POLICE CHIEF WARNS DRIVERS FOR LAST TIME

Automobiles Driven Without Dimmers Endanger Lives of All Pedestrians.

Chief of Police John J. Tolan announced this morning that the law warning had been given motorists a last warning without the use of dimmers on their headlights. Automobiles which lack tool again and again to use the dimmers while driving on Ludington street. This violation of the city ordinance has become so common now that the lives of pedestrians are continuously in danger. Men, women and children while crossing the street are blinded by the terrific glare of automobile headlights, and the driver not knowing which to turn, to keep on going, or to stand still. When an automobile with strong headlights comes down the street in the person crossing the street on foot nothing can be distinguished except the bright lights which blind and distract attention.

This condition must stop. The police are tired of warning motorists a blind this ordinance. This is the very last warning and from now on anyone violating this ordinance will be arrested and punished as heavily as the law will permit. We will guarantee the lives of the people who travel on foot in Escanaba if we have to arrest every automobile driven in the city, he declared the police chief.

UNITED STATES WILL BENEFIT BY INVITATION

First Hand Information Will Be Available Thru Ambassadors.

Instructions to Go Forward at Once to Harvey, Herrick and Wallace; Take No Part.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—The decision of President Harding to have a "round table" present at meetings of the Allied supreme council, as well as an official representative of the United States on the conference of ambassadors and reparations commission was being studied carefully in all quarters today.

It was emphasized in the highest administrative circles that this did not mean the participation of the United States in any part of the world's government. Both republican and democratic senators were agreed that the president's action would require an expression of opinion by the senate. Several members of the foreign relations committee said the cases appeared to be more in what the result would be in obtaining information, which they would be sent to the United States government.

Democratic senators said they were disappointed because the president had not decided to have the conference meet officially in Washington. Operations of the three bodies.

Reopen Mandate Question
The supreme council is expected to take up the whole subject of mandates which was requested by Mr. Hughes' recent note to the foreign ministers of Great Britain, France, Italy and Japan; in which he declared that the mandate for the Pacific islands, which were given to Japan by the administration, were never intended that they should be the subject of a general character to be taken up by Mr. Hughes will be the opening of a world conference for disarmament. While the president has asked that no action on this question be indicated in response to the report of the committee in London, some of these close to the White House expect that as soon as the special emergency has passed the supreme council will be asked by the United States to take up the whole disarmament question.

Clean up week comes in May. This is not the time to play. Clean the things from off the walls. And don't mark things up with chalk.

THIRD GRADE

The pupils of this grade have been studying fables and parables. Next week they are going to write original ones and we hope to have two of three in the Tribune.

THE WISE BOAR

Once a bear was sharpening his tusks on the trunk of a tree. A fox came by and said, "Why are you sharpening your tusks now? There are no hunters nor dogs in the woods."

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XL--MONTANA

This mention of Montana history immediately brings to mind the Custer Massacre as one of the most dramatic incidents in Indian warfare. It occurred in 1876, the Centennial year, when special emphasis was being laid on the cause of peace throughout the world.

BIRD STUDY

In the third grade the boys and girls have been busy studying birds. They have several bird pictures in the room and each child is trying to out do the others in knowing the names and habits of the birds of Michigan.

MOTHERS' DAY

That must be a remote district or a selfish heart which pays no heed to Mothers' Day.

Mothers' Day offers such a good chance to let the mother know she is beloved, instead of just having to take it for granted, as she does on most days.

The ideal way to observe the day is to spend as much of it as may be with the mother. If visiting is impossible, there are letters and telegrams and gifts which can be sent to let her know she is remembered and cherished.

Even if the mother be gone from this world, the day can be given to her just the same, through kindly courtesies to other members of the family.

Then there are memories. Every one is better off and happier just for thinking about his mother, and who knows how many of those thoughts go straight to her, although she makes no sign.

"Wee wee," said the dear old shoppers in the Bluebird, "Whenever you think of us, we would deny the sleeping mother's soul under awakening. Who would deny herself the privilege of such thoughts and memories as, for a day at least, might make her more nearly the self his mother firmly believed him to be."

