AUSTRIAN REPORT CHARGES SEVEN CIVILIANS WERE KILLED BY ITALIAN TROOPS IN ONE VILLAGE—LATER FOUND TO HAVE BEEN GUILTYLESS OF COMPLICITY—GERMANY REJECTS PROPOSAL OF NEUTRAL BOARD OF EXAMINERS IN BARALONG CASE.

BERLIN SAYS REPRISAL TO COME

(By Associated Press) Berlin, (Wireless to Sayville), Jan. 15.—The Overseas agency gives out the following Austrian report: "Italian atrocities in Austrian territory occupied by Italian troops is reported from the Austrian press headquarters today. It is stated that seven inhabitants of one village were shot without trial on suspicion of having shot an Italian sentry. Afterwards the innocence of the entire seven was established. "The inconsistency of the accusation is plain, inasmuch as the Italians had confiscated all arms including knives when the territory was occupied.

"Further it is known that an Austrian patrol of ten, on duty between Monfalcone and Sagrado was assassinated. Members of the party were taken prisoners by a superior Italian force and after a short fight were disarmed and killed."

WILL MAKE REPRISALS

Berlin, Jan. 15.—(Wireless to Sayville)—In its reply to the British government on the Baralong case, the text of which was made public today, Germany takes the ground that Great Britain no longer desires to follow the rules of submarine warfare and breaks off negotiations on this subject. In addition to this Germany announced its intention of taking reprisal and rejects Great Britain's proposal of examination of the Baralong case by a neutral board, and also of three cases in which Great Britain is charged with violation of international laws.

Escanaba Wins Opener in New School League

FIRST TILT OF SEASON ON LOCAL FLOOR GOES TO ORANGE AND BLACK 25-16

In a speedy game played at the Escanaba high school gymnasium last night warriors of the Orange and Black squad of the local school defeated the fast basketweavers from Negaunee high school 25-16 in two spectacular periods of play. A large gallery witnessed the contest and gave the first real support to an Escanaba team of the last two years. The intense interest of the local fans and "fanettes" almost cost Escanaba a point in the second period of play when it was said a girl student touched the ball when thrown for a goal by a Negaunee player.

Fast Game Revealed

Right from the start of the fray fast basketball was played with the teams neck and neck up to the close of the half. The score at this time was 9-18 with Escanaba on the long end of the score. At the beginning of the second period Negaunee opened up with a bit of fast work and forged ahead three points. They were unable to maintain the pace, however and soon were five points behind. During this half the Escanaba aggregation ran away from their opponents in a whirlwind burst of speed piling up several goals in rapid order. The final score was 25-16 with Escanaba going strong at the wind-up.

Visitors Were Fighters

The visitors never gave up at any stage of the game and were simply outclassed but not outplayed by the Orange and Black. Coach Smith's men displayed sportsmanship and ability to handle the ball in clean style, but the strange floor and surroundings proved an obstacle hard to overcome. Doyle and Heiser for the visitors showed exceptional class while Perrin, Cooney, Rushton, O'Brien and Germain for the locals played a consistent, heady game. Perrin got away with a number of spectacular shots following long dribbles, but a lack of desire on the part of the locals to engage in team work spoiled chances of running up a big score. With last night's victory tucked away in their belts Escanaba high school is now in the running for the M. I. N. E. championship banner and it is believed that enough enthusiasm has been created to insure a strong support for the balance of the season.

EDWARD BAILEY IS DEAD; KNOWN HERE

Word has been received here of the death of Edward Bailey, express messenger residing at Ishpeming and who for years has made the run between Ishpeming and Chicago. He was well known to many in Escanaba. Burial will take place at Harvard, Mich., Tuesday.

A letter has been received by H. Guy Monts of this paper from Gallipoli, the Turkish peninsula where the British troops have suffered so severely and from which they were withdrawn a few days ago. The writer is a cousin of the Escanaba man and won his corporal's stripes on the battlefield a few months ago after a daring and spectacular escape from an isolated trench in which he and five companions were surrounded by Turks. His relation of some marvelous escapes he has had are intimate pictures of the sort of fighting that went on in the Dardanelles during the past year.

Captain George Webster is the writer's name, a member of the Otago battalion, New Zealand Expeditionary force which landed at Suvla Bay on April 25 of last year. Cor. Webster brings out the utter disregard for danger and the fact that troops get used to the slaughter and sorrowfulness of war in a remarkably short time. He tells of how his companions and himself waited for a Turk head to show above the trenches and how they would "pop" him.

