Wet sand is a new shade of gray that is becoming to youthful figures, especially when brightened with a touch of blue, rose or pink. In this instance, the belt is of green satin and the gauze collar is outlined with the narrowest band of green. To make the dress in medium size requires 4 1/2 yards 40-inch taffeta and 2 1/4 yards 36-inch chiffon for the blouse, cuffs and collar.

Begin the construction of the dress with the blouse. Close underarm and sleeve seams, then close center back seam. Turn hem at notches, gather lower edge of blouse between double "T" perforations, and 2 inches above. Adjust stay under seat gathers, center-backs, even, large "O" perforation at upper edge.

BACK TO JUNGLES TO TALK TO APES

Professor Garner Will Again Try to Learn Monkey Speech. RECORDS IT ON PHONOGRAPH

Monkey Proof Cage His Home as He Gets Chummy With Inhabitants of African Forests—To Take Moving Pictures of Animals—Uses Ammonia as Weapon.

"Ourh"—Hello, there, my friend! Where are you?
"Eunh"—Here I am under these palms, not far away.
"Qul"—Well, wait there a moment. I want to join you.

Which is monkey talk, small chatter of the African jungle, as interpreted by Professor Richard L. Garner. It is the talk of the little apes that swing by their tails. It is not the talk of the giant gorilla, which walks upright like a man, or the talk of the chimpanzee. Of their conversations, however, he has some samples.

Within ten days or two weeks, maybe, Professor Garner will sail from New York for the French Congo, his scientific hunting ground. He goes partly on his own account to pursue his studies of ape language and partly on behalf of the Smithsonian Institution and the Bronx zoo, for each of which he expects to obtain a collection of invaluable animals and natural history specimens.

In a Monkey Proof Cage. For nearly twenty-five years Professor Garner has been going to Africa to imprison himself in a cage, too strong for even the mighty arms of gorillas to rend apart, while he listened night and day to catch the strange inflections of the ape voice. Now he can converse with little monkeys and big, returning their stare, but there is much that remains to be learned.

He has many big ideas for his new expedition. The study of ape language is his first scientific aim. He will attempt to increase his vocabulary of monkey words. He will take with him phonograph records for the recording of monkey language. He will try to capture two or three young gorillas from the Bronx zoo and two or three young chimpanzees as well.

"I shall go to the French Congo," said Professor Garner, "and will establish headquarters in the Lake Fernan Vaz basin, about two degrees south of the equator and perhaps 150 miles inland from the coast. Thereafter I shall work inland to about 500 miles from the coast. As on my former expeditions, I shall construct a strong cage of stout steel rods about five-sixteenths of an inch in diameter, the whole inclosed by a netting of steel wire. The cage will be disguised by a covering of branches and leaves. Within the cage I shall have all of my necessary equipment for a long vigil—revolvers, a magazine rifle, three moving picture cameras, an ammonia squirt gun to discourage too inquisitive prowlers, my food supply, and so on.

Gorillas to Be Lured. "I know of a pineapple plantation that will exactly suit my purposes, and I plan to lure within this plantation and to my cage many gorillas. You cannot find a gorilla merely by plunging into the jungle after him. You must bring him to you by the lure of food, by calls he understands, by sweets agreeable to him. Naturally I expect to get some wonderful moving pictures and to capture several young gorillas and chimpanzees. I have arranged with the Smithsonian Institution to have one of their men accompany me or to join me after I have made my arrangements in the jungle. He will assemble a collection for the institution.

"I am especially anxious to capture a young chimpanzee which can be trained as satisfactorily as was Susie, which I presented to the Bronx zoo several years ago. She died a year ago in an epidemic. Susie could do about anything that a four-year-old child could do. She could assemble geometrical figures, both plane and solid; could count up to three perfectly and up to four imperfectly; could select six colors and understood and obeyed at least 150 commands and about 300 words.

"This will be the most important expedition I ever attempted. Twenty-five years ago scientists used to laugh at my opinions, but they don't any longer. The novelty has worn off, and experiments have shown that I was correct in my deductions about the ability of apes to convey ideas by means of the spoken word."

