

OLD "RAIL" IS NARRATOR OF GREAT STORY

John L. Tennis of Green Bay, Tells of Freak Wreck in 1882.

Engine Exploded but Neither the Fireman or Engineer Were Hurt, Local Men in the Crew.

Green Bay is not lacking in reminiscences for the ultimate history of that great work of what civilized man has accomplished—the laying of the steel ribbons that would a nation of more than one hundred million souls together.

On a Thursday, September 7th, 1882, a Northern train pulled out of Green Bay at 6:25 a. m. for the North. Members of the crew, as far as is known, have not died with the exception of Frank Arnold and John L. Tennis, now ticket taker at the Colonial Theatre, Green Bay.

Mr. Tennis, who was a green of but three days, tells the following story of the most unusual railroad accident in the annals of railroad history.

The crew was comprised of Engineer William McKeever, Conductor Charles W. Wilson, Fireman William Sparks, Baggageman Frank Arnold, Brakeman John L. Tennis and Walter White, express messenger, John Rutledge, Mail Agent Horace White, Sleeping car conductor John Stockton, Sam Lyons news agent and Sam Bell colored porter.

"We left Green Bay for Ishpeming at 6:25 a. m. At the Upsala mile post McKeever stopped for the station. I was in the sleeping car when suddenly there was a crash, the force of which threw me half the length of the car and nearly stopped the train. For a matter of seconds I thought the train had crashed thru the wooden bridge. Thinking first of my life I rushed for the door.

"Slipping my way to the front platform of the still moving train, I imagine my surprise when I saw that the engine had disappeared. I applied the brakes and the train stopped.

"Conductor, Deben, who was in the sleeping car, called to me, 'What is the matter John? I told him to look ahead that the engine had blown up. For God's sake is the crew killed?'

"We looked into a field on our right and saw the engine at least two hundred feet away.

GIRL SCOUT WORK IN ESCANABA WILL BE STARTED SOON

Plans of Woman's Club Accepted by Community Council at Last Night's Meeting.

An organization of Girl Scouts was definitely decided upon for the city of Escanaba at a meeting last night of the community council following a report submitted by the Woman's Club and read by Mrs. J. R. Harris representing the Woman's Club.

At a meeting of the community council, held recently following a series of complaints from the girls of Escanaba that all the attention was being devoted to the boys of the city, members of the council decided to leave the matter of arranging and making plans for a Girl Scout organization in Escanaba up to the Woman's Club. At the last meeting a representative of the Woman's Club was instructed to report back to the Woman's Club any suggestion they would have concerning Girl Scout work.

The following report was submitted to the community council and placed on file. The executive committee was instructed to take immediate action on the plans advanced by the Woman's Club.

The Report

Whereas, The Community Council has requested the Escanaba Woman's Club to consider the advisability of organizing a permanent girls' organization in Delta county.

And Whereas, The Industrial Relations Association has offered to furnish without charge, office space, telephone, telegraphic service, and other incidentals and has offered their services in securing a specialist in girls' work.

Now Therefore, The Escanaba Woman's Club at a meeting held on the 13th day of April 1921, resolved:

First, That it is considered highly desirable to form a permanent girls' organization in Delta county.

Second, That the organization best fitted for the needs of this community is the Girl Scouts.

Institute New Movement

Third, That steps be taken to institute a Girl Scout movement in Delta county, and that a fund of twenty-five hundred ($2,500.00) dollars be raised for the purpose of paying salary traveling expenses, and other incidental expenses of a trained worker, with the understanding that this worker is to spend the same year or more in Escanaba as the amount of money raised in Escanaba compares with the total amount raised in Delta county.

Fourth, That each member of the Escanaba Community Council bring this matter before the organization which he represents, and urge its cooperation in carrying out this work.

Adopted this 14th day of March, A. D. 1921.

Mrs. H. W. Reed, President.

Mrs. H. T. Hanson, Acting Secretary.

Lands which Show Proper Soil Would Be Cleared by the State.

FARMERS of this state who may have lands not suitable for tillage and which, under better conditions, might produce profitable crops, will have state aid, should a bill which will be introduced at Lansing yesterday by Senator W. Under the bill farmers of the state might appeal to the county board of supervisors for aid in clearing their lands for farming purposes. A group of farmers who desired to have their cleared land appear before the respective board of supervisors, and if approved, the work might be let for the county board.

It is provided under the measure that farmers wishing to have their lands cleared should not have more than 20 acres of land cleared for farming purposes, with those having more than 20 acres, in a quarter section.

