COLONEL VALLEZ IS EXECUTED WHILE HE DENIES HIS GUILT

TWO BULLETS FIRED AT CLOSE QUARTERS SNUFF OUT THE LIFE OF BANDIT CHIEF.

CISNEROS WILL FOLLOW HIM IT IS SAID

Oregon Attacks The Zapata Forces According to a Telegram Sent to Galveston.

(By Associated Press.)

El Paso, Jan. 18.—Col. Miguel Baca Valle, bandit chieftain captured at Palomas, south of Columbus, New Mexico, was executed this morning by a firing squad at Juarez. Two bullets fired at close quarters penetrated his heart after he had declared he was not responsible for the actions and robberies of Gen. Villa and pleaded to see Gen. Gabrera, the Carranza commandant.

La. Col. Enrique Cisneros who was captured last week with Baca Valle, is being marched overland with eight followers caught with him, and according to Mexican officials will also be placed promptly before a firing squad.

Americans to Identify Corpse

Baca Valle arrived here on the same train which brought the body declared to be that of Rodriguez, bandit chief. The bodies were later taken to the American Customs house here to be viewed by Americans who have expressed doubts as to the identity of Rodriguez. Valles, known as the most calloused executioner, of the Villa regime was taken from the box car in which he arrived last night and marched through the dimly lighted station where many Mexicans sleep.

Executions in Juarez have become so frequent in the final days of the Villa regime that they attract but passing attention and the proceedings are usually very brief.

Vallez Disclaims Responsibility

"I am not responsible for the acts and robberies of Villa," Vallez said to his executioners. "I beg to see your general," he added. "We have orders to kill," responded the officer in charge of the squad. Two of the guard then stepped up to Vallez and fired point blank into his heart. The body was taken to the station platform and thrown there where it lay uncovered until dawn, among men, women and children sleeping with blankets wound round their bodies.

The interest aroused by the contest in choosing the twenty-fifth book for boys was so great that another list for girls was compiled by Miss Pearl Field, who has charge of the children's books at the Chicago Public Library, and a contest is now on to decide the twenty-fifth book for girls.

COAL WAGE FIGHT MAY BE RESULT OF TODAY'S MEETING

WAGE SCALE COMMITTEE OF UNITED MINE WORKERS ARE BUSY WHILE CONVENTION IS ON

ALL CONTRACTS EXPIRE IN SHORT TIME

It is Expected That an Increase of From Ten to Twenty Per Cent Will be Asked by Workers

Indianapolis, Jan. 18.—Today 1,600 delegates were here for the United Mine Workers of America biennial convention. The wage scale committee is meeting. All wage scale contracts for both anthracite and bituminous fields soon will expire. President John P. White for the first time refused to give out his biennial report in advance, saying it was of such importance he wouldn't take chances. His report is to be presented today or tomorrow.

The miners expect to demand an increase in wages of 10 to 20 per cent in every organized field. There have been rumors that general coal strikes are coming. Railroads are reported to have been hoarding coal in preparation for such strikes. Officials of the mine workers today said that they could foresee no definite trouble if the operators proved reasonable.

The nature of the organization's internal trouble is a secret, but is believed to be associated with President White himself. Better working conditions will be demanded by the miners, including a request for the general acceptance of the mine run system, in effect in Illinois and Ohio. International officials have been trying to arrange with the operators for the re-establishment of the interstate joint conference of wage scale negotiations and take the demands before a joint conference of miners and operators of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois and western Pennsylvania, an agreement whereof will be a basis of negotiations in other states. The interstate conference was discontinued after Ohio operators refused to accept the mine run proposition, which later was provided for in that state by law. This is one of the largest labor conventions in America.

"ROBIN HOOD" AT DELFT
Fascinating Story is Theme of Country's Funniest Light Opera

The famous story of "Robin Hood," immortalized by Sir Walter Scott is one that never grows old. The most popular hero of English history became an outlay after a right scurry trick played upon him by the sheriff of Nottingham. Retiring to Sherwood Forest with his trusty followers, he lived a romantic life beneath the greenwood trees. The rich only were fair prey for this picturesque outlay, whose popularity with the common people was greatly increased by his generosity to the poor. Many were the pranks played by these merry bandits upon their victims and upon each other. It was, forsooth, a free and careless life, spiced with adventure.

The element of love was not lacking, either, for the story of "Robin Hood" and Maid Marian lends a tender touch to this stirring tale of romance.

