MILLIONS OF FIRS WILL BE FELLED TO AID XMAS SPIRIT

Christmas Trees Used Same Now as in Olden Days of St. Nick.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—Between four and five million Christmas trees will be felled this year to brighten American homes, churches and community centers, and delight the hearts of the children. This is the estimate of the Forest Service which says that the total of trees used in this country each year is approximately equal to the population of England, Scotland and Wales, and is about 25 per cent greater than that of Germany.

Forest service officials are opposed to any movement to discourage the use of these trees for Christmas purposes. To the argument that the cutting and use of the trees is a great waste they say that the custom is so grounded, and so venerable, that even if it were economically unwise, it should continue to outweigh economic considerations.

Placed all together, the four or five millions of trees used annually would make a lofty forest. Yet Forest Service officials point out that many of the trees are from fields which are cleared for farming purposes. For example, the pine trees which are used for Christmas trees are not the same as the pine trees which are used for lumber. They could be cut and used for lumber, but they are not cut for that purpose.

Of the total of Christmas trees felled in this country, 1,500,000 are used in New York state and New England; the Forest Service says, "Hark and red spruce are very commonly seen in New England Christmas celebrations and in New York and Philadelphia. In Illinois and Ohio, the local demand is supplied partly with white pine, Norway spruce. Pines are in great demand for Christmas trees when fir and spruce are not available. Throughout Maryland, Virginia and in Washington, D. C., the scrub pine finds a way into many homes. In the southern Wyoming the Lodgepole pine is almost the only species available."

Christmas trees, the Forest Service says, vary in size from 5 to 25 feet and range in price from 25 cents to $35 or $50. Where the 25-cent trees are available it is not stated.

GREAT PORT SHOWS RAPID SIGNS DOWNWARD SINCE WARS

Riga Was Once Second Largest Russian Port, Now Is Desolate.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 RIGA, Latvia, Dec. 11.—Riga, which was known before the war as the pearl of the Baltic and ranked as Russia's second port, is one of the saddest monuments to the destruction wrought by six years of ceaseless fighting, much of which took place on the soil of the new republic of Latvia, erected on the ruins of the old Russian governments of Livonia and Courland.

Half a million persons lived in Riga before the war and over 100 large factories kept it busy and prosperous. Now there are only about 200,000 inhabitants and less than a score of factories are operating. The empty shells of various industries stand awaiting the return of machinery which the Russians shipped eastward before the German advance. Lenin and Trotsky have promised to return all the machinery which belonged to Russian subjects. But many of the factories were owned by foreign capitalists and consequently cannot hope to recover their plants.

Great rubber plants, carpshops, wood-working shops and saw mills stand idle awaiting capital to buy the machinery. The River Dvina and various lakes and inlets lying about the city are filled with logs. But there are no mills to convert them into timber, no ships to carry them into foreign markets. The docks are idle. Few trade operate and those are fired with wood.

Of the 1,500,000 persons in the new republic, nearly all are dependent upon agriculture for a living. The crops were a failure this year and consequently the outlook is bleak for the new government headed by Ulmanis, the American-trained minister presdent. But the Latins have learned the joy of freedom in their few months of independence. They fought bravely against the Bolsheviks and later against the Baltic barons who tried to enslave them under a general dictatorship. They are proud of their national consciousness in the face of a world which is so full of selfishness.

Unlike most parts of Russia, Latvia is a country where the population is not so dense. The population was about 1,500,000 before the war. It had been well to the flow of other people from here. The Latvian and Windan had always attracted many foreign traders.

Americans to Have Danish Memorial in Honor of Their Sons

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 WASHINGTON, Dec. 11.—An obelisk of granite to honor the 10,000 Americans who died in Denmark as a memorial to the many thousands of American and Allied soldiers of Danish descent who died in the world war. It has been estimated that about 20,000 men of Danish blood fought in the American armies in France and that about 20,000 more fought in the Canadian, Australian, British and French armies.

The proposed obelisk will rest on a base twelve feet high, on one side of which will be two women's figures, one on each side, both with slightly bowed heads, expressing the sorrow of the motherland and her emigrant daughter for those who died in the war. On the other side will be an American eagle with the Star Spangled Banner and in addition there will be two relief of typical war scenes from the American and Allied fronts.

K. Nielsen, whose son fell in the American army in France, is president of the Danish committee which plans to erect the monument on July 4, 1921. The monument will be erected in North Star Park, in the Hilda Park, which was donated to Denmark by Danish Americans headed by Dr. Max Hoenig of Chicago.

