SUPERINTENDENT OLDS WILL BE AT HEAD OF SCHOOLS FOR TWO MORE YEARS AT LEAST

Board Grants Substantial Increase in Salary to Keep Him.

Contract Is for $5,500 the First Year and $6,000 for the Following Year.

All is quiet in the school board room where Olds is to remain, a committee of the board having decided to keep him at least two more years.

Olds is apparently good all was made up to the time he left for work to lesson Michigan and the world about him and that he could make no better place to go than Escanaba. He has the time and the climate now to consider his future in the quietness of his office.

The school board investigated the conduct of other schools in Wisconsin and Michigan and found no place to go but to the new city of Oshkosh, which had been granted a charter by the state legislature.

The school year starts on July 1, so according to the new contract with the city, the new salary will go into effect next July 1, with the following year's contract to go into effect.

Contracts were also voted to three new teachers. They have been teaching without contracts in the schools for the past two or three months.

Since he has been an active interest in affairs of the city and made a number of friends who will support the school board in their action in last evening.

LABORERS ASK REDUCTION OF TEN PER CENT

Vote Will Be Taken at Once to See When New Wage Scale Will Go Into Effect.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 29.—Officers of labor unions, representing skilled employees of the coal fields, today adopted a general resolution to stop on wage scale of the Atlantic Coast & Tennessee Shipping Corporation, that the wages be reduced 10 per cent in order to bring down the production costs.

Proposals made to the Union leaders of the distribution shipping corporation in New York were accepted, it was said. The union wanted the ruling to go into effect on February 14th, while the latter corporation expects a decree to stand until March 1.

WALSH ROADS ARE DISPOSED OF TO OTHER RAILROADS

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO, Jan. 29.—The sale of one railroad and lease of another, which practically amounts to the disposal of both of them before a part of the railroads' financial difficulties of the late John R. Walsh, was arranged today.

Banks of the Chicago Clearing House Association took over the roads when they took over his property. One of the roads in Southern Illinois from Salem to Alton was sold to a representative of another railroad company.

The total damage and loss caused by the fire set by Smith are estimated at approximately three quarters of a million dollars.

It was said by authorities that he had made a complete confession which was soon after repudiated. However, today he confessed his guilt again.

Six of the charges were for receiving arson, while the others were for breaking and entering.

Smith was arrested several weeks ago after the entire country had been panic-stricken by the damages from which were breaking out in that section.

The Shadow of the Sheltering Pines

A New Romance of the Storm Country

By GRACE MILLER WHITE

Copyright by the H. R. Fly Company.

SYNOPSIS.

CHAPTER I.—Lively and almost friendless, Tomibel Devon, living on a canal boat, child of a brutal father and a worn-out, discouraged mother, wanders into a Salvation Army hall at Ithaca, N. Y. There she meets a young Salv. Army captain, Philip MacCauley.

CHAPTER II.—Uriah Devon, Tony's father, returns to the boat from a protracted "spue" and announces he has arranged for Tony to marry a worthless companion of his, Reginald Brown. Mrs. Devon objects, and Uriah beats her. She intimates there is a secret connected with Tomibel.

CHAPTER III.—In clothes that Uriah has brought down—date a baby's picture with a notation of a reward for its return to a Doctor Pendlehaven. She goes to return the picture.

CHAPTER IV.—With the Pendlehaven's, a family of wealth, live Mrs. Curtis, a cousin, her son and daughter, Katherine and Curtis and Reginald Brown. Katherine is deeply in love with Philip MacCauley.

CHAPTER V.—Tomibel returns the picture to Doctor John, and learns it belongs to his brother, Dr. Paul Pendlehaven. It is a portrait of Doctor Paul's child, who had been stolen in her infancy, and her loss had wrecked Doctor Paul's life. Doctor John goes with Tony to the canal boat and intimates to Mrs. Devon a secret.

CHAPTER VI.—Returning to consciousness, Tony is informed by Tony of her visitor. She is deeply agitated, makes Tony swear she will never tell of Devon's brutality, and disappears.

CHAPTER VII.—Tony's personality and her kindness appeal to Doctor John and he arranges to take her into his house as a companion to his invalid brother.

