DISCIPLINE SHOWN AMONG REFUGEES RUSS REVOLUTION

Punish Man for the Stealing of Food, Make Him Run Length of Crowd Naked in Cold.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

TERIOJKI, Finland, April 28.—The 8,000 refugees from the recent Kronstadt revolution in Russia, who are quartered in Finnish concentration camps here and at Iivo have just given a striking example of Bolshevik discipline.

The refugees are being fed by American Red Cross officers. The other day, one of them was caught by his fellows in the act of stealing a larger share of food than was due to him.

The others formed a committee tried the man, found him guilty of偷窃, and then appeared before a Red Cross officer.

"Please give us enough gun to form a firing-squad," they requested. They had found a man stealing food and will execute him immediately.

Informed that this was Finland and not Bolshevik Russia, the committee was momentarily disconcerted.

"But he must be punished," they insisted.

"All right," said the officer, "but no shooting goes here."

The committee man made the strip, although the weather was bitterly cold, formed a long line in the woods, including about 150 men, and made the guilty man run naked 10 times from one end of the line to the other, shouting "I'm a thief."

Discipline in these refugee camps has been excellently maintained since the orders of Stepan Petrichuk, the 29-year-old sailor who was president of Kronstadt and the leader of the revolt. Yet the Finnish authorities are much worried over their presence in Finland. The Kronstadt men were opposed to the Communists, but a bit too radical in their views toward the Finnish authorities who have had a "red" problem at home for a long time.

Fals and the fear that the American Red Cross cannot continue evicting them indefinitely has caused Finland to consider various means of getting rid of these 8,000 and the 25,000 other Russian refugees who are in the country. The government would like to have the League of Nations take them off its hands.

When the Kronstadt mutineers arrived at Terijoki the men were held in a void. Ten days of good American food changed their appearance wonderfully and some of them turned to white bread and a diet containing a large portion of fats, found it so rich they soon fell ill and their diet had to be toned down.

The court, taking into consideration the greater necessities of necessary expenses occasioned by release of some news and newspaper men, as also the ordinary cost of living, gave gold, and silver lace, greenery, hands, etc., bath therefore ordered that no person, either man or woman, and thereafter made of boy apparel and violent, silk, or brazen, with a fine lace on it, silver, gold, silk, or three under the penalty of the law.

"Provided, and it is the opinion of this court that man and woman shall have liberty to wear out such apparel as they are now possessed of except the immoderate, gaudy, sleek, slashed apparel, immoderate great maffles, long wings, etc.

This order to take place at night after the publishing thereof.

New York Building With Bellringers to Be Torn Down to Make Room for Big Skyscraper.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

NEW YORK, April 29.—Two bronze bellringers, which for twenty-six years sounded out the hours for crowds in Herald Square, have been brushed by the progress they recorded. This home, the famous old New York Herald Building, one of the architectural beauties of Manhattan, is being demolished to make room for a skyscraper.

Crowds loved to stand where Broad way is crossed by Sixth Avenue and Thirty Fifth street and watch the two figures hang their sledges against the big bell suspended between them. With the heroic-sized Minerva which stood above them and the big bronze eagles which roosted along the cornices of the building they are to be preserved.