The plan for the proposed monument has been approved by the Christian of Denmark, the American Legation in Copenhagen, and the Danish Foreign Office.

Chinese Don't Know What to Do With a Set of Airplanes

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 PEKING, Dec. 11.—The question as to what use shall be made of several airplanes recently bought by the Chinese government, whether for war or for establishment of mail service as stipulated in the contract for their purchase from a British firm, has been settled, for us three of them are concerned.

One of the three, who at present dominates Chinese military, ordered three of the six machines shipped to him at Peking. The others were sent to Peking for military purposes.

Those destined for Mukden were loaded on flat cars and started northward. Some distance beyond Tientsin they collided with a superstructure of a railway bridge which, along with the machines, was put out of commission. The wreck tied up traffic for a long time.

Labors Get Small Pay in Haiti Cities

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
 PORT AU PRINCE, Dec. 11.—There is no high labor market in Haiti. The man working by the day gets one goudon, which is 20 cents, and some times a goudon and a half. Cooks are to be had without advertising. Most of them earn $1.50 a week, and in addition get six cents a day on which to feed themselves and their flock. You do not have to include on fare in the weekly wage down here.

At some points in the interior, wages for cooks are even lower. Many of them live in makeshift huts at that.

Haiti's population is estimated at a round 2,500,000. Ninety-seven percent of these people are classed as illiterate, which may account for the size of the pay envelope.

CHAPTER TEN The Day of Reckoning.

I. THE BUNGALOW.

On entering the living room she heard a clock strike. Immediately she ceased counting.

Eight chimes died singing in the deserted evening hush; but she did not stir; her pose remained that of one arrested sharply in some act of charming stealth, so delicately poised in apprehensiveness she seemed scarcely to touch the floor. The room was quiet, dim with shadows, but for herself unattended.

A slight sound drew her attention. She discovered a shining man beyond the living room. She looked at a Japanese boy in white linen appearing, carrying two bundles of three bunches each, and vaulted after them upon the round dining table, where their rich light fell with an incandescent napery, burnished silver, an iridescent haze of cut glass mingled with burning roses.

She remained that there were places set for two.

Her regard reverted to the living room. She thought it delightful to every detail of its unpretentious luxury. Riches alone could never have created it. The wood fire roared bold in the oldstone fireplace would presently be grateful; already there was a hint of chill in the nocturnal rare air of the hills.

She moved almost to the middle of the room, paused again. A long breath sighed on her lips. As she turned unceasingly toward the veranda a duplication of the posture made her aware of a mirror on the wall opposite. She inspected herself gravely.

She had washed up without a shadow of doubt upon her understanding; she reviewed without a break every link in the chain of events which had brought her to this place; she was acutely conscious of her anomalous position in this home, profoundly disturbed.

A remote dripping noise crept into the stillness of the evening as gradually that she noted it without any astonishment, but when, gaining in volume, it became perceptible as the sustained wail of a soprano rapidly climbing the mountain road, she began to tremble.

The car swept softly across the far side of the veranda, swung into the drive that led to the garage, and disappeared. The throbbing of its motor was stilled, vibrations of its wheels wound on the grass.

Her body was vibrating now like a reed. Almost the impulse was more strong than her will, to fly back to her bedroom, to lock herself in refuse to see or speak to him.

How could she face him and tell him the truth? How break his heart? And not his alone.

Running on the steps to the veranda he saw her softening in the shadows and cried out to her in the name of Jefferson. She could not reply. Mental rehearsal of what her attitude at this meeting should be proved valueless. She had meant to stand aloof, but his arms with a respect, an authority, which must command respect and win her time enough to tell him; she was captive and powerless before she could lift a hand or articulate one syllable of protest. The passion of his kisses, the murmuring of his voice, the overpowering, the quickened tumult of her pulses was like the storming of a strong fort. She loved him.

Stunned, breathless, quivering, unmitigated, she found that she had somehow contrived to put him from her. The pained perplexity in his gaze cut like a knife. She turned aside that she might not see.

"Forgive me," he begged. "I have been inconsiderate, thoughtless, in the joy of having you restored to me! Forgive."

"There is nothing to forgive," she interrupted. "You're doing nothing that wasn't right and natural. Only... Oh! How can I make you understand?"

He gave a helpless gesture. "Tell me what you wish me to understand. I will try. I love you so..."

Touched, she sought to smile kindly through her tears. "Give me a moment," she pleaded tremulous hands busy with the disarray of her hair—"give me a little time, Mario."

The mellow booming of a tubular gong sounded. Mario turned impatiently. Bowing and smiling, the Japanese boy stood in the entrance to the dining room.

