NOT RIPE FOR INDEPENDENCE

BELIEVED ADMINISTRATION WILL TELL FILIPINOS THEY ARE NOT TO BE SET FREE AT ONCE.

GEN. WOOD WILL INVESTIGATE

Islanders Have Advanced Wonderfully, It Is Declared, but Have Not Yet Reached Plane to Enable Them to Be a Self-governing People.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.
Washington—Major Gen. Leonard Wood has been ordered to the Philippines to study conditions in the islands, and to make a report thereon for the benefit of the government. The general, as the country knows, has been offered the governorship of the Philippines, but the understanding is that as soon as his study of the situation is over, he will return to the United States and make his report, retire from the service, and become provost of the University of Pennsylvania.

The administration seems to be convinced that things are not altogether right in the Philippines. Be this as it may, it is definitely known that the Filipinos expected that the United States soon would release them from what they probably look on as bondage, and make of them an independent people. Bluntly speaking, there seems to be no such thought in the part of the officials in Washington. They do not believe that the Filipinos are ripe for independence, and that if they were some time before they can be turned loose with safety to care for themselves.

It is charged in Washington that American officials in the islands in the last eight years have encouraged the Filipinos in their belief that soon they were to be set free. Already this encouragement, it is said, has had the effect of producing marred resolutions. There have been troubles in various parts of the Philippines, and the constant assertion is that the wariness of the government in releasing them as if they were no longer subject to American rule. There are the charges made, and General Wood is going over to find out all about it.

Wood May Break News.
When the United States government, as it is almost certain to do, breaks the news to the Filipinos that they are not to be set free at once, the breaking of the news must be done diplomatically, and with every precaution to avert serious troubles. If the job of telling the Islanders the truth shall fall to General Wood, he probably will be able to do it in a way which will reduce to the least possible minimum the resentment which is sure to follow. Wood "has a war with him." Normally, he is exceedingly gentle, but if duty demands he is stern.

Washington officials, legislative and executive, when they talk about the subject at all, say that the main reason for not turning the Filipinos loose is that with racial and other conditions as they are in the islands, freedom would bring instant disorder. They go on to say that even since Dewey's day the United States government has been conducting an unending work in the Philippines, the people themselves, and the institutions forming the material for the base of construction. It is declared here that the Islanders have advanced wonderfully, but that they have not yet reached the plane of efficiency, self-restraint and temperance which will enable them to be a self-governing people. The argument of the opponents of immediate liberation is that it is better to go on with the work until success is assured rather than to turn a people loose who cannot complete the work for themselves.

There is also some fear in Washington that if the Islanders are released from United States control, they may be gobbled up on some pretense or other by another power. It is probable today that the Islanders would be overrun if we had war with a great power which might succeed in overcoming our navy, but of course this a matter aside from the main present issue.

Strong as Gibraltar.
Officials of the War department realize that because of the location of the Philippines ordinary fortifications would be of comparatively little use if there should be a sudden attack by an enemy. Corregidor, fortified as it is, has changed the whole face of affairs as far as ease of approach to Manila is concerned. If the Spaniards years ago had been given the sense to fortify properly this rock island at the entrance to Manila bay, Dewey might have been shut out from his victory of May, 1898. Army officers and naval officers have said that Corregidor is as strong as Gibraltar.

All the work that the United States has done in the Philippines in the way of constructing fortifications has gone on with comparatively little notice. All the work has been done by Americans, no foreigner ever having been allowed to take part in it, even to the extent of digging a spadeful of earth or blasting a rock. If the American fleet should meet with disaster in eastern waters, Manila bay would prove to be a safe place for refuge for the vessels that manage to escape destruction.

GRANDMA USED SAGE

TEA TO DARKEN HAIR

She mixed Sulphur with it to Restore Color, Gloss, Youthfulness.

Common garden sage brewed into a heavy tea with sulphur added, will turn gray, streaked and faded hair beautifully dark and luxuriant. Just a few applications will prove a revelation if your hair is fading, streaked or gray. Mixing the Sage Tea and Sulphur recipe at home, though, is tedious. An easier way is to get a bottle of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound at any drug store all ready for use. This is the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients.

While wispy, gray, faded hair is not sinful, we all desire to retain our youthful appearance and attractiveness. By darkening your hair with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, no one can tell, because it does so naturally & evenly. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, by repeating all gray hairs have disappeared, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, glossy, soft and luxuriant.

