CONSTRUCTION DELAY COSTLY TO THIS CITY

Thousands Lost by Failure to Build Sewer Voted On.

Technical Error Causes Further Delay in Passage of Resolution.

Failure on the part of Escanaba to award the contract for the construction of an intercepting sewer directly after it was given a favorable vote at the polls has cost this city a large sum of money, variously estimated at between $5,000 and $15,000.

The high cost of living did it. In a communication to the council, City Attorney H. R. Dotsch suggested that the issue of $7,500 in bonds for sewer construction, rejected by a bonding house because of an irregularity in the manner in which the resolution was presented, be put to a vote again at the April election.

"That sum will not be sufficient," answered City Engineer Hodson to the question of Alderman Pettler who declared "it's no use to ask for $7,500 when it won't be enough."

Delayed Till Wednesday.

The question started a discussion, whereupon a decision was reached to pass the resolution for a bonding issue at the next meeting of the council—Wednesday night, in order to get it before the people at the April election.

During the course of the discussion last night, it developed that the material and labor necessary for the construction of the intercepting sewer has advanced so rapidly that delays of a few months on each of several occasions have cost the city considerable money. Instead of costing $30,000, as originally planned, the cost of the intercepting sewer will be $45,000 or more, it is estimated.

More accurate figures with regard to the cost will be made known when another estimate of the city engineer is presented to the council.

Pryal in the Chair.

Alderman Pryal was in the chair last night in the absence of Mayor Chatfield, who is sick, and the pro tem apparently had no difficulty in "holding down" the seat he is scheduled to occupy after the Spring election. Until late in the evening when Alderman Tolan came in, neither the first nor second wards had a representative at the meeting. Aldermen Ramsey, Kennedy, Hoffman, North and Bissell were absent.

The application of Napoleon Bernard to move a one story building from 726 Stephenson avenue across Stephenson to Washington was approved by the council as one of the first matters brought up for action last night. The approval carried the stipulation that he furnish a bond of $500.

Women election inspectors will be named at the next meeting of the council, it was decided, after a discussion as to whether the selection of the aldermen should be made last night or dealed.

Two Women Named.

Mrs. Cameron will represent the fifth and Mrs. Pearl Nolden the sixth wards, it was practically decided. T. J. Riley, E. C. Voght and B. J. MacKillican were named election commissioners. Male inspectors were named to make the same list as compiled previously.

Property owners whose property abuts Fourteenth (Sarah) street will be given an opportunity to register objections to paying an assessment for improving the street, it was decided last night. Hearings will be held at a later date. The state highway department will pay for the improvement of the street with the exception of five feet alongside both curbs. The cost of the five feet of space will be borne by the property owners, according to the plans of the city council.

Whether Escanaba can effect a saving of a considerable sum by the installation of a fuel saver at the city hall was discussed thoroughly when a letter from Charles F. Smith was read, in which he asked the city to purchase a fuel saver at a cost of $250. Smith guarantees a saving of from 20 to 25 per cent in fuel.

Given Power to Act.

M'DONOUGH ONCE BOOKED HERE ON 'SPEED' CHARGE

Close on the heels of the charge by W. L. Losinger, district superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, that Martin S. McDonough, prosecuting attorney of the "liquor rebellion" territory of Michigan, failed to make 50 raids on liquor establishments as he declared openly a few days ago, comes the disclosure that McDonough figured in an arrest in Escanaba more than two years ago.

It was quite by accident this morning that the Mirror representative, in scanning old records at the police station, ran across the name "McDonough." A closer perusal showed the initials on the worn records were "M. S."

Then Come Details.

Then followed close questioning of the police by the reporter, with the result that the following story was learned:

McDonough was speeding his automobile in Escanaba on May 17, 1917. Officer Hugh Early reported the matter to the police department and a warrant was sworn out for the man's arrest. When questioned at the Delta hotel whether the car which was parked outside was owned by him, McDonough denied it.