CHARLIE CHAPLIN'S LIFE STORY AS HE TOLD IT

(This is the story of Charlie Chaplin's life as he told it to Harry C. Carr, who has faithfully reproduced the comedian's own words so far as it is possible for one person to quote another. Mr. Chaplin talked at writing his own story or having it written and then placing his signature over it. He told his story to Mr. Carr. The following is a faithful account by Mr. Carr of what he told.—Editor.)

CHAPTER I.

Actors trying to write autobiographies are like girls trying to make fudge. They use up a lot of good material—such as sugar and milk—and don't accomplish much. Like fudge, the story of a fellow's life ought really to be reserved for his immediate relatives.

If I were Lord Kitchener, doing things and saying things that made history, I could understand why the story of my life ought to be written; but I am just a little chap trying to make people laugh. They are all so anxious to be happy that they eagerly help me make the laughs—the audiences, I mean. But they give me all the credit—not taking any themselves for being so willing to laugh. So I feel, in a way, that in telling this story, I am just talking it over with my business partners—the staff of the firm that really makes the laughs.

Some day when I have made money enough out of my share, I am going to buy a little farm and a good old horse and buggy—automobile agents can read this part twice—and retire; sometimes I will ride into town and go to a moving-picture show and see some other fellow making them laugh.

In the circumstances, I guess you can just put this story down to this: that Charlie Chaplin gives an account of himself to the firm.

His One Big Dream.

When I was a little boy, the last thing I dreamed of was being a comedian. My idea was to be a member of parliament or a great musician. I wasn't quite clear about my dream. The only thing I really dreamed about was being rich. We were so poor that wealth seemed to me the summit of all ambition and the end of the rainbow.

Both my father and mother were actors. My father was Charles Chaplin, a well-known singer of descriptive ballads. He had a fine baritone voice and is still remembered in England. My mother was also a well-known vaudeville singer. On the stage she was known as Lillie Harley. She, too, had a fine voice and was well known as a singer of the "character songs" which are so popular in England. She and my father usually traveled with the same vaudeville company but never, as far as I know, worked in the same act.

Shoved on the Stage.

In spite of their professional reputations and their two salaries, my earliest recollections are of poverty. I guess the salaries couldn't have amounted to much in those days.

My brother Syd was four years old when I was born. That interesting event happened at Fontainebleau, France. My father and mother were touring the continent at that time with a vaudeville company. I was born in a hotel on April 16, 1889. As soon as my mother was able to travel, we returned to London, and that was my home, more or less, until I came to America.

The very first thing I can remember is of being shoved on the stage to sing a song. I could not sing, but my mother, who was then five or six years old at the time, my mother was taken suddenly sick and I was sent on to take her place in the vaudeville bill. I sang an old Coe song called "Jack Jones."

It must have been about this time that my father died. My mother was never very strong and, with the shock of my father's death and all, she was unable to work for a time.

Sent to the Poorhouse.

My brother Syd and I were sent to the poorhouse.

English people have a great horror of the poorhouse, but I don't remember it as a very dreadful place. To tell you the truth, I don't remember much about it. I have just a vague idea of what it was like.

The strongest recollection I have of this period of my life is of creeping off by myself at the poorhouse and pretending I was a very rich and grand person.

My brother Syd was always a wide-awake, lively, vigorous young person. But I was always delicate and rather sickly as a child. I was of a dreamy, imaginative disposition. I was always pretending I was somebody else, and the worst I ever gave myself in those day-dreams and games of "pretend" was a seat in parliament for life and an income of a million pounds.

Sometimes I used to pretend that I was a great musician, or the director of a great orchestra, but the director was always a rich man.

Music a Passion.

Music, even in my poorhouse days, was always a passion with me. I never was able to take lessons of any kind, but I loved to hear music and could play any kind of instrument I could lay hands on. Even now I can play the piano, cello or violin by ear.

Syd had a lofty contempt for these dreams of mine. What Syd wanted was to be a sailor. He was always pretending he was walking the bridge of a great battleship, ordering broadsides walloped into the enemy's ships of war.