LABOR UNREST IN BRITAIN

General Idea That Wage Struggle on a Large Scale Is About to Be inaugurated.

All signs point to the colliery industry as the first which will be engaged in a wage struggle on a large scale. In the British Isles. There will be a new development soon following upon the detailed inquiries by both parties in the wage negotiations to discover what the general body of both owners and miners desire. In the meetings in the various coal fields, the miners have declared for a new standard wage, embodying nearly all present earnings, while the owners declare that, unless wages are substantially reduced, many collieries must close. The attitude of the miners will be decided at a coming national conference, and in the subsequent renewed negotiations a decisive stage will be reached. A struggle is regarded as almost certain, and the fact that many colliery owners, especially in South Wales, are giving notice to terminate contracts in fourteen days, so that thereafter the mines may be closed at one day's notice, is regarded as an ominous portent.

Labor's Exodus From Ohio Farms.

According to a recent survey made by an agricultural statistician of the United States bureau of crop estimates and the Ohio bureau of agricultural statistics, there was a decrease of 50,000 men and boys over 15 years of age working on farms in Ohio for the year ended June, 1920. The survey covered from 100 to 200 farms in every county of the state. For every man who came back to farm life during the year covered, seven left farms for other work.

It is estimated from the returns that at present 410,000 men and boys are actually working on farms as compared to 470,000 a year ago and approximately 500,000 three years ago. Seventy thousand were reported as having been hired for wages, while a year ago there were nearly 100,000. About one-half, therefore, of those who abandoned the farm during the twelve months covered by the survey were hired men.

METAL MINERS WORKING UNDER POOR CONDITIONS

State laws regulating working conditions in metal mines are lax and inefficient, especially in regard to ventilation, said a statement by the bureau of mines, based on a survey of metal mines in Montana, Colorado, Utah, Nevada, Arizona and other states by Frank H. Hartigan, a mining engineer of the bureau, and by engineers and surgeons of the public health service. "The better health of coal miners as compared with metal miners probably is due to the better ventilation of coal mines," the statement said.

Time to Adopt Eight-Hour Day.

Employment in the steel and iron mills decreased 18 per cent in January as compared with December, according to figures issued by the government. It was the largest slump in jobs registered among thirteen manufacturing industries survey, by the bureau of labor statistics.

The reason is obvious of course—the other industries were hit harder and earlier. But the drop serves, at any rate, to emphasize the arguments for the adoption of the three-shift day in steel and iron, writes Arthur M. Evans in the Chicago Tribune. With the plants operating at the present rate, the establishment of the eight-hour day in the continuous processes, it is estimated, would give work to 75,000 or 80,000 more men.

Lloyd's Register reports 114 tank owners in process of construction. The United States is building 79, the United Kingdom 32, and other countries three.

EASTERN WOMAN MAKES MODELS OF ALL STYLES

Dresses Dolls Covering Period of 1,000 Years to Show Change of Styles in That Time.

UTTERSFIELD, Mass., March 29.—Fashion in woman's wear for the last 1,000 years from the abundant robes of the Roman patrician to the abbreviated skirts of today are represented on 180 dolls dressed by Mrs. Charles F. Wright of this city. Work has begun on the unique collection of mannequins more than six years ago, after months of study of authenticated prints portraying styles of different periods. It is said to be one of the best of its kind in the world.

In a specially furnished room madames of the dark ages, contemplate belles of the Renaissance and sprightly debutantes of our ante-bellum and modern days. Eye also has a place in the fashion review, but merely as an example of how clothes make the woman.

One of the most interesting costumes is that of a fisherwoman from the Fifth of Fourth. Tailored suits and peeka-boos wulsts have had no effect on the busy Scots who live on that arm of the sea, for their dress standard has remained unchanged for 500 years.

Shifts in American styles are illustrated by eight waxen faced beauties starting with the street gown of 1850. In this display are an afternoon frock of 1857, a calling costume of 1863, ball gowns of 1869 and spring wear of 1869. The opera gown of 1910 stands laughably erect in the extremely tight skirt of that year.

Leaders in daring costumes are the Japanese from the time of their introduction to the Western world. Slant eyed, brown faced dolls present a complete picture of feminine Nippon's armor of conquest in rich silks and satins. A large group of Chinese mannequins, arrayed in heavy silk fabric, peep from beneath conical Oriental sunshades.

Hats have received particular attention in the collection. There are noted headgear popular in the year 1200, the monster mitre hats and the sugar-loaf hoods with clusters of hair dressed high against the supporting least-shaped device.