To make sure McDonough wouldn't get away from them, the police authorities had the automobile towed to the police station. There again, they took precautions and had a logging chain fastened to the machine so that it could not be stolen during the night.

Served with Warrant.

The following morning McDonough was served with the warrant. He was arraigned before Judge C. D. McEwen and charged with speeding, paying a fine of $5 and costs of $5.90. While it was admitted at the time that McDonough drove recklessly on the streets of Escanaba, there was no "drinking party" connection to it so far as the records of the police department and the justice's office show. It was generally conceded at the time that McDonough was a "regular fellow" and he violated the law and paid his fine without giving any more thought to it.

In his letter to the prosecutor, an open letter which is being reprinted in the newspapers of the peninsula, Mr. Losinger asks of Mr. McDonough: "In order to place your record above suspicion will you kindly inform us just how many you have convicted of violating the prohibition laws since the first day of last July? Not the number you have dismissed for 'lack of evidence' but the number of convictions you have actually obtained."

Made Raids Where?

In opening his letter, Mr. Losinger says "I have just spent two days in your county and made inquiry of a number of prominent citizens to ascertain where you made those fifty raids you claim to have made during the last two months in enforcing prohibition to the letter in Iron county."

"I found one individual who thought you had made three raids around Crystal Falls after a great deal of prodding on the part of your constituents. No one else with whom I came in contact knew of that many. Of course, I am not questioning your veracity, but there are people of good standing in your county who declare you never made those fifty raids nor did any one else on your behalf."

The president was accompanied by Mrs. Wilson, Dr. Grayson and secret service men who took a spin along the Potomac. A closed car was used. Photographers who had waited several weeks for the president's appearance in public were prohibited by the police from taking the photograph.

THE SNAIL

6 INFLUENZA DEATHS HERE

Contributory Element, However, in Twenty-Two Deaths.

Influenza caused six deaths in Escanaba during the month of February, according to accurate figures obtained at the city clerk's office today. The disease, however, was the contributory element in twenty-two of the fifty-seven deaths recorded for the month. The total deaths of Escanaba people during the month was forty-two, as fifteen deaths recorded in the city were persons brought in from the county and nearly all patients received attention.

Pneumonia Claims Most.

Bronchial pneumonia claimed the largest number of persons during February, nineteen dying of that ailment. Lobar pneumonia was responsible for the death of eleven persons, while influenza claimed six. Four deaths were due to tuberculosis, three to heart disease, two to cancer and one accidental. Another death was due to a hemorrhage.

Five of the bronchial pneumonia deaths were of persons living in the county or nearby towns. Three of the lobar pneumonia deaths, one of influenza and five of various causes also were persons not living in Escanaba.

Most Full Grown.

Records show the largest number of deaths were full grown persons. It is a singular note that while the influenza epidemic raged, deaths from various causes were practically twice as many as in previous months.

Three Apply Today To Get Passports

Applications for passports to visit relatives in Sweden were filed with the county clerk today by Mr. and Mrs. Nels Erickson, of Ford River, and Mrs. Nels V. Nelson, of Gladstone. The applications will be forwarded to the department of labor for execution.

INVESTIGATOR IS ARRESTED

Federal Agent Charged With Violating State Law.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 3.—George F. R. Cummrow, department of justice agent who just returned from Iron county, Michigan, where he investigated the so called "whiskey rebellion," was to appear in court today to answer a charge of violating the state liquor law.

Cummrow was arrested last night by Edward A. Nowack, special agent of the state food and drug department, who charged that Cummrow gave him a drink of whiskey in his room at a hotel.

When arrested, Cummrow declared he had been "framed up."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 3.—Prosecuting Attorney Hoffus was directed by the state food and drug inspector, Mr. Woodworth, this morning to issue a warrant for George F. R. Cummrow, special agent connected with the local office of the department of justice, charging him with possessing and giving away liquor.

