PETROGRAD CLAIMS RUSS SUCCESSES

It is Declared by Russians That The Turks Near Erzerum Have Been Given Defeat

(By Associated Press)

The Balkans continue to be in the center of the real war news, both Montenegro and Greece being points of notable interest. The situation in each, however, is somewhat clouded by paucity of news that can be considered as direct and decided conflict in such advices as are received.

Further reports regarding the resumption of hostilities between Montenegro and Austria following the rejection of peace terms by the former are lacking and there is small disposition in Teutonic quarters even to admit that there has been any break in negotiations.

A Berlin despatch, however, quotes a Cologne newspaper as conceding that obstacles had arisen during the negotiations.

Russian Successes Claimed

It has been given out in Petrograd that further successes in the Caucasus have resulted in driving out the Turks in the vicinity of Erzerum and that they are in hasty retreat to the Erzerum forts.

Separate Peace Plans

There is some discussing now in Germany for separate peace between Germany and Belgium and a London

Dr Murdock F. Mc Rae is the Discoverer of Cough Cure

FORMER WELL KNOWN ESCANABA MAN NOW OF MILWAUKEE TREATS WHOOPING COUGH BY NEW METHOD AND RESULTS ARE SAID TO BE WONDERFUL—OTHERS GET RESULTS.

Remarkable results in the treatment of whooping cough with Emmetine hydrochloride were reported by Dr. Robert C. Brown at the meeting of the Milwaukee Pediatric society, held Monday night in the Goldsmith building. Emmetine was first used to cure whooping cough patients by Dr. Murdock F. McRae, Milwaukee.

Relieves at Once.

A case was reported where a child less than 3 years old was cured by four injections of Emmetine, given on four consecutive days. In another family a remarkable cure of three children was made by Dr. McRae. Another child of 3 was cured in three days, although it had been whooping and vomiting when Dr. MacRae was called.

Whooping cough was described as a contagious disease characterized by Play at Majestic Theatre Not Interrupted by Fire in Upper Floors.

(By Associated Press)

Chicago, Jan. 22.—About $7000 damage was done to the offices on one of the upper floors of the Majestic building, last night. One of the scrub women discovered the blaze and notified the fire department, who were taken up to the floor in an elevator. The theatre, on the lower floor was crowded at the time but the audience did not know that the fire was burning many stories above them.

despatch quotes a Frankfort newspaper as suggesting that Belgium ought not to wait too long before taking up the subject, as Belgium, which until now had been considered as an object of exchange by the German chancellor, would come to be considered a good prize.

Difficulty in Montenegro.

Berlin, Jan. 22.—(Wireless to Salville) The Austro-Hungarian Official press bureau, says the Overseas News Agency, announces that the laying down of arms as agreed upon by the Montenegrin government is meeting with difficulties and that the disarming of those people will be delayed, due principally to the long distance over which the soldiers have to travel and the bad communications. The press bureau also declares that the delay is due to the national peculiarities of the Montenegrin people, who ignoring the general situation, do not yet know whether they are expected by their government to continue war on their own account.

"The Austro-Hungarian government," the press bureau further states, "appreciates this fact and has granted time to the Montenegrin government so that it may get into communication with the reluctant part of the population in order to appease it and bring about some sort of systematic submission."

a spasmodic cough ending in a long sonorous inspiration usually called the whoop. The disease is caused by a minute organism found in the respiratory tract. It is especially fatal to young children because the attack usually continues until the child is greatly weakened.

Serum Fails to Cure.

After the separation of the minute organism by scientists, a serum was made for the treatment of whooping cough. Although it has been used for several years, its success has been indifferent, physicians report.

Emmetine hydrochloride was described as a salt of ipecac, first used in Africa and India. It was found to kill the amoeba of dysentery, and was applied with similar results in cases of pyorrhea alveolaris, a disease of the gums, also caused by a germ.

DULUTH MAY HAVE A SHIP BUILDING PLANT

Alexander McDougall is Backing a Company to Build at Least One Boat This Year.

Duluth, Minn., Jan. 22.—Captain Alexander McDougall, Duluth capitalist, known on the lakes as inventor of the whaleback, is backing a company which will erect a small shipyard in Duluth in the near future and build at least one vessel this year.

Articles of incorporation were filed here today by the McDougall Duluth company, capitalized at $200,000, and the Duluth Vessel company, with capital stock of $50,000. One is an operating concern and the other holding. Captain McDougall, A. M. McDougall, his son, and C. C. Thompson are incorporators.

Captain McDougall declines to discuss his plans, but it is reported unofficially that Welland canal size vessels would be constructed to be used between Duluth and eastern Canadian points. The establishment of this line assures the resumption of Montreal-Duluth trade connections, vessel men believe.