We didn't stay long at the poorhouse. I am not sure just how long, but my impression is of a short stay. My mother recovered her health to some extent and took us back home.

Syd went away from home immediately after we left the poorhouse. He was really very anxious to be a sailor, and my mother sent him to the Hanwell school, in Surrey, where boys are trained for the sea. Many boys from the poorhouse went to this school.

My mother sent me to school in London. I don't remember a great deal about it. The strongest recollection I have of school is of being rapped over the knuckles by the teacher because I wrote left-handed. I was fairly hammered black and blue on the knuckles before I finally learned how to write with my right hand. As a result I can now write just as well with one hand as the other.

It seems to me that my mother was the most splendid woman I ever knew. I can remember how charming and well-mannered she was. She spoke four languages fluently and had a good education. I have met a lot of people knocking around the world since, but I have never met a more thoroughly refined woman than my mother. If I have amounted to anything, or ever do amount to anything, it will be due to her. I can remember very plainly how, even as a very small child, she tried to teach me. I would have been a fine young roughneck, slugging around the world as I did, if it had not been for my mother.

(The next installment of this interesting biography will be run in an early issue. Watch for it.)

KNIFE REALLY A GUN.

New York Police Warned of Arrival of New Deadly Weapon.

A new kind of dangerous weapon, consisting of a .22 caliber pistol, which is to all appearances an ordinary silver pocketknife, has arrived in New York. The police have been instructed to be unusually careful in "frisking" prisoners, not to be deceived by the device.

The knife contains two blades, with a heavy handle, a spring on the side of which can be moved by the thumb. The front part of the handle then turns around to admit the cartridge. The firing is done by pressing the side spring.

IRON MOUNTAIN WILL HAVE BASEBALL NINE

Organization is Under Way, and All That is Necessary Now is a Manager

(By Associated Press.)

Iron Mountain, April 10.—Iron Mountain is to be represented this season by a baseball team, the same having been organized. Frank Morell has been chosen secretary and treasurer but the team has no manager as yet—they are looking for one, one who is well versed on base ball. The boys will consider it a great favor if someone answering the qualifications will kindly consent to look after that part.

The boys will put a good aggregation in the field and do the best possible to bring good teams to this city. In order to do things up to a neely they must have the co-operation and support of the base ball fans to boost base ball along. If you want to have base ball here give the boys encouragement and support.

A meeting of the team will be held at the barber shop of Almon & Forett next Sunday afternoon to make arrangements for the opening game.

FIRE AND POLICE TO BE UNDER ONE HEAD

Collins to be Made Chief of Both Departments at Menominee if Plans Carry

Menominee, April 10.—L. C. Collins for seventeen years chief of the Menominee fire department, will be Menominee's next chief of police. Following the annual appointment of city officers by the council on the first Monday in May, the 50th day of the fire department and head of the police department will be combined in one man. That man will be Chief Collins.

This seemed assured beyond any serious question of doubt today as Mayor M. B. Lloyd who has long had the idea of combining the police and fire heads in one job, announced that he had received the pledges of enough aldermen to assure the adoption of the plan and the election of Chief Collins to the office.

Mrs. Charles Keil of Menominee is the guest of her sister Mrs. Thomas Reidy.

Mrs. Con. Burke has returned to her home in Marinette.

LEADERS OF THE AMERICAN LEAGUE TEAMS FOR 1916

 Clark Griffith, Chicago.
 Grover Alexander, Philadelphia National.
 Christy Mathewson, New York National.
 Jack Taylor, Chicago.
 Poor Hans! His mind must be falling under the strain of having to play with the Gorgonzola Pirates of today. He forgets the name of the man who caused him and the Pittsburgh club their most poignant misery:
 William Dineen of the Boston Americans.

Hans forgets one afternoon in the year 1905, during the world's series between the Pirates and the Bostonians. It was the last game of the championship, and a victory by Boston meant a lot. Big Bill Dineen was in the box and Wagner at bat. Two men were out and there were two strikes on Hans.