Such is the fascinating story which Reginald de Koven and Harry B. Smith made into the best and most popular comic opera ever produced in this country. The charming melodies of Mr. de Koven's music and the clean comedy of Mr. Smith's dialogue are worthy of the celebrated romance and "Robin Hood" has taken its place as the masterpiece of American light opera. This production with fifty people in the cast and ensemble, will be presented at the Delft on Jan. 30. The special orchestra carried by the company is a feature of the production.

A company of the highest vocal ability is presenting "Robin Hood" this season. First among the notable cast is Ivy Scott, of Madame Butterfly fame. Miss Scott possesses a wonderful lyric soprano voice of dramatic quality, and it is safe to say the part of Maid Marian has never before been sung as artistically. Her success in the role last season was instantaneous fame. Miss Scott possesses a won-

Fascinating Story is Theme of Country's Funniest Light Opera

The famous story of "Robin Hood," immortalized by Sir Walter Scott is one that never grows old. The most popular hero of English history became an outlay after a right scurry trick played upon him by the sheriff of Nottingham. Retiring to Sherwood Forest with his trusty followers, he lived a romantic life beneath the greenwood trees. The rich only were fair prey for this picturesque outlay, whose popularity with the common people was greatly increased by his generosity to the poor. Many were the pranks played by these merry bandits upon their victims and upon each other. It was, forsooth, a free and careless life, spiced with adventure.

The element of love was not lacking, either, for the story of "Robin Hood" and Maid Marian lends a tender touch to this stirring tale of romance.

Such is the fascinating story which Reginald de Koven and Harry B. Smith made into the best and most popular comic opera ever produced in this country. The charming melodies of Mr. de Koven's music and the clean comedy of Mr. Smith's dialogue are worthy of the celebrated romance and "Robin Hood" has taken its place as the masterpiece of American light opera. This production with fifty people in the cast and ensemble, will be presented at the Delft on Jan. 30. The special orchestra carried by the company is a feature of the production.

A company of the highest vocal ability is presenting "Robin Hood" this season. First among the notable cast is Ivy Scott, of Madame Butterfly fame. Miss Scott possesses a won-

Chicago, Jan. 18.—Efforts to show that Irving Updyke charged with a plot to kill his father, Herman Updyke, his mother and sister is not sane, will be made by Police Chief Lee of Oak Park. Herbert Updyke, who helped the police trap his brother is at liberty to leave the Oak Park station at any time. "At his hearing we will try and prove Irving insane. CHAPTER V. A Wife Aroused.

HERE was contempt, express and implied, in the manner in which he turned toward the door. But the only reply which he vouchsafed to her was "Good night!" delivered with more than the usual emphasis.

Now she held him by the vigor of her tone. She would not dismiss the topic thus. Perhaps there had been something in "the other woman's" voice as she had demanded speech with Trask which had aroused the tigress which is latent in every woman scorned, even the meekest. Perhaps it was the contemptuous, scornful manner of Trask himself which roused her. It was not simple jealousy. The time for that had passed years before. Perhaps it was the feeling that now she must listen on her conjugal rights, so long flouted.

To his "good night" she replied: "No! I want to know who she is." Trask's irritation now broke out openly. His speech was rude as he answered:

"What's the good of rugging me like this? I tell you I don't know who she is. I suppose it is some business matter."

"Nobody would call you up at this time of night on business. You know very well it's not business."

"Well, what's your theory?" And Joan Trask, seeing that it was hopeless to pursue the former line of questioning, flared out at him with:

"Aren't you ever going to change?" "Am I never going to have a minute's peace? You're as jealous as a schoolgirl. You're forever raising a racket about something. If I look at a woman or a woman talks to me you're ready to fly at her throat."

Again the wronged wife spoke. "Don't you think you give me cause, the way you conduct yourself? You seem to forget that you have a wife."

It was the obvious retort, the cheap wit that replies, but does not answer, which prompted him to say: "You never give me a chance to forget it. Every time we're alone it's the same thing."

"Then why don't you treat me as your wife?" His tone was querulous and rising as he said:

"I don't see what you're complaining about. I don't beat you, do I? You get everything you want. You go where you please and when you please. I allow you more money than you can possibly spend, and your time is all your own. Do you think there are many women who can say the same?"