CHAPTER VIII.—Tony's presence in the house has a good effect on Doctor Paul. He begins to take a new interest in life. Visiting the canal boat, Tony finds Reginald Brown there. He attempts to kiss her. Captain MacCauley appears and throws the man into the lake. Uriah Devon orders MacCauley off his boat.

CHAPTER IX.—With the girl a captive, Devon insists that she shall marry Brown. On her persistent refusal he beats her brutally, throws her into the canal, unmasks the boat, and starts to leave Ithaca. MacCauley follows in his canoe. He takes the girl into the canoe through the cabin window. The men believe Tony has committed suicide. MacCauley decimates his love, and Tony acknowledges she returns it. The girl returns to the Pendlehaven home.

CHAPTER X.—At sunset in the Pendlehaven home MacCauley, not knowing of her presence in the canoe, meets Tony and his affectionate greeting alarms Katherine and her mother.

CHAPTER XI.—MacCauley calls at the Pendlehaven home in his car, ignores Katherine, and takes Tony for a drive. Katherine is heartbroken.

This voice was so low, so tender, that Mrs. Curtis ground her teeth in rage, and Uriah Devon felt his power ebbing away.

Tomibel walked swiftly to Doctor John's side and slipped her hand into his.

"Those two said I couldn't even say good-by to—to." She bowed her head against the kindly arm that supported her and for a moment was so agitated she could not proceed.

"Hush, dear," pleaded Pendlehaven. "Hush! Do you want to stay here?"

"Yes, oh, yes, sir, I do, indeed, sir," she cried. "But—but—"

"Then you'll stay," the doctor told her in a voice low-pitched and stern. "If your father thinks—"

"I'm goin' to have my girl," gritted Uriah.

"Then you have the law at your back to use Mr. Devon," returned the doctor, "and you, Sarah; I'll ask you to attend to your own affairs after this."

"But, Cousin John," argued Mrs. Curtis, "she's the man's own child. Surely he has a right to—"

A sound of soft pealing through the house cut off her words. Then came heavy footsteps in the hall. Before anyone could figure on the cause, of this commotion, the door burst open and several uniformed men came in. When Uriah Devon caught sight of them, he made a dash for the window, but two heavy officers were on him before he was half way across the room. It took but a few minutes for the officials to explain to Doctor Pendlehaven that they had been waiting Devon for a long time, that he was wanted for a crime in Syracuse.

When they were leading him out, unshaven and sleepily enraged, he turned to Tomibel.

"I'll get even with you, miss," he snapped at her, his eyes full of hate, "and I'll get even with you too, master." He threw the last half of his sentence at Doctor John, whose only reply was a shrug of his shoulders.

During the struggle between the detectives and Uriah, Mrs. Curtis had snatched at Pendlehaven's neck, but he had cast her off without ceremony. Now the three were alone, Tomibel palpitating and fearful, Mrs. Curtis sobbing on the floor, and Doctor John looking at her sternly.

"Sarah," he said haughtily, "I saw the disgraceful way you were pulling this child's hair when I came in, and at last, much as I dislike doing it, I must ask you to leave my house."

"Leave?" Mrs. Curtis screamed. "Where would I go? I haven't a place in the world but this."

A careless gesture from Doctor John told Tomibel that that fact didn't interest him. She slipped her hand into his. Lifting eyes, were troubled and dark-circled, she begged:

"Let'er stay, Cousin John. Mebbe she didn't know my daddy would have killed me if he'd got me back to the Dirty Mary."

Pendlehaven put his arm around her, and with a ring of fervor in his voice, said:

"There, Sarah, there's pity for you. If you stay, it's because Tony Devon pleads for you, not because I have any sense of duty toward you. I hope you feel properly grateful."

The doctor strode to the door, opened it and motioned for her to be gone. Then weeping, she clattered away, her sobs muffle even after the door was closed.

For a few moments Tony Devon wept silently in John Pendlehaven's arms.

"Oh, it's awful to have daddy taken away in jail," she moaned, "but he won't be good, he just won't."

"You're much better off to have him away, little girl," soothed Pendlehaven.

CHAPTER XIII.

Good for Evil.