"Dinner is served."

By a resolute effort she succeeded in composing herself in manner. Mario maintained an impassive attitude, defiant, poised, hurt. Somehow she mastered a smile that only mystified him the more.

You know you can't but...
"Let us have dinner, I think—I'm sure I'm hungry. And let us not talk during dinner," let's pretend nothing has happened. Afterward, I promise you, I'll tell you all the details of the..."
"That (what) he said..."
"THE IMPOSSIBLE."
She thought never was there a more...
"Opposite her, Mario barely tasted the fishes set before him. The eggs worn eyes in this...
"You slept well?" he inquired.
"She smiled. "Famously!"
"I am glad. You show the benefit. I think you are even more beautiful than you were, more pale, perhaps, but—how does one say it?—spiritual. But it may be I am not a fair judge; I might be so happy, I see all things..."
His lean brown hand...
"And you—are you not glad, dear, to be home with me once more?"
She said, with difficulty, in a low voice, looking down at her plate.
"I am glad to be with you, Mario."
It was true; in spite of everything she was strangely glad. But it was wrong of her to say so.
"I myself slept till noon," he volunteered. "Then I waited and waited for you to wake up, but you were sleeping like a child, you never stirred; one had not the heart to disturb you. Then, when it got so late, and I could no longer put off going down into the valley, I gave Maria instructions not to leave your bedside till I returned or you awakened."
She wondered: "Why?"
"I was afraid, I dared not leave anything to chance. One could not forget in what condition you would wake up. If anything had happened... I think another disappearance would have driven me insane!"
She avoided his eyes, and asked, rather mechanically, "How do you know something then out of desire to know?"
"Why did you have to go down into the valley?"
"To telegraph New York and call off the detectives I had employed to look for you. Also to tell the village you were safely found, and thank them. They were most kind, these good people; fully half a hundred of them stayed up all night with me while we searched the woods; and though many had not had a wink of sleep, they were still searching yesterday afternoon when I despaired and determined to seek you in New York."
Thus reminded of the sad futility of that search, she was too deeply disturbed to wonder why he could not have telephoned to the village.
The Japanese served their coffee in the living room. It was now quite dark, and the air though sweet was keen. The fire was burning but the windows and door were not closed, and the faintly perfumed smell of wood smoke blended pleasantly with the pungent perfume of the pines.
Mario placed an easy chair for Priscilla, made it easier with cushions for her back and head, offered her cigarettes, and showed surprise when she refused them—lighted one for himself and threw away half smoked, and knelt down beside her chair, resting his elbows on his arm and capturing one of her hands.
She tried to steel herself against the weakness of her flesh, the protests of her affections, the expectation of her sympathies, reminding herself she must be cruel to be kind. But it was terribly hard to hurt her, she must. It would be as if she didn't care...
The mere contact of his hand thrilled her heart as a faster than quickening breath and pulse, allayed all her being with tremors of love and gladness, made her faint and weak of purpose. She had felt him only a possible apology for a... a forlorn little slither... her head.
A deeper concern stirred his face. He asked tenderly, "What is it, Jane. You must tell me."
"It's going to be so hard," she said reluctantly. "Do say what I must, I can't think how to face it, except in the blindest way."
"Do not be afraid. Tell me frankly, how I have failed you, in what respect I have failed short."
"But you haven't!"
"Then what is it you told me to make you run away from me?"
"I'm sure you could have done nothing."
"Still, you run away!"
"No—I don't."

INTELLIGENCE OF COLLEGE MEN NOW LOWER IS REPORT

Dr. Frederick A. Hall Makes Summary of Conditions Now and in Past.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Dec. 11.—The average intelligence of college students is lower than that which prevailed years ago, according to the annual report of Dr. Frederick A. Hall, chancellor of Washington University.

The conclusion, the report explains, coincides with that of authorities in other institutions and ascertained through correspondence. The number of college students has been increasing steadily, the report states.

"If the present growth of numbers is indicative of what may be expected in the near future," continues the report, "the colleges will have to watch carefully in order to prevent turning out a lower type of graduate than that which is charged to colleges by the United States government."

"It is only to say that, so far as research work the faculty is the subject that is the backbone of the body here, this has been a steady decline of that of previous years. That is, the young men of more powerful and earnest by reason of war experience, they seem to be less inclined to serious labor, and that an unusual proportion of students had to be dropped because of the inferior quality of their work."
The report asserts that until two years ago the proportional increase by women in the college section of the university was gaining notably in the proportional increase in the number of men, but that in the last two years the proportional increase by men has been greater. Men, the report adds, usually are reluctant to continue in classes in which they are outnumbered by women.
Some people can't even look at the swinging door of a restaurant kitchen without sadly reminiscent feelings.