As Jimmy Collins, who played third base that day, said: "If Hans had been able to hit any kind of a ball inside the lines it meant the game—we were all scared too stiff to handle anything!"

But Dineen made the mighty Wagner whiff for the championship and the big end of the financial divvy.

Come on, Hans. Let's substitute Dineen for Jack Taylor in that list.

MANY CITIES WATCH SNEEZES.

Preparedness Against Sickness is Simple, but Frequently Neglected.

Seventeen cities and one state, through their health departments, are now enlisted in the "watch your sneeze" campaign recently started by the New York Association For Improving the Condition of the Poor. New York was the first city to enlist and Florida the first and thus far the only state to mark the crusade with its official approval, though in Connecticut a state wide campaign is also under way through the activities of the Connecticut Research association. The other cities are: Baltimore, Pittsburgh, San Francisco, Colorado Springs, Amsterdam, Bridgeport, Plainfield, Lynchburg, Schenectady, Paterson, Poughkeepsie, Pueblo, New Britain, Pasadena, South Orange, Jersey City and Sacramento.

"Information is the only ammunition we need in this fight," says Phillip S. Platt, who is directing the effort, "and the only information needed is the one simple fact that unmothered sneezes spread diseases. Preparedness is easy in the anti-sneeze campaign. 'Have a hanky handy.' That is all there is to it. We do not ask people to stop sneezing, but what we do ask is that they sneeze into a handkerchief."

THE IDEAL HUSBAND.

Some Observations on the Side and a Dogmatic Conclusion.

You are probably a woman. Few men would pause to read an article headed "The Ideal Husband." Man knows his fellow men too well.

Of course it is true that nearly every married woman has at some time in her life claimed to have found the one ideal husband, but not for long. He is not a stable article; he is only a fleeting glimpse.

Shortly after a young married woman declares hers to be the ideal husband he exhibits a tendency to crumble his crackers in his soup or to place a slice of bread in his empty dinner plate and submerge it in gravy. These things "are not done."

While a man is still engaged—held under option, as it were, but not definitely contracted for—he is for a short while considered ideal. However, he just begins to enjoy his perfection when it is discovered by his general manager elect that he rests his knife and fork half on the tablecloth and half on his plate, while they should be draped artistically across his plate midway between meat and potatoes. To save time, probably he also cuts his meat into small pieces before starting to eat it.

He has good reasons for doing as he does, but they do not excuse him. His sort of conduct and perfection simply do not walk hand in hand.

No young couple should be engaged long enough for either one to discover the other's shortcomings. So long as a man and a girl are so mutually mesmerized that the eyes of one never leave the eyes of the other he is perfect, but the moment he allows her glances to stray below his Adam's apple, the moment he loses control, he loses also perfection. She realizes that his knowledge of esthetics was gleaned from an abridged edition; that his tie is not in vogue, that his collar is too loose and too low and therefore too comfortable.

Ah me! I have strayed from my subject—the ideal husband. Let me return to it and proceed.

There is no such thing—

YOUR SPRING BONNET.

The newest shade for hats is wistaria. It is particularly fetching as seen in the little helmets, which do not look a bit warlike because smoothly covered with crepe georgette and trimmed most uniquely with wistaria green leaves. This foliage is also in crepe, but of the crinkly sort, and how it permanently retains its crispness is known only to the maker. Possibly, instead of a wistaria crepe helmet, you would prefer one in gleaming material, like a brown novelty straw.

AUTOMOBILE QUERIES AND ANSWERS

By L. K. Edwards

A copper tank, adjusted to the exhaust pipe, containing two quarts of water is connected by copper tube to intake manifold. The suction of the intake stroke takes the vapor with mixture to explosion chamber. Provided the small amount of water in the vapor gets to the chamber, will it cause more power, less carbon and tend toward economy?

There are many theories advanced for the action of water in the intake manifold, and all of them are combated just as strongly as they are advanced. One of the theories held quite widely is that the water if entering in very minute quantities will be transformed into steam, which on coming in contact with the blowing carbon will form carbon dioxide, thus cleaning the cylinders of carbon. It is generally accepted that no increase in power is given by the admission of water. There does not seem to be any reason why the economy should be better.