That night for dinner, five people sat about the Pendlehaven table. Reggie, pale and miserable looking, sat next to his mother, and Philip MacCauley was opposite Doctor John. Katherine, silent and morose, was at her own place. She had heard her mother's version of the afternoon's happening in amazement and anger, and it only added to her discontent to hear Cousin John tell the tale to Philip.

"Sarah thinks," went on the doctor, "that we should have family given her up without a word to—to that brute."

"I can't see how you can keep a man's child from him, Cousin John," excused Mrs. Curtis, a dull red mounting to each high cheekbone.

Pendlehaven laughed.

"She wouldn't have been much use to him in prison, my dear Sarah," was his answer.

"What're you talking about?" demanded Reggie, turning red-rimmed eyes on his mother.

"Your Cousin John insists on keeping the daughter of a man named Devan in the house here when her father wants her home," she replied.

Reggie's face grew a misty gray.

"Devon," he repeated mechanically. "I didn't know we had any such girl here."

"She's always with Cousin Paul," remarked Katherine, with a sidelong glance at Philip. "It does seem satisfying though, to know who she is. Mother says she comes of common stock."

MacCauley's face grew dark, and Pendlehaven cast a glance of anger at his young cousin.

"Both Kathie and I," began Mrs. Curtis. "Why, Reggie, my darling, I never saw you look so sick in my life!"

"Aw, cut it!" growled the boy, unsteadily. "Tell me what became of the girl's father."

"He's going to jail for a nice long rest," interjected Pendlehaven.

It seems he was mixed up in a theft in Syracuse."

Reginald got up from the table.

"I don't want anything more to eat," he growled, as his mother started to remonstrate with him. "Tui go to bed."

When he got upstairs, he looked at himself in the glass. How white and thin he had grown! He looked as if he had died and was trying to come to life again. He was frightened almost out of his pits too. Then Tomibel Devon really was in the house. It hadn't been her ghost that had thrown him bodily from the window sill after all. Uriah, knowing that, had come and made a demand for his daughter and had been arrested. Perhaps he would be arrested also, and for a crime worse than stealing. Had the girl mentioned the fact of his trying to poison Paul Pendlehaven? If she hadn't, would she? When Mrs. Curtis came in to ask how he felt, he was crumpled in a big chair, shaking as if he had been attacked by ague.

"My goodness, Reggie, you look awful," he said haughtily, "I saw the disgraceful way you were pulling this child's hair when I came in, and at last, much as I dislike doing it, I must ask you to leave my house."

"Leave?" Mrs. Curtis screamed. "Where would I go? I haven't a place in the world but this."

A careless gesture from Doctor John told Tomibel that that fact didn't interest him. She slipped her hand into his. Lifting eyes, were troubled and dark-circled, she begged:

"Let'er stay, Cousin John. Mebbe she didn't know my daddy would have killed me if he'd got me back to the Dirty Mary."

Pendlehaven put his arm around her, and with a ring of fervor in his voice, said:

"There, Sarah, there's pity for you. If you stay, it's because Tony Devon pleads for you, not because I have any sense of duty toward you. I hope you feel properly grateful."

The doctor strode to the door, opened it and motioned for her to be gone. Then weeping, she clattered away, her sobs muffle even after the door was closed.

For a few moments Tony Devon wept silently in John Pendlehaven's arms.

"Oh, it's awful to have daddy taken away in jail," she moaned, "but he won't be good, he just won't."

"You're much better off to have him away, little girl," soothed Pendlehaven.

AIL FOR ACUTE INDIGESTION

By U. S. Public Health Service

Acute indigestion is caused by eating decomposed canned goods or tainted meats; food that is hard to digest; eating too rapidly, and not chewing the food properly; or excessive indulgence in spirituous liquors. Swallowing liquids which are either too hot or too cold may also cause this trouble.

Persons most liable to acute indigestion are those who live in bad-hygienic surroundings; those who are in a rundown condition; those who are subject to gout or rheumatism; or those who have chronic indigestion.

An attack of acute indigestion is usually ushered in by a feeling of uneasiness, or illness in the stomach; a lump in the throat that disappears on swallowing and immediately return again; and there may be also thirst, nausea, vomiting, and the belching of gas or liquid, and sometimes vomiting of undigested food.