YANK GIRLS DANCE

BEST, SAYS WALES

LONDON.—I have found in my travels that American girls are the best dancers in the world; was the admission made by the Prince of Wales at a dance given by Lady Ribblesdale who divorced the late John Jacob Astor.

Edward made the confession to Jane Tripp, the 19-year-old dancer in Charles Cochran's revue, "London Paris New York," who was another guest at the dance.

"I danced with heaps of American girls during my visit," the prince told Jane. "Generally speaking, they are better than English girls because they are not so absurdly nervous of me. Sometimes, however, they were quite too effusive. The Australian girls, too, were equally good and jolly."

EIGHT-YEAR CHILD TRAINS FOR CHESS

Wonders Comes From Europe and Shows Up American Experts

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) NEW YORK, Dec. 11.—Tadus Samuel, a Polish chess wonder of eight and one-half years who has defeated the most formidable masters of the checkerboard wherever the game is played in Europe, and who is fulfilling a two-month engagement demonstrating his skill to American experts, has been in training quarters in the country near New York most of the time since he arrived in this country.

The child prodigy explains through a staff of interpreters who translate successively from the youngster's Polish into French or German and thence finally into English that a chess player's training differs materially from other lines when they put themselves into combat form.

In clearing his intellectual decks for action, young Samuel does everything else within his juvenile capacity except play chess. Thus he is able to appear fresh and with an unburdened brain when called upon to match tactics with his opponents, whom he habitually takes on fifteen to thirty at a time.

So, in anticipation of a spirited tilt with some of the nation's foremost champions, the youngster is running the gamut of youthful activity from playing football or chasing cottontails in the fields to operating a miniature railroad system and braving the danger of being soundly scolded by his elders should one of his toy locomotives jump the tracks and near the polished parlor floor.

For young Samuel away from a chess board, in perform on which has been almost an obsession with him since the age of three, is a very normal sort of little boy, rather shy and backward with grown-ups but with a taste for diversion out-of-doors which would have entitled him to a place of honor among the associates of Tom Sawyer, Huck Finn and the rest of the gang had he been an American and a contemporary of that noted society.

One of his favorite diversions since coming to America has been in learning to drive a new automobile acquired for his use.

According to Samuel's father, who is a player noted for his skill in Polish chess circles, the boy first showed aptitude for the game at the age of three when he was taught the various moves of the chessmen. After playing through only a few games the boy acquired such skill that his father was no longer any match for him.

Thereafter his skill and fame increased space by space, he met and overcame the most formidable players of his native land and later of the entire continent.

During the war the youngster is said to have provided many an evening's amusement for German officers at the expense of their fellows who were humiliated by the straggling innumerable games of army headquarters.

Haiti Tries Plan to Bring Tourist to Visit Country

PORT AU PRINCE, Dec. 11.—Americans seldom come to Haiti except on business. It is the rarest thing to see a tourist here and ship travelers, stopping at this port for several hours, rush aboard again after a hurried survey of the water front section. The hordes of beggars besetting the visitors as they attempt to walk through well paved streets, lined with the lame and the blind discourages the visitors. The Chamber of Commerce, hitherto of this evil, is trying to end it for the organization admits that it is the thing that turns tourists away. Aside from the occupation forces there are about 200 Americans in the capital only four full standing days from New York. Haiti is lucky if it gets in eight or ten days.

Paper Recommends a New Rhine Territory

MANZ, Germany, Dec. 11.—The Echo du Rhin, which is published under the direction of the French military authorities, in an editorial recommends the support of a new Rhine territory under the leadership of Bavaria and Catholic Germany with a prospect of the inclusion of Austria later. The editorial concludes: "An impoverished and subdued Prussia and a rich free south Germany would insure peace and prosperity for France."

British Workmen Are Making Thrift Plans

LONDON, Dec. 11.—British workmen as well as the French are practicing thrift. This is indicated by the fact that deposits in the Post Office Savings Bank now total 251,000,000 lbs., compared with 186,000,000 lbs. in July, 1914, and 234,000,000 at the end of 1919.

It would never do to put the profitless in jail, as it would contaminate the regular criminals.

Political Science Now Being Taught in the German Schools

BERLIN, Dec. 11.—A German school of political science, the dream of the former Chancellor, Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, long before the world war, at last has been established in Berlin. The declaration of Mr. von Bethmann-Hollweg was made the occasion for much congratulatory talk by high German officials who expressed the opinion that a line of statesmen would be developed by the new institution to direct the progress of the German republic toward its former high place among the nations.