THE ATROCITY TRIALS

After long delays Germany is soon to stage the trial of her military and naval officers accused of war atrocities. How effective the trial will be remains to be seen.

The execution is inevitable that nearly all of the sea and air forces who broke the rules of civilized warfare and civilization in Belgium and northern France will escape the punishment contemplated by the Versailles treaty.

The Allies may have made a mistake in demanding the punishment of so great a number. It would have been better strategy, at least to have picked out a few conspicuous offenders, and then stick to their purpose of bringing them to trial before the bar of civilization.

Stark memories of the war and its wrongs were fresh, the lessons of such punishment would have sunk into the minds of all mankind. After so long a period, any adequate punishment, administered in cold blood, might be interpreted as "persécution."

If the Allies have made a mistake in demanding the punishment of so great a number, it would have been better strategy, at least to have picked out a few conspicuous offenders, and then stick to their purpose of bringing them to trial before the bar of civilization.

ITALIAN FRIENDSHIP

The bitterness felt toward the United States by Italy a short time ago, as a result of this country's stand on the Fiume question, seems to have disappeared. The recent Italian note on Yaptreaties, with frank, full friendship and loyalty as are seldom found in diplomatic exchanges.

Italy is plainly determined to be Uncle Sam's friend. She doubtless realizes as this time how untenable her own position was in the Fiume dispute, and so holds no grudge on that score.

Such a sacrifice will hardly be necessary. France was already friendly to the American claims in the Pacific, and Great Britain, while professing a neutral attitude, was never likely to do anything to hurt this country.

Japan, unable to win the other big powers to her view, will yield. And in her yielding, the United States will probably gain more than the mere right to have a cable station at Yap.

It probably is nothing more than a coincidence that within six weeks of the inauguration of a Republican President upwards of half of the most notorious I. W. W. leaders in the country find themselves behind prison bars.

President Harding says a man is never down and out until he admits it. Not even if he is dead?

A lack of economy in the United States dispenses with the need for economy in Columbia.

BOY SCOUTS

GOLDEN BOOK OF BOY SCOUTS

Boy Scouts of Philadelphia are to have a unique record of their achievements. The local council, at the suggestion of Dr. Charles D. Hart, have had a book made of golden parchment, in which are to be recorded the names and deeds of boy scouts who have done particularly heroic services.

Bronze medal—Scout Les Newman, who on June 1916, saved a comrade from drowning in a stone quarry. Bronze medal—Scout Fred Lange, who, in February, 1920, saved a four-year-old child from burning to death.

Silver medal—Scout Walter Erick, June, 1920, for saving another boy from drowning.

Take impressive service of intricate took place in connection with the dedication of the Golden Book, in which the six living youths heroes participated. All scouts present stood at attention while the names of the recipients of the honor were read off, with the official record of the deed of courage for which each was to receive recognition.

"You Men Are Going to Get the Squarest Deal You Ever Had."

along, if you will only stay on the job and keep your clothes on, was the way the boss went at the train men's committee. "We are out to make the P. S. L. the best line for service, and the best company to work for, this side of the Missouri river. I want your loyalty, the loyalty of every man in the service. I'll go further and say that the new management will stand if you and the other payroll men stand by it in good faith, or it will fall if you don't."

"You'll meet the grievance committee and talk things over with them when there's a kick coming," said old Tom McGraw, the passenger conductor who was acting as spokesman.

"Sure I will—every time. More than that, I'll take a leaf out of Colonel Goethal's book and keep open house here in this office every Sunday morning. Any man in the service who thinks he has a grievance may come here and state it, and if he has a case, he'll get justice."

Naturally, a few little talks like this, face to face with the men themselves, soon began to put new life into the rank and file. Mr. Norcross, old pet name of "Hell-and-repeal" had followed him down from Oregon, as he was bound to, but now it began to be used in the sense that most railroad men use the phrase, "The Old Man," in speaking of a big boss, that they like.

There was so much crowded into these first few weeks that I've forgotten half of it. The work was all palling and hauling things into shape, was a fight, and any end of the job got so big that the boss had to give me help. Following out his own policy, he let me pick my man, and after I'd had a little talk with Mr. Van Brit, I picked Fred May, a young fellow who had been under Van Bugh's.