It was the old, old argument addressed to the woman who is "bought with a price." Almost since the time of Adam men have believed that they could buy women with maintenance, with dress, with jewels, with social position. Always the real woman, the soul that is beyond all price, that can be kept only by affection, genuine love, has eluded them. The husk may be bought; the grain is given free. The woman's soul of Joan Trask, more priceless than any of her diamonds or pearls or rubies, was not to be purchased by the things of which her husband spoke. It had been given to him freely in the beginning. He had dragged it through the mire of his indifference and unfaithfulness, and she had taken it back and cleaned it and nursed it in secret. It might yet be his, but he must earn it anew.

It was her soul which spoke in the words: "Do you think that's all I care about? Don't you suppose marriage means anything to me but spending money and amusing myself? What good is it if I haven't the companionship of my husband?"

The words struck a chord of coarseness in him. "Companionship of my husband?" It was not in that vein that the women spoke with whom he consorted. He sent himself again. For a moment he stared at her in amazement, then he recovered himself and said blasphemously:

"My God, are you going to get sentimental?" "I've never known what it meant to be really married," said Joan Trask sadly. "For six years I hid myself away because I didn't happen to suit your family."

"Well, you didn't lose by it," said the man to whom money was all or nearly all. "If my father had cut me off you wouldn't be living in luxury today."

"All your money hasn't brought me happiness. No other woman would have borne what I have for fifteen years. If you had a spark of sympathy, in you'd lead a decent life—if not for my sake, then for your children's."

His manner changed from the ironical and contemptuous to the sarcastic. The mention of children, which brings the light of joy and hope to the eyes of the true father and the gladness of life to his heart, wrought no miracle in the soul of this man, so hardened to all true feeling. With a sneer he replied to his wife, the mother of his children:

"Oh, now we're around to the children again!" "You never consider them. They'll soon be old enough to understand."

It was in an aggrieved tone that he responded, as though he had been accused unjustly:

"They've got everything they want so. They're getting a good education."

"What's the use of kicking up a row?"

"Great Neck," however, he stiffened in his chair, his hands gripped its edge tightly and his face took on an aspect of ugly hardness as he checked her with:

"Now, see here!" In her voice there was an added note of sorrow as she went on:

"Oh, I haven't forgotten it, although it is thirteen years ago. That little Miss Deane, that innocent child—and to think that I have lived with you after that!"

At the beginning of the interchange of words, when Glover left the room, she had been seated. As her feelings mounted she had risen and had moved uneasily about the chamber, as though the spirit that possessed her would not let her rest. But now, with the mention of the "Miss Deane," whose name seemed to stir her so deeply, she seated herself in an armchair and sat there rigid, with clinched hands. She did not look at Trask.

Whoever Miss Deane had been or was and no matter what emotion the memory of her awakened and stirred in the breast of Joan Trask it did not seem to affect Gerald Trask, save that he now seemed possessed of a wish to have the painful scene over with. Perhaps it was with a desire to reach the end that he now said, "Never mind digging up the past."

"I will dig up the past!" said Mrs. Trask. "I'll tell the whole story to the world and let it see what manner of man you are and have been."

Was it fear that now possessed the heart of Gerald Trask. Insensible to other, higher motives? After all, despite his cynical disregard of his wife's marital rights, she had aided him in maintaining the place in the social world to which he had been born. If, goaded beyond endurance, she laid bare to the world the tale of his infidelities—and worse—she could do irreparable damage to his reputation. Had he any friendships which could stand the strain? Could a man such as he have any real friends? In an instant, with the incalculable rapidity of thought, his mind ran over the list of acquaintances. At the end of the list came Strickland, Strickland!

His thoughts swung back to Joan sitting, scornful and indignant, before him. It was plain to the man of the world that now he had "gone the limit." But little more was needed to force his wife over the precipice to which their steps had been converging for years. He knew her well enough to realize that, her resolution to divorce him once taken, she would not turn back from the bitter road, whatsoever it led. Not even the thought of the children, so much dearer to her than to him, would deter her, he knew. Plainly he saw that the conjugal affairs of the Trasks had reached a crisis and he must avert it. His words were conciliatory.

"Look here, Joan, what's the use of kicking up a row? That divorce idea is all nonsense. There's no reason why we can't go on together."

"No, I'm through with you," she said. "I've forgiven you a dozen times, and it's been the same thing over again."