The Escanaba high school basketball team went down to defeat last night at Ishpeming. The final score was 33 to 24, in one of the fastest games ever staged.

Superior team work at critical periods in the game was responsible for Ishpeming's victory. Through the first half the two teams battled neck and neck at a terrific pace, the half closing with the score, Ishpeming 20, Escanaba 19. In the second half Ishpeming forged into the lead and held it to the close in the face of a brilliant uphill battle played by the wearers of the orange and black.

The line-up of the two teams was as follows:

ENORMOUS DEMAND FOR COPPER HAS BOOSTED THE PRICE

TWENTY-SEVEN CENTS HAS BEEN QUOTED FOR FEBRUARY DELIVERY—MAY GO STILL HIGHER

THIRTY CENTS A POUND LOOKED FOR

Market Price Now is The Highest Ever Recorded—Was Over Twenty-Five in 1907

(By Associated Press)

New York, Jan. 22.—An unprecedented demand for copper metal from foreign and domestic sources resulted in an advance in the quotation from 24.24 to 25.14 cents for delivery in the second quarter of the year. A price of twenty-seven cents a pound was reported to have been quoted for March delivery and rumors were current that thirty cents was bid for delivery in February, which, however, could not be confirmed.

Not since March, 1907, when the metal stood at 25.12 cents a pound for a short period, has copper been so high.

French and Russian interests have placed enormous orders in this market, running into the first six months of the year. Domestic manufacturers, especially those engaged in the making of arms and munitions in which copper formed a component part, are also clamoring for the metal and rivaling the foreigners in their bids. The market has been bare of available supply for almost three months. All the leading producers are booked to the extent of their output well into the last half of the year, and it is freely predicted that the demand will increase rather than diminish.

Several of the agents of companies producing the finer grade of copper have virtually withdrawn from the market and are not quoting prices at all.

It is almost a year ago since the copper market started on its upward movement and requirements now have reached the stage where the price now is controlled by the buyer rather than the seller.

The inquiry for copper is almost world-wide, including Japan and other countries in the Orient. Exports of the copper for the week ending Jan. 20 amounted to 4,540 tons, and for the first three weeks of the month were 15,591 tons. The figures are vast in excess of all previous records.

According to a recognized trade authority, the copper market has cut loose from normal conditions. Domestic manufacturing activities have contributed largely to the increasing demand.

It has been reported at various times within the past three months that the German government and private interests in Germany have been among the heaviest buyers of copper in this country. Despite the blockade by the entente allies, it is believed that a very large amount of metal has been exported from this country into the Teutonic countries. It also is believed that much of the copper purchased for account of German interests has been stored in warehouses.

STATE OFFICIALS ARE NOT WORRIED; SUPERIOR

State of Superior Talk is Not Causing Officials to Lose Any Sleep Over Report

State officials do not appear to be particularly worried over reports from the northern section that the upper self into a separate state, says a Lansing despatch. Every few years some one in the country beyond the Straits comes forward with this suggestion, but inasmuch as the proposition would have to be submitted to a general vote of the state, it is not believed that the plan will ever materialize.

Section three of article four of the United States constitution makes the following provision: "New states may be admitted by the congress into this union; but no new state shall be formed or erected within the jurisdiction of any other state; nor shall a state be formed by the junction of two or more states, without the consent of the legislatures of the states concerned as well as of congress."

It is difficult for state officials to conceive that a state legislature would ever submit an amendment to the constitution providing for the creation of the upper peninsula into a new state to be known as Superior.

On a par with the suggestion to carve the upper peninsula into a new state is the treating arising occasionally in Wayne county to move the capital building from Lansing to Detroit, where it was located when Michigan was admitted to the union.

There is a constitutional barrier that makes this scheme impractical as section two of article one of the state constitution says the seat of government shall remain at Lansing, where it is now located.

AVALANCHE WRECKS GT. NORTHERN TRAIN

Cascade Limited From Seattle to Spokane Runs Into Avalanche—Fourteen Killed.

(By Associated Press)

Seattle, Wash., Jan. 22.—The Cascade Limited, crack Great Northern train between here and Spokane was wrecked today when out 100 miles by an avalanche.

The dining car and one day coach rolled down the mountain a distance of 300 feet. The dining car immediately caught on fire, but it is not thought that any passengers were in it at the time of the accident. Rescue work was difficult in the day coach owing to the debris and great quantities of snow.

The first person to be taken out was a little boy, who was alive but badly injured. It is not known how many have been killed though the last report says fourteen dead have been taken from the wreck. Everyone in both cars are either dead or have been seriously injured. The engine and other cars left the track but did not go over the embankment.

Des Moines Plan of City Government Called Failure

MEMBERS OF COUNCIL SAYS THAT THE CITY MANAGER PLAN SHOULD BE USED—IOWA CITY HAS RUN INTO DEBT OVER A MILLION SINCE THE PLAN WAS PUT INTO EFFECT.

