D. E. GLAVIN HAS RETIRED AFTER 54 YEARS WORK

Today Ends Career With the Chicago & Northwestern Railroad.

During His Term of Purchasing Agent He Has Bought Millions of Dollars Worth for Company.

D. E. Glavin walked out of the office of the purchasing agent of the Chicago & Northwestern today and after 54 years of active service in supplying the road with ties, posts, lumber, fuel and a multitude of other things, has retired to private life and will enjoy the balance of his years in comparative idleness.

Mr. Glavin went to work for the Northwestern 54 years ago and the greater part of that time has been spent as its purchasing agent in this territory.

While he has reached the age limit set for retirement by the company, no one would suspect it, to see him, for age has passed him by as far as activity and appearance are concerned.

He will be succeeded in his duties by G. A. Holmes, of Chicago.

CONVENTION TO PROMOTE HEALTH OPENS IN EAST

New York City Entertains Tuberculosis Association Beginning Today.

Great Exhibits and Plays Will Be Staged to Show Proper Ways of Living; Children Interested.

NEW YORK, June 15.—Up to the minute methods of teaching health principles to children will be shown in the 17th annual meeting of the National Tuberculosis Association which opened here today. Every state in the Union, and many parts of Canada, will be represented at the convention by men and women prominent in the campaign to stamp out tuberculosis.

Marionette shows, a cardboard theatre, motion pictures and pageants are some of the novel schemes to be advanced for inculcating in the minds of children the value of strict adherence to health principles.

As a means of teaching the proper use of foods, “Tiny Tim’s Theatre” will be introduced for the first time to tuberculosis and health workers. The characters who play the principal parts in the little theatre are Mistress Bread, Micky Potato, Crybaby Onion and Fluffy Spinach.

The Modern Health Crusade, a system of health teaching in the public schools, through which children are taught to perform certain health chores daily, will be demonstrated at several of the sessions.

The history of the National Tuberculosis Association will be presented before the convention Thursday night through the medium of a pageant entitled “The Crusade of the Double Bar Red Cross.”

“Humpty-Dumpty,” the clown employed by the association, will, by clever clowning, show how to teach children the proper rules of health and hygiene.

Poster exhibits, newspaper publicity, moving picture schemes and various other ways of teaching health principles will be subjects for discussion throughout the meeting.

Dr. Gerald B. Webb, of Colorado Springs, president of the association, will open the meeting this afternoon with his annual address to the 1,500 representatives who will attend the session.

Dr. Charles J. Hatfield, managing director of the association, will report upon the work of the organization in various parts of the country during the past year.

Tonight’s meeting of the advisory council will include a symposium of federal provision for tuberculosis for men, women and children. The speakers will be Dr. Haven Emerson, of New York, medical advisor to the bureau of war risk insurance; Dr. F. C. Smith of the United States public

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRACE XXXVII.—NEBRASKA

THE Indian name for the Platte river was Nebraska, meaning “shallow water,” and from this came the name of the state. A nickname for the state is the Blackwater State.

Of the early Spanish explorations little is known, except that Coronado probably reached the great plain of this region in 1541. More than one hundred and twenty-five years later Father Marquette noted the Platte river on his trip up the Missouri. In the beginning of the Nineteenth century the Lewis and Clark expedition skirted the boundaries of the present state and in 1807, Manuel Lisa established the first known settlement which was a fur trading post at Bellevue. This was just after the Louisiana Purchase had brought Nebraska into United States territory.

Omaha was established as a post of the American Fur company in 1825 and Nebraska City the following year.

With the California gold rush in 1849 many pioneers passed through Nebraska and some stopped and settled there although there was a law forbidding settlements among the Indians. The real colonization boom, however, started with the passing of the Kansas-Nebraska act in 1854, which arranged that these two sections should become free or slave states at the date of their inhabitants. The Nebraska territory was then organized and reached from the fourth to the forty-ninth parallel.

In 1861, the region north of 43 was made into Dakota territory. The Idaho territory was also created, which reduced Nebraska to its present size of 77,520 square miles, except for a slight addition in the Northwest which was made in 1882.

In 1897 Nebraska was admitted as the 37th state over the president’s veto. It has since presidential electors.

LET SENATORS HAVE THEIR WAY

PRESIDENT DOES NOT OPPOSE PEACE RESOLUTION, THOUGH IT DOESN’T MAKE PEACE.

HOLDS TREATY NECESSARY

Administration Makes It Plain That It Desires to Develop Its Policy Concerning Foreign Relations One Step at a Time.

By EDWARD B. CLARK.

Washington, No. Doubt, if President Harding and Secretary of State Hughes followed their own inclinations they would say there is no necessity for passing a joint congressional resolution declaring that the United States and the central powers of Europe are no longer at war, but the senate for more than a year has been desirous to send such a resolution through congress and so the attitude of the administration is to let the senate have its way.

It is well understood that the administration view is that peace cannot be established by a joint congressional resolution; and if the wishes of the senate did not have to be taken into consideration the administration probably would propose that the whole situation be taken care of in the way provided by the Constitution, that is, by means of a treaty of peace.

President Harding made all this clear in his address to congress a few weeks ago when he told the legislative body that nothing more than a technical peace could be established by means of a joint congressional resolution; that peace would have to be made by treaty, preferably through the ratification of the treaty of Versailles in modified form.

The administration has had opportunity to let the public know just how it feels about the joint resolution purporting to establish technical peace and now that there seems to be no danger of the outside world misinterpreting the passage of a joint congressional resolution, the administration is willing that the legislators shall go ahead and do the thing up in a way that will be most agreeable to them.