He was all right; a little too tough, perhaps, but a worker from ax to back, and that was what we were looking for.

Out of this frantic hustle to get things started and moving right, anybody could have pulled a couple of conclusions that stuck up higher than any of the rest. The boss and Mr. Van Brit were steadily winning the rank and file over to something like loyalty on the one hand, and on the other, wherever we went, we found the people who were paying the freight a solid unit against us, hating us like blazes and entirely unwilling to believe that any good thing could come out of the Nazareth of the Pioneer Short Line.

As soon as we returned from our first inspection trip, the boss pulled off his coat—figuratively speaking—and rolled up his sleeves. It wasn't his way to talk much about what he was going to do; he'd jump in and do it first, and then talk about it afterward—if anybody lasted on knowing the reason why.

There were long private conferences with Mr. Ripley, the bright young lawyer Mr. Chadwick had sent us from Chicago, and with a young fellow named Juneaman, an ex-newspaper man who was on the payroll as "Advertising Manager," but whose real business seemed to be to keep the Short Line public fully and accurately informed of everything that most railroad companies try to keep to themselves.

The next innovation that came along was another young Chicago man named Billoughby, and his title on the payroll was "Special Agent." I, who was as close to the boss as anybody in our outfit, never once suspected the true nature of Billoughby's job until the day he came in to make his first report—and Mr. Norcross let him make it without sending me out on an errand.

"Well, I think I'm ready to talk Johnson now," was the way Billoughby began. "Red Taper is the one outfit we'll have to kill off and put out of business. Under one name or another, it is engineering every graft in this country. It is even backing the fake mining boom at Saw Horse—to which, by the way, this railroad company is now building a branch line."

After Billoughby had gone, Mr. Norcross came at me on a little matter that had been allowed to sleep ever since the day, now some time back, when I had given him Mrs. Sheila's list about the identity of the two men who had sat and smoked in the auto that Sunday night at Sand Creek siding, and about the talk between the same two that I had overheard the following morning.

"We are going to have sharp trouble with a gentleman by the name of Hatch before very long, Jimmie," was the way he began. "You remember what you told me about that Monday morning talk between Hatch and Henckel in the Bullard lobby. Would you be willing to go into court as a witness and swear to what you heard?"

"Sure I would," I said. "All right, I may have to pull that little incident on Mr. Hatch before I get through with him. The train hold-up was a criminal act, and you are the witness who can convict the pair of them. Of course, we'll leave Mrs. Macrae and the little girl entirely out of it. Nobody knows that they were there with us, and nobody need know."

I agreed to that, and this mention of Mrs. Sheila and Maude Ann, unless you remember that I've been leaving them out pretty severely for a good long while. They weren't left out in reality—not by a long way. In spite of all the rush and hustle, the boss had found time to get acquainted with Major Basil Kendrick, and had been made at home in the transplanted Kentucky mansion in the northern suburb.

But to get back on the firing line, I wasn't around when Mr. Norcross had his "declaration of war" talk with Hatch. Mr. Norcross being pretty sure he wasn't going to have that evening off, had sent me out to "keep warm" with a note and a box of roses, and when I got back to the office about eight o'clock, Hatch was still going away. I met him on the stairs.

The boss was sitting back in his big swing chair, smoking, when I broke in. He looked as if he'd been fixing it up good and plenty with Mr. Rufus Hatch, and enjoying it.

"We've got you going, Jimmie," he chuckled, and he said it without asking me how I had found Mrs. Sheila, or how she was looking, or anything.

I told him I had met Mr. Hatch on the stairs going down.

"He didn't say anything to you, did he?" he asked.

"Not a word."

"I had to pull that Sand Creek business on him, and I'm rather sorry," he said. "He and his people are going to fight the new company to a finish, and he's merely come up here to tell me so—and to add that I might as well resign first as last, because, in the end, he'll get my coat. When I finished up with him he got abuster. He's an ugly leggar, Jimmie."

"That's what everybody says of him."