There was no sign of weakening in her tone. He knew now that he could not afford to argue with her further. It must be as a suppliant he must approach her. The woman who had yielded to his will all these years, had condoned his offenses "for the sake of the children" and for the sake of appearances before the world, revealed herself at last as willing to be the mistress of her own fate. More strongly than before the desirability—nay, the necessity—of conciliating her impressed itself upon him. He pleaded with her, rising from his chair, going over to her and bowing over her.

"Make this the last time," he begged. "What do you want me to do?" (To Be Continued.)

"For Six Years I Hid Myself Away"

and a liberal allowance. That's all they have a right to expect of me." Oh, shortsighted father!

"You're sending them out into the world with a stigma!" "Oh, stigma be hanged! I lead a pretty straight life. You don't expect me to sit by the fireside twirling my thumbs, do you? I've got time for that thirty years from now."

It was with a sinking heart that Joan Trask recognized the futility of her arguments and her appeals to her husband. When reasoning fails fear and self interest will prevail sometimes. She decided to adopt a different course with her sneering, cynical husband. Wifely devotion had failed, appeal to parental love had been in vain. She would try compulsion.

Her voice lost its appealing quality and took on the tone of indignant womanhood, conscious of its rights, as she said:

"I won't stand it any longer—I'll get a divorce!" The threat failed of its effect.

"Well, go ahead; I won't attempt to prevent you," said Trask. "No, you'll be glad, I suppose."

"I won't be sorry, you can wager on that."

Again the tone stung her. But this time in her reply there was something which had been absent theretofore—contempt for the man whose name she bore.

"And I've been living with you all these years!" she flung at him. But again her words and tone failed to hit their mark. If indeed they were intended to rouse him.

"Well, why have you?" he asked. "You know why—to keep up appearances on account of the children—to give them a good name."

"And because I took pretty good care of you." There was insult in the words and a sneer, and her indignation,

Made from Long Leave

No Short, Broken Leaves in

NIGGER HAIR Is Real Long Cut, Men!

Made only from ripe, selected long leaves.

You know this is true—because you find only long, silky shreds of tobacco in NIGGER HAIR.

You do not find loose, hard stems or short cuts in NIGGER HAIR—no short leaves, broken leaf or hard stems are used in making NIGGER HAIR.

That's why NIGGER HAIR is always slow-burning and cool-smoking in a pipe—and gives year-round enjoyment to many thousands of steady, satisfied smokers.

NIGGER HAIR Long Cut Tobacco

Ageing mild Burley tobacco up to five years puts richness, sweetness and mellowness into NIGGER HAIR that you don't get in any other tobacco.

Our grandfathers christened the brand, NIGGER HAIR, because of the long, curly strands in which it is cut. Try NIGGER HAIR and discover what a slow-burning, cool-smoking tobacco it is. Sold everywhere in 5c packages.

PROHIBITION FIGHT IN NEBRASKA IS ON AN ECONOMIC BASIS

FIRST GUNS ARE BOOMING IN STRIFE BETWEEN THE WETS AND DRYS IN BRYAN'S HOME STATE

MORAL ISSUE IS NOT SURPASSED THERE

There Are Now a Total of 890 Saloons Throughout The State—28 Dry Counties Now

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 18.—First guns are booming in the wet and dry fight in this W. J. Bryan's home state. Bombardment of the public with the heavy artillery of both factions will culminate in a victorious vote for the wets or the drys at the November 7th voting throughout Nebraska.

The moral issue is not stressed in this prohibition campaign. The wets are seeking in various ways to show the people, particularly the farmers, wherein dry territory is going to hurt business and bring farm and other products' prices down.

The drys are seeking to show the people where the liquor business makes for false prosperity and really accomplishes more physical and financial harm than good. The dry fight is in charge of a democrat-Republican progressive, non-partisan federation which expects to put a state and local tickets in the field this fall.

According to the anti-saloon league, Nebraska now has 28 dry counties with 153,553 population; 351 dry and 219 wet towns, 54 dry and 38 wet county seat towns and a total of 890 saloons in the state. Forty thousand Nebraskans must ask that the prohibition question be submitted to a vote before it will be placed on the ballot. These petitions are being prepared by the drys now.

J. E. Olsen and William Burgeny leave today for Marinette where they will attend the funeral of William Johnson formerly of this city.

the hospital when the mission was abandoned, but Dr. Ryan did not care to remain under the altered conditions.