Don’t Want to Dictate to Congress.

Both President Harding and Secretary Hughes have made it plain recently that they do not wish to appear as dictators before the legislative body, and they are expressing the hope that the house will compose whatever differences exist among the members as to the form the joint congressional resolution shall take, and that the senate and house shall settle whatever differences they may have as to the precise form of the resolution.

The point is that the administration does not feel that the passage of a joint resolution declaring a technical peace settles anything of consequence. The real problem of the administration is to bring about peace through the treaty process as provided in the Constitution, and if the passage of a so-called technical peace resolution will help open the way for the success of the program that is to be submitted later, well and good.

Even on the question as to whether the resolution shall repeal the declaration of war of April 9, 1917, it is possible that the administration will not feel called on to exert any influence. It can be stated authoritatively that if the administration felt that it would be wise for it to interfere it would advise that the declaration of war be repealed.

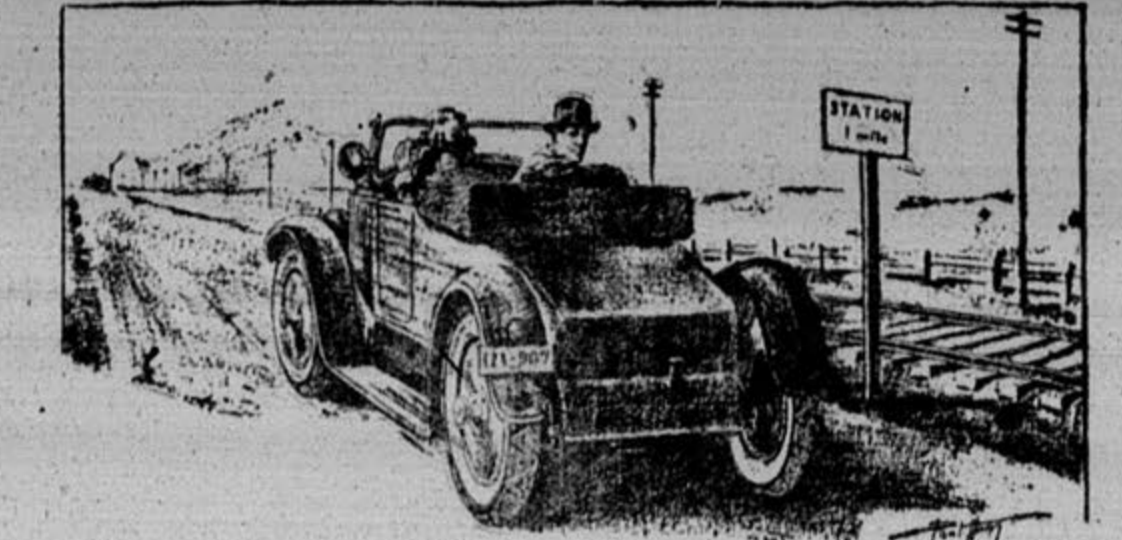

One Step at a Time Enough.

Many indications of the desire of the administration to go along with congress and with the senate in dealing with foreign relations are noted. For instance, the administration is discouraging discussion at this time of the possibility of the United States entering any sort of a league of nations. Such discussion, the administration feels, only tends to create friction. Obviously the thought of the President and the secretary of state is that each step shall be discussed as it is proposed. In other words, the administration would like to see the discussion limited to the step immediately under consideration.

That there is to be a gradual unfolding of the administration’s policy is well understood. The next important step will be to determine whether the Versailles treaty shall be used as a basis for establishing peace with Germany, or whether it will be necessary to negotiate an entirely new treaty. To link this discussion up with the probable action of the government with respect to some sort of an association or league of nations the administration undoubtedly feels would simply make more difficult the solution of the problem that must be disposed of first.

Up to this time there has been no intimation from the White House or the State department as to how soon the administration will be ready to submit its program for bringing about peace. The indications are that it will be some time before the President communicates with the senate on the subject. As has been pointed out in these dispatches from time to time, Secretary Hughes feels that before the question of a peace treaty is taken up the various international controversies in which the United States is directly interested ought to be settled.

FOREIGN TRADE DEPENDS UPON LONG CREDITS

Great Efforts Must Be Made by the United States to Stimulate Sales Abroad.

SAN FRANCISCO, June 15.—Restoration of American foreign trade depends upon extension of long term credits and increased buying abroad, W. F. H. Knefel, president of the National Association of Credit Men, declared today in his annual report to the convention of the organization.

“It is high time,” he said, “that we as a people begin to realize that we cannot prosper alone. While it is true that the United States needs foreign trade more than at any time in its history, this trade will not be secured and held without great effort on our part. At home these efforts will have to be directed against measures devised by men who believe that America can be prosperous even if the rest of the world faces industrial stagnation.”

The restoration of our international commerce depends largely upon long credits, in my sincere judgment. These credits are better able to extend than any other people. The reversal of our position from a debtor to creditor nation brings obligations which we have not yet recognized but must if we are to be saved from muddling our opportunities and seriously affecting our return to prosperity.

“We must learn to invest in foreign lands. Trade will follow our investments. We must also learn to buy as well as sell. We must not expect to sell alone as a creditor nation for there is no rule of business which would long permit that. We would simply continue to demoralize our opportunities and retard our production for foreign markets.”