Former Escanaba Twirler Will Report for Spring Training April 18th.

Arthur "Slim" Cameron, former member of the pitching staff of the Escanaba baseball club leaves tonight for Ludington, Mich., where he will begin spring training on the mound with the Ludington nine of the Central League. "Slim" played good ball with the Escanaba boys all last summer but in the fall during an automobile trip to Crystal Falls he contracted a severe cold and rheumatism caught hold in his pitching arm. On his return to Escanaba he pitched against Manistique and Ishpeming while in a sick and weakened condition and as a result pitched poor ball, the remainder of the season. It is believed Cameron will make good with the Ludington team this season and good wishes for a successful year go with him to his new position. "Slim" says he always liked Northern Michigan and that he would sooner play ball on a smaller team here than go south. He will possibly visit Escanaba next fall after completing his season with the Ludington team.

The Tire Sensation of 1921

A Cord Puncture-proof Pneumatic Automobile Tire has been Perfected

THIS will be good news to motorists who base their tire purchases upon satisfactory service.

It is well-known that the Lee Tire & Rubber Company, makers of the only successful puncture-proof pneumatic tire, have been working to incorporate their steel disc system of protection into the cord tire.

During two years of scientific factory and road tests, this sensational new tire has proven out in an amazing manner.

In addition to being the equal of any other tire on the market in its cord construction, the Lee Puncture-proof Cord has the added feature of immunity from puncture.

So thoroughly has the Lee Cord Puncture-proof proven its ability to stand up under the most unfavorable tests that the company makes a sweeping cash-refund guarantee against puncture.

This is in addition to the unusually liberal mileage guarantee carried by all Lee Tires.

Lee Cord Puncture-proofs on loaded cars have been run repeatedly over spiked boards, roads strewn with tacks, nails and broken glass.

