IRISH SENTIMENT BREAKS OUT IN DENVER

"TIM" MURPHY CONFESSES TO MAIL ROBBERY

Prominent Illinois Politician Placed Under Arrest Today.
Was a Party to the $300,000 Dearborn Station Mail Pouch Robbery a Few Months Ago.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
CHICAGO, June 14.—Timothy D. "Tim" Murphy, prominent labor leader and former member of the state legislature is alleged to have confessed, according to postal authorities, that he was implicated in the $350,000 mail robbery at the Dearborn street station several months ago.
Murphy's arrest and alleged confession followed a raid last night on the home of his father-in-law, William Diggins, when $58,000 in Liberty bonds and $10,000 in cash was found in a trunk.
Vincennes, Ind., his lieutenant, was also arrested and the confession of a mail clerk Peter Teter who received $11,000 according to the confession he has made to the postal authorities, as his share of the robbery.
With the arrest of a group in his home and the seizure of $1000 in new bills the department of justice and the police state today that the $300,000 mail robbery at the Dearborn street station has been cleared up. Eight men are in custody including Murphy.
It was due to the confession of Mail Clerk Teter that much of the details have been finally cleared up.
According to Teter, he met Murphy in an Indianapolis dry goods store and arranged plans. He also says that Murphy was near while the robbery was being made. It had been planned that the robbers were to drive up to the station in an automobile and get out to engage in playing ball.
Teter was to watch for the registered pouch and when it arrived was to push his hat back upon his head as a signal that it was ready to be taken by the men.
Murphy flatly denies participation in the actual robbery but according to officials of the post office department has confessed to having a hand in it.

Wells Team Wins Fast Game Sunday

Wells won from the Delta County Garage team Sunday at Wells to the tune of 19 to 5. The Wells boys have improved considerably over the last two games and are all out to practice regularly three times a week and are ready to take on any of the industrial or amateur teams in the surrounding district.
Wilfred Beauchamp for the Deltas, pitched a good game, but had very poor support. Gardner pitched for Wells and threw a steady game with good support. The infield was not in very good condition as it is being covered with clay and will be finished the coming week, giving Wells as good a ball ground as any and with continued improvement of the players the people of Wells should enjoy some very good games.

NO WORD FROM SON; FAMILY IS SADLY WORRIED

Steve Benard, Son of Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Benard, of This City, Not Heard From in 3 Months.

Considerable anxiety is felt by Mr. and Mrs. Napoleon Benard, 314 North Eighteenth street for the safety of their son Steve, who has not been heard from for more than three months. Steve left Escanaba several months ago to join the navy. He succeeded in enlisting and was stationed at San Diego, Cal. A little over three months ago the local boy was assigned to the U. S. Coastguard, which sailed shortly afterward from that port for Honolulu. Since the boat sailed no word has been received from either the young man or the officials at Washington or San Diego, although the family have written several times in the anxiety over any possible danger that might have befallen their son.
For a time it was thought possible that the ship might have went to the bottom or met with some other mishap which caused the long delay in receiving any response to their letters, but the navy department at Washington has not announced anything relative to the sinking of a ship at sea. It is thought that the ship might have met with some unaccountable delay on the voyage and that word will be received from young Benard soon, although that does not account for the action of the government in failing to answer the communications sent out by the lad's parents.

More than 200 American Legion members attended the regular monthly meeting of Cloverland Post of the American Legion held last night in St. Joseph's hall. The meeting was undoubtedly the most successful ever held since the organization of the local post. The meeting was open to every service man and many of the veterans took advantage of the invitation and attended the meeting.

The main topic of the evening was the American soldier's bonus. J. Herbert Kelly, secretary of the post, gave a detailed report of the work that has been done so far to further the work of bringing the bonus money to the ex-service men. He stated that 120 applications have been made out by him at the Legion headquarters and estimated that the total for the county will amount to about 400.
A new supply of application blanks have been received by the secretary and they will be distributed about the city by him where they will be available for every one. Mr. Kelly announced that his office will be open to the men every day from 8 to 5 and from 7 to 9 in the evening for the convenience of the soldiers.

Following a talk by Elmer St. Martin, Legion commander, the entertainment committee under the direction of Mrs. N. Pavlov, served refreshments to the members and visitors.

ESCANABA BOY JUMPS FROM A MOVING TRAIN

Elmer Shedore Dives Through Window of Fast Moving Train Yesterday, According to Report.