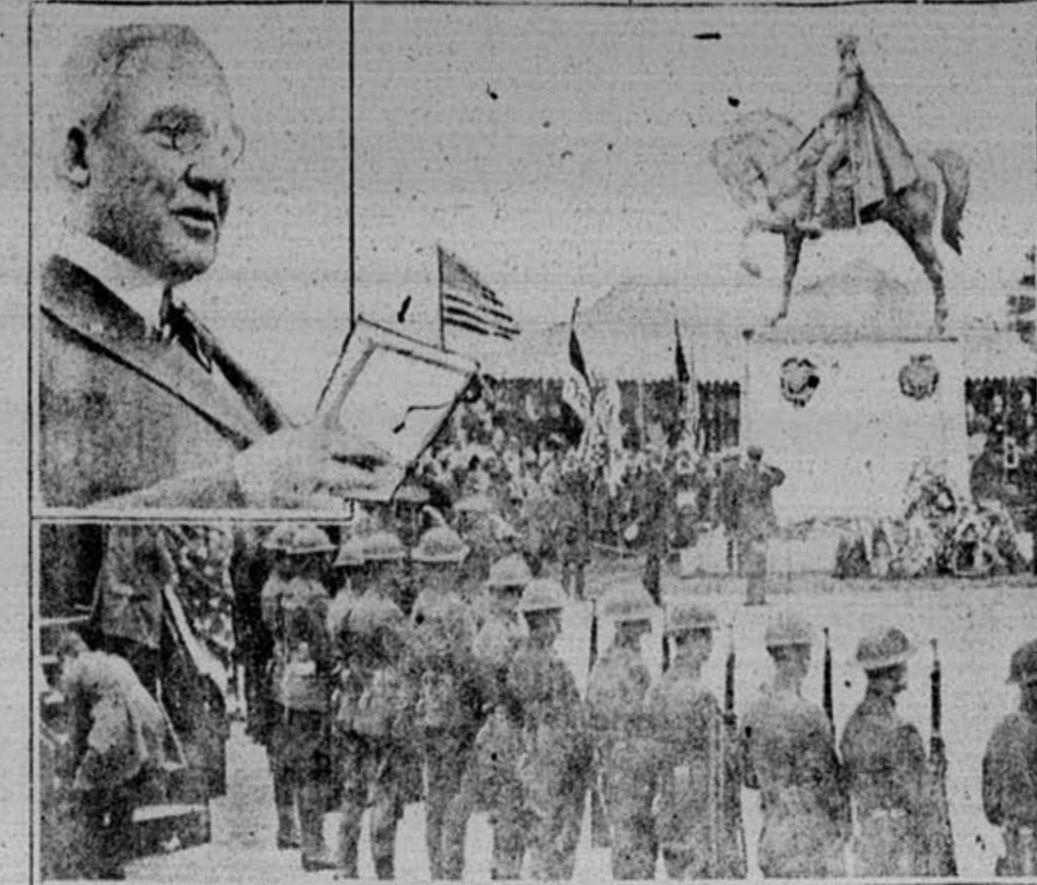

The Herald Building, designed in Italian Renaissance style after the municipal structure at Verona, Italy, was built on leased land in 1893, the lease providing that at its expiration the structure should revert to the land owners, but the lessee would keep the bronze ornaments. These were designed by Jean Carles a French sculptor, and were said to have cost James Gordon Bennett, then the Herald's owner $200,000. The bellringers were similar to those on a building opposite St. Marks in Venice.

They may be placed on the premises of James Gordon Bennett Memorial Home for Newspaper men. On the day they were removed from the familiar surroundings a movement was started to change the name of Herald Square to Bennett Square.

WOMEN OFFICE HOLDERS PROMISE BETTER CITY IN KANSAS NOW

Only City in State of Kansas to Have All Women in Public Offices.

THAYER, Kan., April 29.—The ten members of the women's city commission, who at the recent municipal election, gave the city a forward-looking administration, but by no means the only administration of reform, the women ticket, mayor, police judge and city council, were elected by a vote to the vote over the men's ticket. This is the only town in the state which has a woman mayor.

"We have no campaign pledges to fulfill. We made no pledges, nor were drafted for the nomination," declared Mrs. A. H. Forrest, the new mayor. "However we intend to serve with all the enthusiasm that this we will produce, consider our own responsibility. This town, like many small towns, you and our population is only 2,285 in the last census, was suffering from crime. The women of the town, thru the women's club, have been trying so to change the town, and have succeeded to some extent. Now, however, however, we will be compelled to do much more now that we have an entire corps of city officials, who sympathize with these efforts."

Another significant point in the election was the manner in which the nomination was conducted. It was conducted by those who stand for a progressive policy, and they maintained that the slogan of the campaign, "Get Thayer out of the mudholes again," and "Get the women in, it stands out clearly.

"We didn't try to give the women's ticket a forward-looking administration, but when once elected, we will fulfill their responsibilities.

The women's ticket, the only one running in this election, showed better results than the men's ticket, but the men's ticket did not do well.

