MOST POPULAR MAN FIRST TWO GAMES; IN ESCANABA NOW STILL IN RUNNING

Urgent Appeal to Make Final Locals Trounce Wakefield This Report Before Monday Night.

Who is the most popular man in Es canaba? Why don't you know? Well, it is the Federal income tax collector with offices in the court house.

Monday is the last day for making payment of the federal tax and many people who have put it off heretofore are rushing the last minute to make their final report.

All single men with an income $1,000 are required under penalty of law to file a return with the collector if they have not sent one direct to the state federal office, Married men with a $2,000 income must file,

Mr. Riordan has made an urgent appeal to the people of this district to be prompt in their payment but many have delayed and as a result are "hurrying and scurrying" at the last min-

The amount of tax paid by Escanaba people can not be stated until final compilation of the returns. A great deal of work is connected with the compilation.

There is no question but that when the final disposition of all income taxes is made and the amounts sent to Mile Race by a Lap Washington and compiled by the department of internal revenue, it will run into the thousands.

Notices will be sent to all delinquents who fail to file their return and in each case a penalty will be in flicted.

The law specifically states that all those required must file and in cases where they do not, the matter is left to the discretion of the federal man.

PROTESTANTS TO ASK LARGE SUM IN NEW CAMPAIGN

Drive For Money Will Be Started in the Near Future.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

DETROIT, Mich., March 13.-For the united work of 30 Protestant denominations, the Interchurch World Movement will ask this spring the largest sum ever sought for church work $336,777,572. Details of the campaign were received here today by L. E. Buell, State Financial Campaign Dates of the National Financial Campaign were announced by Mr. Buell as from April 25th to May 2nd.

This campaign will mark not only the first occasion in which the great Protestant demoninations have joined in a move to raise money, but it is also the first time in which the money will be spent according to one paln Churches will make every effort not to compete with each other or to duplicate unnecessarily any sort of church

'This is the Liberty Loan of the Christian World," said Mr. Buell, "It is a concrete demonstration of the fact that Christian cooperation is practical. It comes in a day when men everywhere are realizing that a revival of religion is imperative for the welfare of the World.

"The significance of this combination of Christian forces numbering not less than 30,000,000 members and adherents must at once be apparent. 'All one army, we,' is a reality.

'This budget represents the largest amount ever called for by Christian men for the support of the work of the church. It is an earnest attempt to make a study of the world's needs. and to lay those needs on the minds and hearts of the people of America. The responsibility is on those who believe that the security of our institutions rests on the Christian home, the open Bible, the public school and the free church.' With the 30 denominations working in close alliance, it is proposed to spend the money as follows: Home Missions $109,949,037; Foreign Missions, $107,611,488; Ministerial Pensions and Relief $20,510,299; American Education $78,837,432; American Religious Education $5,931,925; American hospitals and homes, $5,116,460; Miscellaneous $8,770,927.

CHAPTER XII.

It was the second day after thisthe day set for Claire Bradford's wedding-that in the morning, much earlier than customary, Gorman came to the prison to see me. I met him jubilantly. My uncle's unexpected return to the city and his generous and convincing offers of aid had filled me with new hopes. I trusted, too, that old Rufus' keen eyes quickly would discover the secret passageway now that I had indicated to him where to look for it. I was confivelopments quickly would free "me from even the suspicion of being a murderer. The minute, however, that I laid eyes on Gorman I knew that something had gone wrong.

"You almost had me believing you," he said savagely. "If it wasn't that I knew that Wick and that girl up there were crooks I would wash my hands of the whole affair."

"I don't understand." I answered indignantly. "Every statement I have made to you has been the absolute

"Yes, it has!" he speered. Ordinarily I would have resented anyone talking to me in this manner, but I felt that under no circumstances could I afford to quarrel with Gorman. He was the only friend I had in the whole city that I could rely on, excepting of course my great-uncle. I contented myself with merely reassert-

"I tell you it is all true every word of it."

"The old man's home-old Rufus," he responded irrelevantly.

"I know," I replied. "I saw him for a few minutes day before yesterday. He promised to do everything in his power to free me as speedily as possible. After talking with him I am confident that he had nothing whatever to do with any part of the plot. Have you seen him?"

"Yes," said Gorman, significantly, "I've seen him. He looked me up yesterday and we went over the case to-

"What," I cried, aghast at this incredible bit of news, "two jewel

"Sure we did," he announced triumphantly. "And the pearls were there as safe as when the old man went away. Now what have you got to say to that?"