"It's true. He and his crowd have plenty of money—stolen money—a good deal of it—and they stand in with every politician boss and gangster in the state. There's only one way to handle such a man, and that is with old shoves. I told him we had the goods on him in the matter of Mr. Chadwick's kidnapping adventure. At first he said I couldn't prove it. Then he broke out cursing and let your name slip. I hadn't mentioned you at all, and he gave himself away. He knows who you are, and he'll remember that you had overheard his talk with Henckel in the hotel lobby."

I heard what he was saying, but I didn't really sense it because my head was run just full of a thing that was so painful that it had kept me working hard all the way back from Major Kendrick's. It was this way. When I had faced the bill out of the house it was Maude Ann who let me in and took the box of flowers and the boss's note. We sat in the dimly lighted hall and talked for a few minutes.

One thing she told me was that Mrs. Sheila had company, and the name of it was Mr. Van Brit. That wasn't strictly news because I had known that Mr. Van Brit was fixing time pretty evenly with the boss in the Major Kendrick house visit. That wasn't anything to be scared up about, but my clumsy little girl didn't stop at that.

"That's what everybody says of him."

That wasn't anything to be scared up about, but my clumsy little girl didn't stop at that.

"That's what everybody says of him."

"It's true. He and his crowd have plenty of money—stolen money—a good deal of it—and they stand in with every politician boss and gangster in the state. There's only one way to handle such a man, and that is with old shoves. I told him we had the goods on him in the matter of Mr. Chadwick's kidnapping adventure. At first he said I couldn't prove it. Then he broke out cursing and let your name slip. I hadn't mentioned you at all, and he gave himself away. He knows who you are, and he'll remember that you had overheard his talk with Henckel in the hotel lobby."

After Billoughby had gone, Mr. Norcross came at me on a little matter that had been allowed to sleep ever since the day, now some time back, when I had given him Mrs. Sheila's list about the identity of the two men who had sat and smoked in the auto that Sunday night at Sand Creek siding, and about the talk between the same two that I had overheard the following morning.

"We are going to have sharp trouble with a gentleman by the name of Hatch before very long, Jimmie," was the way he began. "You remember what you told me about that Monday morning talk between Hatch and Henckel in the Bullard lobby. Would you be willing to go into court as a witness and swear to what you heard?"

"Sure I would," I said. "All right, I may have to pull that little incident on Mr. Hatch before I get through with him. The train hold-up was a criminal act, and you are the witness who can convict the pair of them. Of course, we'll leave Mrs. Macrae and the little girl entirely out of it. Nobody knows that they were there with us, and nobody need know."

I agreed to that, and this mention of Mrs. Sheila and Maude Ann, unless you remember that I've been leaving them out pretty severely for a good long while. They weren't left out in reality—not by a long way. In spite of all the rush and hustle, the boss had found time to get acquainted with Major Basil Kendrick, and had been made at home in the transplanted Kentucky mansion in the northern suburb.

But to get back on the firing line, I wasn't around when Mr. Norcross had his "declaration of war" talk with Hatch. Mr. Norcross being pretty sure he wasn't going to have that evening off, had sent me out to "keep warm" with a note and a box of roses, and when I got back to the office about eight o'clock, Hatch was still going away. I met him on the stairs.

The boss was sitting back in his big swing chair, smoking, when I broke in. He looked as if he'd been fixing it up good and plenty with Mr. Rufus Hatch, and enjoying it.

"We've got you going, Jimmie," he chuckled, and he said it without asking me how I had found Mrs. Sheila, or how she was looking, or anything.

I told him I had met Mr. Hatch on the stairs going down.

"He didn't say anything to you, did he?" he asked.

"Not a word."

"I had to pull that Sand Creek business on him, and I'm rather sorry," he said. "He and his people are going to fight the new company to a finish, and he's merely come up here to tell me so—and to add that I might as well resign first as last, because, in the end, he'll get my coat. When I finished up with him he got abuster. He's an ugly leggar, Jimmie."

"That's what everybody says of him."

"It's true. He and his crowd have plenty of money—stolen money—a good deal of it—and they stand in with every politician boss and gangster in the state. There's only one way to handle such a man, and that is with old shoves. I told him we had the goods on him in the matter of Mr. Chadwick's kidnapping adventure. At first he said I couldn't prove it. Then he broke out cursing and let your name slip. I hadn't mentioned you at all, and he gave himself away. He knows who you are, and he'll remember that you had overheard his talk with Henckel in the hotel lobby."