SHERIFF IN W. VA. CLEANING OUT LAW BREAKERS, REPORT

He Says He Has Turned Over New Leaf and for Others to "Follow Suit" or Pay the Penalty.

LAWRENCE, W. Va., April 29.—Logan County, in the heart of the great coal fields of southern West Virginia, has turned over a new leaf because its sheriff, Don Chapman, has been doing his duty to the town and surrounding country, and gamblers have been the objects of the sheriff's clean-up campaign, and for four months he has made misery the lives of those engaged in the pursuits.

Announcing that he personally turned over a new leaf, "I am not a drunkard, and would never gamble or wager on cards or any other game," according to the Williamson (W. Va.) Daily News, Chas. Wolf, the sheriff's son, "I'm good," he said. "I have been bad as there are NOT good because I have violated in the past, and often gets this."

Chapman is regarded as a good fellow throughout the state and there are many others of whom almost impossible to him names to the damage done those inclined towards those pastimes to follow suit or pay the penalty. Since early in January the cleanup process has gone on and every recently, he personally caught and or three stills, a lot of other illegal paraphernalia, and an automobile load of evidence he declared that it had been a slow week.

It looks like the boys were taken as at our word and were coming back to the mines and their farms and gardens again, but keep him trouble in Logan County by keeping the citizens with money in their pockets, and, according to the son, "Well, they're better now, but getting good," he said. "I have been bad as there are NOT good because I have violated in the past, and often gets this."

Wolf is regarded as a good fellow throughout the state and there are many others of whom almost impossible to him names to the damage done of Sherwood Forest. The sheriff, however, is Logan county, among the mountains instead of a forest. Of a typical mountain, he is credited with being singularly fearless and handy with a pistol whenever occasion demands, although it is told them, the section of the state that he wears a set of primitive chain mail next to his body, at all times.

A great deal of romance surrounds the sheriff's office by the mountain mountaineers and the lawmen are held invariably in the highest regard owing to the many times that he has called upon the men to whom the sheriff's power is given, to help him. He is not the man to whom the mountaineers pay their respects in the open, but the man who holds his pistol and other arms in honor of a good name, is the man.

ANOTHER SECRET AGREEMENT

A dispatch from Paris gives upon good authority the text of a secret agreement between Great Britain and France which resulted in an agreement of the part of those nations to support a claim by Japan to all of the Pacific islands north of the equator belonging to Germany, and also to Shantung. A purpose of the Japanese government expressed in the note was to protect itself against German war bases in the Pacific and the note contemplates a direct cession of the islands by Germany to Japan.

The notes are brought forward at this time with the suggestion that they place difficulties in the way of Great Britain and France if they wish to support the claims of the United States to equal rights on Yap.

It is not likely that they will give Secretary Hughes much trouble. The correspondence was completed about a month before the United States entered the war and that event changed the situation so completely that Japan cannot rest an absolute claim upon earlier secret understandings, any more than Italy could stand on the agreement for the division of Austrian territory. Italy's claim was reopened and readjusted. It follows that Japan's claim can be for its own similar agreement. Moreover, Japan's claim to Yap does not rest upon a cession from Germany as contemplated by the secret agreement, but upon a mandate which is a species of title never thought of when the agreement was made.

But even though the agreements do not affect the American claim, they can help to explain the course of events at Paris when the treaty was being made. Japan's claim to Yap was on the part of Germany. The American claim was left to remain on its own account.

DEFINING A NEW CRIME

Looking back over the legislative year now ended or coming to an end in most of the states its course appears to have been heavily marked by the appearance of freak bills. So far as in the southwest a legislature has considered what it shall be a crime to save food in cracked bread or to break a twig, and there has been more or less legislation against Morton high heels or lengthen short skirts, but on the whole legislators appear to have restrained their desire to legislate. However, West Virginia is now debating whether there shall be a law against "vampires" using that word in its Kipling sense rather than its medical sense.

Legally the bill proposes that whenever a married person believes that a third person, male or female, is saving and attempting to save the married person's spouse, it shall be lawful to warn the offender through a formal instrument issued by a justice of the peace to desist and if, instead of desisting, the offender persists, then the justice may bring the intruder before a magistrate.