The patient should be made to vomit by giving large drafts of warm water, either plain or mixed with mustard (a tea-spoonful of mustard to a glass of water), one cup of water followed by others until the desired result is obtained. Warm salt water may also be found useful for the same purpose.

After the stomach has been emptied and hot water can be retained for half an hour, give a dose of bicarbonate of soda. Hot poultices over the region of the stomach and abdomen will relieve the pain, should any exist.

DETROIT LOOKS TO A BUILDING BOOM THIS YEAR

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 28.—The coming year will see a large volume of building operations in Detroit, in the opinion of Elton F. Haseldin, secretary of the Detroit Builders and Trade Exchange Association. Indications are that fewer factories and factory additions are to be built than in other recent years, the volume of apartment houses and branch bank buildings will be larger than at any other time since the war, in Mr. Haseldin's opinion.

Bank building construction will be especially noticeable during the year.

NO "INTRIGUE" OR "UNTRUTH"

Not content to let the dead past bury up dead, the New York "World" goes out of its way to revive old and long-controversies and—asserts that the Republicans engaged in a campaign of intrigue and untruth against President Wilson," says the Republican Publicity Association in a statement issued today through its President, Hon. Jennings Birney, Jr. Republicans are desirous of disengaging from mid the quarrels and accusations of the campaign; for these is work of utmost importance to be done in reasing the nation from the un-pleasable condition to which Democratic policies and practices have brought it.
But if the leader of the Democratic press, like President Wilson himself, resists to have peace, then let the conflict go on. In view of our issues, the Republicans have nothing to fear.

It is not true that the Republicans conducted a campaign of intrigue and untruth. Accusations made against President Wilson were not mere ac-sions; they were statements that the record President Wilson had made a record in the public view.

It was President Wilson who said that the League of Nations would require the United States to make the supreme sacrifice, and Republicans accepted that statement as true. They went to the country on the question whether the people of America desire to make a supreme sacrifice. There was no intrigue or untruth in that, unless President Wilson himself, uttered the untruth. Can Republicans be censured because they accepted the description of the League as President Wilson gave it?

The other day Wilson who started the satanism of extravagance by asserting that the people do not care about money, their government spends it as fast as they want for it.
That was in defense of demands for increased appropriations before there was any thought of war. The language could not be interpreted otherwise than as an excuse for the huge expenditures the administration was making. Men opposed to cabinet members by President Wilson submitted in Congress that the Secretary of the Treasury, a son-in-law of the President, their annual demands for appropriations, and these were granted without stint while the Democrats had control of Congress, and also during the war while the Republicans had control. The Republicans cut two and a half billions out of the demands after the war ended. All this is a matter of record—a record that President Wilson made. Are the Republicans to be held guilty of "intrigue and untruth" because they publish the record of expenditures as President Wilson made it?

It was President Wilson who humiliated the nation by describing it as "too proud to fight" and later demanding peace without victory? Republicans denied that this was a true statement of American spirit. Are Republicans to be held guilty of "intrigue and untruth" because President Wilson deliberately used the offensive phrase as quoted above?

It was President Wilson who dis-manded power and more power before and during the war, and refused to relinquish any of that power when peace had been restored. It was he who set up an autocracy—an autocracy which hampered American industry and irritated the American people until they demanded that the official doctors get off their backs. Are Republicans to be held responsible for President Wilson's course in trying to maintain an autocracy in violation of the spirit of American institutions?
Are they to be accused of "intrigue and untruth" for accepting the issue of government by men as a substitute for government by law—an issue that President Wilson forced upon the country?

"Can the World point out one specific instance of Republican intrigue and untruth?"

Cities and God's Out-of-Doors

Jessie Jensen, consulting landscape architect of the West Chicago park, author of the comprehensive plan for the roadside planting of the Lincoln highway by the National Federation of Women's clubs, promoter of Illinois state parks and president of the Friends of Our Native Landscape, this summer visited a friend who has a cabin in the northern woods. He found the big estate broken by enclosures because of their noisy ways and their carelessness with fire. Driving Jones to Chicago he met the next message of the Great City. The vegetation decorating the roadside flowers and all trimmed back a debris of waste paper, cans, sharp skins and other remains of the woodland feasts.