At the beginning of the bombardment preceding the taking of the city, a number of shells fell near the hospital. Dr. Ryan immediately sent a strongly worded protest against this, pointing out that the buildings occupied by his mission occupied a prominent location plainly visible from the artillery positions. After that no shells fell near enough to be uncomfortable.

Dr. Ryan's most exciting experience came in Budapest, where he stopped for a day on the way to Vienna. He was dining in a hotel when some Hungarian officials entered the room, asked if he was Dr. Ryan and being assured of his identity, informed him that he was under arrest. He asked for explanations.

"Your trunk has exploded, injuring a number of people at the railway station," was the answer.

The doctor went under escort to the station. There he learned that when his trunk was unloaded from the baggage-car and dropped on the platform, there was a heavy explosion which had injured three men, one of them having a leg so badly lacerated that he had to be removed to a hospital. The station was filled at the time and a panic ensued, in which several persons were thrown down in the mad rush to get out of the building. Fragments of the trunk and its contents were scattered all about the platform and other pieces of baggage and a trunk had been more or less damaged.

Dr. Ryan was informed that a fine of thirty thousand crowns had been imposed on him, and that he must also satisfy the personal damage claims of the three baggage men injured. There began a series of negotiations which lasted three days, during which Ryan found himself alternately in the hands of the civil and military power. The fine was gradually reduced to less than two hundred crowns, and the damage claims took the same course. Finally the fine was completely cancelled, and settlement was affected with the three victims of the explosion for about three hundred crowns.

Dr. Ryan had a small Hotchkiss shell in his rooms at Belgrade and he concludes that the person who packed his trunk included the shell. His personal loss is considerable. The trunk, which was a large one, contained his instruments, a winter outfit, and some valuable gifts from grateful Serbian friends, including two fine old rugs.

It is probable that the members of the mission will shortly return to America.

OLD BURMAN CHIEF

ancient Burman chief of a village 50 miles away squatted on his heels and ready to talk. After the customary diplomatic greetings the chief stated his mission as follows:

"My villagers wish to make some return for the favors bestowed upon us by the British government. The government has lessened the taxes, killed the leopards, given us good water and a policeman. Now I have come to tell you that we have eight guns, ancient and true; four pounds of excellent gunpowder in a bottle, and a bag of bullets; these being no more or less than the honorable British government has permitted us to hold.

"Master, we have heard a rumor that the British government is in great trouble with its enemies. Wherefore our villagers have empowered me to say that the eight guns, powder and bullets are at the disposal of the British government."

As to "army" the chief offered two of the best village trackers to handle the "artillery and munitions." He went away satisfied that the honorable British Government should hear of the generous offer and he should know all in due time.

The War Office is understood already to have replied that if the situation becomes worse it may accept the generous offer.

TODAY'S ODDEST STORY

Dayton, O., Jan. 18.—Take a drink of good whiskey every day. Smoke cigars after each meal. Eat heartily three times a day. Sleep enough and don't worry. Be regular and temperate in all things. William H. Thompson, 91, naval veteran of the Dayton Soldiers' Home, follows these rules and says they are responsible for his health and longevity.

MACHINERY FOR SALE

The shingle mill at Perkins, Mich., is in my hands for sale, including the mill building, boiler, engine and all machinery. It was built some years ago and operated for five or six seasons and considerable of the equipment was new when put in. This includes the boiler which is 6x16 foot and new at that time. There are a number of saws, five of which have been used but little. The main building is 24x36 two stories high, the lower story being heavy frame and the lower being balloon, there is also a large annex for boiler room, the whole being inclosed with 10 inch bevel, drop siding and painted. Very little expense would fit it up for a saw mill, lath or a box board mill. For full particulars, price and terms see or write C. E. Fenton, Escanaba, Mich. 13-1f

- The Escanaba Public Library would like to find out whether these books are the favorites of Escanaba young people or whether they have a choice of their own which differs from these. To secure this information, a vote for the ten best books will be taken at the Library with the polls closing March first. Anyone, young people or grownups, who is interested in books for young people is entitled to vote. Blanks for voting may also be secured at the Library. You may vote for either ballot, the one for boys or the one for girls. Get into the contest and help find out what are the best books for our young people. The final list as decided by the popular vote of Escanaba people will be printed in this paper early in March.

The books on the Chicago lists are now on display at the Public Library. It will be noticed that some of the books are on both lists, due to their popularity with both girls and boys.