Gallipoli: a Hell-Hole

The following letter was received some time ago from the young officer, 25 years of age, written while he was in a British hospital. He had been forced out of the ranks through a sheer nervous breakdown occasioned by the terrific ordeals which he had undergone. He is now in a Malta hospital. He says of the Gallipoli fighting:

It is with pleasure that I write this letter in dear old London, after seven years (I believe) absence. I arrived unexpectedly last Thursday and gave my sisters rather a pleasing shock the next day. Really it seemed to me as though I was in a dream when I stepped off the train at Waterloo Station (London). Since then I have seen all my sisters except Ada, and I hope to see her in a few days. I was telling Alice this afternoon that since I last saw her I have traveled a bit of the globe. I have found it very interesting too, except for one place and believe me that place I shall never forget. The place I refer to of course is Gallipoli. I have nicknamed it a white man's grave. During the three months I was there, I have seen slaughter absolutely indescribable. Everywhere you dig, you strike dead bodies. I have actually seen dead Turks stacked up four and six deep. When they used to attack us in massed formation, we used to shoot them down wholesale, you absolutely could not miss. I have seen them within 5 or 6 yards of our trenches but when the Australians and New Zealanders hopped out after them with fixed bayonets Mr. Turk did the 100 yards in about 8 seconds. I can tell you it did not take us long to teach the Turks that cold steel was rather bad for their health. At the same time they are not a bit afraid of lead, and are fine fighters. They have had terrible losses, but we have also had big losses. The first three days after we forced the landing, the heads say that the rifle and machine

What Prohibition Has Accomplished In Arizona It Will do for Delta County

SUNSET MAGAZINE PUBLISHES AN INTERESTING ARTICLE BY GEORGE HERBERT SMALLEY—ARRESTS FALL OFF OVER HALF SAVINGS ACCOUNTS ARE INCREASED.

The following article from the Sunset Magazine which follows will prove of interest to those who are interested in the local option question, now before the people of this county:

Left to the men, Arizona would still be "wet." It was not until the women were given an equal place with the men at the election polls that the change came on January 1, 1915.

Prohibition has worked a radical change, to which business, municipal government and politics have not yet adjusted their affairs completely. Even the peace officers over the state do not quite know what to make of it. The rust has accumulated on the locks of many outlying jails so that they can't be opened with a key. There has been no occasion to open many of them. Even the city of Prescott did not have an arrest for three months last summer.

Bobbie Burns, the dauntless marshal of Williams, spent most of his official time in former years wrestling in gutters with recalcitrant drunks and thugs; now he rides about in an automobile and wears a boiled shirt. One Sunday morning a few months after prohibition closed the saloons he was standing idly in front of the empty police station gazing at the millennium which he saw settling over Bill Williams' Peak and enveloping what was formerly known far and wide as the toughest town on the Santa Fe. He watched the Mexicans and Greeks going to church with their wives, and he thought of other Sunday mornings when he had led these same men off to jail to recover from Saturday night sprags.

"I can't tell a sheepherder now from a traveling man for a candy house," Bobbie declared. "They are wearing wrist watches and the cowpunchers shed their horses before they get to town and jerk their pants down over their boots. Can you beat it?" Marshal Bobbie Burns' vision of the millennium widened as he talked. He declared that if it was not for the hoboes who drop off the trains at Williams he would get soft in the arms. But there are other points of view. Some men see in the change the loss to local trade of an element which now saves its money to spend it in

MAN WHO HURLED WIFE OVER CLIFF IS FOUND GUILTY BY JURY TODAY

FREDRICK T. PRICE, MINNEAPOLIS BUSINESS MAN CONVICTED TODAY OF CAUSING DEATH OF WIFE, MARY FRIDLEY PRICE—AFTER WOMAN FELL OVER CLIFF AND STILL ALIVE, PRICE CRUSHED HER HEAD WITH A ROCK.

CONVICTED ON TESTIMONY OF FRIEND

(By Associated Press) Minneapolis, Jan. 15.—Fredrick T. Price was convicted of the murder of his wife, Mary Fridley Price, by a jury in district court here today.

The trial of Frederick T. Price on a charge of murdering his wife, Mary Fridley Price, began in district court here on January 4. The prosecution charged that on the night of November 28, 1914, Price, accompanied by his wife and Charles D. Etchison, a traveling salesman of Washington, D. C., drove to a point along the East River road where he brought his automobile to a halt and, seizing his wife, hurled her from a high cliff. It was further charged that Price, who was a local business man, went to the foot of the cliff and finding his wife still alive, struck her upon the head with a rock. The state charged

HOL POLLOI INSTALL NEW OFFICERS DURING MEETING LAST NIGHT

The annual installation of officers of the Hol Polloi club was held at the K. P. hall Thursday night, the following being placed in their offices: George Peterson, past president; Val Pollo, president; Ed. Moersch, vice-president; George Dumas, secretary; Joseph Charlebois, financial secretary; Matt Peterson, treasurer; Ernest Dufresne, sentinel.

The members of the club are making arrangements for a banquet to be held in the near future, at which time, gentlemen friends of the club members will be entertained.

that the alleged act was committed for the purpose of inheriting a large sum of money given Mrs. Price by her father, David H. Fridley, a wealthy pioneer after whom the town of Fridley, Minn., is named.

Etchison, chief witness for the prosecution, repeated on the witness stand the substance of a confession he made early in December after his arrest in connection with the woman's death. He testified that Price promised to cancel a note of $1,200 and in addition pay him $3,500 if he would accompany Price to the cliff and then remain silent regarding the affair.

were 3343 arrests for drunkenness during the first six months of 1914 and 464 for the same period of 1915 under prohibition, a decrease of 2579, or more than eighty-four per cent. There were 167 violations of the prohibition law during the period.

The prohibitionists, while well satisfied with this showing, contend that liquor was still plentiful after the closing of the 437 saloons in the state and that the best results will be shown the last six months of 1915.

