cut off by the conditions which now prevail on the continent.

Wistful Waiting.
"I passed a man sitting in a broken-down motor car while taking a trip through the country this morning."
"Did he seem worried?"
"Not particularly. In fact, he had a far-away look in his eyes."
"Maybe he was thinking of the place he hopes to reach some day."

'Twould Seem So.
"Trolley car conversation is about as par with street corner gossip."
"I think it's rather above."
"Why so?"
"Considering the difficulty of making oneself heard on the average trolley car, the person who talks there must have something worth while to say."

Just a Theory.
"Good heavens! Why does that young woman playing the piano next door sing so loudly?"
"Maybe her conscience hurts her."
"What do you mean?"
"She probably wants to drown out the racket her mother is making in the kitchen washing dishes."

Indifference.
"Which do you prefer, summer or winter?"
"I've no preference," replied Mr. Growcher. "It is equally depressing to me whether I put in a large portion of my time reading about the hottest day ever, or the coldest day ever."

AN UNEXPECTED GUEST

By WAYNE CUNNINGHAM.

It was six miles from the railway station, Maud had written; just a pleasant little hike along the shore road until you came to Turtle Isle. Kate regarded the shore road appreciatively. The air blew freshly in from the sound and the water broke on the beach in long, lazy rolls. Three whole days to spend on a tiny island off the Connecticut shore, three days of driftwood and marshmallow parties. Maud said there were quite a number of the art colony left still, so she would not be lonesome. "You'll like them all excepting Fallows. He's perfectly hopeless when it comes to sociability. George says he's all right among the men, but he doesn't like women. Can't even bear them near him. I wonder who hurt him, Kate?"

Kate's conscience was clear. She had met Hartley Fallows back in town at a few affairs the past year. Once he had stood next her at the preliminary reception to a dinner at the Waldorf in honor of some notable party, and she had noticed a long curly blonde hair on his black coat. Blessed with a sense of humor, she had said very gently, "She has blonde hair, hasn't she, Mr. Fallows?" And he had turned horribly red and looked very distant and embarrassed, even while he plucked off the blonde hair. But he did not cast it from him. He would it absently around one finger and stuck it in his pocket. Such things change a man's whole life.

It was just sunset when she came to the island. There was a flat-bottomed boat drawn up handily on the sandy shore. She called Maud over and over, then George, but neither appeared. Sisters and brother-in-law are among the uncertain quantities of life, but they had at least left the boat. She pushed it off into the water and rowed over to the island.

Deserted it was, and the little house also, but the door was hospitably ajar, and she found everything within in order. Out in the little pantry she found the remains of some cold boiled lobster and made herself a pot of tea. With a supper tray beside her, she slipped out of the traveling suit into a short skirt and middie, dragged a steamer chair out on the porch and sat down to enjoy herself. As the last gleam of sunset died from the sky she frowned off restfully, curled up in the big chair.

Perhaps it was the striking of the match that awakened her. Something hid, and she sat up, startled and bewildered for the moment. Somebody was moving around inside and whispering.

"Oh, George, are you home?" she called. "Is Maud there?"
Dead silence. She stood up, listening. A figure came out of the living room, the figure of a man, and she felt he was as thoroughly amazed as herself.

"I'm not George," he said. "I think here's some mistake. I am Fallows."
"But where's George, Mr. Crane and my sister?" Kate put her hand up to her cheek. "They expected me tonight and I can't find them. I—I was awfully tired and fell asleep."
"I see you did. I expect Mr. Crane's over on Turtle Island, about a quarter of a mile farther along the shore. This is my island. Just wait until I get a light and we can see."

He struck a match and lit a lamp. It was Hartley Fallows. And, oddly enough, instead of thinking about Maud and George's worry over her, she remembered it had been a blonde hair.

"I say, if the trip's too much for you up there, I'll row over and send George back with Mrs. Crane to stay here with you, and we'll bunk up here."
"I'd much rather. I wouldn't feel so—so sort of evicted, don't you know. It would almost seem as if I had been welcome. I think it's bad luck to move so soon after you're settled, isn't you?"

It was three weeks later when they broke camp for the city. There had been a last bonfire of driftwood on Turtle Island, and Kate lingered beside it with Fallows after the others had gone up to one of Maud's chafing-dish surprises. He had grown almost human, Maud said, had come to see them every day and sometimes twice, and Kate's dark eyes held a new look these days.

"Was I such a bear that first night?" he asked.
"Goldenhair should expect a bear when she comes unannounced," she answered. Only I haven't golden hair."

"I love brown hair," he said dreamily. "Gypsy hair."

"The other was blonde, remember," she lifted her face teasingly, yet half in earnest, and Fallows took his chance.