What could I say? I knew as positively as I knew that I was alive that on that Saturday when I had opened the wall safe to put away my money there had been but one of the jewel boxes there. 1 had taken it out and had examined its

The box containing the pearls and the rest of the valuables in the Gaston collection was gone. Now the pearls were safely back there again. How could that be explained? The mystery was too much for me.

There was not the slightest reason for me to believe that Gorman was lying to me now. I had found him in deatly expecting that the resulting de all our dealings straightforward and candid. If he said he had seen greatuncle Rufus find the pearls there it of such costly gems, I might have risen "You're a wonderful liar, you are," in my sleep and in a somnolent state removed the pearls to some other hiding place. No, I decided, that theory was too preposterous and absurd for even a moment's consideration. had not the least idea what he was If I had done that in my sleep I must also have restored them to the safe again in my sleep. It was far more likely that the thief, becoming alarmed over the publicity brought to the Granddeck by the murder, had been afraid to attempt to dispose of gems so well-known as the Gaston pearls and had restored them in the same mysterious way that he had abstracted them. I suggested this theory to Garman,

"Nothing doing," he sneered. "Any crook daring enough to steal those pearls, once he had got his hands on then, never would return them. Pearls are too easily disposed of. You've got to dig up a better explanation than that."

"What did Mr. Gaston think? What did he say when he found them

"He had nothing to say. He was so tickled at finding them again that he hustled with them right away to the safe deposit vaults and did not rest until he had them safely locked up. He took both jewel cases with him and made me go along with him to protect them."

"Didn't you look at all for the secret passageway I told you about?"

"Still dreaming about that, are you?" scoffed Gorman, "No, we didn't. On the way up to the Granddeck the old man spoke about it and I told him that in my opinion there was nothing to it. After he recovered the pearls he was too excited to think about anything else. It seemed to break him all up, and I took him back to his hotel and left him there. He said he had some writing to do, and that he would meet me at my office at noon today."

"How do you account for the return of the pearls?" I cried desperately. "What's your theory about them?" "I haven't any," he replied. "It's up to you to explain it. Maybe by the time I come to see you tomorrow you'll have thought up a new yarn

"Please, please," I called after him as he turned away, "do look tomorrow and see if that secret passage is not where I said it was."

He walked away without answering. Back once more in my cell, I stretched myself despondently on my little iron cot, and closing my eyes, tried to concentrate my thoughts on an attempt to solve this new mystery, which I could plainly see had all but destroyed Gorman's faith in my honesty. I must solve it if I was to retain him in aiding me to get free, yet | tures to be made than heretofore.

we got in he went to the wall safe and the whole thing seemed inexplicable. I could hardly blame him for doubting me. The great value of the pearls had been motive enough for their theft, but what possible motive could there have been for the thief return-

With a shock it came to me, too, "We found," he said, speaking slow- | that the restoration of the pearls practically upset the whole theory of my defense. If I could have established the fact of this theft, a jury might be persuaded to believe my tale of anonymous notes, mysterious whispers, and a secret passageway by which the thief had gained access to the apartment, but without the motive of theft, my story, unsupported by witnesses and uncorroborated by other evidence, surely would be incredthle of belief.

I had just one hope left. Old Rufus must find that secret passageway and see whither it led. That, with our knowledge of the identity of the telephone girl and the possibility of provan ex-convict, seemed likely to be my

The only ray of comfort that I could find anywhere in the whole situation was in my firm bellef that though old Rufus and Gorman and the whole world doubted me, Barbara Bradford-my Barbara, I ventured to call her in my innermost heart-would continue to believe in me. She would be sure, no matter how much appearances went against me, that I was telling the truth. Barbara and I knew. Even if she had not known that I could not possibly have fired the shot that killed Miss Lutan, I was certain that she still would have trusted me.

ESCAPING NATIONAL PERIL. By Scott C. Bone,

When Woodcow Wilson, President of the United States, brought back from Paris the Peace Treaty, with the League of Nations covenant, he peremptorily demanded its acceptance and ratification without the dotting of an i or the crossing of a t.

"Sign here" was, in effect, the White House decree.

The European-made document was submitted as a perfect piece of handiwork, the product of intallible minds, -br-athing brotherly love in its every line and guaranteeing to a harried and harrassed world an enduring peace.

Yank Ingenuity To Triumph In Congo

PHILADELPHIA, March 13.-Yankee ingenuity has triumpher in far off Belgian Congo. The American steamer Ogontz built at Hog Island last May as an oil burner, ran short of fuel at Matadi. Captain H. Kerr managed in 21 hours to convert her into a coal burner. After discharging its cargo, the Ogontz steamed nearly 1,- 000 miles to Las Palmas Island and obtained a supply of fuel oil. She was reconverted into an oil burner there and returned to New York.