Arrests by the United States marshal for selling liquor to Arizona Indians were one hundred and ninety the first six months of 1914, and sixty-one for the same period of 1915. There were thirteen less commitments to the state prison.

One of the most important comparisons is that which relates directly to the effect of prohibition in decreasing crime. Commitments to the county jails the first half of 1914, when there were 437 saloons in Arizona, aggregated 1661, and for the same period of 1915 they fell to 1179, a decrease of twenty-nine per cent.

Throughout the state one finds saloon bars undismantled, grimly expressing hope of a return to the old days. There are many former saloon men who confidently believe that the saloons will come back. It is recalled by prohibitionists that the same hope was kept alive after the passage of the law which drove the girls out of the saloons, and after the approval of the anti-gambling act.

The ancient "Bird Cage" in historic Tombstone still waits for the return of the days when men will go again to see its grotesque paintings and drink with the girls in the quaint Mexican boxes. The "Human Fly," her London, Jan. 15.—That Great Britain will soon announce the establishment of an actual blockade of Germany and her allies, thereby superseding the conditions established through the orders in council was the statement today by an American who has been in close contact with the machinery of the British government in his capacity as counsel for American ship owners whose business has been affected by the present blockade. A person who speaks authoritatively and who can act with authority when discussing the British prize court proceedings has reviewed for the Associated Press the recent orders in council.

"The British government is showing an unmistakable tendency to shift around the American contention that international law which prevailed before the start of the war shall ultimately govern the British view of sea powers. It is known that before the blockade was declared, the admiralty had urged the necessity of an actual blockade. But it was thought that the susceptibility of neutrals would be better met by the orders in council. After this the government began its interminable agreement with neutrals and which might have succeeded but for the United States which took the stand that the orders in council were illegal and that failed or sub-rosa agreement to the then formed orders similar to the Danish orders would be a surrender of American sovereignty under international law."

CHAPTER IV.
"Who is this woman?"

AND then Stanley Glover, scenting the approach of the storm, again interposed hastily: "Do you mind opening the safe, Mr. Trask? I want to get Mrs. Trask's account books."

With an "All right" Trask began feeling in his pockets. He explored one after another without result. "What did I do with that card?" he said. "I had a card with the combination written on it. That's a funny thing. Where the devil did I put it?"

"Maybe it's in another suit," suggested Mrs. Trask, while Glover asked: "When did you have it last?"

To the secretary Trask replied: "Yesterday morning before I left. I opened the safe to get my check book." Again from Mrs. Trask: "Perhaps you left it down at Long Branch."

The mention of the watering place seemed to irritate the financier. There were associations with its name, perhaps, which made the mention by his wife doubly disagreeable. On the lips of others "Long Branch" was merely a name on a map, a pleasant place wherein to while away a holiday. There was something in "Long Branch" from her which made him turn on her and say savagely, with no attempt to conceal his irritation: "That's ridiculous! Why should I leave the combination to the safe at Long Branch?"

She did not reply to his outburst of temper. He stood thinking intently for a moment, and then exclaimed: "Oh, I know what I did with it! I gave it to Strickland. I've just come from there. I invited him to come down to Long Branch on Sunday, and I wrote the address on the card for him."

"Are you sure the combination was on that card?" asked Glover.

"Yes. I never stopped to look at the other side. Very careless of me. You'll have to wait until tomorrow for the books."

To this the secretary replied: "Well, there's no hurry about it," but his employer raised his hand, with "Wait a minute. I believe I can get that combination."

He walked past Glover to the safe, bent down to the knob and began to manipulate it. For a moment his memory failed him, and he said to himself: "No, that's not it."

"Don't bother about it," said Glover, and the choice of the older man again found vent. Was there something in the surcharged domestic atmosphere that irritated him? Was it the presence of his wife, standing silently by while he tried to open his safe, or was it the shadow of impending doom which darkened his soul on this night?

"Say," he snapped to the waiting Glover, "you know if you're going to talk I never can remember these numbers. I've got it. There you are."

Turning the handle of the safe and pulling the door toward him, he said to Glover, "Help yourself."

With the books in his hand, Glover said to Trask, "Do you want to do any work tonight?"

"No, I don't think so. I want to turn in early. I've been going all day, and I'm tired."

For some minutes, while the safe was being opened, Joan Trask had sat silent. Only the nervous working of her hands, twisting and untwisting a handkerchief and the slight frown on her face told that she still thought of the mysterious telephone call. But it was not of that she spoke, but of her dissatisfaction with her husband's conduct, in the words which arrested Glover as he was about to leave the room and which brought anew the contemptuous look to the face of her husband.

sumed by a burning desire to be as they were. His salary was ample for his needs, and his position in the Trask establishment was not a mean one. But in his heart of hearts he cherished the ambition to acquire wealth such as was possessed by his employer and the men with whom he associated and to have a private secretary of his own. No more ardent worshiper of Mammon, albeit in a carefully concealed fashion, than Stanley Glover existed in New York. Picking the figurative crumbs from his employer's table, he had begun to "play the market." But luck had been against him, and he had lost.

Like to join them! Gratification beamed from every feature of the young man's face as he replied: "Thanks! I'll be glad to!"

"Strickland's coming with us," said Trask.

"When did he get back from the west?"

"Tonight. He wired me to meet him at his home."