Iron County to Spend $60,000 on Good Roads

LANSING, Mich., June 14.—Patrick O’Brien has asked for authorization from the state for Iron county to sell $60,000 worth of highway bonds at an interest bearing rate higher than that stipulated in the original issue.

According to Rep. O’Brien the bonds bearing five percent are unobtainable. No market for them can be found, he asserted, and the county is desirous of proceeding with the highway work particularly because of the deplorable labor conditions.

“The mines are closed” he stated “and a number of men are out of work and in need of money. The prosecution of highway construction would enable some of them to find occupation.”

A resolution offered by Rep. O’Brien requesting the Governor to take steps to grant permission to sell the bonds, was unanimously adopted in the house.

CLAIMS NEGLECT OF FORESTS IS COSTING STATE 50 MILLIONS YEARLY TO OBTAIN SUPPLIES

MEMORIAL DAY FOR THE WHOLE WORLD A NEW THOUGHT

Dr. Hugh P. Baker, New York, Thinks Michigan’s Efforts Almost Pathetic.

RATTLESNACK, Mich., June 15.—The state of Michigan, just a few score years ago the nation’s greatest store-house for lumber and forest products, is now spending $40,000,000 a year for lumber and pulp which it purchased mainly in the south and northwest, according to a statement made here Monday by Dr. Hugh P. Baker, of New York City, secretary of the American Paper & Pulp Association. Dr. Baker discussed Michigan’s wastefulness in the care and treatment of its forests in an address before the Rattlesnack Rotary club.

Calling attention to the magnificent stand of timber that was Michigan’s pride in the pioneer days and its rapid less destruction he believed the supply was inexhaustible. Dr. Baker pointed again the picture of the so-called bankrupt lumber lands of the northern part of the state, and declared the state is doing practically nothing towards restoring its forest resources. Just a portion of the millions now being spent annually in other states for supplies, invested for the future at home, would yield important returns, he declared.

Dr. Baker commended the work of the forestry department of the University of Michigan and the Michigan Agricultural College, but declared the practical results being attained by the state were little short of pathetic when one considered that Michigan has 50 separate paper mills, an enormous furniture industry, and countless smaller wood working plants. Michigan’s expenditures for the building up of her forests are only a drop in the bucket, he asserted, when the returns the state should be receiving from her devastated forest areas are considered.

ST. PAUL, Minn., June 15.—An international Memorial day to commemorate the sacrifices of the World War, has just received the endorsement of Gustaf Wad, vice-commander of the Inter-Allied Federation of Veterans.

As a letter to T. W. Hamilton of St. Paul, who is trying to make May 26 be made a day of international observance, Wad said he would have his photographs used by the British Legion and Charles Bertrand, president of the Inter-Allied Veterans.

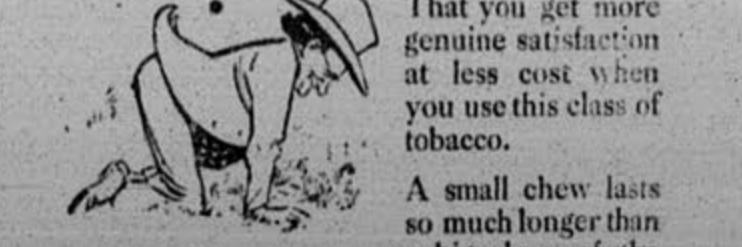

Mr. Wad refers to the resolution adopted by the Inter-Allied Veterans, that the organization’s members should do all in their power to secure the other nations adopt May 26 as Memorial day for those who have paid their lives for their country in the late war.

Mr. Hamilton also has letters from prominent Europeans approving the idea, which brought forth a letter from Stophane Luzzatto, editor of the Math. Paris, with an editorial favoring the proposal. Senator Edward W. Weyer, of Stockholm, a member of the Interparliamentary Union, said “Swedish papers will support the movement.”

“The point in Mr. Hamilton’s plan which he stresses is that on May 26 all the world would halt its activities for five minutes at noon, while silent tribute would be paid to the hero dead.”

Mr. Hamilton now is seeking the aid of Southern senators to have the Memorial day in the Northern hemisphere national. He hopes to accomplish this through action of Congress.

TEACH THE WORLD TO PLAY WILL BE AIM OF MEETING

(By Associated Press)

CLEVELAND, O., June 15.—Young men and women from all parts of the nation came to Cleveland this summer, aiming to teach the world to play.

They will attend the summer course in physical and recreation teaching offered by the Cleveland School of Education. The school opens with registration at Western Reserve University, June 20. Invitations to enroll have been sent to 1,000 college men and women throughout the country.

Rowland Hynes, director of the summer course, says a large amount of the work will be devoted to the handling of children and adults at play. Hynes is director of the Cleveland Recreation Club.

Associated with him on the faculty of the summer course are a number of well known authorities on play, recreation, community center and other recreation work. Among these are Jessie La Salle, department of education, psychology, Graduate School, Teachers College, Columbia University; Ann Stewart, department of physical education, Cleveland School of Education; Esthara Tucker, assistant director, physical education, Minneapolis public schools; Marie W. Wilson, assistant supervisor of physical education, Cleveland public schools.

Students of the summer school will get practical experience on the playgrounds in Cleveland and suburbs.

TOBACCO'S FOES LOSING GROUND

Canvass of 7,847 Editors Shows 7,393 Communities Against Abolishing Weed.

ANTIS LOSE THREE STATES.

Utah, Under Mormon Influence, Only Commonwealth to Keep Prohibition Measure During Year.