Cummrow, who returned Monday from Iron county where he investigated the recent prohibition law enforcement controversy, was arrested in his room in a hotel here by E. A. Nowack, an inspector for the food and drug department. Nowack charges Cummrow invited him and F. M. Church, of Cadillac, Mich., to the hotel to have a drink.

Cummrow could not be arraigned in court this morning owing to the local primary election. He asserts the whole charge is a "frame up."

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., March 3.—Fifteen more defendants were charged by Judge Sessions in the Newberry election conspiracy trial today. This left the field with 85 defendants. The fifth count of the indictment was also dismissed. This was the one founded on the federal statute of October 16, 1918.

Judge Sessions denied defense's motion for dismissal of counts three and six of the indictment. He then notified James O. Murfin that it would be useless to argue a motion for a directed verdict and to all defendants as he would deny it.

Gauthier Five Under Weather; Rival Team Has Been Bolstered.

EAST LANSING, Mar. 3.—Whether M. A. C. can repeat the victory over the University of Michigan basketball team gained last month at Ann Arbor is the burning question of East Lansing this week. The Aggies are scheduled to meet the State University men Saturday night in the M. A. C. gym.

Sickness and hard trips have crippled the Aggies during the last two weeks, and indications are that the five which takes the floor Saturday night will lack something of the smooth-running play which characterized earlier games.

On the other hand, Michigan has shown improved form recently defeating Minnesota and holding Chicago to a reasonable score. Karpus, star forward of the Michigan quintet, has become eligible by passing off his mid-year examinations, and is helping the Ann Arbor offensive.

In the first game with the University of Michigan quintet, the Aggies beat the varsity, 34 to 27. The Aggies hope to make it two straight next Saturday.

THEATRES

AT THE STRAND.

One of the many enjoyable features promised in connection with "Oh, Ho!" Albert Capellani's "Filmsical Comedy," co-starring June Caprice and Croighton Hale at the Strand theatre today, will be the appearance of a bevy of beauties recruited by Mr. Capellani from the various Broadway cabarets and musical comedy shows. The aggregation of girls represents four different well-known cabarets and five current Broadway musical-comedy hits, including "Tumble In," "Good Morning, Judge" and "Listen Lester" and consists of sixteen hand-picked beauties, selected with a discrimination that would do credit to Florenz Ziegfeld.

The girls from a chorus that appears at various intervals throughout the picture and although bereft of their voices, they disport themselves in a lively manner and make good use of their training in the gentle art of "jazz" dancing. The work of rehearsing the girls in the dance numbers was entrusted to Albert Dorris, assistant to Mr. Capellani, who prior to assuming the more or less dignified title of assistant director, spent some fifteen years as a musical comedy-stage director.

London's Great Fire. Some 250 years ago there was a tragic time in London, for one night in 1666 the great fire broke out. It began near the tower and, driven by the high wind consumed 89 churches, including St. Paul's cathedral, Guildhall and more than 13,000 houses. Happily, the number of lives lost was comparatively small. To quote the concluding words of the inscription on the monument which commemorates the fire: "In a small space of time the city was seen most flourishing, and reduced to nothing. Three days after, when the fated fire had baffled all human counsels and endeavors in the opinion of all, it stopped, as it were, by a command from heaven, and was on every side extinguished." Some good was done, for it burned away all lurking infection from the plague. Another result was the populating of the district known as Shore-ditch, which until then had been mostly fields. The homeless citizens settled themselves there in tents, with such goods as they could save; gradually shacks and houses replaced the tents.—Exchange.