"The motor car brings city folks into the country by the thousands," says this distressed nature-lover, "and through their total ignorance of those things that call them away from the city to give them joy and pleasure and a new life, they are gradually defrauded from enjoying them. There is in everybody an inherent yearning for the roadside flower and the beauty of God's out-of-doors, but folks just learn that to be able to have them with us we must leave them alone."

DAN CUPID IN DEADLOCK FOR MATTOON YOUTH

Girls, Boys Who Smoke Cigarettes from Their Company.

Then Boys Issue Notice That Girls Must "Cover Up" Or Their Presence Is Unpleasant.

MATTOON, Ill., Jan. 29.—Dan Cupid is finding his bows and arrows are thus far quite useless against the hearts of the girls of the West Side Christian Church of this city who have formed a club not to keep company with boys who smoke cigarettes or use tobacco in any form.

The club is continuing to grow, according to its sponsor, Edward McKee, superintendent of the Sunday school of that church and the marked decrease in the number of "matches" is noted, according to Mr. McKee, while a few legal boys have given up the habit.

Dan Cupid's second and hardest blow to the bow that sent him flying came when a number of boy students at the Mattoon high school retaliated by forming an opposing organization to try to make out of the girls of today the kind of girls our mothers were.

It was at a meeting of the Christian Endeavor Society a week ago that Mr. McKee urged the girls to sign pledges not to keep company with boys who used the weed. Twenty-five pledges were signed immediately and during the past week the club grew to forty and bounds. The Christian Endeavor Society girls now hope to induce every girl in town to join their ranks.

"Do you want to stand around while some boy is smoking a cigarette or walking up the street with him as he dashes the spit thing in his teeth or do you want to snuff the nasty smoke?" they asked. The answer they say, is surely no; a new signer to the pledge is obtained.

It was then that the boys decided something must be done. They organized, seeing their sweethearts had a number of the male students at the local high school formed a club, the members signing pledges as follows:

I do solemnly affirm that I will not court a girl who persists in wearing knighting skirts.

Wearing low-cut waists below the point where mother cuts them when she cuts a girl.

Wearing silk stockings.

Using perfume or rouge.

Affection dances minus her cut.

Putting out her eyebrows or wearing her hair in such a style so as to hide her eyes.

Mr. McKee looks upon the boys' organization as merely a big club to right the girls out of their stand against tobacco.

"It would be a good thing, though," he added, "if something like that could be done. We need more girls today like our mothers."

In the meantime, both sides are holding firm, according to members, and much good is being done, according to Mr. McKee.

This is not a temporary movement on the part of the girls, said Mr. McKee. "They are in earnest."

"So are we," retorted the boys.

Many Hold On to Fourth Liberty Loan Bonds Here

Fish Commissioners Want Public Backing for Idea; Inspect Fish Hatchery at the Soo.

DETROIT, Mich., Jan. 28.—Thousands of Michigan persons, holders of Fourth Liberty loan 4½ per cent bonds, are turning in the bonds to be exchanged for the new issue of permanent bonds, according to Detroit bankers.

Owners of the bonds deposit them in their banks and receive a receipt. The banks then send the bonds to the Federal Reserve bank and receive permanent bonds for delivery to the owners. The permanent bonds bear compound interest for every interest payment date of maturity. The first interest is due April 15 and the exchange must be made before that date if the owners are to receive their interest promptly although the interest will not be lost if the exchange is made later.

Seniority Is Held By Eight Senators

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS)

LANSING, Mich., Jan. 28.—Eight senators share seniority despite the fact that the commission which gave them their present position as a committee on the Senate, was created by the state legislature, and are eager to let their public work for the project continue. The senators are not fully satisfied with the proposed measure.

In this connection it is thought that the most interested citizens of the Senate, that the commission which gave them their present position as a committee on the Senate, was created by the state legislature, and are eager to let their public work for the project continue.

The commissioners were on the floor of the Civic and Conference Association at luncheon time yesterday at the Hotel de la Sante Marie, where they discussed over the interests of the state, particularly agriculture, commerce, and industry.