The tobacco going to have its scalp added to the belt of the prohibitionist beside that of the lamented but as yet not altogether late alcohol? Is the question asked by Garret Smith in an article in the current issue of Leslie's Magazine.

The writer reaches the conclusion that while there has been increased agitation and legislative activity on the subject of tobacco following the success of the drive for prohibition of liquor the efforts of reformers seeking to abolish tobacco have no general support. This opinion is based on the results of the questionnaires on the subject sent out to newspaper editors of the country by the Press Service Company of New York City.

The questions asked were: (1) Do you favor the enactment of laws prohibiting the personal use of tobacco by adults? (2) In your judgment does the general sentiment of your community favor such legislation? (3) Is the use of tobacco personally objectionable to you?

No arguments accompanied the questions and from their form it was impossible for any editor to determine the attitude of the questioner.

Out of 12,518 editors questioned, 7,847 replied according to the summary given. These editors, it is estimated, represent a combined circulation of 21,870,040. Of the 7,847 editors replying, 7,393, or 95 per cent, represent public sentiment in their communities as opposed to anti-tobacco legislation. Only 290 editors, or 3 per cent of those replying believed there was any considerable sentiment favorable to tobacco prohibition. There were 174, or 2 per cent, in doubt, while 20 failed to record their judgment.

Editors' Judgment Unbiased

It is of special interest to note that 809 editors in answering the first question, personally favored such legislation, although only 290 of them reported that public opinion also favored the prohibition of tobacco—an indication of the conscientious effort made by the editors to distinguish public opinion from their own personal opinions," the article continues.

The highest percentage of replies reporting public opinion favorable to prohibition of tobacco came from Utah, where 42 per cent of the editors thought the public were for such a movement. Utah is the only state which has since adopted an anti-cigarette law. The result was forecast by several of the editors who stated that the influence of the Mormon Church was against tobacco. The Mormon Church is also strong in Idaho, which is the other state where the use of tobacco was recently prohibited, but the governor has signed the bill just passed, in which the prohibitory legislation is repealed. In this state 80 per cent of the editors estimate sentiment in their communities as against tobacco prohibition, which, nevertheless, is 8 per cent below the average reported opposition.

The legislature of Tennessee some weeks ago passed and the governor has signed a bill repealing the anti-cigarette law of that state. The questionnaire showed 98 per cent of its editors believed the public against anti-tobacco legislation. The legislature of Arkansas has also passed a bill repealing its anti-cigarette law. In this state 94 per cent of the editors reported against tobacco prohibition.

Arizona's Practical Joke

A bill introduced in the current session of the legislature of Arizona to prohibit smoking in public dining rooms and other public places, was first amended to prohibit the consumption in public of peanuts, chewing gum, tea and coffee and then defeated by the senate. The questionnaire returns from that state were 92 per cent 'no.'

In Iowa where the 'no's were 95 per cent a bill to repeal the anti-cigarette law has been passed and signed by the governor.

A bill to repeal the anti-cigarette law in Kansas, with 99 per cent 'no's,' is receiving the attention of its legislature. Last year a petition for a referendum in Oregon to prohibit the use of tobacco failed of sufficient signatures to bring the question to a vote, and 95 per cent of the editors declare their public against legislation. In Oklahoma an anti-cigarette bill has been reported unfavorably in the houses. The editors of that state reported 94 per cent against its public support.

Outside of Utah, where Mormon influence predominates, the article concludes, "the anti-tobacco movement appears, as in the case of Tennessee, Arkansas and Iowa, to be losing ground and is not to any considerable extent supported by the people."

The friends of tobacco feel particularly elated over this showing. Inasmuch as 1920-21 was a maximum year in legislative circles with 42 state legislatures in session and the tobacco subject received an unusual amount of consideration.

THREE TROOPS OF GIRL SCOUTS NOW ORGANIZED—HERE

Members of the Girl Scout Council Announced by Miss Jean Guthrie Monday.

Under the direction of Miss Jean Guthrie the organization of several Girl Scout troops in the city is progressing rapidly and already three troops have been organized, committees appointed and a Girl Scout council organized.

The troops are headed by the following officers: Miss Bernice Fitzkin, captain, Miss Charlotte O'Meara, lieutenant, first troop; Miss Harriet Shepherd, captain, Miss Kathryn Widing, lieutenant, second troop; Miss Dymona Stok, captain; Miss Ethel Gilmore, lieutenant, third troop.

Council Members.

A Girl Scout council of the following members has been appointed: Misses, George Mashek, P. F. Davis, C. W. Kates, H. W. Reade, C. R. Henderson, Ted Hansen, C. E. Andrews, Chas. Chanson, Richard Mason, Chester Bucklee, Charles Semer, A. H. Girdebeck, O. E. Anderson, P. F. Genlesse, L. A. Erickson, Alfred Hammond, S. W. Brennan, Coleman Nee, W. W. Moll, Matt Hillon, W. A. Coffin, Phil Labro, P. J. Jenson, George Heath, O. C. Curtis, E. G. Royce, and Attorney C. W. Lewis, Dr. G. W. Moll, Henry Peterson, E. C. Voght, Harry Bourke.

Appoint Committees.

The following are committees to direct Girl Scout activities: Leaders—Misses, C. R. Henderson, D. E. Anderson, Charles Semer, Alfred Hammond, Richard Mason, J. P.