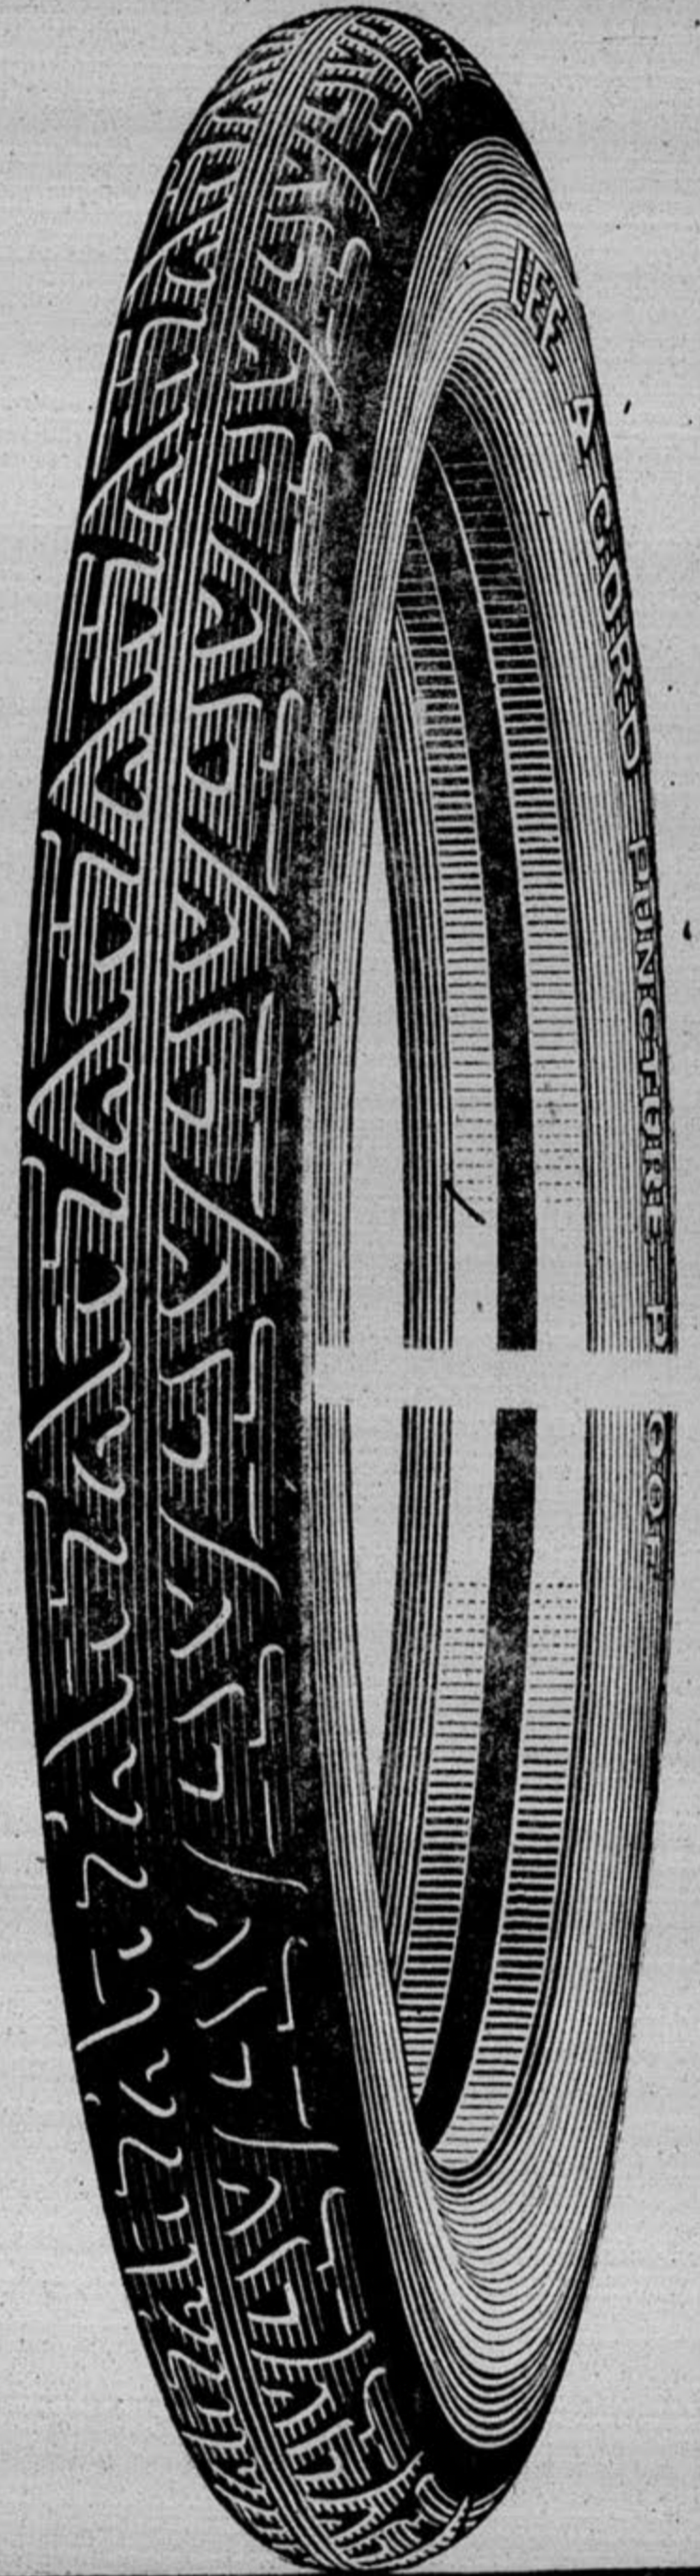

In every instance Lee Cord Puncture-proof tires have triumphed—shown themselves worthy of their name and reputation.

Tire experts hail the Lee Cord Puncture-proof as the climax of tire manufacture—at last the perfect tire—which in material-quality and performance—whether on light or heavy passenger car, or business car, delivery car, light or heavy truck—makes good.

No matter what your service, the Lee Line of Pneumatic offers a tire for every purpose. Lee Fabric Tires, Lee Cords, Lee Puncture-proof Fabrics and—greatest of all—Lee Cord Puncture-proofs—the tire sensation of 1921.

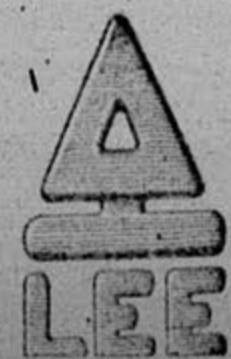

Three layers of case-hardened steel discs, individually imbedded in pure rubber, built into every Lee Puncture-proof Cord tire protect inner-tube and carcass, and enable it to live up to its name.

NOT AGAINST COMMISSION PLAN

It now becomes apparent that Kalamazoo did not repudiate the commission form of government at the election a short time ago. Had it done so it would have earned the doubtful distinction of being the only city in the United States to revert to the Aldermanic system, out of hundreds that have seen the light and profited thereby. It happens, according to later reports, however, that Kalamazoo did not become the exception that proves the rule. What the lower Michigan city did do, it transpires, was to take the first step toward a possible return to the old order of things.