In analyzing the various styles, Mrs. Wright who is an author and the wife of the district attorney of Bethesda and Hatfield counties, says woman of all ages apparently cared less for the material and more for the cut than the world over.

The use of motion pictures to demonstrate trade possibilities of foreign countries is proving a success. A special representative of the Chilean Government is using this method in New Orleans to convey an accurate impression of the natural resources and opportunities awaiting the American investor in that country.

Late pieces of American cost in French markets are causing much comment. The United States is now making deliveries at $14 a ton, of $2 pon's armor of conquest in rich silks under the British price.

8.25% for Ten Years

The Investors' Guide of the Chicago Tribune of March 19, 1921, reads as follows:
"E. H. A. in connection with its issue of $2,000,000 of sinking fund notes the De Laval Separator Company has just filed a complete statement at Springfield. It shows net tangible assets equal to about four times the loan. Net earnings in 1920 after interest were $918,377; in 1919, $1,555,321. The difference was due partly to increased cost of operation and a larger allowance for depreciation. Earnings available for interest for the last decade have averaged six or seven times the interest on the new issue. A sinking fund will retire practically all the outstanding investments. They are a well secured investment.

ELECTRIC CHAIR BILL TO COME UP AGAIN TODAY

Was Defeated March 18 by But Two Votes; Members Absent.

If the Bill Goes Through, the Electric Chair Will Be Installed at the Jackson Prison.

LANSING, Mar. 29.—The Hart capital punishment bill was defeated in the house March 18, when it needed two of the necessary 51 votes for passage. Five members of the house, comprising the prison committee's investigating committee at Marquette, were absent.

The following day the bill was ordered reconsidered when a motion of order by Representative Edward Read, of Kalamazoo, carried. To prevent its reconsideration at once, with several members absent and the second debate followed with a motion to table the measure. This also carried. Rep. Charles Calkins, an active opponent of the bill, then attempted to force its consideration by pointing that it be taken from the table. His motion was not taken but moved to reconsider the vote by which it was defeated. The house adjourned with the latter motion pending.

When the house reconvened March 21, the bill's motion was on the calendar as unfinished business. It was debated and before a vote could be taken by 21 yeas motion to take the bill from the table the house adjourned. The following day the House adjourned apparently gave up the bill but later for he announced he would withdraw the matter on which the vote was interrupted the previous day, because he did not wish to force the house into another vote.

The capital punishment bill of 1919, which was passed by the house in 1919, was a more liberal one than the present one.

debate and the most complicated parliamentary tangle of any bill before the lower branch in years. When the members of the bill apparently had decided to let the measure take its course, members of the prison committee had returned and there appeared to be a prospect of assembling the full house membership. Representative Hart announced he would ask to have his bill taken from the table for final consideration today.

The Hart bill provides for capital punishment at the discretion of the jury or the court. Its supporters contend that this double optional provision, giving the jury power to recommend whether the sentence shall be death and the court power to sustain the jury's findings, would eliminate all possibility of executing innocent men or those convicted on circumstantial evidence.

Women are included with the provisions of the bill, and several amendments have been offered to provide for elimination of women from the provisions altogether, to make women who become mothers after conviction not be passed upon in a separate class over which the governing court has no power to impose sentence or to commute, and to add a clause exempting persons convicted purely on circumstantial evidence from the death penalty.

The bill provides for the execution by an electric chair at Jackson prison. Persons sentenced to death could be confined in a "death chamber" and all persons, except for physician and hospital such friends and relatives as the prison authorities may grant permission could be admitted access to the chamber.

The bill was the subject of one of the most picturesque public hearings of the present legislative session. As the opponents of the measure, the friends of the committee were former inmates of a number of penal institutions. They dramatically presented their conditions and physical conditions, and in many instances they were able to show the committee the results of their imprisonment.

Supporters of the measure have demanded more statistics to further their cause, and to see what the bill would do for the "old boys" in the state. They have displayed some of the statistics to show that the bill would be a more liberal one than the present one.

GIRLS! YOU CAN CHANGE SOX NOW

Several girls who have complained about buying stockings from a salesman, and then not getting the stockings, can get them if they will call at the post office. The socks or rather stockings are there now, have been there for some time, and what is more will be there for some time longer or if they are not called for.

The salesman was in town last night and was surprised to learn that he was under suspicion. He went to the post office and found out that the stockings had been here for a long time. It's up to the girls to go and get them—and forever hold their peace, says he.