Des Moines, Ia., Jan. 22.—The so-called Des Moines plan of city government, one of the first forms of Commission government, which attracted much favorable attention the country over when it was adopted seven years ago, is branded a failure by Councilman W. P. Mitchell and a considerable percentage of the citizens. Mitchell was put into office to see if he couldn't reorganize affairs and make the plan successful. His resignation is tendered today, effective this spring. Mitchell says the City Manager plan should be adopted by Des Moines. The bonded and floating indebtedness of Des Moines has increased nearly $1,000,000 since the plan was put in force seven years ago. The plan was heralded as one that would eliminate partisan politics from all municipal elections, place the responsibility for the success or failure of the city government upon the heads of the individual commissioners and generally made for economy and efficiency. Mitchell says politics has not been eliminated and that financially the plan has accomplished no good. Mitchell favors electing councilmen by districts rather than at large, paying them for one meeting a week. He believes all municipal executive control should be vested in the City Manager, together with power to enforce all laws and ordinances and to control all city work. Mitchell believes this would kill the political phase he believes has made the old Des Moines plan useless.

TIME TO BE COMPUTED FROM TIME OF STARTING SERVICE UNTIL RELIEVED OF RESPONSIBILITY

ONE HUNDRED MILES CALLED A DAY

Many Other Demands Are Made But it May be Some Time Before They Are Granted

New York, Jan. 22.—The four great railway labor organizations, engineers firemen, trainmen and conductors, are demanding an eight-hour day at the same wages now being paid for ten hours. Here are their principal demands:

(a) In all road service 100 miles or less, eight hours or less will constitute a day, except in passenger service. Miles in excess of 100 will be paid for at the same rate per mile. (b) On runs of 100 miles or less overtime will begin at the expiration of eight hours. (c) On runs of over 100 miles overtime will begin when the time on duty exceeds the miles run, divided by 12.12 miles per hour. (d) All overtime to be computed on the minute basis and paid for at time and one-half times the pro rata. (e) No one shall receive less for eight hours or 100 miles than they now receive for a minimum day or 100 miles for the class of engine used or for service performed. (f) Time will be computed continuously from time required for duty until released from duty and responsibility at end of day or run.

EASY TO DYE AT HOME

NO NEED TO SEND MATERIALS TO PROFESSIONALS.

Housewife May Save Much Expense and Achieve Equally Good Results by Doing the Work Herself—Some Useful Hints.

In almost every household in the spring and fall there are articles for household and personal use that must be sent to the dyers. These can be done equally well at home.

Now that one dye can be bought which will answer alike for silk, cotton and woolen fabrics, success is well-nigh assured if the directions on the packet are strictly followed. These are usually explicit, and experienced dyers need no other; but the amateur is apt to strike snags despite directions. She may not think it necessary to clean the article to be dyed, but oil or grease of any kind kills dye, so that any garment known to be greasy at all should be soaked in a warm solution of ammonia and water for half an hour, then thoroughly rinsed in hot water before going into the dye pot. Cotton goods should be washed in hot soapsuds and given a thorough rinsing. To leave soap in will interfere with the dye.

When dyeing cotton or mixed goods they should be allowed to become cold in the dye bath. Dyes set very slowly in these fabrics, so the cooling process is necessary to success. Woolens, on the contrary, absorb the dye quicker, and may be rinsed while hot. Closely woven woolen goods should be boiled a little longer than those loosely woven.

Woolen goods of any weave should never be allowed to boil fast. A gentle simmering will bring the best results.

ALWAYS SAFETY FIRST

FATALITIES ON RAILROADS APPRECIABLY REDUCED.

Managements of the Lines Have the Efficient Co-operation of Employees in the Work of Preventing Accidents.

Fatalities among passengers on the railroads of the United States, considering the millions carried, have fallen to so low a percentage that the periodical statistical reports from both state and corporation authorities, invariably attract general attention. If persons would stay off railroad rights of way and observe care when approaching grade crossings, and if the companies would protect their lines with fences, and crossings with bridges, the casualties among those who are not passengers would also be reduced annually by many thousands.

The efficiency of American railroad service has always been admitted in Europe, but there was a time when this was offset there to some extent by satirical reference to the number of accidents in this country involving heavy loss of life. There is no more of this. Railroad travel with us is as safe as any other form of travel and safer than some.

"Safety first" as a principle of operation has become so deeply ingrained into railroad methods, from president down to trainmen and track walkers, that all other considerations are held subordinate to it in the protection of passengers. A recent report by one of the great eastern lines stated that, in the preceding year, not a single passenger had been killed, and that there had been a marked curtailment in accidents of all kinds.