According to a report received at this office late this afternoon Elmer Shedore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Phil Shedore, 239 North Nineteenth street jumped headlong from a window of a rapidly moving passenger train, ten miles out of Lansing yesterday and made good his escape. Young Shedore, it is said, was being taken to the state detention home by Deputy Sheriff Gervais. He was charged with jumping his parole from that institution. It was also stated in the report that Gervais jumped out immediately after the boy and was badly shaken up. Young Shedore picked himself up immediately started to run, stopped, turned and waited long enough to buy a stone at the officer who was lying on the ground. It was stated at the sheriff's office this afternoon that Deputy Sheriff Gervais had left for Newberry with a prisoner soon after his return from Lansing. Before returning to Escanaba from the lower state city the officer made all arrangements for the arrest and detention of young Shedore if he was found.

The fact that neither Shedore or Gervais were not instantly killed or seriously injured in their jump from the flyer is a miracle and although the local officer received no serious injuries it is said that he was badly shaken up and received numerous bruises and cuts.
What disposition of the case will be made if young Shedore is caught is not known although it is believed he will possibly be given a heavier term for breaking parole and breaking arrest.

BAND CONCERT MONDAY, BOHR BOYS' BAND

Youngsters Need Some More Funds for Music and Uniforms.

Next Monday evening Bohr's Bohr's Boys' Band are going to give a concert in the high school auditorium to which the public are invited to attend and pay the small admission which is to be charged. The boys have been very faithful during the winter in attending rehearsals and are well able to give a concert.
The money cleared at the concert is to be used for new uniforms and music. Many new boys have joined the band and are waiting to get their new suits. Owing to the large number of collections and drives that have been put on in the city during the past year or so, the boys feel that they would like to earn the money instead of soliciting it from the big hearted business men in Escanaba.

History of C. N. W. Woman's Club Told by Local Officials

During the war the Chicago women of the Chicago & Northwestern Ry., organized themselves into a body to do war relief work. They were successful and did a whole lot of good. They found many ways of helping the war-torn and at the same time helping their country. At the close of the war they thought it would be a good idea to maintain their organization for the benefit and good of all.
This plan was submitted to the president and general officials of the railway which they approved, and are now backing and assisting it. The organization consists of the parent club of Chicago with branch clubs at division headquarters of all divisions, which branch clubs report to the parent club. Each club is organized with a president, two vice presidents, treasurer, recording secretary and corresponding secretary with chairman of various committees. These officers are appointed and approved by the parent club.
Last winter and spring the ladies of the parent club visited all division headquarters and organized a club at each place. In January, 1921 such a branch was organized at Escanaba with 156 members. The club meets the second Tuesday of each month and notice is always given in the daily papers of time of meeting.
The object of the club is to get together to know each other, and to raise funds by entertainments so as to be able to help out a worthy fellow employee or family in case of misfortune. No one of us knows what misfortune may come to us at any time, and we as fellow workers should come to each others' assistance.
All of our husbands, sons and brothers are working together shoulder to shoulder in order to make the C. & N. W. Ry. the best in every way and we as the women of the C. & N. W. Ry. should work for the welfare of C. & N. W. Ry. families.
Since our organization in January we have been able to do some very good work. We wish to continue the good work and are asking the women of the C. & N. W. Ry. families to come and join us for you cannot devote your efforts to any better cause.

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)
DENVER, Col. (Auriferum) June 14.—Warning against any agitation which might disrupt the American labor movement was given to the delegates of the American Federation of Labor today by James A. Thomas, a prominent British labor leader. Mr. Thomas also talked very frankly on the Irish problem and declared that the American Federation of Labor could not solve that problem.
DENVER, Col., June 14.—Efforts to prevent a widening of the breach between the two factions of Irish sympathizers, among the delegates was being made today at the annual convention of the American Federation of Labor.
Advocates of Irish peace selected a committee to draft a resolution satisfactory to both the extreme and the conservative groups of Irish.

MORE RIOTING IN IRELAND AMONG THE CLIFTONITES

BELFAST, Ireland, June 14.—Rioting accompanied by heavy revolver and rifle firing was renewed in the Clifton area early today. In authoritative circles it is stated that the rioting was organized by Republicans who visited King George at Belfast on June 22 when he was there for the purpose of attending the opening of the state parliament.
Four other resolutions of similar nature have been submitted. Delegates opposing the boycott resolution declared it would be detrimental to the labor movement and obstruct the work of the federation with the local unions of Canada and declared that any resolution employing a boycott would surely be defeated in the convention.

CLOSER UNITY FOR CHURCHES DR. LAIRD SAYS

Gives Baccalaureate Address at Albion College On Sunday.

ALBION, Mich., June 12.—Although opposing an organic union of Protestant churches, Dr. John W. Laird, pastor of the Mr. Vernon Methodist Episcopal church at Baltimore, and director of the war work commission of the Methodist Episcopal church, urged closer unity of the churches in delivering the baccalaureate sermon here before the graduating class of Albion college.