I heard what he was saying, but I didn't really sense it because my head was run just full of a thing that was so painful that it had kept me working hard all the way back from Major Kendrick's. It was this way. When I had faced the bill out of the house it was Maude Ann who let me in and took the box of flowers and the boss's note. We sat in the dimly lighted hall and talked for a few minutes.

One thing she told me was that Mrs. Sheila had company, and the name of it was Mr. Van Brit. That wasn't strictly news because I had known that Mr. Van Brit was fixing time pretty evenly with the boss in the Major Kendrick house visit. That wasn't anything to be scared up about, but my clumsy little girl didn't stop at that.

"That's what everybody says of him."

Diamond Mines Are Reducing Help Is the Latest Report

JAGERSFONTEIN, South Africa, May 7—There has been further retrenchment in the diamond mines here, and underground work has ceased. It is estimated that the employees will number only 60 Europeans and 500 boys, compared with 200 and 2500 respectively before the war. The men who are leaving will receive two months' pay. Many families have already left the town and business is at a standstill.

SECOND PLACE IN HOME RUNS TO BABE RUTH

George Kelley of New York Giants, Heads List Released Today.

By Associated Press. CHICAGO, May 7.—George Kelley, catcher of the famous Bill Lange, who is playing first base for the New York Giants, leading Babe Ruth in home runs, according to averages released today, and which include games of 1920-21.

Kelley captured his seventh honor today, called away from the subject matter of home runs checked in with half a dozen. However, Ruth has the edge on him, total in batting being 258 for 14 games, while Kelly has an average of .331 for 17 contests.

Miller of Philadelphia is topping the players in the National League who have played in fewer games. He has an average of .444 while Johnnie of Brooklyn is the runner-up with .422.

There is a merry race for the stolen base honors. Heathcote, St. Louis, holds the championship. Maranville of Pittsburgh is tied with two each. Other leading hitters: Tompkins, Pittsburgh, .417; Cuthbert, Pittsburgh, .399; Hornsby, St. Louis, .388; Rabinowitz, Philadelphia, .376; Schaefer, Boston, .362; Kelly, New York, .357; Moranville, Pittsburgh, .354; Starnes, New York, .352.

Harry Heilmann of Detroit impressed his lead among the hitters in the American League and is topping the regulars with an average of .521. Evans of Cleveland, who has been coming fast, has passed Stephenson, his teammate for the honors of runner-up to the Tiger slugger. Evans is hitting .481 while Stephenson's mark is .417.

Harris of Washington added another base to his base stealing total and is showing the way with five thefts. Other leading hitters: Witt, Philadelphia, .393; Charney, Washington, .382; Cobb, Detroit, .389; Ruth, New York, .388; Tobin, St. Louis, .387; Sewell, Cleveland, .384; Veach, Detroit, .382.

Butler of Kansas City jumped out in front among the batters of the American Association, with an average of .508, while last week's leader, Miller and Armstrong of St. Paul offered a battling slump. Houser, of Milwaukee is the runner-up with an average of .480. Zwilling of Kansas City added another home run to his string and is leading the circuit drive column with five. Brodson of St. Paul jumped out in front in the race for seven base honors, having stolen eight bases, leaving Shioners of Indianapolis with six and Boone of St. Paul with five.

Paddock of Sioux City continues to top the Western League hitters with an average of .475, and is tied in home runs with Beck of Wichita. Davis of Tulsa and Balesley of Wichita. Each member of this quartette has cracked out four circuit drives. Another quartette is tied for base stealing honors, with five a piece. They are: Pitt of Oklahoma City, Haney of Omaha, E. Moore of Oklahoma City and Robertson of Joplin. Other leading hitters: R. Smith, Joplin, .479; Beck, Wichita, .471; Walker, Joplin, .421; Davis, Tulsa, .407; Metz, Sioux City, .406; Leivick, Omaha, .398; Lee, Omaha, .388; Krueger, Joplin, .389; Harper, Oklahoma City, .389.