The second step will not be taken, if at all, until after the election of next November. In the meantime a commission will revise the city charter, and the revised instrument will be voted on in the fall.

Quoting from a dispatch from Kalamazoo to a Detroit paper:

It is only fair to the advocates of the commission rule as an abstract principle to say that commission government itself hardly was mentioned in the campaign. The election was no exception to the rule that municipal elections turn more on the passions and prejudices stirred up by the party managers than on the logic of the issues themselves. The determining factors in the popular verdict, both sides agreed, were not general approval or disapproval of commission government itself, but general approval or disapproval of the record of the present commission itself. Not the form of government, but the acts of the men elected under the commission form were in the people's minds when they went to the polls.

It is declared that the personnel of the Kalamazoo commission is exceptionally high, and that the issue was simply and solely one of street car fares. The people of Kalamazoo who were enjoying five-cent fares, transfer privileges and six tickets for a quarter, turned down the company's request for higher fares. The matter came to a vote three times and each time the people voted to retain the low fares. The company faced bankruptcy, and as it couldn't pay the wages demanded by its employees, it faced a strike, and the city faced a serious transportation tie-up. The commission had the courage to fly in the face of popular disapproval and put the case up to the state utilities commission, which immediately granted the company increases even beyond the fares the people rejected at the polls. And the people immediately came back and jumped on the commissions who made it possible for the company to exist.

There were other side issues, among them the enmity of well-organized politicians eager for a return to the old order and a finger in the pie, the personality of the city manager, popular disapproval of one-man cars, the traction company's reduction in laborers' wages following fare increases, the city's reduction in laborers' wages, and last but not least, the failure of hundreds of people to vote.

Undoubtedly the advocates of the aldermanic form of government will attempt to make much of the Kalamazoo "flop," but they won't get very far when the facts are known.

SOME WOODPILE

The appropinquating special session of Congress will probably have a record for constructive legislation that has not been surpassed for a decade. Tariff revision along lines of demonstrated soundness that will not only provide adequate protection for American industry but also yield a revenue perhaps twice as great as the law now in the statute-books; a new internal tax law that will wipe out the cumbersome and depressive taxes to which the people are now subjected, that will be distinguished by simplicity and the equality with which it rates are distributed; an immigration law patterned after the measure that the former President failed to approve; a budget law like the bill that a Democratic President vetoed; soldier-relief legislation designed to give our returned veterans that tender care denied them by the Democratic administration; and a host of bills of less importance, each drawn with the idea of contributing its share to the general welfare—that is the legislative program that the Republicans of the new Congress will attack with enthusiasm, assisted by the cordial cooperation of President Harding.

If Mr. Hays had said that the postoffice is not for politics, merely for the purposes of oratorical adornment, it would have been all right, but as he meant what he said he would better get ready to face a lot of mad congressmen.

Says "Marse Henry": There is no Democratic party, no Republican party—just two empty oil bottles bearing two worn and fraudulent labels. The figure suggests words from a parched and burning mouth.

Senator France is now out with a scheme under which the United States would take the German colonies and cancel the European debt. But are there any colonies now that the mandate system has been adopted?

President Harding is going to pitch the first ball when the season opens in Washington. He will get in training for that important event by pitching a first message this week.

A story from London says that Charles of Austria may resign his claims in favor of his son, Otto. What has Charles got against the boy?

Perhaps the most brazen thing about the attitude of the holdovers is their assumption that they are going to be treated like honest men.

You do not need to be with the average man very long until you discover he has a remedy for some of the national ills.

Dreaming of Potty

To dream of potty is a sign of poverty; putting up holes for itself is a sign of the larger hole the man can achieve the loss. If you are putting holes into a window with potty it means that you will soon have a better place than you now occupy.

"Dear little girl," he whispered tenderly, "you're simply adorable when you look like that. But not even for you would I back out of this show now." His mouth set in a grim line. "It's gone altogether too far, and they've shown themselves to be so completely beyond the pale that it's got to be fought out. And when it has been," he caught both her hands in his, "and we've won—why then, girl of mine, we'll get Peter Darrell to be best man."

What was the cue for the commencement of the hot and longest interlude, terminated only by the sudden and unwelcome appearance of a motor-bus covered with and with-out by unscrupulous sightseers and paper-lungs containing business. They drove slowly back to Guildford, and on the way he told her briefly of the murder of the American secretary in Belfast, and his own view of the preceding afternoon with the huperior of the Curzon.