Dr. Laird, in his sermon, declared a federation of Protestant churches, without loss of denominational identity, is both desirable and imperative.

"A new type of Christian state membership is approaching," he said. "Gradual elimination of that ultra sectarianism that prevents the Protestant church from doing its best kind of work is demanded. Inefficiency, inadequacy, wastefulness and failure are to be found wherever denominations care more for personal preference and the maintenance of denominational identity than for the actual progress of the Kingdom of God. Already the light of common sense and practical Christianity is dawning.

We do not have an adequate federation of churches until there is a federation of the part of the denominations to create leadership with enough authority to make for efficiency. I would subscribe to a church organization not unlike that of the government of the United States. If we can trust the affairs of our government to the executive leadership of a president and if we can find a congress of men and women capable of looking our laws and if we can have a federation of states without any commonwealth governing its deeds, why can we not federate the denominations of Protestantism under competent leadership and into the same close overlapping and interlocking of our present divided Protestantism?"

"I am opposed to organic union, because such union is contrary to the spirit of Protestantism."

Dr. Laird urged both capital and labor to study the human side of every question where disputes between the two were concerned.

"The difficulty with the industrial world today is the minimizing of the human element and the maximizing of the necessity for increased production," he said. "Faults are to be found on both sides."

In discussing the steps that have been taken to prevent child labor in America, Dr. Laird said:

"Our religious teachers, with their ministry of spiritual education, are playing the evangelistic emphasis where it belongs, not simply in a redeemable adulthood but in a redemption of childhood. It is infinitely better to save a life than a soul, for when you have a whole life—from childhood to manhood—you save the soul as well, but when you only save an adult soul, you have missed and lost the creative service of a life."

UNITED STATES IS FALLING BEHIND IN GREEK TRADE

Great Britain Is Cutting Into the Greek Business, According to a Report Sent Here.

England also leads America in imports from Greece-American imports for the year fell off more than $5,000,000.

The most notable decrease was in tobacco last, the 1920 shipments to the United States amounting to only 210,502,952.

Compared with $22,681,873 in 1919, Greece is the principal tobacco center of Europe and the great fields of Macedonia produce some of the finest leaf in the world.

Germany has made considerable progress in her efforts to establish herself in the Hellenic markets her exports to Greece during the first eight months of last year being only slightly less than her exports for the whole pre-war year of 1913 and 40 times greater than her exports in 1919.

Shipments to the United States in 1920 of oranges and figs showed a large increase as a result of a good crop and a favorable demand. Exports of animal skins, an important product of Greece were much less than in 1919 owing to increased demand from German markets, which consumed a large part of the local stocks.

Some of the odd articles of exports from Greece to the United States were books and books, beads, wreaths, animal bones, litanies, octopus, fish and altar of roses.

Greece's olive yield in 1920 was 50,000,000 gallons, 1,000,000 gallons of which went to the United States.

LESS MEAT IF BACK AND KIDNEYS HURT

Take a glass of Softs to flush kidneys if bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water.

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked, get sluggish, clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly back ache and misery in the kidney region, rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation, torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Don's Kidney Pills from any good pharmacy, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. (Don's Kidney Pills is made from the seed of grapes and lemon juice combined with lithin and has been used for generations for such chronic kidney troubles, it is the best thing to take to get rid of the uric acid in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.)

STOP THAT ACHE!

Don't worry and complain about it. Get rid of that pain and lameness! Use Don's Kidney Pills. Many Escanaba people have used them and know how effective they are. There's an Escanaba cure.

Mrs. S. Gagnon, corner Golden and 8th St., S. Escanaba, gave the following statement October 26, 1916: "Several years ago I was troubled with a weak back and it ached nearly all the time, making me feel miserable. My kidneys were out of order and every time I tried to bend over sharp, darting pains would catch me. As Don's Kidney Pills were so highly recommended I decided to try them. They soon relieved me of all the trouble and since then I have taken them occasionally at times for attacks of headache caused by a cold and they have never failed to always give me results."

On May 18, 1920, Mrs. Gagnon said: "Don's Kidney Pills are certainly a fine medicine. I use Don's occasionally and never yet have they failed to give the desired results. I am glad to recommend them as I did in 1916."

INDIANS SHOW BUT LITTLE DECREASE IN POPULATION

Well Known Missionary Says With Proper Care of Babies Tribes Would Show An Increase.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 11.—The American Indians are not decreasing in numbers, according to Dr. Elmer E. Giles of Des Moines, who is recently appointed Superintendent of Indian Work of the Methodist Episcopal church, who is here attending the conference of American Indian Missionaries.