"It belonged to my little niece, Betty Fallows. Oh, you have held that against me—Kate, Kate—"

Maud came to the door in the glow of light and called:
"Aren't you two ever coming up? It's all ready."
"Kate," he urged, "you do care, don't you?"
Kate laughed softly.
"I'm glad you prefer brown hair, Hartley," she said.

"COME ON, THRILLS," SAYS GIRL STAR
Fearless Helen Holmes Makes Speed the Watchword in New Railroad Film Novel
Helen Holmes, the heroine in "The Girl and the Game," is writing the scenario for the big screen novel herself. Frank Hamilton Spearman is the author, but Helen says that authors have hearts and try to protect her from the thrills their imaginations paint.
And she said she doesn't want any such protection—she wants to have the blue sky the limit as far as taking chances with life and limb are concerned, as long as it is her own life.
With characteristic earnestness she begins her thrill-making in the first chapter, when she rides her horse off a bridge into the water after a mad race against two speeding trains.
Of course she wins. What heroine wouldn't? But it requires pluck of almost an unnatural sort to do the things she does to inject into this great screen novel the last word in film realism. No wonder they call her "the fearless film star."
To produce "The Girl and the Game" a special studio was erected, giving to Producer McGowan the greatest railroad studio in the world for the production of this chaptered picture. A depot was built on the grounds of the Signal Film corporation's property, practicable in every way—switches laid, towers erected, semaphores installed as well as all other kinds of mechanical safeguards and hazards of the rail.
So complete is the equipment at this new studio that in the actual taking of the first chapter of the big film novel Producer McGowan, thirty minutes after the author's script was delivered to him had a train consisting of Pullmans, day coaches, parlor cars, diner, baggage car and engine, ready for the camera. One two-act chapter of this great picture will be shown weekly at the Bijou theatre.

TO BREAK UP A COLD

Into a pitcher, put a tablespoonful of butter, a quarter of a cup of light brown sugar, an ounce of fresh whole allspice, the juice of one orange and one lemon, and a pint of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey. Let the butter, sugar, allspice and whiskey stand for half an hour, then add a half pint of boiling water. Stir well before serving. The juice of the orange and lemon, last of all. To be served in a wine glass.
This drink is particularly wholesome, appetizing and strengthening, especially in stormy weather. Prompt action on such occasions, in administering a pure stimulant, like Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey, so pleasantly combined, will break up a cold, and perhaps ward off more serious attacks of bronchitis or pneumonia.
At most druggists, grocers and dealers, $1. If they can't supply you write us. Useful household booklet free.

HIGH SCHOOL SQUAD LOSES TO ALUMNI

Fast Game Goes to Stars of Other Days, 23-22—Game Won in Last Few Minutes of Play

In one of the most interesting games of years between Alumni and school players, the fast Alumni squad defeated the regulars of the local high school last night at the school gymnasium by a score of 23-22. The game was won in the final five minutes of play and was anybody's game for a time. Several easy shots at the ring were missed by both school and Alumni players.
The youngsters failed to enter into the spirit of the contest at times and listless playing was the result. However, a number of times some exceptionally scrappy mixups took place and some exceedingly fast basketball was played during these spurts.

STORM SWEEPS PACIFIC COAST; TOWNS FLOODED

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 4.—Trans-continental traffic from the Pacific coast was reported moving steadily last night, despite a storm which swept the Pacific coast. The coast guard cutter Snohomish, which lost her way and ran ashore in a Puget sound snow storm, floated off at high tide and proceeded undamaged. The western portal of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad's Cascade tunnel showed ninety-five inches of snow with 112 inches on the eastern slope. Eight inches covered the ground in Seattle.
Twenty-five persons in Oakland, Cal., were taken from their homes in boats. Lake Merritt, in the residence district, overflowed. A tunnel by which an electric suburban district reaches a pier was flooded and thousands of commuters were late to work in San Francisco. The city school were closed.

"DRYS" AT MENOMINEE CIRCULATE NEW PAPER

Local Option Leaders of Southern County Will Not Wait For Court Decision

According to the Menominee Herald-Leader, the "drys" of that county are not going to wait for action on the part of the supreme court in deciding the issue there, and are making preparations to circulate another petition before the January meeting of the county board.

Local option leaders in Menominee county will not wait for the decision of the supreme court on the recent opinion of Judge Flannigan upholding the county board in declaring void the petition for a local option election on the ground that the manner in which the petition was circulated was contrary to law.

G. A. Young, district superintendent of the "dry" forces, has announced that as the county board adjourned its October meeting to a definite date, Jan. 25, the latter session will be the same meeting in the eye of the law, and a new petition will be circulated with regard to the technicalities of the law, and will be presented to the board on Jan. 25.