Is a long stroke motor capable of turning over faster than a short stroke?

No, not so fast. Limiting speed is piston speed in feet per minute, not revolutions per minute.

Can you give me the different methods of testing the effectual working of the spark plugs in giving equal and uniform explosions, and if there is any variation owing to the strength or power of the spark?

The operation of the spark plug can be readily determined by eye. All that is necessary to do is to place the spark plug points at the proper distance apart, which is between one-sixty-fourth and one-thirty-second inch for magnet use, and then after this approximate adjustment is made remove the plug from the cylinder and start the engine on the other three. The color and intensity of the spark which jumps across the gap of the plug removed from the cylinder give a ready clue to its performance when firing a charge. The spark may vary all the way from a thin, fine line to a thick dot of flame. Something between the two, or a hot blue spark, is most desired.

My engine refuses to respond or chokes down on too sudden and to wide opening of the throttle. Can you tell me the cause of this?

The choking action of which you speak is generally due to too rich a mixture. Properly designed motors, unless improperly timed, do not suffer from defective suction.

Will you kindly inform me what is the matter with the electric lighting and starting system of my car? The ammeter charges as long as I keep the car running above ten or twelve miles per hour, but when I slow down to less than that for a little while and then speed up to even twenty-five miles per hour the ammeter does not indicate charging, but remains at zero. Then if the engine is stopped and started again the ammeter continues to charge as before. The car has been run 650 miles, and the test of the specific gravity of the storage battery is about 1.250.

It is possible that all of the connections are not tight and that they occasionally make poor contacts, decreasing the output due to the additional resistance. It is also found that oil in the commutator or brushes will cause trouble similar to yours. This is due to the fact that at low speeds the oil will sufficiently insulate the brushes from the commutator so that when the generator just commences to turn over and is producing only about one volt the oil will prevent a circuit so that the output is zero. At times when running at high speed the brushes may be able to touch the commutator, allowing the fields to become saturated and the output normal. It is also possible that the ammeter needle may be sticking, and the vibration of the car at high speeds is sufficient to loosen it.

What would cause a grinding noise in the differential of my car when coasting? It is all right when pulling.

The only cause of a grinding noise in the differential would be, first, a serious misalignment or maladjustment of the two gears, and, second, a foreign substance in the gear case. Any such noise as this is more apparent when the car is coasting ahead of the motor, as this allows the rear wheels to take up the back lash in the driving gears. You should take the car to a first class garage, where a mechanic can take up the play and put the gears in proper mesh.

What is meant by a cast steel gear, a drop for ed? Are there vanadium gears in use on many cars, and which of the three are the best, and which costs the manufacturer the most to produce?

A cast steel gear is one in which the gear is a steel casting. A drop forged gear is one in which it is a forging. Vanadium steel gears are used on a few cars, but where alloy steel is used nickel is employed to a much larger extent. The alloy steels are the most costly. Forging is the method generally carried out in all cases, the forging being a blank and the teeth afterward cut on it.

When an air tight pitcher is taken out to let in a pinch hitter strike out for him with men on bases; then the substitute pitcher gets the everlasting tar lammed out of him. It is different, of course; if the pinch hitter delivers a clean hit that puts his team ahead and the manager substitutes another air tight pitcher who proves able to hold the score down. But that happens an absurdly few times by comparison with the times it doesn't.

BAR COTTON PESTS

Plan to Prevent Importation of Pink Boll Worm.

New Law Regarding Disinfection of Imports of Cotton Goes into Effect at Home Ports—Check on Sugar Cane.

Washington.—A regulation of the United States department of agriculture requiring the disinfection of all imported cotton went into effect upon the completion of the plants made necessary to an enforcement of the requirement at Boston and San Francisco.