"What are you going to do about that note of his? It was due on the 22d, you know."

"He paid it," said Trask. "I have the ten thousand here."

With that he reached into an inside pocket, took out a thin package of bills and placed them on the desk.

"I'm surprised," Glover said. "I thought he would fall down."

"He got it from those business connections in Cleveland. When I got to his house tonight he had the ten thousand. I didn't want to take it. I told him I knew he was hard pressed and that I didn't mind holding off for awhile."

A smile passed over the face of the financier, which was turned for the moment away from his two companions in the room. It was not a benevolent smile, telling of the applause of the inward voice for a good deed well performed. Rather was there something sinister and crafty about it. Treacherous, perhaps, as was the smile of Joab when he took Abner aside in the gate.

"Strickland's awfully fond of his wife."

"To speak with him quietly and smote him there under the fifth rib, that he died."

The smile passed unnoticed of Mrs. Trask and Glover, and the secretary asked:

"What did he say?"

"He wouldn't hear of it. Wants to begin with a clean slate, he says."

Was it the tiring rounds of golf, the weariness induced by hours of travel or something else which made Trask yawn before he replied to his wife? Certain it was that the mention of another woman in itself would not tire him, the man who combined keen acumen in financial affairs with a pursuit of pleasure that would have done credit or discredit to a Roman of the days of imperial decadence.

"Couldn't say. Never met her," he answered. Then he turned to Glover, saying: "You better put that $10,000 in the safe, Glover."

"Why the cash?" asked the young man.

Again the smile appeared on the lips of Trask.

"Well, he said it had been so darned hard for him to get it that he wanted the pleasure of handing it to me in ten $1,000 bills. Be sure to deposit it in the morning."

Glover took the money and went to the safe. Mrs. Trask sat quietly, noticing nothing, distracted by thoughts of "the other woman." Trask sat at the desk, stretching his limbs and yawning. Neither saw that the money was deposited securely in the inner compartment of the safe. Glover turned his head to ask, "Shall I lock it, sir?"

"Yes," said Trask, and Glover rose, with the words "Anything else?"

"I don't think so. Oh, yes! Better remind me to get that card from Strickland in the morning."

"All right," said Glover. "I'll go to my room now." He picked up Mrs. Trask's account books from the table and said to her, "I'll have these ready for you in the morning, Mrs. Trask."

She thanked him, and there were three "Good nights" as he left the room. When he had gone there was a brief silence, broken only by a prodigious and discourteous yawn from Trask. It was plainly to be seen that between Gerald and Joan Trask there was nothing of the sweet confidence and intimacy of married life which make happy wedlock the nearest earthly approach to heaven. Long before she had begun to bore him. Years before he had forfeited by infidelity and indifference the love she had once felt for him. But it was not dead. It needed but the spark of renewed affection, respect and trustworthiness on his part, to bring it into full blaze.

Joan Trask was a good woman, a wife of whom any man might have been proud. Even in physical attractions she was not wanting, and strangers seeing her decked in costly raiment and jewels envied Gerald Trask his consort. Her face told nothing of the inroads which her husband's succession of slights and insults, combined with infidelities, had made on her spirit.

"For the sake of the children"—ob, potent justification of how many patient women!—she had borne with him. But tonight—somehow tonight was different. Her soul was consumed by a burning desire to know who "the other woman" was. Not that it mattered much. Whoever she was she was but the latest of a long line. But Joan Trask was insistent this time. He was her lawful husband, and he must come out into the open.

As soon as Glover was out of earshot she turned to Trask.

"Gerald, who is this woman?" she asked.

"Oh, what woman?" The words were drawn out in a tone which might have betokened weariness of either body or spirit.

"The one who called up awhile ago." Trask put his hands into his trousers pockets and rose, stretching. "Say, aren't you done with that yet? I told you I don't know," he replied.

She persisted. "You do know!"

DORIZAS IS AFTER RECORD.
Penn's Strong Man Aims to Boost Strength Test Mark.

Mike Dorizas, Penn's strong man, intends to give his strength record another boost as soon as his hand, hurt in football, recovers from the injury.

"I did 1,800 in an unofficial trial, and I don't think even this is the best I can do," said Dorizas recently. "I am stronger than I was two years ago, and I know something about the tricks of getting the most out of one's weight."

"My aim is 2,000. That's a pretty high mark, but not only am I stronger, but after a week or so on the mat I will be better than I have been in the past. This is my last chance at the thing. Some day another fellow will come along and do better. It may be some little fellow I will teach in school when I am graduated who will better my record. If there is a better man I hope he breaks the mark a day after I make it."

The Upper Peninsula of Michigan Should Be a Separate State

There Is Room In Old Glory For Another Star.

The Upper Peninsula of Michigan, our "Clover-Land," should be a separate state of the United States of America.

The Upper Peninsula comprises nearly one-third of all the area of the great State of Michigan, the largest state, excepting Georgia, east of the Mississippi River.

The Upper Peninsula at no place touches the lower peninsula, but the former is bounded by its thousands miles of lake shore, touching three of the five Great Lakes and 180 miles of border line adjoining the State of Wisconsin.

The one-ninth of the population of Michigan residing in the Upper Peninsula pays nearly one-seventh of all the state taxes.