"There are more than one-third of a million Indians in the United States," added Rev. Higley, "and fifty-seven different languages are spoken."

"A survey among the Indians has just recently been made by the treasury officials and shows that not only the full blooded Indians are increasing but also the mixed bloods, with better homes, medical attention and better care of Indian babies and with the missionaries taking the gospel of soap, sanitation and salvation, the increase of the number of Indians will continue."

"Two-thirds cannot understand the American language. Thirteen percent of the Indians are afflicted with tuberculosis, and 80,000 suffer from trachoma. Three out of every five Indian children die before the age of five years."

There are 128 Protestant mission societies and 276 Catholic with 618 total buildings with a membership of 1,000 Protestants and 51,000 Catholics.

Fully two-thirds of the mixed blood population is set without regular religious whither either Protestant or Catholic. The Methodist missionary program plans large enterprises among the red necks.

The following letter from Charles Fisher of Indian Affairs, Charles E. Barker, to the Rev. Bishop was read at the conference:

"The progress that has been made in the civilization of the Indians and their present development would have been impossible if it had not been for the missionaries that were the pioneers in laying the foundation for the religious and social and welfare of these people, and it is my hope that we may have the assistance and cooperation of all missionary societies in our endeavor to hasten the time when all of the Indians in the country may become respectable, self-supporting, Christian citizens."

A second conference of Indians will be held at Salem, Ore., on June 27.

MANY INDUSTRIES TIED TO TOBACCO

Prohibition of Weed Would Mean Big Financial Loss to Allied Trades.

WHO USES THE MATCH?

The Smoker Mainly—Also Responsible for Spending Hundreds of Millions Annually for Licorice, Sugar, Coal, Cigar Boxes, Tin Foil, Etc.

By CARRET SMITH
"Get a match?"

How many times a day is that question asked in these United States? How many more times is the question unnecessary because most pockets are kept well supplied with the useful little article? Anyhow, inasmuch as it is estimated that there are 30,000,000 tobacco users in the country, we may guess that the answer to that question would run into the hundreds of millions.

For if it weren't for the smokers in these days of electric lights how many matches would be used? A pretty small proportion of the number of these "sticks of blazes" produced in the country every year. Abolish tobacco and the match business would be shot to pieces.

But the match business is only one of a dozen or more allied industries which derive large revenues directly or indirectly from the tobacco trade and would suffer heavily if national prohibition of tobacco were to go into effect as some of our reformers would have it. The annual sales of tobacco products, based on retail prices, is estimated at $1,087,000,000. Of the cost of producing and selling this quantity of cigars, cigarettes and other forms of the weed, some hundreds of million dollars are paid out for other things than the raw tobacco and labor of making it up.

$25,000,000 a Year for Boxes

For example, the tobacco trade consumes each year 35,000,000 pounds of licorice, 50,000,000 pounds of sugar, both used in flavoring tobacco, and 650,000 tons of coal. It is estimated that the value of wooden cigar boxes used is $25,000,000 a year, quite an item to the lumber business and to manufacturers of the boxes.

In making these boxes 500,000 pounds of nails are employed. Other large items used in making and preparing tobacco for sale are tin and lead foil, paper for bags and cigarette wrappers, cloth for tobacco bags, labels, coupons, etc., involving the printing trade extensively.

Then building contractors and manufacturers of machinery are largely interested. Investments in plants and machinery employed in manufacturing tobacco are estimated at $102,000,000. Replacement, up-keep and interest on the investment make no small sum annually.

And let reality men note there are approximately 325,000 tobacco farms in the country, with a total estimated valuation of $160,000,000. Of further interest to real estate men is the fact that there are 700,000 retail establishments selling tobacco, involving a total rental and up-keep impossible to estimate, besides the large amount of office space occupied by administrative branches of the general business.

The insurance men, too, have their share of the pickings. The tobacco business pays out annually $7,000,000 in premiums in the United States.

And there are the railroads who reap revenue from 2,210,000 tons of tobacco products every year.

As for the advertising business, here again it is impossible to form any estimate of the enormous annual outlay.

The prohibition of tobacco would also knock a good-sized hole in the receipts of the United States government. The internal revenue receipts from tobacco for the fiscal year 1920 amounted to $295,800,855.44. Customs duties provided an additional $25,400,000 in round figures, making the total revenue return to the government $320,000,000.

Influence on Popular Sentiment

It is this interlocking of the tobacco business with so many other interests and the vast amount of financial loss that would be involved in the abolition of tobacco that is one of the most serious aspects of the proposal to prohibit the sale of tobacco, a proposal, however, which has little support by public sentiment if the newspaper editors of the country are correct in their estimate of that sentiment.