Jensen, E. G. Royce, O. C. Curtis, Charles Chanson. Education—Misses, L. A. Erickson, S. W. Brennan, W. A. Coffin and Dr. G. W. Moll. Entertainment—Misses, Geo. Mashek, Phil Labro, Cheever Buckbee, A. H. Girdebeck, Peter Genlesse. Publicity—Attorney C. E. Lewis, Mrs. C. E. Andrews. Finance—Harry Bourke, Henry Peterson, Misses, Coleman Nee, P. F. Davis, C. W. Kates. Camp—E. C. Voght, Misses, George Heath, G. W. Moll. Uniforms—Mrs. H. T. Hanson.

History of Girl Scouts.

The Girl Scouts, a national association, is non-sectarian and non-partisan. The object of the organization is to give girls, through natural, wholesome pleasures, those habits of mind and body which will make them useful, responsible women, ready and willing to take a definite part in the home, civic and national affairs of their country.

Scope.

Scouting has a universal appeal. There are Scouts in the United States, Hawaii, Russian and Norway, Central America, Alaska, Philippines and West Indies, who are asking help in organizing. The Girl Guides who are the British Sisters of the Girl Scouts, are now being organized in England, Palestine, Canada, Australia, Denmark, Portugal, New Zealand and China, and the French sisters, "Les Eclaireuses," are rapidly attracting the young girls of France. Scouting meets a fundamental need for recreation and education in every young girl's life.

Organization.

The governing body of the Girl Scouts is the National Council composed of representatives from local councils and of other members elected by the National Council. National headquarters is maintained to carry out the policies of the National Council. A local council may be organized in any community. This is a body of men and women, representing the schools, churches, social and civic organizations, playgrounds, newspapers and such bodies as the Chamber of Commerce and Rotary Clubs. This council is organized for the purpose of promoting and supervising the welfare of scouting in the district.

Troop.

The unit of organization is the patrol of eight members each. One or more patrols form a troop and they are grouped whenever possible according to age and congeniality. Each patrol has a leader and a corporal and each troop a captain. The captain may choose lieutenants to assist her. It is advisable that a troop of two patrols have a lieutenant.

Each troop selects for its name a flower, tree, scrub or bird. The members wear the emblem over the left pockets of their uniforms.

Troops may be formed in connection with any church, school, or other institution or organization. Unattached troops are also successful.

Troop meetings are held weekly with the program fairly divided between recreation and education.

Membership.

Any girl from ten to eighteen years of age, who is willing to subscribe to the Promise and Laws may qualify to become a scout by passing the Tenderfoot test. She should either join a troop which is already formed or should get together a group of girls to form a new troop.

Grades.

Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class.

Admission to each grade is determined by a test in the required lines of work.

Auto Lamps Is Heavy Problem in Legislature

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS) LANSING, Mich., June 15.—In a highway bill passed in the regular session provision was made that every motor vehicle display "one pair of lamps on the right and left side thereof." When Rep. Charles Evans, in the special session offered some amendments to the bill regarding the carrying of mirrors on motor trucks, some one called attention to the phraseology of the lamp section, with the result that for a half hour the entire house membership busied itself with the preparation of amendments.

The bill as passed would, it was pointed out require four lamps on the front of an automobile. The original measure also stipulated that the lamps on each side of the vehicle be of approximately equal candle power. The first corrective amendment offered simply proposed striking out the word "pair" and substituting the word "one"

This was objected to on the ground that it would then read "One lamp on the right and left side thereof, of approximately equal candle power." The grammarians objected to the grammar. After a long struggle, in which every one participated, Rep. Andrew Glasgow solved the problem by substituting "there shall be one lamp on each side of the vehicle; said lamps to be of approximately equal candle power." His amendment was greeted with cheers and applause.

EARNED AND UNEARNED INCOMES

Among the bills introduced by Representative Keller for the purpose of reforming the whole system of federal taxation is one which distinguishes between earned and unearned income and lays a relatively heavy tax on unearned income.

There is no immediate prospect that Congress will be called upon to consider the Keller bill but if it takes them up later there is likely to be an interesting debate on this subject of earned and unearned income.

If a working man toils and saves for the best part of a lifetime he may acquire enough in real estate and securities to keep himself and his wife out of the poorhouse.

On the other hand, if Jack Dempsey carries out his present intention he will land a good stiff punch on some vulnerable portion of Georges Carpentier's person within the next few weeks and will receive for that important service, $100,000, more or less, which will be earned income within the definition given above.

It is not necessary to argue that if there is to be discrimination between incomes the earned income of a professional business ought to carry a heavier tax burden than the unearned income of a thrifty worker, and the illustration supplied by Dempsey and Carpentier is only one of many that might be adduced to show that all so-called earned incomes are not earned in any useful sense.

MEXICO'S LOSS

It is given out at the office of President Obregon that the treaty of amity and commerce proposed by Washington and containing conditions under which the United States will recognize the Mexican government will not be signed by the party of Obregon.

American, however, need not worry even if the decision is announced at the time is final. The United States can get along without Mexico very much easier than Mexico can get along without the United States.

THE MT. VERNON CASE

Some months ago the attention of the country was attracted to Mt. Vernon, New York, where a Socialist street meeting was broken up by order of the mayor.

There have been arbitrary interferences with the right of free speech in this country, but a very large proportion of the cases in which it is charged are like the Mt. Vernon case.

The legislature has decided to submit the port district amendment. It is too early to discuss the matter at length, but will those who vote "no" on everything they do not understand, kindly suspend judgment for a while?

Publication of the "slacker list" in the Congressional Record will give members of the national legislature a chance to find out how much duplication there is of names on the distinguished service list.