There is no reason under the broad canopy of heaven why this great empire of the Upper Peninsula, rich in every natural gift, endowed by nature beyond so many of these United States, a garden spot of agricultural opportunity, a center of industrial and commercial activity, the home of a third of a million people, industrious, thrifty and patriotic, should not now take its rightful place among the states of the Union, adding another star to the grand old flag and taking into itself all the rights, titles and privileges which are its heritage and its just due.

HARVARD CLEARS UP $85,000.

Has Tidy Sum Left Over After Paying All Football Expenses.

The Harvard football team attracted nearly $225,000 in gate receipts during its season of nine weeks. It was estimated recently, and the gross returns to the Harvard Athletic Association will be close to $125,000.

More than 165,000 persons saw the Harvard team in action this season. The record crowd was at the Yale game, when 49,000 persons paid $98,000 to attend the game.

The second largest crowd was at the Princeton-Harvard game at Princeton, N. J., when 20,000 persons paid $90,000 to witness the contest. The Harvard-Brown game attracted 20,000 and the Cornell and Penn State both a gate of 15,000.

Fournier Told to Practice.

Jacques Fournier of the White Sox has been ordered to practice outfielding for two hours every day at his home on the coast this winter. Most managers are trying to prevent their ball players playing during the winter months, but Manager Rowland realizes that Fournier must improve in fielding. Last summer the fans expected to see him hit on the head every time he went for a fly ball. There was not a poorer fielding outer gardener in the major leagues.

Maranville Playing Basketball.

Rabbit Maranville, the Boston Braves' star shortstop, is playing basketball now. A year ago Manager Stallings of the Braves put a ban on the Rabbit playing basketball because he feared his shortstop might suffer injury. Now he does not seem to protest.

Albert Pierce was down from Foster City yesterday.

WHAT PROHIBITION

The "Sazrac" in Prescott long ago abandoned its site to a modern hotel; the "Cobweb" and "Montezuma Hall," noted places of the old days, are now forgotten.

The "Blazing Star" and the "Bucket of Blood," noted resorts in northern Arizona, passed out with open gambling. The "Fashion" gambling house and saloon in Tucson has given place to a magnificent Y. M. C. A. building. The "Legal Tender" with its gorgeous interior appointments is now a butcher shop, and old "Congress Hall," where fortunes were lost on the gambling tables, is now a Chinese grocery store.

The large industrial centers where mining and smelting operations employ thousands of workers report a marked increase in the efficiency of labor. At the Copper Queen mine in Bisbee the loss of time per 1000 shifts was smaller by seventy-one per cent in 1915 than in 1914. The accident ratio of 1914, was 2.6 per 1000 shifts and for 1915 it was less than one-half

LEGAL NOTICES

Jan. 8, 1916 Jan. 22, 1916 ORDER FOR PUBLICATION—Appointment of Administrator.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, the Probate Court for the County of Delta. At a session of said court, held at the Probate Office in the city of Escanaba, in said County, on the seventh day of January, A. D. 1916.

In the Matter of the Estate of John Martin Nelson, deceased.

It is Ordered, That the thirty-first day of January, A. D. 1916, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, at said probate office, be and is hereby appointed for hearing said petition.

It is Further Ordered, That public notice thereof be given by publication of a copy of this order, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing, in the Escanaba Daily Mirror, a newspaper printed and circulated in said county.

JUDD YELLAND, Judge of Probate.

A true copy, ROSEZITA CORCORAN, Register of Probate.

Dec. 31, 1915. Jan. 15, 1916 NOTICE OF HEARING OF CLAIMS BEFORE COURT.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, the Probate Court for the County of Delta. In the Matter of the Estate of Nels Nelson, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that four months from the twenty-seventh day of December, A. D. 1915, have been allowed for creditors to present their claims against said deceased to said court for examination and adjustment.

JUDD YELLAND, Judge of Probate. ROSEZITA CORCORAN, Register of Probate.

of one per cent. Coroners' inquests of accidents and killings have fallen off in all the large mining counties. In Gila county inquests fell from twenty to nine in the first six months of 1914 and 1915 respectively.

The Arizona Copper Company at Clifton reported an increase in the number of men reporting for work the day after pay-day during the first six months of 1915, and at the Calumet & Arizona mines the number of men now failing to report following pay-day is practically negligible, while in 1914 the number was very large. All of the mining camps report similar results in 1915 under prohibition.

In the logging camps of northern Arizona a greater number of logs per man are gotten out than ever before, and the men seldom go to the towns. There is crepe still hanging from the door of Sandy, Donohue's "Senate" Saloon in Flagstaff and the words "Closed on account of death" inscribed on the door. The St. Michael's bar at Prescott has a sign on the door, "Out of order," and a Kingman liquor dealer's message painted in large letters above the entrance: "All Nations welcome but Carry," has become a travesty.

In the eleven counties of the state having saloons in 1914 the aggregate increase of tax rates for county purposes was $9.31 in 1915, when revenue amounting to a total of $138,402.50 from saloon licenses was cut off by prohibition. The average increase was $41.2 cents for the eleven counties, of which three and one-half mills was caused by the loss of liquor-license revenue. This charge against prohibition of three and one-half mills in increased county rates does not allow for the credits which accrued through the decreased cost of the public welfare departments, which will be considerable before the year ends.