In a poll of the editors made recently by the Tobacco Merchants' Association of the United States, through the Press Service Company of New York City, 95 per cent of the 7,847 editors who replied expressed the opinion that the people of their communities were opposed to any law against tobacco. As these editors represent some 80,000,000 readers the results form a pretty general test of national opinion.

In their remarks accompanying their replies many of the editors expressed it as their opinion that the opposition to their communities to the abolition of tobacco was based to some extent at least on the damage such a change would do to the business interests of the community. This was particularly true in the tobacco growing states and centers where there were large tobacco plants.

But when the extent of the business involved in the allied interests of the tobacco trade is considered, as above briefly outlined, it is clear that there is hardly a section of the country that would not be affected directly or indirectly by abolishing tobacco.

Look at all of the real estate ads and at much of the real estate advertising, before inventing.

Fourth Time the Working Force Has Been Cut Within a Comparatively Short Time—San Francisco Building Trades Cut.

A reduction of 25 per cent in the working forces of the Chicago & Eastern Illinois car and locomotive departments has taken place. This is the fourth reduction in men, taking away about 55 per cent of the men employed in December. Eighty-five car repair men and ninety-five in the mechanical department at Danville have been notified. Over 100 men employed at the Chicago outside repair yards at Yard Center were also laid off.

SWIMMER LANDS JOB AS OFFICIAL GREETER

HONOLULU, T. H.—The muscular right hand of Duke P. Kahanamoku, world's champion sprint swimmer, which has ploughed the waters of many lands during the Duke's long tenure of his national crown, will be used in the future to welcome visitors to Hawaii, if the plans of Governor Charles J. McCarthy materialize. Governor McCarthy recently announced that he would appoint the swimming champion to the newly created position of "official greeter" if he was still in office July 1, when the bill passed by the legislature providing a salary of $200 monthly for the post goes in to effect. Should Governor McCarthy's resignation, already in the hands of the secretary of the interior, be accepted before that date, it is expected his successor would follow the unexpressed, but evident wishes of the legislature and name Kahanamoku for the job.

THE OFFER TO MEXICO

In offering the Mexican government a treaty of unity and commerce covering the points in dispute that have thus far prevented Washington from acceding to recognition to Mr. Woodrow Wilson, President Harding and Secretary Hughes show a disposition to make things as easy for President Woodrow Wilson as they can without receiving from the firm regarding American rights in Mexico they have mapped out for themselves.

The tone of Mr. Hughes' statement seems to indicate also, that the United States is not going to bring any pressure to bear upon Mexico City to accept the proffered treaty. Mexico City can take it or leave it as it pleases and can go its way without molestation as long as it does not actually commit any overt act prejudicing the rights of Americans within its territories.

STILL BARBAROUS

The tragic fate of the young aviator who plunged half a mile to death a few days since while attempting to loop the loop in an airplane for the detection of a crowd of onlookers can hardly be expected to exert a deterring influence on the rest of the world ready to risk their necks in a similar fashion.

Today men shudder at the mention of capital punishment for a murderer as an inhuman and unwarranted taking of life, and then cheer the aviator who courts death with foolhardy leaps. They deplore the employment of brute strength in our daily affairs and eagerly pay to watch two pugilists hammer each other. They wax eloquent in behalf of conservation of human life and should themselves hesitate in encouragement of a group of motorists on a speedway defying death in a manner that would have caused oldtime chariot kings to expire with horror.

THE CHICAGO ELECTION

William Hale Thompson, mayor of Chicago, has impressed the country at large as a man who is singularly unworthy of public favor. His refusal to invite Marshal Joffre to Chicago was the event which formed public opinion as to the kind of man he is, and his subsequent career has not changed the early impression.

The Thompson machine was arrogant enough to suppose that it could ignore popular sentiment in favor of a judiciary which is above politics and above suspicion. It knows better now.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XLIII.—WYOMING

THIS IS WYOMING, a state that takes the honor of being the first to grant complete political rights to women. In fact when, in 1890, the Territory of Wyoming from parts of Dakota, Utah and Idaho, a constitution was adopted which gave women the right to vote.

There were rumors of early Spanish explorations in Wyoming, but they seem unfounded by fact. Probably the first white man to visit this part of the country was Sir John Franklin in 1846, and his sons who passed through this region in 1846 in search of locations for trading posts.

The first permanent fort in Wyoming was erected in 1824 where the Laramie River flows into the Platte. Later when the stream of immigrants passed through this region on their way to the California gold fields a string of forts were erected along the Oregon Trail to protect the travelers from attacks by the hostile Sioux Indians.

Through Wyoming went not only the Oregon Trail, which was opened up by Lieutenant Fremont and his guide, Kit Carson, in 1842, but also the Salt Lake Trail. Along these routes many travelers crossed Wyoming, but few stopped and settled there as the country was the most arid of all our states.