If the bill should be passed the crime of vampirism will appear in American law. There has been a very general opinion in the past that such things are none of the law's business. A good law exists, however, in some parts of the United States, in which the taking of a piece of a warning writ, so far as it is concerned, and even the women have been known to pull hair, though tears and persuasion are their main reliance. Maybe West Virginia can effect a change in methods but it is permissible to doubt.

IMPEACHMENT PROCEEDINGS

Representative Dyer, chairman of the sub-committee which was named to consider the proposed impeachment of Judge Landis, has informed the Chicago Tribune that the sub-committee does not contemplate carrying the charges before the new Congress, so that if anything is done in the matter new proceedings must be started. Representative Welty, who dramatically "impeached" Judge Landis last session, is not a member of the present Congress and apparently the country has heard the last of the matter. Such a result was anticipated from the first for no calm consideration of the facts would lead anybody to believe that Judge Landis had committed any high crime or misdemeanor. There is a difference of opinion, however, about whether a federal judge ought to accept private employment and that issue was raised in a striking way when Judge Landis undertook his high-salaried and conspicuous position as a sort of lord high law-giver for organized baseball. Whether the misgivings which arose from that event were warranted or not is a question of fact which will be determined by the future progress of litigation in the court over which the judge presides. It is conceivable Congress may think it worth while to legislate on the subject at some future time.

The League of Women Voters of Brooklyn, with Brooklyn women representing the leading women's clubs throughout the Borough, has initiated a movement for the appointment of a woman lawyer to the magistrate's bench. The terms of six magistrates expire May 1, and New York City's mayor has the power of reappointment. The League is requesting the appointments of a woman judge who will be eligible to assignment in the Court of Domestic Relations and the Woman's Court.

Youths in the high schools should rise up and proclaim Dr. Einstein blessed. He says that what the school teachers were having instilled into their minds about the value of "pi" is inaccurate and that famous ratio may, depending upon circumstances, be almost anything.

Europe doesn't like the conditions of co-operation Washington is laying down, but Europe is careful not to refuse to agree to them.

BOY SCOUTS

Conducted by National Council of the Boy Scouts of America

SCOUT LEADERS ASSEMBLE

The eleventh annual meeting of the national council, Boy Scouts of America, took place at the Hotel Commodore, New York city, recently, with scout men to the number of 101 present, from 36 states, representing the enormous volunteer leadership of the country. These men come together every year to review the work of the past 12 months and to make plans for the future.

The spirit of the whole meeting was admirably expressed in the forceful oration of the chief Scout Executive James E. West, as follows:

"It must be ever borne in mind that the basis of strength and power of the boy scout movement will not be measured alone by the number of scouts and scout officers, the records of activity of the national council, or number of local councils organized; these are but a means to an end. The value of the scout movement will be judged by the individual boy scout—his conduct, appearance, the way he puts in to practice the scout oath and law and reveals that he is actually prepared to do things worth while because of the program of activities of the Boy Scouts of America."

Resolutions were passed endorsing the work of the Kiwanis and Rotary clubs in giving scouting and other boy programs generous support and sympathy and greetings were offered to the boy scouts of Great Britain, France and Belgium, in particular, and to boy scouts everywhere throughout the world. It was also voted to continue the cooperation with the American committee for devastated France by again sending Leslie M. Lusk, director of the department of education of the national council, for a period of six months to the work of the committee in France, to aid toward the development of scouting in France and particularly to assist in bringing about unification of the various branches of the scout movement in that country.

HONORS FOR BRAVE SCOUTS.

During the year 1920 the national court of honor of the Boy Scouts of America issued medals as follows: To scouts for conspicuous service in life saving and first aid.

Two gold medals, 13 silver medals, 17 bronze medals. The gold medal cases were particularly suitable, indicating the heroic rescue of two children from a burning building by a young assistant scoutmaster, George Noble of Chardon, La., and another remarkably selfless and fine attempt on the part of a scout, Joseph Hards of Troop No. 1, Erie, Liverpool, to save his comrade from a fallen five-wire at the dangerous risk of his own life.

Medal—Robert McNeil of this village, was instantly killed at Vestalburg, near here, when a slab was thrown from a saw in a mill where he was employed. He was struck in the back of the head.