The following table shows the manner in which arrests for all offenses, including drunkenness, fell off in ten cities of Arizona:

Table with columns for City, 1914, and 1915. Cities include Bisbee, Douglas, Prescott, Florence, Flagstaff, Williams, Tombstone, Tucson, Phoenix, and Globe. Shows a general decrease in arrests.

There were 248 saloons in the cities and towns in the foregoing statement during 1914 and none in 1915. The loss of saloon license revenue was over $100,000.

Of the total arrests in 1914 for all drunkenness were 2943. Of the total arrests of 1915 of 2350, those for drunkenness were 464.

In the face of this record the saloon has no chance of again opening for business in Arizona. ADV.

THE BLACK CAT

By LOUISE OLIVER.

Jack Morrow returned late one night from the office. He had walked all the way home in vain to find a way out of a very embarrassing dilemma. Betty Hollister and he were to be married within the month and he had just discovered that he was almost without a cent in the world. Donald, his younger brother at college, had got into trouble and there was no one else to help him. The check he had mailed in the afternoon had just about cleaned him out. Unless some miracle happened, there was nothing left in the stocking.

There was no way he could think of postponing the wedding without breaking Betty's heart. All of her arrangements were complete and he had heard her say once that she would rather die than change the date of her wedding.

Yes, there was a possible way—just a mere chance as slim as a spider's thread! Jim Barlow had dropped in that day and advised him to invest in Cascade Steel. Jack never played the market, but Jim did with more or less luck, and when Jack had replied that he couldn't afford it, Jim had offered to lend him the wherewithal.

He took out his latchkey and unlocked the front door as a nearby clock started to strike 12. As he turned the knob, something soft rubbed against his legs. He opened the door and the hall light revealed a jet black cat that started to pur contentedly as it turned for another rub against his trousers.

Midnight and a black cat! Jack looked cautiously around. He had come from a New England town and was as full of superstitions as a cantaloupe is of seeds. Surely this was a lucky sign. He must keep the cat! Nothing could be more hazardous to luck than to turn it loose now.

But— His landlady hated cats, and, besides, she was a relative of Betty. Betty must never know about the cat because the one thing they ever disagreed about was Jack's "superstition," as practical Betty put it.

But this lucky sign meant that he was almost sure to win if he took up Jim's offer of the morning. It had to be done! He picked up the cat and held it under his coat as he slipped stealthily up to his room.

Early the next morning Betty, looking pale and hollow eyed, met Jack at the front door on his way to work. She eyed the traveling bag he carried curiously, but he explained hastily that he was carrying papers to the office.

He had been up since dawn trying to devise methods of feeding and hiding his new pet. For two hours he had looked out of the window in vain for a milkman. The trunk, the cupboard and each bureau drawer had elicited only dismal yowls of loneliness. There was nothing for it but to carry his good luck fetish back and forth with him to the office, where he could feed it and keep an eye on it through the day. Better the jeers of the boys than the wrath of Betty.

A few days passed—days of more than one kind of anxiety for Jack. First, there was Cascade Steel, which couldn't decide whether to go up or down. Then there was the cat, which made him the butt of a thousand jokes at the office and miserable at the house nightly for fear of discovery. But, last of all, Betty had taken a notion to droop.

She was as sweetly alluring as ever, but there was something indefinable about her he could not understand. She protested that she was well—yet she was pale and abstracted and her thoughts seemed to be miles away. She started at every sound and flew to the door every time she heard an unusual noise.

Jack was worried. Their wedding day was approaching and Betty got worse instead of better. One thing, however—Cascade Steel was doing well and in a couple of days he hoped to clear all he had lost and pay back Jim's loan.

Then the cat could go with it would. In the meantime he watched it with renewed vigilance. But the cat got away! One night Jack woke up with a feeling of disaster. His first thought was for pussy. Sure enough—its bed in the open wardrobe drawer was empty. A thorough search of the room proved futile and the tramsom solved the riddle.

He slipped into a few clothes and peered cautiously out into the hall, then felt his way slowly downstairs. The parlor, by the light of a match, was catless. Then he started for the dining room and stopped, hearing a feminine voice. The door stood open just enough for him to see Betty in the middle of the floor hugging his black cat and rubbing her cheeks against its sleek head. He didn't even know she was in the house.

"Oh, Niggy, dear, I'm so glad I found you," she crooned. "I've looked for you for a week, ever since the night I lost you over here! And it's such bad luck to have a black cat come to you and then lose it, especially before your wedding. I just pretty nearly decided not to marry Jack at all until I found you. But how you came to me here I don't know."