The discovery of gold in 1876 led to the founding of South Pass City and in the same year Cheyenne was laid out by the Union Pacific Railroad company. Wyoming became the forty-fourth state of the Union in 1890 and is eighth in size with an area of 97,514 square miles.

Light and power plants, as well as utilities at Ogdensburg, Upper St. Lawrence, have been virtually paralyzed by the general strike which there is a protest against the mill's commission's attitude toward the French insurance in the region. Reports regarding the strike indicate the without as general.

REJECT ONE BIG UNION IDEA

Lumber Workers of Alberta, Canada Announce Change in Their Views on the Subject.

The death knell of the One Big Union has been tolled, says the Alberta Labor News of Edmonton, which discusses the withdrawal from the One Big Union of lumber workers who are declared to be "the only section of the One Big Union that has ever functioned." The lumber workers have set up an independent union and are now denouncing their former colleagues as "political leaders and orators."

Secretary Berg of the new organization of lumber workers says "the membership were fully led into the trap that had been carefully laid by these would-be leaders and as a result the One Big Union is a one big union only in name." The Alberta Labor News says the great mass of workers who joined the One Big Union were shrewd, but they were ignorant of history and the theory of those who posed as their "leaders."

"They could not," says the Labor News, "have understood the philosophy of the men who launched the movement or they would have known that the move was just that and not industrial unionism. They must also have been ignorant of the history of working class organization, its failures and successes, and they would have seen the impotence of the thing, they were being led into."

Industry Too Attractive? If the legislative program of New Brunswick trade unionists is adopted it will give workers to the cities, and this would be undesirable, declared business men of a conference. New Brunswick, at a conference in which the workers' proposed legislation was opposed. In its appeal to the government to reject these demands, the employers say:

"One feature we would particularly commend you of, when considering the enactment of so-called labor legislation, is that all enactments which tend to make the conditions surrounding the employment in industrial centers more attractive and favorable to wage-earners employed in these centers, in comparison with those employed in agricultural and rural districts, tend to intensify the migration from these districts to the industrial centers. Ways and means should be considered toward alleviating this serious condition of migration rather than toward aggravating it."

The objectionable legislation includes compensation amendments, restriction of child labor and the eight-hour day. Greater educational facilities demanded by the workers are set aside by the employers with the claim that this is matter of "public policy."

"I don't know," he explained, wondering why and all seemed to him distinctly. "I must have been the Littlefords, I guess, from the Morelands. 'Pa' because who else would be home? But to save the life of me I can't see how they got in and took my rifle without waking me up. Bill Dale, I slept twice as long as a sick mouse."

Within ten more minutes, every man of the Morelands was gathered there at the house of their chief—and every man of them had lost their weapons during the night.

John Moreland called Dale aside and said to him: "You're high on the good side of them that rifle the Hicks, and so far as they know, you ain't interested in the feud. I wish you'd go down there and see by and his mother, and see if you can find out what our rifles went to."

When Dale had gone off down the dusty oxwagon road, Caleb Moreland climbed a tall ash that grew behind his father's cabin and kept a watch toward the Littleford side of the river. He saw a group of men standing in Ben Littleford's cabin yard, and nothing else.

A little more than a quarter of an hour after Dale left John Moreland he entered by the rear less gateway of the cabin of the Hicks. It was a dilapidated place, and it stood not far from the river. By sat in the rear doorway, he was lazily cutting a new midday sun mark in the place of the worn old one. Behind him sat his mother, who was busily knitting a gray yarn stocking.

The moon-shine looked up and started off quickly in his feet. "What's that?" he asked, looking at the shadow. "It's the moon, son, you see some at the right time, there. We're going to have young squires to dinner, and a little bit of a party with string beans and custard made with the white of hen eggs. Live with ye do live, says I. Come right in, Bill, old boy."

"La, la, la," cried Grandpa Moreland, looking over the brass rim of his spectacles. "How glad I am to see ye, Mr. Bill! Come right in and tell us the news."

Bill Dale crossed the threshold and accepted a creaking chair. His eyes took in at a sweeping glance the home made dining table with its cover of red cloth, the broken cast-iron stove, the strings of dried peppers hanging on the log walls, the broken sash window lying in the corner.

"The Littlefords," said Dale, "have declared war."

"Sakes!" laughed the old woman. "We knowed that just night when we heered them ten shots."

"And all the Morelands' rifles are missing?" Dale watched the effect of his words.

"What?" the Hicks cried in one voice. Their surprise seemed genuine. Dale pressed the subject further and learned only that if they knew anything concerning the disappearance of the rifles they were not going to tell. Then he started homeward by way of the pool above the downward way amure.