THE SAPPHIRE RING

By ELLIS BROWNE.

It was exactly four weeks after Robert Hanford became engaged to Lucille Ames that he came to take her to the tennis match at West Waters.

As he held her slim fingers in his, he was startled by a change in her appearance. Lucille, the gay and light-hearted, wore a worried look.

"What is the matter, dearest?" he asked in alarm.

"Nothing," she evaded, drawing away her hands.

He touched her third finger playfully. "Where is the guardian ring?" he demanded.

Lucille paled. "I cannot find it," she said, after a moment's hesitation. "I am sure it is around the place somewhere; I will look again." Tears filled her eyes.

As the car carried them over to West Waters, Lucille and Robert scarcely exchanged a word. By the time they reached the clubhouse Robert was in a jealous rage. He remembered that George Letterby had been the most formidable rival for Lucille's heart and he wondered if Lucille had changed her mind.

Robert went to play in the singles, and one of his opponents was George Letterby. It was while Letterby was serving a ball to Robert that the latter noticed Lucille's sapphire ring on his opponent's little finger.

"Some ring!" smiled Letterby across the net.

Robert nodded grimly. "Thirty—love!" called Letterby mockingly.

Hot anger filled Robert's heart. The battle between the two men was a real one, and although Robert carried off the tennis honors, his storming heart admitted that Letterby was the victor in another contest. If not, what excuse was there for Letterby wearing the betrothal ring given by him to Lucille?

When the match was over, Robert found that Lucille had pleaded a headache and gone home with a friend. He did not wait for congratulations on his victory; he sped home in his motor car, wrote a bitter letter of renunciation to Lucille, and the next morning was on his way to California.

On the Pacific coast there was a tiny hamlet which is a paradise for fishermen. There Robert Hanford entrenched himself and determined to write a book upon the fighting habits of the big gamy fish of the Pacific waters.

One day, just as he had determined to return to New York and his neglected business interests, Robert met a newly arrived sportsman on the beach. He would have passed the man without recognition had not the newcomer paused and spoken.

"I don't believe you remember me, Mr. Hanford," hazarded the stranger, and tendered a card.

Rodeburg & Rodeburg, 20 Malden Lane, Manufacturing Jewelers.

It read: "I remember—you did some work for me—a ring," he said at last. Mr. Rodeburg beamed. "A special ring—a very fine sapphire set in dull gold—you said the stone belonged to your mother."

"You have a good memory," smiled Robert.

"I remember it especially well because your friend came in and asked us to copy the ring—said you had lent it to him for a day. I remember we had to work all night over it, as he wanted to return the ring, but we finished it."

"My friend brought the ring?" repeated Robert amazedly. "Mr. Letterby was his name."

"What date was it?" demanded Robert.

Mr. Rodeburg named the date—the day before the West Waters tennis match. "He only allowed us to keep it 24 hours," he added. "It's a funny coincidence, Mr. Hanford, that I just saw a duplicate of that ring—the young lady under that striped umbrella is wearing one on her engagement finger."

He jumped with surprise as Robert wrung his hand and dashed off to the striped umbrella, under which Lucille reclined on a steamer chair, her sad eyes looking dreamily out upon the sea.

At his approach Lucille lifted her eyes and a wax of hot color suffused her thin cheeks. "Robert!" she murmured breathlessly. Regardless of onlookers he dropped to one knee beside her chair and laid his head on the arm. "Forgive me, Lucille," he whispered. "I have just learned about the ring—I have wronged you." "The ring?" she uttered a glad little laugh and flashed the jewel before his bewildered eyes. "It all happened so queerly—I was frightened, too, and feared you would blame me. The day before the tennis match George Letterby called and asked to see my ring. As he examined it he dropped it in the grass and we could not find it. He came again the next afternoon—after the match was over—and he found the ring among the leaves; but it didn't matter, then, you had gone away. I have always worn it—" She hesitated and looked down at his pleading eyes, his face lined with suffering. "I have always worn it," she finished heroically. "AN ALIEN" IS A GRIPPING FILM

Splendid Film Feature to Show at Delft Thursday, Matinee and Night

The following is an excerpt from the New York Herald regarding the eight part film, "An Alien" which comes to the Delft theatre Thursday matinee and night.

New York Herald, June 1, 1915. If there was a dry eye in the Astor Theatre last night, somebody must have had a glass one. George Beban and a worthy company appeared in "An Alien," in motion pictures, which contained a beautiful story and a powerful climax.

It was that dramatic and appealing one-act play "The Sign of the Rose," in which Mr. Beban made a success on the vaudeville stage, that formed the basis for "An Alien."

Mr. Beban was much applauded, as were the other members of the cast. The star had to step on the stage and make a speech of thanks.