"It's a tough proposition," he remarked quietly, "they're absolutely without scruple, and their power seems unlimited. I know the man after the Duchess of Lathom's murder; I found the beautiful Mrs. Lathom's young son with young Lathams yesterday; you know the girl's old pet son. But there's something more in the wind than that, Phyllis, something which unless I'm a mug or the first winder, is an infinitely larger proposition than that."

The car drew up at the station, and he stepped with her to the platform. Then the train came to a stop and he put her into a carriage. And two minutes later, with the touch of hot lips warm on his, and her steady little cry, "Take care, my darling," he took leave of her, still smiling in his eyes, he took into his car and drove off to an hotel to get an early dinner.

At a quarter to ten he tucked his cut into the shadow of some tree and hid far from the gate of The Elm. Save for a light in the dining-room and one in a bedroom upstairs, the front of the house was in darkness, and, reaching noiselessly on the lawn, he explored all round it. There was one bedroom light at the back of the house, and thrown on the blind he could see the shadow of a door. As he watched the man got up and moved away, only a second or two and take up his old position.

It was one of these two bedrooms. He muttered to himself, "if he's here at all."

Then he crouched in the shadow of some shrub and waited. Through the trees to his right he could see The Larches, and once, with a sudden quivering of his heart, he thought he saw the outline of the girl show up in the light from the drawing-room. But it was only for a second, and then it was gone.

He passed at his watch; it was just ten o'clock. The trees were crackling gently in the faint wind; all around him the strange night noises—noises which play pranks with a man's nerves—were whispering and rattling. Bishops seemed suddenly to come to life, and move, circle shapes crawled over the ground toward him—figures which existed only in his imagination. And once again the thrill of he might sniffer gripped him.

He remembered the German who and lain motionless for an hour in a little gully by Holbourn, while he from behind a stunted bush had tried to locate him. And then that one creek as the Boche had moved his leg. And then . . . the end. On that night, too, the little hummocks had moved and taken to themselves strange shapes; fifty times he had imagined he saw him; fifty times he knew he was wrong—in time. He was used to it; the night held no terrors for him, only a fierce excitement. And thus it was that as he crouched in the bushes, waiting for the game to start, his pulse was as normal, and his nerves as steady as if he had been sitting down to supper. The only difference was that in his hand he held something tight-gripped.

At last faintly in the distance he heard the hum of a car. Rapidly it grew louder, and he snuffed grimly to himself as the sound of five unimolous voices, slinging lustily struck his ear. They passed along the road in front of the house. There was a sudden crash—then silence; but only for a moment.

Peter's voice came first: "You priceless old ass, you've ruined the blinking game."

It was Jerry Seymour who then took up the hand. His voice was intensely solemn—also extremely loud. "Preposterous. Perfectly preposterous. We must go and apologize to the owner."

Quite unparliamentary. Yet can't go about country sneaking down gates. Out of question.

Half-conscious Hugh listened, but now that the moment for action had come, every faculty was concentrated on his own job. He saw half a dozen men go rushing out into the garden through a side door, and their feet came, ran-out and came straight toward him. They crashed past him and went on into the darkness, and for an instant he wondered what they were doing. A little later he was destined to find out.

There came a beat at the front-door bell, and he determined to wait no longer. He started through the garden door, to find a flight of steps in front of him, and in another moment he was on the first floor. He walked really, toward the landing, trying to find his bearings, and, turning a corner, he found himself at the top of the main staircase, the spot where he had fought Peter on two nights previously.

He was just quietly on to the room which he had planned was the one where he had seen the shadow on the floor. Without a second's hesitation he swung his foot over the railing of the stairs, and he was in the hall. He walked really, toward the landing, trying to find his bearings, and, turning a corner, he found himself at the top of the main staircase, the spot where he had fought Peter on two nights previously.

For a few seconds they watched one another in silence, and then the man straightened up.

"The soldier," he snarled, "you young pup!"

Deliberately, almost casually, he raised his revolver, and then the unexpected happened. A lot of light abruptly struck him full in the face, and with a shout Hugh dropped his weapon.

He was paralyzed in his pocket, and he looked up at the man. He was dressed in a dark suit, and he had a serious, almost menacing expression on his face. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

Hugh saw him clearly in the light from the room behind. And as he cursed himself for a fool in not having tied him up, from the trees close by there came the sharp clink of metal.