A lot of young men who are new, rising to deliver commencement essays telling the world how to run itself, will shortly be wondering why the world forgets that it owes them a living.

Congress, in ordering one of the slacker lists printed in the Congressional Record, has no reference to any list of honorable gentlemen who were absent at roll call.

A fine of $100 and one day in jail ought to convince Babe Ruth that speed on the bases leads more effectively to popularity than speed on the boulevards.

The CLAN CALL

By Hapsburg Liebe

Illustrations by Irwin Myers

"I see," Dale muttered sympathetically.

"I've seen my own mother set down in the floor and take her boy's head in her lap—oh, such a big, fine boy he was!—while the blood ran through her dress from a Moreland's bullet. He died with mother's arms and mine around him. It was all we could do for him, was to love him. I've seen sisters watch their brothers die from Moreland bullets, and young women watch their sweethearts die, and wives watch their husbands die."

"I tell you, Bill Dale, them Morelands never misses when they have even half a fair shot. You'd be perfectly safe in a cellar any 'em shoot down from sixteen yore finger, and thumb all day. And it's the same way with the Littlefords. They're fighters, too, every one, and they don't give in any more than the Morelands do."

"Addie Moreland knows what it is to take her dyin' boy's head in her lap, whilst blood ran through her dress to her knees. His name was Charley, and he was had 'n'ed drink, and once he shot up Cartersville. But Addie, she allus loved him better'n Cale or Luke. Whomever she likes loses the worst boys the best; 'cause they need it the most, the worst boys."

"It's the women that pays, Bill Dale, when the boys fightin'. The women in this valley is right now on needles; they're afraid the men'll find their rates. You can guess what the men had 'n'ed last night after the men had gone to sleep. It's good luck, they had almost a whole night for it. You must be shore to keep it to yourself—but I know ye will. Addie Moreland, she liked the idee. She got George Moreland to spread the word among the women of my people. When the fightin' fever sort of blew down the canyon all be brought back and put where they belong."

"She arose and stood there smiling down upon him. He was staring at the swirling water without seeing it at all. Her voice brought him to himself. 'What're you a-thinkin' about, Bill Dale?'"

"Dale went to his feet. He saw that she was smiling, and he smiled, too. "I was thinking," he said, "of the difference between you and some other women I know."

"Her clear brown eyes widened. "And I reckon I seen purty 'n' count, don't I?"

"No, not at all. It is—er, quite the opposite, Babe. You make them appear unwell, artificial."

"Babe Littleford's countenance brightened. She did not doubt that he meant it. He was not of the sort that flattered. She began to like Bill Dale at that same moment."

"And Bill Dale told himself as he went homeward that he was beginning to like Babe Littleford. He did not fight the feeling, because, it somehow made the world seem a better place."

Early the following morning Dale made ready for his journey to Cincinnati. Having learned the evening before that he was going, by Heck had come to accompany him to the Half-way switch."

The two set out. They had three hours in which to cross David Moreland's mountain before the arrival of Dale's train, and they walked leisurely."

They had not gone a dozen rods when these came from somewhere down near the river the sound of a rifle shot. Both stopped and faced about quickly."

"I'll be doggoned ef the Littlefords ain't found their weapons!" exclaimed by Heck. "They have, 'gosh, as shore as daylight!"

"How do you know?" Dale's voice was troubled. "I shore know," and Heck narrowed his gaze. "At was Ben Littleford's old 45 Winchester. I'd know that gun ef I heered it at the north pole. The barrel's been cut off, and it don't sound like other Winchesterers."

"Caleb Moreland was down near the river, cleaning out the springhouse ditch," Dale muttered, facing his companion. "I think we'd better go back."

"Together they went back to the cabin. John Moreland and his wife and their son Luke were standing at the weatherbeaten front gate, with their eyes turned anxiously toward the river. Caleb was coming up through the meadow, and he carried his hat in his hand."

"Who fired that shot?" asked Dale. "Ben Littleford," John Moreland answered readily.

Two minutes later Caleb leaped the old rail fence on the other side of the road and approached them hastily. He was breathing rapidly and his strong young face was drawn and pale—with the old hate. "Well," said his iron father, "what is it?"

"Caleb held up his broad-rimmed black hat and ran a finger through a hole in the upper part of the crown's peak. "He didn't miss!" snapped John Moreland. "No," quickly replied Caleb. "He didn't miss. He don't never miss. You know that, pap, as well as ye know God made ye. He done it just to show me he meant what he said. He told me to go and tell you to gather up yore set of rabbit-hearted heathens and come down to the river for a lead-and-powder picnic, unless ye was a-shoered to come! He said to tell ye the yimmefolks had hid our guns, and we'd find 'em under the house floors."

John Moreland took it with utter calmness, though his face was a little pale behind his thick brown beard. He turned to his wife, who looked at him squarely. "Addie, honey," said he, "I'm mighty sorry."

"Ef—ef you was much sorry, John," Mrs. Moreland half sobbed, "ye wouldn't go down that to the river."

"Me a coward?" Moreland appeared to grow an inch in stature. "Me let a Littleford send me news like this here which Cale brings, and not do nothin' at all about it? I thought you knowed me better'n that, Addie."

He faced his two stalwart sons. Always he was the general, the leader of his clan. He sent Caleb in one direction and Luke in another, to procure his kinsmen.