Now, also, the report of the Union Pacific company for the year that closed June 30 last shows that while it carried nearly nine million passengers, not one was killed on any train, nor in getting on or off the cars. Efficiency like this is due to the training and careful watchfulness of employees, a quality distinctly noticeable these days everywhere by all who travel. The management deserves full credit for requiring such service on the part of operatives, but the latter are equally to be commended for performance. If they were not careful, and anxious to build up and maintain the records of their companies in this regard, the policy of "safety first" would lose much of its effectiveness. It is a striking testimonial to the loyalty and intelligence of the railroad workers of America.

Most Northerly Railroad.

The most northerly railroad in the world has its terminus at Narvik, on the northwest coast of Norway, latitude about 68 1/2 degrees, 130 miles north of the arctic circle. This railroad runs east, across the narrow part of Norway, and then southeast through Kjeronavare and Gellivare, which are the principal iron ore centers of Sweden; thence it proceeds southeast to Lulea, an important port of the Gulf of Bothnia, and connects at Boden with the railroad to Stockholm. Some iron ore is shipped southeast to Lulea and thence, by sailboats and steamers to German ports on the Baltic; but the inland port of Lulea, though in latitude 65 1/2 degrees, is much more obstructed by ice than the more northerly port of Narvik, in Norway, which is called an "ice-free port." Hence, most of this iron ore moves through Narvik, whence it is shipped to both German and Baltic ports.

War Increases Rail Wrecks.

The London board of trade figures for a year, not including the most recent railroad disaster, in which nearly three hundred persons lost their lives, show that on the 23,700 miles of railroad in the United Kingdom during the year covered by the report 125 passengers were killed, while 2,440 were injured. Of railroad employees 425 were killed in this period and 5,065 injured. This is a vastly worse showing than ever before, a fact due, perhaps, to the change in employees and schedules because of the war.

DECIDE ON ELECTRIC ENGINES

Managers of Western Railroad Complete Preparations for Installation of New Machinery.

Several of the biggest electric locomotives in the world are being delivered to the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul. They form the advance guard of fifty huge electric engines to be used by the road in operating 440 miles of its transcontinental line between Harlowton, Mont., 4,163 feet above sea level, and Avery, Ida., elevation 2,494 feet. They will also climb the Rocky mountain summit, 6,399 feet, and the Belt mountain summit, 5,700 feet.

These new electric engines represent something unique in the transportation world. The monsters are 112 feet 8 inches long. There is nothing about them to suggest the steam locomotive which they will ultimately displace in both freight and passenger service if the faith of the designers is sustained. They, taking a first glance, are more like big mail cars than anything else. The cab extends for nearly the full length of the locomotive. Two men constitute the crew, though only one is required to operate the mechanism. The other is there for emergency and to learn his trade.

The locomotives are geared for passenger service to haul trains of 800 tons at 60 miles an hour. The stretch of road to be used by the new engines, covering three mountain ranges, where there are long-distance grades of from 1 1/2 to 2 per cent, will be doubled in capacity by their use, according to the engineers. The railroad company expects to achieve the same result as though it had double tracked its line over the mountain divisions. It is believed that the road will get back the cost of electrification, about $15,000,000, in five years, or at the rate of 20 per cent per annum.

How Conrad Came to Write. "Joseph Conrad told me," writes Louise Collier Wilcox in the North American Review, "an interesting tale of commanding a sailing ship between Adelaide and the Cape. On the ship were two young college men who perpetually talked of books and authorship. Finally Conrad, who listened intently, confessed that he had with him the manuscript of a story he was trying to write. The younger men were interested and finally held in their hands one-half of the manuscript of 'Almayer's Folly.' Such was the encouragement they gave the Polish captain that from that time on the most brilliant living writer of descriptive English took literature as a serious profession. One of these college men who hailed Conrad as John Alsworthy. Whether the interview also influenced his own choice of a profession is not known."

Novelized by Charles N. Lurie From the Great Play by Elmer Reizenstein

"That's a revolver," he said, "and don't you ever dare touch it!" Then he reached into the bag and drew out a large doll, wrapped in paper. Unwrapping it, he said:

"There, what do you think of that?" Doris took the doll. "Oh, daddy, isn't she beautiful? What shall we call her?"

In mock meditation Strickland put his hand to his forehead and appeared to be thinking deeply.

"We'll call her," he said slowly, "as we call them from Germany, suppose we call her Herman?"

Before Doris could accept the German name for her new doll Bertina appeared in the room and said to Strickland, "Mr. Trask is here."

It was plainly to be seen that the visitor was welcome to Strickland. He forgot even Doris for a moment and turned eagerly to the servant, saying: "Oh, yes! Bring him right in."