With a quick catch in his breath he began to run. The two men who had rushed past him before he had entered the house, and whom, save for a passing thought, he had disregarded, had become the principal danger. For he had heard that clink before; he recognized Jim Smith's white horned-strict face, and then his high of relief as the thing—whatever it was—was shut in his cage. And now it was out, dodging through the trees, let loose by the two men. He heard something crash into a bush on his right, and give a snarl of anger. Like a flash he swerved into the undergrowth on the left.

Then began a dreadful game. He was still some way from the fence, and he was hampered at every step by the man slung over his back. He could hear the thing blundering about—scratching for him, and suddenly, with a cold feeling of fear, he realized that the animal was in front of him—that his way to the gate was barred. The next moment he saw it.

Shadowy, indistinct in the darkness, he saw something glide between two bushes. Then it came out into the open, and he knew it had seen him, though as yet he could not make out what it was.

Cautionally he lowered the million-acre to the ground, and took a step forward. It was enough; with a snarl of fury the animal—leaped toward him. Two hairy arms shot out toward his throat, he snatched the brute's forepaw, hot and leathery, and he realized what he was up against. It was a partially grown gortle.

For a full minute they fought in silence, save for the hoarse grunts of the animal as it tried to bite away the man's hand from its throat, and then, ere he knew it, with its powerful arms. And with his hands cold as ice Hugh saw the danger and kept his feet. It couldn't go on; no human being could last the pace, whatever his strength. And there was only one chance of finishing it quickly, the possibility that the grip would give if Hugh would serve with a powder, as it did with a man.

He shifted his left hand, an inch or two on the brute's throat, and the balance, thinking he was weaker, redoubled its efforts. And then, with a little, the gortle moved, and the grip which had been tight before gave a little. The gortle's head, and the grip which had been tight before gave a little. The gortle's head, and the grip which had been tight before gave a little.

For a moment he seemed to be watching the still quivering body lying at his feet; then, with a gasp of surprise, he dropped to the ground himself. He was—

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh. He was looking at Hugh, and he was looking at Hugh.

Would You Sell Your Smile for $20,000?

What would you take for your smile? Here's a Kansas City boy—James Godfrey Jr.—who lost his power to smile by coming in contact with an electric wire carrying 2300 volts. On the left is the smile James lost. Right, his best smile since the accident. A jury awarded the boy a $20,000 verdict against the Kansas City Power & Light Co.

"The Soldier!" He snarled. "You Young Pup!"

Larches with his semi-conscious bird-dog, get to his ear, and drive off. It all seemed so easy that he laughed. . . . But there were one or two factors that he had forgotten, and the first and most important one was the man opposite. The window was thrown up suddenly, and the man leaped out waving his arms. He was still gasping with the strength of the animals, but

Volstead Chews, So He's Against Ban On Tobacco

WASHINGTON, April 14—Congressman Volstead, of prohibition fame, is against the anticigarette drive. The chairman of the judiciary committee who was called upon to enact laws to enforce the constitutional amendment was stopped in the corridor of the Capitol for a chat. He pulled a plug of chewing tobacco from his lip pocket, bit off a man-sized hunk and proceeded to lay the dash in the vicinity of the cuspidor. "Mr. Volstead," said the reporter, "do you approve of the drive to prohibit the use of tobacco?" "Oh, hell," said Volstead, "No, I don't." "You don't approve of personal liberty taken away from a man?" continued the reporter. "Oh, well, I never heard of a man getting drunk on tobacco," said Volstead.

SCORE OF WOMEN ASK KALAMAZOO POLICE JOB

Kalamazoo, Mich., April 14—Kalamazoo will not long be without police women. A score of applications have been received for the positions since announcement of the dismissal of the two women. Chief Taffee announced and appointment may be announced this week.

He succeeds Arthur Bullard.

The International Institute of Agriculture, Rome, gives the 1921 area of winter wheat in Rumania as 1,616,000 acres, an increase of 5.2 per cent over last year. The condition of crops is favorable in Belgium, Bulgaria, France, Great Britain, and North Africa, average in Italy and excellent in Hungary.