The House of Whispers

"What do you mean?" "With the police in the house making investigations, there'll be no more threats from the blackmailers for a while. They won't dare bother you for the present." "Do you really think so?" she questioned with a little sigh of relief. "I'm sure of it." "Have the police been called in?" "Yes; two detectives are downstairs now." "I'm glad," she said. "With the detectives here, they won't dare molest us, will they?" "Of course not," I answered. "Is your sister at home?" "Yes," she answered. "Our guests have just gone. Mother has retired, and Claire is in the living room writing a note. They heard nothing, so I did not tell them anything about it." "That was wise. They'll hear it soon enough. Has your sister been in the apartment all evening?" "She hasn't been out all day unless she went out just to drop the letter she was writing down the mail chute in the hall. Why do you ask?" "I was merely wondering if there was any way she could learn of the murder." "How could she? Isn't that too terrible about Miss Lutan? But I mustn't talk any longer. Good night." "Wait a moment," I cried. "There are some things I must discuss with you before I meet Gorman. How about meeting me at the Astor at eleven?" "I can't promise, but I'll try. Good night!" There was nothing further that I could do, and I felt sadly in need of rest. Throwing off my coat and waistcoat I began making preparations for bed. The notion took me to once more investigate the secret passageway. I pushed sharply on the panel as I had done before, but this time I could not budge it. I tugged and worked and pounded, but it stuck fast in spite of all my efforts. As I was struggling to force it open, there came a sharp ring at the bell of the apartment. As I was, in my shirt sleeves, I answered it. The two detectives I had seen downstairs stood there. "What is it?" I asked. "I arrest you for the murder of Daisy Lutan," said one of them, and with that they sprang forward and pinioned my arms. "Why, this is absurd," I laughed in their faces, conscious of my utter innocence of the crime. "I had nothing to do with it." "That remains to be seen. Put on your coat and come along." Still holding me fast, they went back with me to my bedroom. Clutching me tight they made me put on my coat, and no sooner had I done so than one of them snapped hand-cuffs on me. "Look at this, Jim," said one of them, pointing to a spot on the front of my coat. "That's blood all right," said the other, after inspecting it. "I got that when I was helping Mr. Wick lift the body to the couch," I protested. "Tell that to the judge," the detective called Jim scoffed. "Better look around for the gun, Cullen." "You'll find no gun here," I cried. "I never owned one." Nevertheless Cullen began rummaging through the drawers of my dresser. Suddenly he gave a triumphant exclamation and drew something from beneath a pile of shirts in the second drawer. "Here it is," he announced, holding up before my astonished eyes an automatic revolver. "I never saw it before," I gasped. The detective merely laughed. "There's one bullet gone," said the man who was examining it. "Come along, young fellow," said the other detective gruffly. "The bullet settles it. We've got the right party."

CHAPTER IX
A prisoner in a police station cell, I passed a sleepless night. Conscious as I was of my utter innocence and confident of my speedy release, nevertheless I had to admit that the detectives from their point of view were perfectly justified in placing me under arrest.
For a burglar to have gained access to the apartments without the connivance of the employees seemed almost an impossibility. For him to have escaped from the building after having murdered Miss Lutan without being detected seemed also highly improbable. Then, too, there was the damning evidence of the blood on my coat and the fact that I had been found at the door of the apartment. I had not observed the stain on my clothing until the detectives discovered it. My explanation of how it had gotten there was the true one, yet I could readily realize that it might sound fishy to others.