CHAPTER IX. Enter Gerald Trask. BERTHA left, and in a few moments Gerald Trask, financier, wealthy man in his own right, the friend of Robert Strickland who had lifted him out of his financial difficulties and had made it possible for him to recover after he had made a disastrous failure of his recent business undertakings, entered the room.

Enemies of Trask said that he could conceal more cold bloodedness and ruthless purpose beneath a mask of cordiality than any other man in New York; even such few friends as he had found him cold. It required no keen student of physiognomy to see that this man was centered in self; that the very keynote of his character was selfishness; that he would pursue his own ends over any obstacle, whether those ends were business or personal.

Yet Gerald Trask could conceal evil purposes beneath a smiling exterior when necessary. It had been remarked of him in the "street" that he could meet with a financial opponent at a directors' table and profess friendship within a few minutes after planning that opponent's utter ruin.

Men marveled at the friendship, seemingly real, true and firm, which existed between Gerald Trask and Robert Strickland. The former was the cunning, ferocious financial wolf, avid of gain and pleasure and ruthless in his methods of pursuing his ends. The latter was frankly domestic and as open of countenance as he was direct and straightforward in his ways. Anything hidden or treacherous was alien to his nature. He acted, frequently to his detriment, on impulse, and no man could say that Robert Strickland ever deliberately planned to harm him. His nature was that of the trustful soul who will cleave to a friend until that friend proves himself false beyond question. When occasion came he could strike, and strike hard, but it took much to rouse him to the point of anger.

Men instinctively liked Strickland just as they naturally disliked and mistrusted Trask. Often attempts had been made to warn the former against the latter, but he had bridled at the first suggestion of such a thing, saying that Trask had proved his friendship and that he, Strickland, would listen to no word against his friend.

And Trask? Until the very end it was a mystery why he maintained his cordiality toward Strickland. He had nothing to gain from him in a financial way, because Strickland's dealings in recent times had not panned out well, and he had had to call upon Trask for assistance. Socially Trask's position was as high as Strickland's, so the motive of social advancement was lacking. Perhaps Trask recognized in Strickland the possession of qualities lacking in his own character and was attracted thereby according to the law of the attraction of opposites. Perhaps there was another reason.

Trask raised his right hand in a gesture of dissent. He frowned just a trifle, and his voice sounded a bit hurried as he replied: "Some other time, Bob. I've got to hurry away. By the bye, I'd like to have you come down to my place at Long Branch Sunday. I'm getting up a fishing party—six or eight of us. The bass are running well now."

"I'll be glad to come," said Strickland. "I'll give you the address."

Trask took from his pocket a card and a pencil and wrote on the card. "It's on Henderson place, three blocks from the railroad station," he said; "first house on the corner."

He gave the card to Strickland, who placed it in his pocket with the word "Thanks."

"Better come down Saturday night, as we want to leave by 5 Sunday morning," said Trask. "But I've got to run along now."

As he turned to the doorway he came face to face with May Strickland, about to enter the room. For a moment he hesitated; then made as if to go on. The woman saw him and drew back, but her husband, looking past his departing friend, saw her and halted her with:

"Come in, dear."

There was no way out for May Strickland at this juncture in her life. She could not retreat without evident discourtesy to her husband's guest. Reluctantly she entered the room, and the die was cast whose throwing meant so much in the lives of all four there present, the woman, the child and the two men, with other whose fates were interwoven with theirs.

May Strickland's face was pale as she entered the room, and a close observer might have seen her hands twitching her handkerchief nervously. Her husband at that moment was not a keen watcher. His mind was too intent on the pleasure of introducing the wife who was the joy and pride of his life and the man who had proved himself so good a friend. Was it not Trask who had made possible the successful trip to Cleveland which was to result in the opening of a new life for his beloved May and Doris, as well as for himself?

Strickland's face beamed as he said: "I want you to meet Mr. Trask, May, my wife."

Both Mrs. Strickland and Trask bowed, the former in silence and the latter with a formal "Delighted, Mrs. Strickland." Then, having recovered his poise, he said:

"I've often heard Bob speak of you," Strickland laughed. "Yes, dear, Jerry knows almost as much about you as I do."

Although the husband did not perceive it, there was strain apparent in the grouping of the three. Trask relieved it by saying, "Well, I've got to hurry away now."

Strickland answered impulsively: "Oh, wait just a few minutes! Good heavens, I want May to know you."

"Sorry," said Trask, "but I can't. Some other time. Good night, Mrs. Strickland."

In a low voice, the words scarcely audible, May Strickland replied, "Good night!"

And now Trask turned his full face upon her, laying just the faintest possible stress upon his words: "I hope to have the pleasure again, Mrs. Strickland. Good night!" To Doris there was a "Good night" before Trask left, followed by Strickland.