Foreign Minister Simons in an address declared German statescraft had always lacked trained leaders thoroughly schooled in political science and for that reason the people had had small faith in their officials. He hoped that the new school would help along the idea of the Ecole Libre de sciences Politiques, of Paris.

Ty Cobb Slated As Manager of Tigers to Replace Hughie

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) NEW ORLEANS, La.—Ty Cobb is going to manage the 1921 Detroit Tigers. Frank J. Navin, president of the Tigers, may come here for a final conference with the Geoghegans, or may hold it at his Augusta, Ga., home on or before Dec. 12.

Cobb, now on a duck shooting trip near here with Rick Wood, and owner of the Birmingham club, and a party of wealthy sportsmen, practically admitted the management of the club has been forced upon him.

To friends in New Orleans, Cobb said he preferred to continue a private life in the ranks, but Navin declined to accept his stand and insisted Ty assume the burden of rebuilding the club.

Cobb, it is said, will sign a three-year contract. The salary he is to receive no doubt will be in the neighborhood of $25,000 per season. As a private in the ranks Ty's pay is supposed to have been $20,000.

In addition to drawing the largest salary Detroit has ever paid a manager, Cobb will say the final word to be traded, sold, or shipped to the minors.

Sunday School Has Novel Plan Raising Funds For Welfare

That the members of the First Presbyterian Church, who are engaged in the welfare of their congregation, are also interested in the welfare of the community, is evidenced by the fact that the members of the Sunday School have adopted a plan of raising funds for the welfare of the community. The plan is to sell a certain number of tickets for a certain amount of money, and the proceeds to be used for the welfare of the community.

More Deer Killed Than Last Season

KINDERGARTEN WORK SUCCESS

Exhibit This Week Brings Out Interesting Features of System.

That a new era in kindergarten training is in fact being evidenced by the display of the kindergarten work that was shown at Erickson's school this week. The work from the kindergarten of the Detroit, Washington Webster and three schools drew expressions of approval from all who witnessed it.

Miss Wilson, supervisor of public and kindergarten, explained in detail the new plan, being worked out in the city.

The children have a free period every day, in which they are permitted and encouraged to make whatever they wish. The child is provided with every material, bits of cloth scraps of wood and from the manual training department at the city school, card board boxes and paints, and the only expense so far has been the tools, hammers, saws, knives and axes.

In continuing the exhibit, the purpose of this free period is to furnish the opportunity for development of the child's initiative and independent thinking and to learn to make use of what is given them. The child is encouraged to make whatever he wishes, and the child is encouraged to make whatever he wishes.

The child is provided with every material, bits of cloth scraps of wood and from the manual training department at the city school, card board boxes and paints, and the only expense so far has been the tools, hammers, saws, knives and axes.

One child discovered that by rolling a small piece of clay in his hands he made a round ball which resembled the wooden beads the children had been stringing. He made a number of these and strung them and later painted them red and blue.

The present mind, of course, may be quite slow, and it was only by the means of much thinking that he worked out any thing," she said.

A good sized box, made of card board and painted black with yellow spots, was nicely finished by a matron, made of a flour bag and stuffed with excelsior pillows made of salt bags with sheets and a comforter knitted in blue yarn were made. Such work was made by a group, at least most of the work is individual.

One school worked for months on a good sized dolls house, and furnished it completely. Although the house was too large to be moved, most of the furniture was on display.

A small boy, while experimenting with a new and hard two holes in a piece of wood, sand papered it, and pronounced it "Something you look through when you can't see far off." The boy holes in his "binoculars" were wide apart, but on a straight line.

"Hooten Nanny" is the original representation of something that was made by a child. The boy had seen them out west. No one has been able to find out what it is.

One little girl brought a picture of a woman's pillow boxes of underwear in a wastebasket. This she fastened to a standard and under it she scrawled on a double sheet of paper these words: "Oh Mother Hubbard went to the neighbor to get her poor dog some underwear but it didn't fit the dog." She could hardly write, but she had her teacher write it for her, and then painstakingly copied it, so that it can be read by anyone used to a child's penmanship.

Numberless other articles made by the children including a milk wagon, a school slide, tables, stoves, rolling pins, cradles, dolls and wrist watches, and other articles made of clay.

Interest in the fundamental principle in teaching small children," said Miss Wilson "if the child is given a chance to work out things he is interested in he will progress much faster." The exhibit was judged by Mrs. W. E. Olds, Miss Wilson and Miss Jackson, head of the Economics Department. The winners will be announced later.