On the face of it the tragedy in the Granddeck looked like an inside job. The revolver, with one bullet missing, was the strongest sort of evidence that I was the murderer. Yet I never had seen the weapon before and could not imagine who could have placed it there. There was only one explanation possible. It had been purposely planted there with the definite object of throwing suspicion on me.
The one person—the only person—whom I knew to have been in my rooms after the murder was committed was Claire Bradford. Could she have done it? I remembered that Barbara had showed me a revolver in her possession. I wondered if this could be the same weapon. I did not think it possible that Claire herself could have used it. I could imagine no motive why Claire Bradford would want to kill Miss Lutan, yet it must have been she who had hidden the revolver in my dresser. What had been her motive? How had she got possession of the revolver after the murder?
Come what may, I had no intention of telling my one—not even Gorman—of Claire's second visit to my apartment. For Barbara's sake I made up my mind I would keep my lips closed about that incident, even if I had to stay in prison indefinitely. At the police station when the detectives had brought me in, I had quietly but firmly refused to answer any questions, although they had badgered me for nearly two hours before they let me alone.
"Where did you live before you came to the Granddeck?"
"Where did you work?"
"Where is Rufus Gaston?"
"Where do your people live?"
"Why did you kill Daisy Lutan?"
"Where did you get the money you have?"
"We've got the goods on you. Why don't you confess?"
These were the sort of questions that were flung at me, first by one and then the other. Evidently at first they had had hopes of breaking me down.
"I have nothing to say," had been my unvarying answer to all their questions.

"PASSING THE BUCK."

Mr. Lane, who, by his resignation as secretary of the interior has deprived the Wilson cabinet of probably its strongest member, precedes some interesting reading in his final report to the president.

Discussing the administration of government affairs, Mr. Lane says:

"Ability is not lacking, but it is repressed to the point of paralysis because of an infinitude of details and an unwillingness on the part of the great body of public servants to take responsibility. Every one seems to be afraid of every one."

Mr. Lane's statement will not come as a novelty to those who have observed Washington affairs with any degree of attention, although it is unusual to obtain a frank admission of the sort from one who holds or has recently held public office at the capital.

Political writers for a long time have dwelt upon the universal Washington custom of "passing the buck." From the leaders of congress to the humblest bureau chief, this game is constantly played. In no institution is it so difficult to fix responsibility as in the government. Mark Twain fifty years ago exposed it humorously but ruthlessly in his story "The Facts in the Great Beef Contract," and lesser writers ever since have descended upon it facetiously, indignantly or resignedly, according to their individual temperament.

Mr. Lane suggests that large enough salaries be paid to attract men who will assume and carry responsibility on their own shoulders. But so long as the game of "passing the buck" starts in the highest places, improving the personnel in lower position will hardly help very much.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

BIG MONEY IN THIS.

If forests could have been put upon the land as easily as tax titles, a large part of upper Michigan would not now be given over to stumps and bunch grass. But to the tree butchers who took the profits from Michigan's pine, the time necessary to reap a second crop seemed a long look ahead. And there was no foresight in the state's government to compel recognition of the rights of this generation.

But here and there states are waking up to the need of putting the verdure back upon the hills. It is recognized that, with the forest lands stripped, the work of reforestation is no likely to attract private capital. The investment is good, if capital can wait 50 to 100 years, it can convert dollar-an-acre land to a production of perhaps a fabulous amount.

In New York State sentiment is placing the burden of this reforestation responsibility upon counties and municipalities, as well as upon the state. Cities, even, will establish municipal forests both as a monumental public service and in the hope of a return of money in years to come. Also it is announced that eight counties in Northern New York; along the St. Lawrence and in the Adirondack region will undertake reforestation schemes modeled upon the great state and municipal forests of Europe.

New York has no better opportunities or incentives than Michigan for this laudable enterprise.

Oldest Law School.

England today has no law school in existence. Harvard's Law school is not only the oldest existing law school in the United States, but it is the oldest existing academic law school in the English-speaking world. They have a professor of law at Cambridge, and a professor of law at Oxford, in England, but they do not teach law in the manner of a professional school. They simply lecture upon law, or endeavor to give a scientific preparation for the profession of law, but do not give a scientific, professional training. And, more and more the tendency is to recognize that that is the ideal, along with other features of instruction at Harvard, to keep up with American law schools.

Putting an Egg in a Bottle.
An egg may be put into a bottle which has a mouth much smaller than the egg, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. First soak the egg in vinegar until the shell becomes soft and pliable. It will then be easy to force the egg into the bottle. Pour cold water into the bottle and allow it to remain until the shell becomes hard again. The bottle can then be shown to friends, who are certain to be greatly mystified by the sight of an egg in such a place.