Holland—Within half a block from church to which he was going to attend annual prayer for crops, the Rev. Khan Kuiper, 73, dropped dead. Prayer for crops is a Dutch custom observed here annually.

Kalamazoo—Bert O. Backoller, former mayor of Battle Creek and prominent attorney, who was auditor for Gurnsey & Brothers of this city, died here of apoplexy. He is survived by a widow and daughter.

Paw Paw—Farmers throughout Van Buren county report fruit buds in excellent condition and prospects for another exceptionally large crop are excellent. The pruning and vine trimming are about completed.

Kalamazoo—Gladys Kosen, 20, was taken into custody here on the charge of abandoning her five-weeks old baby on a Michigan Central train. She says she knew of no other way to dispose of the boy, whom she was unable to support.

Benton Harbor—The body of an unidentified man, found on Lake Michigan beach near here, may be that of one of the aviators lost last November when a naval plane from Great Lakes, Ill., was lost over the lake during a storm.

Kalamazoo—Additional contributions made to the Y. W. C. A. building fund since the campaign closed two weeks ago have brought the fund up to $17,000. It is believed the total of $20,000 desired will be raised before January 1, 1922.

scout's job remained an easy—sometimes half-a-dozen of the same type and as the simplicity of the project declined on the two men their faces grew serious.

"I told you I was a big man, Captain," remarked the American, leaning back in his chair and looking at the open book through half-closed eyes.

"One can only hope to Heaven that we're in time," returned Hugh. "D—n man," he exploded, "surely the police must know of this!"

The American closed his eyes still more.

"Your English police know things," he drawled, "but you're sort of got some peculiar laws in your country. With us, if we don't like a man—something happens. He kind of ceases to sit up and take notice—but over here, the more sensible he is, the more he likes his freedom and the more chances does he get to guard him from watching cold."

The soldier frowned.

"Look at this chump here," he grunted.
"That blighter is a member of parliament.
What's he getting four payments of a thousand pounds for?"

"Why, sorry to buy some 'free warm-water-pipes' with," grunted the detective.
Then he leaned forward and glanced at the man. "But isn't he a son-of-a-bitch?"

"Reuben knows," granted Hugh. "I only saw the blighter once, and they said he was dirty." He turned over a few more pages thoughtfully. "Why, if these are the sums of money Peters has blown, the man must have spent a fortune. Two thousand pounds a day! I tell you, Captain, that's the kind of people they're playing for—power and when they get it, God help the ones who try to stop 'em."

Drummond sat upright another moment, then he had read enough to satisfy his desire to return to the office of the detective.

In silence they continued their study of the book. The whole of England and Scotland had been split up into districts.

"To see if a big part of modern life is the sort between districts," people declare that the method of dividing England into 300 districts will produce
a better system of government.

"And so in the end," he said, "you can get rid of the districts."

"A decent man," said the police officer, "should be paid for his work."

The act of examination appealed to Hugh. He could see the writer in his chair as he put it in.

"It's a good portion of anatomy," he said. "The words of the blighted blighter can't fail to his added knowledge of his country's organizing power, the big blight together and twisted around the interests of societies subject to him, who before this have not, on the other hand, been really serving him out of the light. Now we're condoned, and our strength is due to us."

In other words, the army was on the road to completion, an army where one-half per cent of the fighters—ruined by the blighting set—would stimulate duty toward a grim, half-understood duty to Surbiton too late that the ship of Britain had been exchanged for the scion of his son.

"Why can't they make to understand, Mr. Green?" he cried bitterly.
"The working man—the decent fel-

"Has anyone tried to make 'em understand, Captain? I guess I'm no exceptional guy, but there was a French fellow—"

"I've got the book," he said. "People
declare that the method of dividing England into 300 districts will produce
a better system of government."

"A varying number of sub-districts in every main division had each their super-director and staff, and at some of the names Drummond rubbed his eyes in amazement. Briefly, the duties of every man were outlined: the locality in which his work lay, his exact responsibilities, so that overlapping was reduced to a minimum. In each case the staff was small, the work largely that of organization. But in each district there appeared ten or a dozen names of men who were emphatically described as lecturers; while at the end of the book there appeared nearly fifty names—both of men and women, who were proudly denoted as first-class lecturers. And if Drummond had rubbed his eyes at some of the names on the organizing staffs, the first-class general lecturers deprived him of speech.