"Jazz" Furniture And Wall Paper Are In Disfavor

LONDON, April 14—"Jazz" furniture, clothing and wall paper were derided by Sir Charles C. Allen in an address before the first National Furnishing convention here. "English furniture has ranked so high in the estimation of the world that one wonders how it comes that at this moment a disease is developing of the jazz type," he said. "Will the public buy the jazz types of clothing material we see offered for sale and the far worse things one finds printed and in wallpapers in the wholesale stores? Jazz of all kinds is like rubbish of all kinds; it is not likely to last long." "I have recently been shown great quantities of materials of most unimpressive color and crude design," he said "things which might suitably be exhibited in a very dark cellar rather than in the light of day or in our homes. I was assured dressmakers were buying them largely. What a home should be like to match such clothing I do not care to think. "It makes me devoutly trust that skirts of such materials will be nothing like so long as they are today. The human form will certainly occasionally be better to look upon, than these monstrosities. They are products of a dangerously decadent movement."

RUGS Don't Take Chances With Your Rugs---

There never was a time when Rugs cost as much as they do today, and the prudent housekeeper will be wise if she entrusts the cleaning and shampooing of her Rugs to an establishment with a reputation, and one that is responsible.

We stake our reputation on the assurance that you are taking chances on having your Rugs ruined by applying soap and water to them when they are on the floor and in daily use. That method only drives the dirt into the Rug.

It is right and proper to use your vacuum sweeper to take out the dust; but the VACUUM SWEEPER NEVER HAS, AND NEVER CAN, TAKE OUT THE DIRT THAT HAS DISCOLORED THE RUG.

We Make Old Rugs Look Like New and They Are Clean

Our Rug Cleaning and Shampooing Department is equipped with the latest and best appliances and machinery for doing thorough work. We first put the rug through our Cleveland at 600 revolutions a minute. This particle of loose dust and dirt. The rug is then roughly shampooed with our own cleaning preparation which not only cleans, but also prevents colors from running. Our vacuum sweeper is then run over the rug to remove all moisture and dirt that has been loosened by the shampooing; and then the rug is hung in our big steam dryer.

COME AND SEE HOW IT'S DONE

It is just a common-sense method of cleaning; you can understand it clearly, and it will be a pleasure for us to show you how we do it. If you have an especially valuable rug that you have hesitated about having cleaned, telephone 134 to call for it; we will telephone you when we are ready to clean it, and you may, if you wish, come and watch every step of the cleaning and shampooing process.

There is a twenty-years' experience and reputation back of our work, and we have that reputation to maintain. Don't you think it safer to trust your rugs with such an establishment than it is to trust them with a here-to-day-and-gone-tomorrow make-shift cleaning proposition?

Our twenty-years' reputation in the Steam Laundry, Cleaning and Dyeing business is back of our new Rug Cleaning and Shampooing Department.

Revival of Mikado Comes to Delft On Thursday, April 28

"The Flowers That Bloom in the Spring," "Three Little Maids from School Are We," "The Sun Whose Rays," "A Wandering Minstrel Am I" all well known song hits in that prettiest of all comic operas, "The Mikado" were whistled and hummed by your fathers and mothers, in the nineties. And now you are going to hum and whistle them because that wizard of the theatrical world, Ralph Dunbar of Chicago, has revived "The Mikado" and will bring his big production to the Delft Theatre for one night Thursday, April 28th.

Heading the cast is Ed Andrews, the "grand old man" of opera who is singing his old role of "KoKo." A great "KoKo" is Andrews—a comedian from the top of his head to his sturdy feet. Miss Patricia Baker is singing "Yam-Yam" and Miss Ann McCaslin is a decidedly pretty and magnetic "Pottisng."

The chorus is a marvel. Mr. Dunbar selected each member personally. Unlike other producers he contends that the chorus is really the foundation of an opera. He builds from the chorus to the principals and that his contention is good is attested by the remarkable production he has on this season.

Big Crowd to Greet Cadman Tomorrow

Dr. S. Parker Cadman, noted lecturer and writer, will be greeted by a large crowd in the high school auditorium Friday night if the interest in advance of his scheduled appearance is an indication of what to expect in the way of attendance. Dr. Cadman's lecture will be the final attraction on the annual community educational bureau's course of nine nights.

The noted clergyman, for many years one of the stars of the lyceum sky, has been greeted by the largest and most enthusiastic audiences of his career, according to reports from the various cities he has visited this season since he left his home in Brooklyn.

Dr. Cadman has some very interesting and original views on international after-war reconstruction problems and America's part in them. These are presented in a style and with a force and vividness peculiar to Cadman lectures and approval of audiences everywhere in the country has been expressed in the most enthusiastic terms by newspaper writers everywhere.