TEACHES GIRLS HOW TO STEAL

Father Accused By Police of Being Tutor to Daughters.

LOS ANGELES, March 3.—A shoplifters' school in which George Sutton, 40 years old, a switchman, was instructing his wife and two daughters to steal from the local department stores was uncovered by the police say, when Sutton, his wife, Mrs. Elsie L. Sutton, 37 years old, and their daughters, Dessie, 18 years old and Doretta, 19 years old, were taken into custody. Hidden beneath Sutton's clothing the police found silk underwear and stockings valued at about $150.

Sutton confessed to stealing the goods from department store counters and said his family needed the expensive clothing.

Used as "Blinds."

Mrs. Sutton and her two daughters who were locked up with Sutton on grand larceny charges denied any part in the stealing. The woman told officers that her husband insisted that she and the two girls stand near the department store counters where he was operating. The three denied ever assisting in the thefts, but admitted they often wore clothing stolen by Sutton.

According to the detectives, Sutton always operated with his family. The three women, the police say were used as "blinds" by Sutton, and also assisted him in escaping if his actions aroused suspicion.

From what the police were able to learn, Sutton after entering a department store would send his wife and two daughters to a silk counter with instructions to price and examine the goods on display. While the three women attracted the attention of the clerks to one end of the counter, Sutton, the police say would snatch any article within reach from the other end.

Accuses Husband.

Although Sutton and his wife both stated that the two girls had never been allowed to take anything from the counters, and Sutton asserted that although his family was always present when he "lifted" anything he alone did the stealing, the police believe the two girls were receiving instructions in shoplifting.

In a statement to the police Mrs. Sutton declared that her husband first started to steal from department stores about four years ago.

"We lived in Pueblo, Colo.," said Mrs. Sutton. "My husband, who is the step-father, of the two girls first started to steal two years after we were married. I begged him to give it up as I knew that sooner or later he would be arrested. We left Pueblo a couple of years ago and have lived in Salt Lake, Denver and several Pacific Coast cities. We came to Los Angeles and George was going to work. Now we are all in jail and our lives are ruined."

Sutton, when questioned by the police after Mrs. Sutton made her statement, denied that he had stolen anything before his arrest here.

'PIGGY' DENIES CRUELTY TO WIFE.

Lawyer Denies Spouse's Charges of Ill Treatment By Hubby.

NEW YORK.—Richmond J. Reese, known to his wife as "Piggie Pie," "Woolly Lamb," "Honey Bunch," and "Sweetie," completed his defense to charges of cruel treatment made by his wife, Mrs. Angelique Reese.

Reese is a lawyer, and is secretary of the Society of American Arts and Sciences.

Reese testified that he loved his wife even after she left him, and that he would be willing even now to take her back for the sake of their child.

Mrs. Reese, hearing this testimony, said: "I will not go back to him—no, never."

Reese told the court he and his wife never had any trouble. On only five occasions during their life, he said, did he have occasion to reprimand her. He caused a round of laughter in court when he said that he always called his wife "baby girl." He added: "My wife had a habit of falling on the floor so I would pick her up and pet her. When I told her she must look out or she might get hurt, she stopped falling. She simply loved to be petted."

Lawrence Grant, an actor, and his wife testified that Reese was extremely indulgent toward his wife when she was cross. George Howard a lawyer, said he had frequently heard Mrs. Reese call her husband "my woolly lamb."

of Alderman Sheehan, when it was explained that the fuel saver would not have to be paid for until a final test is made next fall, the first motion was withdrawn and a motion substituted to refer it to the building committee with power to act.

FIRST SACKER OF BROWNS MAY STAY HERE THIS SEASON

Joe Katina Engaged in Cattle Raising; Nice Material For Club.