Mrs. Strickland followed them with her eyes until she was quite sure that they were out of earshot; then in a hurried, uncertain way she turned to her little daughter with the question: "Doris, dear, was he—Mr. Trask—here long?"

"Yes," answered the child; "they were talking an awfully long time. Daddy's going fishing at Long Branch."

"What do you mean, child?"

"Mr. Trask lives at Long Branch, and daddy's going fishing with him Sunday."

"I want you to meet Mr. Trask, May," said Strickland.

the name of his wife. It caught the ear of his listener, and the face which was turned away from Strickland at the moment wore a peculiar smile. But there was nothing to betray his thoughts in his intonation or words when he replied:

"She must have guessed what was coming."

Pride in his wife was now uppermost in Strickland's mind as he answered:

"Yes; women have instincts about those things. I tell you, Jerry, she's one woman in a million. She's stuck to me like a major through all this business; never whimpered a minute; never a complaint or an angry word. Ah, she's an ace!"

"She must be," replied Trask.

"You know," Strickland went on, "it's too bad you never met May. I want you to know her. Doris, dear, run and tell mamma that Mr. Trask is here."

Husband and Wife Were Alone Together at Last.

Wouldn't it be funny if Mr. Trask found your purse, mamma?"

"Be quiet, Doris!"

Having sped his parting guest, Strickland re-entered the room. He said to his wife:

"Well, you weren't very talkative, dear."

"I was rather taken aback. I didn't expect to find a stranger here."

"Well, I'm glad you two met at last," said Strickland. "It's too bad you didn't get to know each other sooner."

"What brought him here?"

"I wired him to come. I took up that note—the $10,000 I owed him."

Had Robert Strickland's mind not been so occupied with his relief over the freedom from the debt which had harassed him he could not have failed to note the horror-stricken eyes of his wife. Her figure was tensed forward from the waist, and there was uncontrollable agitation in her manner.

"You mean you paid it?"

"Yes. Why, what's the matter?"

"Nothing. But I thought—I'm glad you're able to."

His wife's agitation passed from Strickland's mind. Only the thought of financial freedom and Trask's generosity remained.

"Yes," he said, "I feel better, too, although Jerry would have given me as much time as I wanted. He's a big hearted chap."

"Yes."

"He invited me to go fishing with him to Long Branch on Sunday."

"Oh, I think Helen will expect us to dinner!"

"By George! I never thought of that. All right, I won't go, then."

There was relief in May Strickland's manner as she said:

"No, don't. Besides, I dislike the idea of your being out in a boat."

"All right, I'll telephone Jerry in the morning."

It was bedtime now for Doris. In the manner of all children, she begged hard for "just five minutes more with daddy, please," but both daddy and mother were obdurate, insisting that a "little girl should have been in bed hours ago." After kissing them both good night Doris trotted off to bed, not, however, until Strickland had asked her to hang up his vest for him. She took her new treasure, Herman, with her, and her parting words were, "Leave the door open."

Husband and wife were alone together for the first time since his homecoming.

"Oh, Robert," said May. "I've read your letter a dozen times. I feel as though I knew every nook and corner of the house. I'm so anxious to go."

"We'll be there soon," said Strickland. "As soon as we can get ready; say two weeks."

"Oh, as long as that?"

"Well, ten days if you like."

"Let's go next week," said May eagerly. "I have grown to detest New York."

"But we've waited so long; a few days more or less—"

"That's just it. We've waited so long that it's gotten on my nerves."

(To Be Continued.)

AFRAID OF WAKING WIFE

Tom—Did Mabel's father call you down for staying at her home until 1 a. m.?

Dick—No; he couldn't. As I was going out I met him coming in.

Smollett on Golf. Now of course there are still one or two men who think golf is a more or less good game, but they should hear what the English writer, Smollett, thought of it back in 1765. Said he: "Of this diversion the Scotch are so fond, that when the weather will permit, you may see a multitude of all ranks mingled together in their shirts, and following the ball with the utmost eagerness. Among others, I was shown one particular set of golfers, the youngest of whom was turned of four-score. They were all gentlemen of independent fortunes, who had amused themselves with this pastime for the best part of a century, without having ever felt the least alarm from sickness or disgust, and they never went to bed without having each the best part of a gallon of claret in his belly. Such uninterrupted exercise, co-operating with the keen air of the sea, must, without doubt, keep the appetite always on edge, and steel the constitution against all the common attacks of distemper."

RABBITS CAPTURE A TOWN

Animals Move Into Dublin, Tex., and Make Friends With the Cats and Dogs.

Dublin, Tex.—The population of Dublin was 2,551 a few days ago. Now it is approximately 1,002,551.

Jack Rabbit and all his relations for miles around suddenly tired of rural life. So they moved right into the city. They occupied back yards, front yards, gardens, the public square and held overflow meetings in the streets.