And Jack, tiptoeing exultingly back to his room, decided that she never should.

gun fire was more furious than anything ever heard of before in History. I cannot describe it, it was that murderous. Nearly every bush and blade of grass was cut away. We suffered fearful losses the first week, but for every one of us it meant two or three Turks. We were all mad I remember, I wished for nothing else but to charge, I was absolutely beyond fear by then. I had plenty of charging after though, I was in fine. Really cousin I never thought it was possible for a man to go through it all and come out a sane man. One section of the trenches we occupied was only seven yards from the Turkish trenches, and it was one long bombing contest. We lost a fearful lot of men in that trench, but we beat Mr. Turk again at the finish. At times it was funny especially when we started to throw tins of bully beef (Made in Chicago) into the trenches and in return get a nice piece of steak. It was no joke though when we had to put five weeks in the firing line in a stretch. I have often gone four and five days without sleep and also I have suffered three days without a drink of any description and without food. The time I refer too is when 20 of us were in a little trench about 300 yards from our own men, and actually surrounded by Turks. We were held there for three days until only 5 of us remained alive, when I thought it best to "Give it a go." I shook hands around and made a furious dash. I shall never forget it as long as I live. A Machine Gun was at me, digging up the dirt all round me, and I dropped down to bluff them. It was as well I did, otherwise I should not be writing this letter. I was delirious for some time after and I don't remember how I got in, but I was told I fell in on our own men. I've had some marvelous escapes, but I think my luck is in. Well after three months of this kind of thing, my nerves went, and I went to the doctor, and here I am. By the way I must tell you that I was made Corporal on the battlefield on May 8th. When I left Gallipoli our Company which was 227 strong to start with, had myself and 5 other men left. Of course we have been reinforced often, but I refer to the ones that landed on April 25th. Well out of the six left three of us are together in this Hospital. I must say that since I've been here, I have been treated jolly well, everything I ask for I get. Ladies come in and take us out for drives and bring us cigarettes and fruit. They are so kind. Myself, I am feeling a bit weak of course and my nerves are in rather a bad state, but considering, I am one of the lucky ones and will not grumble.

The 100,000 Mile Reliability Car

Have you seen the big blue Studebaker posters we have on the boards all over town?

We are so proud of this car and its record-breaking prices—40-Horsepower "FOUR" Seven-passenger, $885.00, and 50-Horsepower "SIX" Seven-passenger, $1050.00, that we are even using bill boards to tell everybody about these wonderful values. The first 40-Horsepower "FOUR" Seven-passenger in the world under $1000.00. The first 50-Horsepower "SIX" Seven-passenger in the world, of equal car and value under $1450.00.

Studebaker is the car that recently broke all records in the 100,000 mile Reliability Run. The entire country is talking about that performance. Such a car should be of interest to you and you will be interested in seeing it.

Come in and let us show you the 1916 Studebaker.

ONLY WOMAN SHERIFF

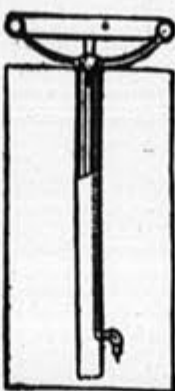

Mrs. Lucretia Roberts of Santa Cruz county, Arizona, is probably the only real live woman sheriff in the United States. She enjoys all the distinction that goes with the office of deputy sheriff; a wide sombrero, a big revolver and a larist, to say nothing of the deputy's badge of office. Sheriff Roberts is a widow, tall, straight and strong, and a past-master in the handling of "shooting irons." When asked what she does when one violates the law in Santa Cruz, she archly replied: "I go get 'im."

don't "creep" to avoid this strain. And instead, they take the brunt of the friction and assure a better grip when an emergency requires quick application of the brakes, a frequent occurrence in broken country. The chains do not dig into the surface of the tire so much as would the stones along a fair roadway; and those who advocate this every day usage claim that they serve as an armor against road imperfections, which would otherwise badly bruise and cut the tires. But even were the cost greater the assurance of increased safety through front wheel chains would justify their use.

HEATS THE STEERING WHEEL

Recently Patented Device Will Be of Service to Those Who Use Machine in Cold Weather.

A warm steering-wheel rim for motor cars in cold weather is made possible by a device recently patented by Lennie A. Hanson and George W. Hall of Deering, N. D. Hot air from under the hood is led up to the hollow steering post and through a hollow spoke to the hollow rim.

Section of an Automobile Steering Apparatus, Showing How the Wheel May Be Heated.

By a miraculous turn of fate, the occupants of a motor charabanc, which collided with a motor car, turned over three times, and then fell down a steep embankment 20 feet high, escaped death. The vehicle was carrying a Christian Endeavor party from Brynmawr to the Wye valley in Wales, and the collision occurred at an awkward bend in the road near Tintern. The charabanc steering-gear was damaged, and the vehicle collided with a wall and turned over and over. The driver pluckily stuck to his post and escaped serious injury.

Beats Bird's Best Speed. An interesting fact in natural history was discovered by James Linville of Greensburg, Ind., the other day. A sparrow flew in front of his touring car. Linville increased his speed, and, with the speedometer registering just 30 miles an hour, caught the bird against the front of the radiator, where the fan pressure held it until the car slowed down.

Makes Strong Light. Dry cells are seldom used as a source of energy for electric lights, but it should be remembered that when they are used the voltage of each cell is a little more than one. When six are connected in series to feed six-volt tungsten lamps the filaments are likely to be illuminated too brightly to permit of normal life.

CLOVER-LAND MAGAZINE MAKES ITS APPEARANCE

Booster Magazine Published in Menominee by Roger M. Andrews is Snappy Publication

Escanabans who have seen and perused the new Cloverland magazine published from the office of Roger M. Andrews of Menominee have nothing but praise for it. The magazine is published in the interests of Cloverland and filled with interesting articles and data of value concerning this section of the state. Among the articles appearing in the initial number which is now on sale at five cents, the copy in local drug stores and at the News Shop, is one written by Supt. F. E. King of the city schools. Mr. King says, in his article, that there are no better schools anywhere in the state or nation than in Cloverland.