Then he beckoned to Dale, who had been trying hard but vainly to think of something to do or say that would be of aid to the cause of the women. "I don't want you in this here mix-up," he said decisively. "You must stay clean out of it. You ain't used to this way of fightin'. Besides, you're our hope. Moreland that, mebbe, you owe yore life to Babe Littleford; you can't get around that, Bill Dale."

He went on, after a moment. "Ef I get my right put out today, I want ye to do the best ye can with the coat. But of course ye will. I want ye to do me two favors, Bill Dale. Ef I have my right put out today—Will ye do 'em to me, my friend?"

"Certainly," Dale promised. "Mebbe obliged to ye, shore. The fast is this: I want ye to take good pay out of what the coat brings, pay to yore work. The second is this: I want ye to go to Ben Littleford after I'm done—provided he is set alive—and tell him about the coat, if ye feel time prayer; I want him to know I went him one better, at I was a bigger man inside an him. Remember, Bill, ye've done promised me. Now ye go ahead to Cincinnati, and do just like ye didn't know the least thing about this trouble we're agoin' to have. So long to ye, an' good luck!"

"I don't like the idee"—Dale began, when the big hillman interrupted sharply. "Go on! You can't do no good here!"

Heck started. Dale turned and followed the lanky moonshiner; there seemed to be nothing else to do. When they had reached a point a little way above the foot of David Moreland's mountain, the path led to a little cove behind a water oak on the farther side; a Littleford had first first. Dale went on, moving rapidly and trying to keep himself always in plain view."

Then came a puff of white smoke and a report from one of the Moreland rifles, then shots from both sides—and the battle was on. Dale heard the nasty whine of a bullet in full flight; he heard the coarse "zrr" of a half-spent rifechet. He knew that he was in some danger now, and he was surprised to find that he was not frightened."

When he halted again it was on his knees behind the big white sycamore that sheltered John Moreland. "Back, are ye?" frowned the mountaineer. And with the grimmest humor, "I reckon ye had a fine, large time in Cincinnati. Yore friend Harris was well, I hope. Git that money from him!"

"Cut that out," said Bill Dale. "It doesn't get us anywhere." "A bullet throw particles of sycamore bark to his face, interrupting. John Moreland pointed to a green turren in the side of the tree.

"Ben Littleford himself," said Moreland. "He's shined of that water oak across there. Don't stick yore head out!"

The mountaineer turned his gaze over Dale's shoulder, and his countenance seemed to freeze. Dale looked around quickly and saw Babe Littleford, less than ten feet behind him! She had crept up through the tall grasses and weeds. In one hand she carried a white rag made of a man's handkerchief and a willow switch. She halted and set up.

"Babe!" Dale cried out. "What are you doing here?" Babe gave him a pale smile. "Ef you'd shoot me, a-thinks—I was a Moreland, mebbe I'd stop the everlastin' fightin'," she said.

John Moreland stared, and Bill Dale stared. They were in a Presence, and they knew it. Babe went on: "I've come to save all o' yore lives; but ef I do it, ye'll hat to make yore men quit a-fightin' right now—jest order 'em to stop a-shootin', and hold up this here—and I promise ye on a Littleford's word at pay'll call ye a better 'n man 'an him 'cause ye done it."

She tossed the white flag to him. "The ain't no time to lose, John Moreland; hold up the flag. Ef ye don't, ye'll every one be killed, 'cause ye're every one in a trap!"

"I don't believe ye, Babe!" snapped the Moreland chief. "Ye-ee people can hold up a white rag jest as well as we can!" Babe went paler. There was a sudden burst of firing from the Moreland rifles, and she crept a little nearer to John Moreland in order that he might hear plainly that which she had to tell him best.

They Dropped to Their Hands and Knees and Began to Crawl Through the Tall Grasses, the Ironweed and the Meadow Clover. Trees stood back a rod or so from the water, making the final shooting distance some twenty yards.

"Drewled Heck: "Le's set down here and watch it, boy?" Dale was silent. The very air was filled with the spirit of tragedy. The faroff tinkle of a cowbell seemed tragic, tragic, too, sounded the song of a bird somewhere in the tree branches overhead.

"Did ye hear me, BURY?" "I think," Dale muttered, "that I'd better not go away until tomorrow. I can't leave matters like this. Do you know of any way to stop that down there?"

By Heck shrugged his shoulders. "Do you know of any way to stop the rishin' and settin' of the sun?" he grinned. "They went back to John Moreland's cabin."

"Ef he don't like the way we do here, he can go back home," retorted the angry mountaineer. "He ain't tied, is he?" Babe smiled a smile that was somehow pitiful, and turned off.

"The ain't no use in a-arguin' with yore pap," she said hopelessly. "I— I might'nigh wish I was dead."

At that instant the gate creaked open. Babe glanced toward it and saw coming that black beast of a man, Adam Bill the Goliath, and he was armed heavily; in one hand he carried a new high-power repeating rifle, and around his great waist there was a new belt bristling with long, bright, new-made cartridges fitted with steel-jacketed bullets.

It was altogether by accident that the Littleford chief found his weapons. He had dropped a small coin through a crack in the floor. Babe was quick to say that she would crawl under the house and look for the coin, although she had just put on a freshly laundered blue-and-white calico dress. Her anxiety showed plainly in her face. Her father questioned her sharply, and she stammered in spite of herself. Ben Littleford's suspicions were aroused.

So he came out from under the cabin floor with his hands full of the steel of rifle barrels, and with the money forgotten. He placed the rifles carefully on the floor of the porch, turned and caught his daughter by the arm. "Who hid 'em?" he demanded gruffly. "I hid 'em," was the ready answer, defiant and bitter. "I, me!—What're you agoin' to do about it?"