Chinese Famine Sufferers Are Taken Back to Farms

NEW YORK, May 7.—Hundreds of thousands of famine sufferers who were concentrated in refugee camps in China during the winter have been compelled by authorities to return to their home provinces and attempt raising new crops this year.

This action was taken, according to cable advices received from Peking, by the China Famine Fund. League officials considered it necessary for the entire population that could be made for a harvest this year throughout the famine area. As the camps were generally well fed during recent months, they were picked to pass the summer months at their former homes.

Refugees who have already started the homeward journey were supplied with food and money by relief organizations. In many cases, the famine victims were given food for two weeks and funds to buy additional food for a month. Seeds for planting were furnished in abundance.

Transportation was furnished free by the railroads. Pigeon Shooting Is Unpopular in Great Britain Today. LONDON, May 7.—English public opinion is being stirred by a campaign of attack by the press against pigeon shooting and as a result a bill has been introduced in Parliament which would make this form of sport illegal.

The stormy controversy recently at Chatham where the birds were released from traps in a shooting competition. Support for the proposed anti-shooting measure is being given by the Royal Society and the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. Agitation against this form of sport has extended to Monte Carlo, where many upper-class English spend part of the winter and where the practice is said to be an institution.

Crime On Increase in France, But Less Begging

PARIS, May 7.—There is 80 percent less begging in France than previous to 1914, according to police statistics but theft has increased in about the same proportion. The police chief in this phenomena by saying that the temptation constantly held out to the gaily inclined to enjoy themselves opens to those who cannot afford it as well as to those that can.

Criminality among women and children has notably increased. Among a hundred persons found guilty of crime before the war there were 12 women and five minors, there are now 70 women and 14 minors in every hundred convicted. Besides the temptation to have a good time, the police say, sensational moving pictures have had a powerful effect to do with the development of crime among women and children.

Cases of assault and battery and other offenses which are largely confined to alcoholics have decreased. This is attributed to the suppression of absinth and to abstemious habits acquired when wartime restrictions made it impossible to drink at all hours of the day.

MICHIGAN WELL PROVIDED WITH PARK SYSTEM

Tourists Will Be Attracted by Number of Public Play Grounds.

Camping Sites Will Be Found in All Parts of the State; Many Others Are in Prospect.

ANN ARBOR, Mich., May 7.—Since its creation by the legislature at this time, the state park commission has acquired from various private individuals, municipalities and counties some 200 acres of land donated to form state parks. Twenty-one of these state parks have been set apart and will be ready for the use of the public by June 15, according to the office of the commission.

Three wilderness areas have been similarly acquired by the commission for the state, but has not yet been made ready for the use of the public.

Sixty Per Cent of Children in the City Are Underweight

The official examination and measuring of the children of the Escanaba public schools revealed the fact that almost 60 percent of the children in the different schools were underweight according to the standard table of children and adults prepared by the U. S. Bureau of Education.

The conditions varied somewhat in the different schools, the results being as follows: In the first school, the boys averaged 125 pounds and the girls 115 pounds. In the second school, the boys averaged 120 pounds and the girls 110 pounds. In the third school, the boys averaged 115 pounds and the girls 105 pounds.

The underweight condition may be due to various causes, such as lack of proper food and lack of exercise. It is a serious condition and should be remedied as soon as possible.

Irregular habits may be a cause of underweight. Inefficient rest of sleep in unventilated sleeping rooms, neglecting the health of the teeth and body and bad habits that may interfere with nature's development.

EXPLAIN NEEDS OF FREIGHTHOUSE TO R. OFFICIALS

The Great Need of New Warehouse Explained by W. R. Smith of Delta Hardware Company.

At the open meeting of the Good Freight Service Committee of the Northwestern road at which all the business men and shippers of the city were invited the following Escanaba men present gave suggestions that they thought might be of help to the freight department of the road.

Most of the men offered suggestions for the improvement of the service ranging from delays in the exchange of cars between the C. & N. W. and the E. & L. S. and car inspection to schedules for receiving outgoing less-carload freight at the local warehouse.

The facilities for handling freight at your warehouse here are inadequate, he told the railroad men. You need more unloading track and an extension of your platform space very badly.