YOUNG PEOPLE OF UPPER BAY CITY GUESTS AT PARTY

Thirty-six young people, members of the Gladstone Epworth League journeyed to Escanaba last night in 2 sleigh loads to be the guests of the Escanaba M. E. young people. A musical program, games and conversation served to pass a most delightful evening, during the course of which a luncheon was served.

SKATERS NOW HAVE GOOD ICE AT CITY RINK ON SOUTH SHORE

After the recent fall of snow, city employes have cleared a large rink at the municipal bath house location on the south shore and flooded the space. The cold weather of the past few days has put an excellent surface on the ice and each afternoon many Escanabans have taken advantage of the opportunity to enjoy the exhilarating sport.

GAS EXPLODES INSIDE

pital to which they had been removed. The explosion occurred while the batteries were being recharged. It was caused by hydrogen gas.

Hear Explosion—See Flames

Men working near the E-2 heard a detonation and then saw flames come out of the hatches of the craft. The explosion is said to have opened several of the submarine's plates. Several rescue parties were driven back and several officers who attempted to get into the hatches were pulled out unconscious.

Bar All Reporters

Newspaper men were barred from the yards and it was with much difficulty that a report of the explosion could be secured. All details were refused. It was at first reported that engineers were testing the new Edison batteries with which the craft was equipped. The batteries were intended to obviate the danger of gases in submarines. Recently a submarine of the "E" class is said to have made a successful trip with the new batteries. Earlier reports today stated that twelve men had been removed to hospitals.

Ten Known Aboard

Washington, Jan. 15.—The submarine E-2 was the New York navy yard having new batteries installed, of the new Edison type. She was the first submarine in the world to be equipped with them. Ten persons were known to have been aboard the craft at the time of the blast and two were taken out later. A preliminary report to the department here gave the facts.

Built in 1912

New York, Jan. 15.—The submarine E-2 was built in 1912 and displaced 200 tons. She had a speed of fourteen knots on the surface and eleven knots submerged. The E-2 had a narrow escape from a similar fate as that which befell the E-4 in Honolulu harbor.

SKIDDING TO BLAME

Frequent Cause of Accidents for Which Auto Drivers Blame Other Things.

FRONT WHEELS OFTEN SLIP

Recognizing This Fact, Many Are Using Tire Chains on All Wheels, and the Results Are Said to Have Been Extremely Satisfactory.

The real contributing cause is not always assigned to many road accidents. The tendency has been to lay these smashups to imperfect steering mechanism, faulty brakes or other deficiencies in the make-up of the cars; but often unexpected skidding at bad spots on the macadam causes the largest percentage of automobile accidents.

The chairman of the executive committee of the A. A. A. was, for instance, recently a victim of one of these smash-ups, due to skidding, although at first the accident was attributed to faulty steering gear. Those who have frequently undergone similar experiences testify to the fact that the skidding that occurred was not the more familiar back-wheel skid, but the slipping of the front wheels, which causes the car either to overturn or land with smashing force against some roadside telegraph pole or tree.

With the appreciation of this danger, many motorists are taking the precaution of using tire chains on the front, as well as the rear wheels, with very satisfactory results; and some in mountainous sections are even making a practice of using the chains for all four wheels in dry weather as well as on "slippery" days. To the inexperienced this sounds like an appalling leap in the tire bill, due to extra wear on tires. In extremely mountainous districts; but those who have tried the scheme of using tire chains in all weathers claim that the tires serve their full mileage. The theory is this: Tire chains are not fastened to the tires, to pull at them every time the brakes are applied; they have sum-

While in maneuvers off Brenton Reef lightship some time ago. Ensign Gillan detected gas when the vessel was down fifty feet. She was brought to the surface without expelling her tanks. The E-2 was the only submarine in the world equipped with the new Edison nickel batteries which the inventor developed especially for the navy department.

Four Times as Much Light in Your Home

64 CANDLE POWER 224 WATTS

Almost 4 to 1

ONE HYGRADE TUNGSTEN LAMP GIVES ALMOST AS MUCH LIGHT AS FOUR OF THE OLD-FASHIONED CARBON LAMPS FOR THE SAME COST OF ELECTRIC CURRENT. WHY NOT USE HYGRADE LAMPS AND SAVE 63-4 CENTS AN HOUR.

Here's the Explanation

The cut at the left shows a 60-watt Hygrade Tungsten lamp, which gives a light equivalent to 60-candle power. Burned steadily for five hours it will consume 300 watts. At a price for current of 7c per 1000 watts, the cost of electric current for the five hours will be about 21-8 cents.

The cut at the right shows four 16-candle power carbon lamps, which combined give 64-candle power, practically the same as the 60-watt Hygrade Tungsten lamp. Each lamp, however, consumes 56 watts, so the total wattage of the four lamps is 224. Burned steadily for five hours these four carbon lamps would consume 1120 watts. At the same price for current 7 cents per 1000 watts, the cost for electric current for the five hours would be about 87-8 cent.