There was a chance that Ben Littleford's daughter would be there fishing. Dale told himself, and it was barely possible that she could throw some light on the mystery of the rifles.

He crossed the river by means of the prostrate tree. Babe was there, she sat on the stone on which she had been sitting the morning before; her back was to him, and her bare feet were in the water to her ankles. Dale went up close, stopped and gathered a handful of violets and dropped them over her shoulder and into her lap.

Babe looked around and smiled. "What luck, Miss Littleford?" "Nothin' I don't much want to ketch anything," she said slowly, a spirit of sadness in her musical voice. "I jest come off down here to be what it's quiet. You ought to hear the noise at pap and the rest of 'em is a-makin'."

"Mad at You?" Asked Dale.

He wouldn't believe that, neither. Pap's as hard-headed as a brindle cow, when he gets a fool notion on him. What's what did them Morelands say about their rifle being gone?"

Dale straightened. "How did you find that out?" "Don't matter, how?" She smiled almost slyly. "I knowed about it afore you did, Mr. Bill Dale. Don't you think whoever done it done a kind thing?"

"To disarm the Morelands so that when the enemy comes they will have nothing with which to defend themselves?" Dale didn't know much about these bill reads. "No, Miss Littleford, I can't say that I think it was a kind thing to do."

Miss Littleford arose and faced Dale. Her cheeks were flushed. "Has the enemy come?" she demanded bly.

"No, but—" "All right," the young woman broke in sharply. "If the enemy didn't come, what're you a-kickin' about?" Her brown eyes were full of fire.

They smiled, and they withered, and Bill Dale suddenly felt that he was smaller and of less account in the scheme of things than that amphibious, eight-legged creature that stood before him.

"I beg pardon," Dale said evenly. "I didn't mean to offend, you see."

His quick contrition struck the girl. Her mouth quivered. She dropped her fishing rod and began to cry softly with the end of her long, thick plait of brown hair.

"I've used so much of this tonight," she murmured tremulously, "that I sakes me go to pieces. I ought to be your partner, mother, and I do."

"I've used a good many times strong men, brought home dead of a night from the Moreland battle. And the Littlefords has killed Morelands' too. One of them as many as fifteen I reckon. I'd be glad to give my life to stop it."

"I'll bet you, if I can, little told here. Perhaps we can make truces with the Morelands and your people."

"You don't know what a hard thing it'd be," she replied tentatively. "The Morelands has hated each other ever since I was a child. And you would be here any long, I reckon."

"I'm tryin' to be here for the rest of my life," said Dale. "Is it the realty?" inquired Babe. "Partly, yes. 'Tis the coal. I'm going to develop it for the Morelands."

Babe looked at him with a look of awe in her eyes. Before she could speak again there came from somewhere back in the meadow the sound of her father's voice.

"Habe! Come, Babe!" "Come!" cried the girl, half-starting. "We'll try to make my friends, we'll try. Old Major Bradley, he'll be up here afore long to spend the summer, and he'll help us. He's a mighty good man; you're shore to like him. He generally stays with us when he's here. You go easy with John Moreland. But when ye get him, ye'll have 'em all. I'll work on pap. The ain't no danger of trouble right now, anyway. Goodby, Bill Dale!"

"One moment," Miss Littleford said, and she took a step after her. "Are you sure there's no danger right now?" Babe halted, faced about nervously, and smiled a little. "Don't call me 'Miss' no more," said she. "It makes me feel old. Call me what everybody else calls me, ef ye don't mind. Why, every one of the Littlefords lost their rifles last night the same as the Morelands did. Me, here at sundown, and I'll tell ye about it. Goodby, Bill Dale!" "Goodby, Babe!" he smiled.

seemed rather badly worked up over it." "From the cabin's front door way came a woman's sorrowful voice: "And me, too; I'd give my life to stop this here fightin'. I had a boy, a big, strappin' boy—"

John Moreland frowned toward his wife and interrupted. "Now, Addie, honey, don't do that." It ended the talk.

Mrs. Moreland dried her eyes on a corner of her freshly ironed muslin apron, and announced the Monday meal. The mountaineers dispersed. Grandpa Moreland went away clanking at his long white beard and grumbling over the loss of his beloved old lantern.

An hour later Dale cornered the Moreland leader on the vine-hung front porch and suggested that they look over the coal property that afternoon. He was eager to go to work, eager to be doing something worth while, he told Moreland. The hillman stood very still for what seemed to the other a very long time, and had no word to say. Evidently the feud had all his mind now.

When he did speak, he said simply: "All right, Bill."