"The primary purpose of the regulation," says a statement issued by the office of information of the department, "is to protect American cotton growers from the pink boll worm, one of the worst cotton pests in Egypt. The damage done by this insect is shown by the following extract from a circular which was issued in Alexandria, Egypt, by a company engaged in handling Egyptian cotton:

"The 1915 cotton crop has, like its predecessors, paid a heavy tribute to the pink boll worm attacks. As was to have been foreseen from the great numbers of bolls affected since the month of August, the damage suffered by the cultivators all over lower Egypt has been very heavy. Taking the average of the cases that have come under our observation, we estimate the general damage at 30 to 35 per cent. This insect has not spread over upper Egypt to any great extent so far, although the common boll worm has several times in the past caused great damage in the upper Egypt cotton plantations.

"We do not think it an exaggeration to say that, through the presence of the pink boll worm, lower Egypt cotton farming is passing through a most difficult period which has become more acute each year and may develop into a serious crisis. We are very far from the happy years when a yield of seven cantars per acre was not difficult to obtain on good land. Nowadays four cantars are considered a good outturn by the cultivators even of the good districts of Menoufeh."

For about a year now the federal horticultural board has required all rooms in which foreign cottons were stored to be screened, all waste containing seed was burned, and has insisted upon other similar precautions. The new requirement of fumigation is regarded as one of the most important of these means of protecting the cotton industry. Investigation has shown that there are a few seeds in all imported cotton and any of these seeds may contain the pest. Its establishment in this country is regarded as a menace that must be guarded against in every possible way.

DIES AFTER 80 YEARS IN BED.

Mollie Fancher, Famous Invalid of Brooklyn, at Last Passes Away.

Mollie Fancher, famous invalid, of Brooklyn, who had been bedridden for fifty years, is dead.

Miss Fancher celebrated her fiftieth year in bed on Feb. 3. She invited President Wilson to attend the celebration of the anniversary. The reception lasted from early afternoon until late at night.

Miss Fancher was thrown from a street car when sixteen years old. Since that time she had been constantly confined in bed. Three birds, two parrots and a canary—have been Miss Fancher's constant companions for years.

COCKADES MARK GRAVES

Paris—Tri-colored cockades, made of some durable material, are to be placed upon the graves of fallen soldiers to permit their identification after the war. The senators of the department of the Seine are organizing the work and it is expected that thousands of inscriptions that would otherwise be effaced by exposure to the weather will be preserved and will enable families to find their dead. The cockades will resemble in form and color those made by the sewing girls of Paris for the soldiers and called the "cocades de Mimi Pinson," but will be of some solid substance instead of ribbons.

Dec'tent Smothered in Tomatoes.

Some day when the oven is being used for other cooking plan to have for dinner round or planked steak cooked with tomatoes, and for this dish either fresh or canned ones can be utilized. Place the steak in a slightly greased baking pan which has a close fitting cover. Cover it with tomatoes, sliced if fresh or just turned out of the can if canned. Add also one small onion coarsely chopped and a small piece of bay leaf, together with salt and pepper. Cover the whole closely and cook for an hour and a half without removing the cover of the baking dish. Add no water, as the tomatoes are moist enough.—Philadelphia Ledger.

TO PLANT 7,000,000 TREES.

Extended Reforestation Program in Pennsylvania This Year. Officials of the Pennsylvania state forestry department estimate that more than 7,000,000 young trees, about half of the number in the state's twenty-four tree nurseries, would be used for reforestation this year, forming the most extended program of the kind ever undertaken by the commonwealth. The bulk of these trees will be planted on state forestry reservations, on new auxiliary reserves and similar public work, and a large portion will be given free to persons desiring to use them for reforesting. The free distribution will not be for ornamental or shade planting, but only for development of wooded areas.

BUY OLD TIES FOR TRENCHES

British Would Buy Half Million From American Railroad. An offer of 5 cents apiece for 100,000 castoff railroad ties was received by the Boston and Maine railroad from the British government. Formerly the railroad burned all its old ties, but orders were sent throughout the system directing that they be saved. It is understood that the British government is negotiating with other railroads with the hope of obtaining a half million ties for use in constructing trenches in France.