The citizens are powerless. There is not enough ammunition in the city to make even an impression on the horde. The rabbits have made friends with all the cats, and the dogs are cowed through sheer weight of numbers.

MAN ROLLS LOG AT SEVENTY

Indianian Celebrates Fifty Years of Marriage and Proves He Is Still Hale.

Evansville, Ind.—In celebration of his golden wedding anniversary Benjamin Eckert, aged seventy, living on the Stringtown road near here, opened an old-fashioned log rolling contest by rolling the first and biggest log into place with his own hands. Mr. Eckert is vigorous despite his years and this fall plowed ten acres of wheat land in preparation for the planting.

Celebrating the anniversary with him were his wife, four children and twelve grandchildren. After the father had rolled the first log into place the sons entered into competition and put up a smokehouse in three hours.

RATS IN THE TRENCHES.

From Champagne, France, comes the complaint that the trenches are invaded by armies of rats. They are everywhere, especially in the night. They devour the provisions of the soldiers and prevent the men from obtaining sufficient sleep.

PITTSBURG FIRST TO HEAR PRESIDENT

Wilson's Plans for Speaking Tour on Preparedness Question Are Now Completed.

(By Associated Press)

Washington, Jan. 22.—President Wilson plans to speak in Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Chicago, St. Louis, St. Joseph, Des Moines and Davenport on the first trip that he will take to lay his national defense program before the country. He expects to leave Washington, Jan. 28, and remain away one week.

An itinerary for the tour practically was completed at the White House tonight. It was drafted with the view of including as many cities as possible in six days but many of the points he hoped to visit are to be stricken off the list. One of these was Cincinnati and he still is being strongly urged to go there.

Preliminary plans for the second trip to be made about the middle of next month already are being considered. This journey probably will take the president as far west as Denver and if possible he will swing through the south to stop at Birmingham and other cities.

Pittsburg will hear the first preparedness speech Saturday, January 29. The president will go to New York January 27 to speak at banquets of the Railroad Business association and the Motion Picture board of trade. He will return to Washington to attend a dinner given in his honor by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo on January 28 and that night will leave for Pittsburg.

Special importance is attached by the president to his address before the Railroad Business association and he will prepare it in advance. He is expected to speak particularly on the need for business preparedness and the necessity for the railroad and manufacturing plants getting ready to assist the government in time of danger.

In his second address the same night he may mention the Mexican questions.

Messages from the cities chosen as stopping places indicate that elaborate plans will be made for the president's reception. In St. Louis a parade is in contemplation. As far as possible the arrangements will be in the hands of non-partisan organizations because of the president's known position that the preparedness issue is not political.

AUTOMOBILE DEPT.

L. K. EDWARDS

My car is hard to start in cold weather. Would increasing the number of dry batteries approximate a high extension magneto, and, again, would increasing the number of batteries injure the coil?

No. This would injure the coil by allowing an excessive current to flow through it. If your present cells are in good condition they should furnish a satisfactory spark for easy starting. The spark is probably all right, but the real difficulty is due to the gasoline not vaporizing. To overcome this trouble you might use a lighter grade of gasoline, such as you can probably obtain at your drug store. Ether might also be injected. Either of these fuels may be injected through the priming cups or introduced through a special priming device. There are several devices on the market which facilitate starting on cold mornings by warming the fuel. One of these might be a good remedy for your trouble. You might also use a radiator heater to keep the motor warm at night.

Do you recommend the use of wood alcohol as anti-carbon treatment? When I used it the car smoked, but seemed to run better.

Wood alcohol should be satisfactory. Four ounces should be enough for each cylinder. After injection of the liquid to all cylinders the motor should be cranked a few times to distribute the alcohol to all parts of the combustion chambers.

What is the difference between a torque arm and a radius rod? Radius rods are used in motorcars to maintain the rear axle in a fixed position with relation to the other driving members. Radius rods are used in pairs, one on each side of the axle. A torque arm is a rod or beam attached at one end to the rear axle and at the other to a frame cross member. The function of the torque member is to prevent the rear axle from twisting or tending to rotate because of the forces acting upon it in driving and braking.

Why does a motor smoke when it first starts for about five or ten minutes till it gets warm and then stops smoking?

This is probably due to metal expansion. When cold the piston and rings are loose and oil can get to the combustion chamber, but when hot there is less cylinder clearance and little, if any, oil gets to the cylinder to be burned.

What final ratio is considered best on cars with 33 by 4 tires, and what speed should be obtained from this ratio?

The size of the tires is not the all important factor in determining the proper gear ratio, as there are many other points to be considered, such as the most efficient speed of the motor, the weight of the car, etc. These may so alter the proper gear ratio that the mere size of the tires becomes insignificant in determining the final reduction. With this in view, it is impossible to state that any given final reduction is best for a given tire size.