"Why," he spluttered after a moment, "a lot of these people's names are absolutely household words in the country. They may be scoundrels, probably are. Thank God! I've very rarely met any; but they ain't criminals."

"No more is Peterson," grunted the American; "at least not on that book.
See here, Captain, it's pretty clear what's happening. In any country today you've got all sorts and conditions of people with more wind than brains.
They just can't stop talking, and as yet they're not a criminal offense. Some of them believe what they say, like Simeon the shanks pictures; some of 'em don't."

And if they don't, it makes 'em worse; they start writing as well. You've got clever men—intellectual men—look at some of those guys in the first-class general lecturers—and they're the worst of 'em lot. Then you've got another class—the men with the business brain, who think they're getting the sticky end of it, and use the talkers to pull the chestnuts out of the fire for them. And the chestnuts, who are the poor blighted decent workmen, are promptly dropped in the ashpit to keep 'em quiet. They all want something for nothing, and I guess it can't be done.

They all think they're getting one another, and what's really going at the moment is that Peterson is getting the whole bunch. He waits to me as if he'd got 'em there. He's got the money and we know where he got it from; he's got the organization, all either not revolutionaries, or intellectual wind-surfers, or calculating knaves.
He's amalgamated 'em, Captain; and the whole blighted lot, whatever they may think, are really working for him.

Drummond thoughtfully lit a cigarette.
"Working toward a revolution in this country," he remarked quietly.
"Sure thing," answered the American.
"And when he brings it off, I guess you won't catch Peterson for it. He'll poison the hoolie and the boobs will starve in their jujubes. I guessed it in Paris; that book makes it a certainty. But it ain't criminal.
In a court of law he could swear it was an organization for selling bird-seed."

"It's all right, Mr. Potts," Drummond
assured him over and over again.
"Their gang is dispersed, and Lakewood
is dead. We're quite safe. This is Mr.
Green, who has come over from New York especially to find you and take you back to your family."

The millionaire stared in silence at
the detective, who rolled his cigar
round in his mouth.

"That's right, Mr. Potts. There's the little old man." He threw back his head, showing the police badge, and glared round in the other side of the room. "If I hasn't kept for the Captain
here and his friends, they'd be humanizing still."

TWO
It was a couple of hours later that Hugh rang up his room in Half Moon street. From Alix, who spoke to him, he gathered that Peters and his father were quite safe. He also found out another thing—Peterson, though he had just arrived, had the blues now, who was apparently sufficiently recovered to talk sense. He was weak still and dazed, but nothing else.

"Tell Ted to bring him down to The Elms at once," ordered Hugh. "There's a companion of his here, waiting to welcome him with open arms."

"Potts is coming," Mr. Green," he said, putting down the receiver. "Our Hiram C." And he's taking sense. It seems to me that we may get a little light thrown on the activities of Mr.
Hocking and Herr Steinemann, and the other barge."

The American nodded slowly.

"Von Gratz," he said. "I remember his name now. Steel man. Maybe you're right, Captain, and that he knows something; anyway, I guess Hiram C. and I stick closer than brothers till I restore him to the bosom of his family."

But Mr. Potts, when he did arrive, exhibited no great inclination to stick close to the detective; in fact, he showed the greatest reluctance to enter the house at all. As Alix had said, he was still weak and dazed, and the sight of the place where he had suffered so much produced such an effect on him that for a while Hugh feared he was going to have a relapse.
At length, however, he seemed to get back his confidence, and was persuaded to come into the central room.

"It's all right, Mr. Potts," Drummond
assured him over and over again.
"Their gang is dispersed, and Lakewood
is dead. We're quite safe. This is Mr.
Green, who has come over from New York especially to find you and take

The millionaire stared in silence at
the detective, who rolled his cigar
round in his mouth.

"That's right, Mr. Potts. There's the

head, showing the police badge, and
glared round in the other side
of the room. "If I hasn't kept for the Captain
here and his friends, they'd be human-