Joe Katina, former first sacker of the St. Louis Browns, plans to remain here this summer to engage in cattle raising if he doesn't answer a call to go back to Edmonton, Alberta. In the event that Katina remains, he will be fine material for the Escanaba ball club this coming season, think the few fans who have had the pleasure of meeting Katina.

Katina played independent ball last year in Edmonton and in 1916 he had a club at Alberta which took the semi-pro bunting. He has not played league baseball since in 1913 when he was with the Montgomery club of the Southern league.

The first sacker is a six-footer and, according to Scanlan, not only throws a mean hoof around the first sack but can clout the ball with a vengeance as well.

THEATRES

AT THE DELFT.

When "The Heart of Wetona," a Select Picture production, comes to the Delft Theatre today, Norma Talmadge will be seen in the role of an Indian girl. She is presented by Joseph M. E. Henck.

The Comanche Indians, despite the years of training and instruction given them by the United States, still cling to some of their ancient rites. Quannah, chief of the tribe, is making arrangements for a Corn Dance. He says that a vestal virgin must be chosen to bring sacred food to the Holy Man at the Dance. Wetona, daughter of Quannah, is chosen as the vestal virgin. Wetona's mother was a white woman and Wetona has been brought up as an American girl. She says she is not worthy of bringing food to the Holy Man—that it would be a sacrilege to the Great Spirit.

Her father is suddenly awakened to the fact that his daughter is not the pure and virtuous girl he thought she was. Quannah demands to know the name of her lover. She refuses to tell him. All she will tell him is that he is a white man. The Indians headed by Quannah decide to seek vengeance.

OLAF WALLIN HAS SKIPPED?

Man Scheduled For Hearing On Liquor Charge Not Here.

Unless Olaf Wallin, who despite the close watch maintained by police authorities, quietly slipped out of Escanaba Saturday night, returns for a hearing on the charge of violating the liquor enforcement law, it is not probable that federal authorities will bring him back to this city.

A bond of $1,000 was posted for Wallin's appearance. Emmanuel Richer, S. M. Johnson and Carl Carlson taking the responsibility. Unless the federal authorities show a tendency to be lenient, the bondsmen will be sought by agents of the department of justice.

Kept Close Watch. When authorities here get wind of the plans of Wallin to leave town suddenly, a close watch was kept. Last week he disposed of his business to Wirtaner and Eskola. When he was scheduled to appear before United States Commissioner James Frost yesterday, there was no Wallin to be found.

According to the prosecuting attorney, the department of justice has been notified that Wallin failed to appear. It is believed federal agents will set out to cause his arrest in the near future. Authorities here believe they would have no difficulty to locate Wallin if they were directed to cause his arrest, but because his case is now in the hands of federal agents, they may not make a move until so instructed.

Case In Circuit. Wallin has a case pending in circuit court, which will not be tried sooner than the April term. Counsel for Wallin secured a continuance of Wallin's case at the last term of court.

In connection with the sale of the fixtures and business of Olaf Wallin at 1222 Ludington street, it is explained that the new owners are not entirely unknown to many persons here. Wirtaner wrestled in Escanaba eight years ago when he was known as the "Mysterious Finn." He wrestled for a period of sixteen years, but recently retired from the game.

Insofar as the payment of Fred Cloutier's fine of $500 and costs of $100, which were imposed at the last term of circuit court, it is said that a business concern of Escanaba for whom Cloutier has done business has assured authorities that the fine and costs will be paid and that through an error the sum had not been forwarded to the proper authorities long ago.

Beauchamp's Fine Unpaid. The fine of $500 and costs of $100 which the circuit court "requested" Joseph Beauchamp to pay has not been remitted to the county clerk.

Fontana Body Here; Buried In Lakeview

The body of Rodney Fontana, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Fontana, of Powers, and graduate of the Escanaba High school who died in Phoenix, Ariz., arrived here late this afternoon from Powers and was taken direct to Lakeview cemetery where it was interred.