Some engines stop almost immediately after the switch is cut off, while others seem to lose their momentum gradually. Why is this?

When the switch is cut off on an engine it is merely a matter of bringing to rest the moving parts, which are no longer propelled by the explosion of the gases in the combustion chamber. Only one influence is probably great enough to be considered as the opposing factor to the movement of the motor, and this is the internal friction. When this has exerted its influence to such an extent that the motor is unable to turn itself over against the compression of the cylinders it will come to rest. The compression is not an opposing factor unless the momentum is insufficient to carry the motor over top center, because when it is carried over top center the expansion of the compressed air gives up practically all the power which was utilized in compressing it. If the compression is exceptionally heavy then the speed does not have to be reduced as far as it would if only a light compression were used before the engine will be unable to turn itself over the dead point. With these considerations it will be easily seen that a motor with tight bearings, tight piston rings and high compression will come to rest much quicker than one which has the opposite conditions. Of course a gas tight motor is more efficient under running conditions than one which is too free.

In setting a motor for high speed work what changes should be made in the valve timing?

The most important and effective change is to keep the intake valve open for a longer period.

Kindly explain just how a backfire is caused and why this should happen any more with a weak mixture than when the mixture is rich. Also where does the backfire start?

A backfire is possible with either a weak or rich mixture, although more common with the former, because a weak mixture burns more slowly. The backfire starts in the cylinder and is due to the presence of flame in the combustion chamber when the intake valve opens to take in a fresh charge. If the combustion of the charge is very slow there will be a flame in the cylinder, not only all through the power or expansion stroke, but also through the succeeding exhaust stroke, so that what gas remains in the cylinder when the exhaust valve closes and the intake valve opens is still incandescent and sets the fresh charge on fire the moment it comes in contact with it, thus producing a backfire. Ordinarily a backfire can only be produced by a weak mixture at high speed, say 1,000 revolutions per minute, although with a very weak mixture or a very late spark a backfire may be produced at a much lower speed, say 800. It is possible to make the motor backfire by using too rich a mixture also, but the overrich mixture burns faster than the one that is too lean, and therefore the former is generally burned out before the intake valve opens.

Will larger valves increase the power and speed of a motor?

Large valves are essential to power. Large intake valves especially add much to the power of an engine.

What do cylinders offset from the crank shaft mean?

An offset cylinder is one whose axis is offset from the vertical plane through the crank shaft. That is a line drawn vertically through the crank shaft center. In offset cylinder construction when the piston is on top dead center the connecting rod is not directly in line with the crank shaft, but, rather, makes an angle with it. Cylinders are offset so as to diminish the side pressure exerted between the piston and cylinder when the piston is on the firing stroke, accomplished here by reducing the angle of the connecting rod when the pressure upon the piston is great and increasing the angularity when the pressure is low.

The Upper Peninsula of Michigan Should Be a Separate State

There Is Room In Old Glory For Another Star.

The Upper Peninsula of Michigan, our "Clover-Land," should be a separate state of the United States of America.

The Upper Peninsula comprises nearly one-third of all the area of the great State of Michigan, the largest state, excepting Georgia, east of the Mississippi River.

The Upper Peninsula at no place touches the lower peninsula, but the former is bounded by its thousands miles of lake shore, touching three of the five Great Lakes and 180 miles of border line adjoining the State of Wisconsin.

The one-ninth of the population of Michigan residing in the Upper Peninsula pays nearly one-seventh of all the state taxes.

There is no reason under the broad canopy of heaven why this great empire of the Upper Peninsula, rich in every natural gift, endowed by nature beyond so many of these United States, a garden spot of agricultural opportunity, a center of industrial and commercial activity, the home of a third of a million people, industrious, thrifty and patriotic, should not now take its rightful place among the states of the Union, adding another star to the grand old flag and taking into itself all the rights, titles and privileges which are its heritage and its just due.

NEBRASKA FARMER IS WORLD RENOWNED

Has Produced Wonderful Results From His Farm of But Twenty Acres—Gets all Prizes

Table Rock, Neb., Jan. 22.—Arnold Martin, a former Swiss farmer who resides near here, has attracted international attention as a twenty-acre farmer. Recently at Denver he won prizes in every class, but the thing about which Mr. Martin is most pleased and proud is that corn he raised was selected by the Chinese commissioner at the Panama Pacific exposition to be sent to China, where, under the supervision of the Chinese government experts, the seed is to be propagated, acclimated and adopted. There are few small farms in this locality, many of them running 160 and even 640 acres. Mr. Martin received his training as a small acreage farmer in Switzerland, and he finds no difficulty in making twenty acres pay and pay well, besides getting prize taking crops.