High Gridiron Men to Start Workouts Soon

Spring football practice at Escanaba high school will be started within a short time. Bud Finch, captain elect, said yesterday. There are indications that a large number of candidates for gridiron honors next fall will report to Coach Bob Hillis for the spring workout.

There were reports at the school yesterday that George Lord, formerly of Iron Mountain high where he starred in the line and backfield, and Archie Campbell, the lucky Sun-bath tackler who gave the locals considerable difficulty here last October, will be students in Escanaba high next year. The Lord and Campbell families are moving to Escanaba.

Tuberculosis Clinic Planned for July

Announcement that a three-day tuberculosis clinic, similar to that conducted here last summer, will be held in the Delta county court house in July, was made yesterday by Mrs. C. F. Andrews, chairman of the Women's club committee.

It is planned this year to hold three sessions daily, the evening meetings being arranged to give added opportunities to persons who desire health advice.

The clinic will be in charge of physicians and nurses of the Michigan State Board of Health.

Old "Rail" Narrator of Great Story

(Continued From Page One) dred feet from the track. Engineer and firemen were on their feet about thirty feet from the wrecked engine. With tears streaming down his cheeks Dotson went over and found them unhurt.

Mr. Tennies was sent on to telegraph Escanaba for another engine and received word from the dispatcher to take one that was standing in the yards at Oconto.

At the time of the accident no one would believe it possible that an engine could blow up and no one be killed. Railroad men doubted the possibility until the story was confirmed.

Old timers in the railroad game remember the occurrence and it is often discussed where railroads congregated.

A peculiar feature of the accident was the fact that the tender remained on the tracks after the engine broke loose, the tender jumbled off the rails and the wheels from the tender ran on the ties for about fifty feet and then jumped back on the rails again.

The engineer, interviewed after the accident, contended that he had not lost consciousness during the accident and was able to describe the engine as "blowing up into the air, turning over and losing water from the boiler" which coming down on the coaches gave Mr. Tennies the impression that the train had crashed thru the bridge into the river.

The engine was said to have turned a complete somersault, dropping the engineer and fireman to safety on a soft spot of earth quite a distance from the tracks. The fireman was stunned and not able to give an account of any sensation during the ride thru the air.

A great many people will probably think that the engine exploded on account of lack of water in the engine, but this was not so as we took water at Little Sauneeo, Mr. McKeever was one of the most careful engineers on the road and also one of the best.

"The reason I remember this accident so vividly, is the fact that I was married three days previous at Negaunee, Mich., to Miss Kathleen Frances Flynn of New York city. We were married by Father Els, now bishop of Marquette, Mich. This was my first run after I got married and at the time of the terrible crash and excitement I thought of my bride of three days and I feared she would be left a widow so soon. When the train reached Marinette where we always stopped for breakfast I telegraphed my wife as I was afraid she would hear some exaggerated accounts of the accident, concluded Mr. Tennies.

Especially if he's fat. "People are not apt to envy those beneath them," remarks a writer. But how about the man in the upper berth of a Pullman?—Boston Transcript.

PLANS ARE NOW COMPLETE FOR NEW MILK PLANT

In Meeting of Farmers Yesterday, Final Plans Made for Opening Plant by June 15th; Representatives Chosen.

Two hundred farmers who had subscribed for stock in the Delta County Milk Producers' association, met at the city hall yesterday, elected a board of directors arranged to incorporate the concern for $30,000 and instructed the board to proceed with the plans for the establishment of a milk products plant here.

An option on the building on the west side formerly occupied by the Escanaba Broom factory will be closed at once by the purchase of the structure, it is understood and hopes were expressed that the place could be put into operation by June 15. A pasteurizer and equipment for manufacturing ice cream, cheese and butter, probably will be installed.

The board of directors was also instructed to proceed with plans for marketing milk here. It was suggested that an attempt be made to arrange to supply whole milk to the proprietors of the local dairymen. If this plan cannot be carried out the association expects to establish a retail delivery system in the city.

The association will control the milk supply from between 1,500 and 16,000 Delta county cows.

Under the bylaws adopted, seven communities will be represented on the board of directors. These districts and the men chosen to represent them follow:

Flat Rock, Escanaba township and Cornell—John Martell, Ford.

Perkins and St. Nicholas—Byron Whitney.

Bark River and Harris—Alex. Wilson.

Stonington—John K. Olson, Ford River and Newhall—August Severinsen.

Danforth—Charles Cota.

The board of directors elected Mr. Olson president, Mr. Cota vice president and Mr. Severinsen secretary-treasurer.