After half an hour of fighting their way through thickets of blooming laurel and ivy, they drew up before an old and dilapidated cabin at the north end of David Moreland's mountain. Moreland led the way in and pointed to a spot under a small, paneless window.

"That," said he, "is whin we fought my brother David."

The two men turned for the point at which the coal vein ran out to the light of day.

Dale picked up a piece of the shining black stuff. Judging by the little he knew and the great amount of description he had heard, the vein was very large and the coal itself of the finest grade.

"It was a big find," he told his companion, "a big find. It was a pity to let it be here untouched for so long; and yet it's worth more today than it was ever worth before."

His enthusiasm ran warm, and Moreland caught it quickly. Together they hastily planned out the little railroad that was to wind its way through the hills and connect with the big railroad at the halfway switch.

"I know I'm a-doin' right about it," the mountaineer said twice for the benefit of his conscience. "I know here David he would want me to do this of he could know."

"I'm sure of it," agreed Dale. "I'll start for Cincinnati tomorrow. I've got enough money to take me there and back. I have a very wealthy friend there—his name is Harris; I think I can borrow enough from him to finance the beginning of this thing. And I'll buy a locomotive and cars, and all the other necessary machinery, while I'm in Cincinnati—unless I fail to get the money from Harris. When I get back, which should be within eight days, we'll start the work. At a guess, I'd say we'll need twenty thousand. Can we get that?"

"That," nodded the mountaineer, "and all Morelands at that."

They turned homeward. At last Bill Dale was happy. He had something to do now—an aim in life. He had difficulties to overcome, obstacles to remove, barriers to surmount—it was his big chance!

It was almost sundown when Dale returned from his visit to the coal vein—Big Pine mountain hid the sun at a little after three in the afternoon. He borrowed a fishing rod and a number of flies, which made his going to the river seem proper enough to John Moreland, and set out to meet Babe Littleford. He was glad that nobody expressed a desire to accompany him.

He found Ben Littleford's daughter where he had found her twice before—sitting on a stone the size of a small barrel. She was fishing with an unbalanced hook, which was equal to fishing not at all, and she seemed pleased when she saw him coming. He sat down on the stone at her side. She moved over a little shyly, and tried to cover her feet with her calico skirts.

"Needn't bother to hide them," laughed Bill Dale. "They're pretty enough. Most feet, you know, are necessary evils, like chilblains and rain-spouts."

Babe Littleford blushed. He went on to hide her confusion. "Tell me about the rifles."

"You must shore keep it a secret," she told him. "I promise."

"Better put your hook in, w'e ef anybody comes along."

CHEMICAL PLANT HIT BY ANOTHER RUINIOUS BLAZE

Fire Breaks Out in Large Building at Plant; Loss Will Be Heavy, Officials Say.

Arriving close on the trail of the fire that caused a loss of approximately $200,000 at the Delta Chemical Company's plant on March 8 another fire believed to be as great as the first visited the chemical plant located at 9 o'clock last night almost completely destroying the large building.

John Thompson, night watchman at the plant turned the distress signal at 9:15 and a few minutes later the employees of the company, who had been attending a community center meeting hurried to the scene without changing into their working clothes to fight the flames and make an effort to save other buildings in the vicinity. One half hour after the fire had started the entire building was a mass of flames, and as many hose connections as possible were turned into the building. The local fire department made a record run to the vicinity with the big truck and greatly aided in saving other buildings.

Through the fast work of Chief Arvid Johnson and members of his department and the chemical plant employees working under the direction of H. H. Goetschius the flames were confined to the limits of the large building. Other smaller structures containing large amounts of valuable chemical fixtures and other material were saved. The fire fighting continued until about four this morning.

Mr. Goetschius, who has only recently received from several secretaries which he received in the last fire was in Escanaba when the fire started but hurried to Wells to take personal charge of the fire fighting. G. B. Cray, general manager of the company and J. H. Walker, another official were out of the city and were not notified of the fire until today.

It is believed last night's fire will mean the loss of many additional men from the plant.

FOUR ROBBERIES COMMITTED HERE DURING THE NIGHT

What is believed to have been the work of a band of young local men out to cause a lot of trouble than to steal, smashed a window in the cheese factory near the National Grocery Company, stealing two boxes of cheese, weighing about 45 pounds and valued at about $4, kicked in the rear door of the Kratz department store, stealing six safety razors, one pair of shoes and two watches, entered the garage of A. & J. DeGrande, stealing two automobile tires and a number of things from that place. All the robberies which were of a comparatively minor nature, were committed last night. It was also reported that a freight car near the C. & N. W. freight house was also entered and some of the contents stolen. Although no clues were left by the robbers it is believed the police will run down the offenders and bring them to justice in short order.