Littleford flung his daughter's arm from him. He was king, even as John Moreland was king. His keen eyes stared at the young woman's face as though they would wiper it.

"What made you hide 'em?" he growled. "Say, what made ye do it?" "To try and save human lives, an' why?" Babe answered. "That sun of the city—what'll he think o' us a-doin' this away, a-fightin' like crazy wildcats?"

"Ef he don't like the way we do here, he can go back home," retorted the angry mountaineer. "He ain't tied, is he?" Babe smiled a smile that was somehow pitiful, and turned off.

"The ain't no use in a-arguin' with yore pap," she said hopelessly. "I— I might'nigh wish I was dead."

At that instant the gate creaked open. Babe glanced toward it and saw coming that black beast of a man, Adam Bill the Goliath, and he was armed heavily; in one hand he carried a new high-power repeating rifle, and around his great waist there was a new belt bristling with long, bright, new-made cartridges fitted with steel-jacketed bullets.

When Dale and his companion reached the cabin, Addie Moreland met them. Anxiety was breaking her heart.

"Mr. Dale," she pleaded, "I want you to go down that to the river and see ef there's anything ye can do to stop it afore it begins. You jest walk out bold in the open and ye won't be shot at, and I'll be obliged to ye. Oh, I know the ain't but one chance in ten thousand, but I'm agoin' ye'll strike that one chance!"

Dale knew that he could do nothing toward bringing peace, and he knew that John Moreland would be angry at his interfering. But he would not go toward the river. He didn't have the heart in him to refuse.

These things came the keen thunder of a moment. Between two sycamores on the nearer side of the river he saw a puff of smoke rising lazily from behind a water oak on the farther side; a Littleford had first first. Dale went on, moving rapidly and trying to keep himself always in plain view."

Then came a puff of white smoke and a report from one of the Moreland rifles, then shots from both sides—and the battle was on. HARVEST SEASON IN OKLAHOMA IS IN FULL SWING

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 15.—Harvest season has turned Oklahoma into a hive of industry and along the highways and byways the hum and thrum of harvest life holds forth.

Spots of gold that only a fortnight ago blended with the lighter, even yellowish shades of green in scattered wheat fields of southwest Oklahoma, have spread fanlike to the north and west until now the wheat belt of the state, located in the central northern and northwestern sections, is a huge mantle of golden tresses covering the rolling prairie with its billowy folds. The blue denim of the harvester's overcoat here and there over the fields, while the rhythmic whirr of the binder and header fills the air from dawn until dusk.

Wheat and oats that were cut nearly a fortnight ago in the extreme southwest portion have been threshed and slowly the threshing outfits are creeping northward and westward in the wake of the falling grain. Another ten days to two weeks and the harvest wave will have crossed the state line into Kansas, from whence it will push always northward, into Nebraska and the Dakotas.

With a plentiful supply of labor, enhanced by such speed machinery combines, which cut and thresh the grain simultaneously, Oklahoma was expected to complete its harvest quickly. Approximately 3,050,000 acres of wheat and 1,600,000 acres of oats will fall before the sickle, according to John A. Whitehurst, president of the state board of agriculture.

The condition of both grains had improved materially during the two weeks preceding harvest, he said, owing to plentiful moisture, and only unfavorable climatic conditions at harvest would reduce an estimated yield of about 35,000,000 bushels of wheat and 50,000,000 bushels of oats.

Last year, the 2,560,000 acres of wheat harvested in Oklahoma produced 42,000,000 bushels of grain, while the 1,500,000 acres of oats yielded 48,000,000 bushels.

STATE SECRETARY OF COLORADO NOT TWENTY-SEVEN-YET

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS)

DENVER, June 15.—Secretary of state at the age of 27 is the record of Carl K. Millikin who today holds the portfolio in the state of Colorado.

At Leland Stanford University where he attended college, Mr. Millikin won local fame as an all-around athlete, while during the summers he worked as a reporter on newspapers. After graduation he went to Nicaragua to represent a mines corporation.

When the war broke out, Mr. Millikin enlisted in the first officers' training school at Fort Riley, and its second lieutenant, with the 35th Infantry, 8th division, he saw action at St. Mihiel and the Argonne. Upon his return from France he joined the staff of the Rocky Mountain News, at Denver, and in 1920 he was elected secretary of state of Colorado. Mr. Millikin was born in Denver.

Interesting Program Arranged for Father and Son Hike June 26

Plans have been completed for the citywide father and son hike to be held Sunday, June 25. The fathers and sons will meet at their local scout troop headquarters at 2:30 o'clock and will leave in a body to the place where the meeting is to be held that night. All the troops and the fathers will meet in a grove near Greens where they will eat their supper after which the camp fire program which has been arranged will be carried out. The program consists of singing of songs and short talks by A. J. Young, T. J. Riley, John Leal and others.

The object of the hike is to acquaint the fathers with the scout program and to bring about a better cooperation between the fathers of scouts and the scout masters of the various troops. Similar hikes have been carried off in other cities with great success. It is expected that there will be between 500 and 1000 fathers and sons attending the hike.

Colony or whitewash on wood proves to be resistant to fire to a certain extent. While it does not prevent burning at high temperature, it lessens the risk of fire from cigarettes, sparks and matches and is cheap and practical.

RULES GOVERNING BOY SCOUTS WHILE IN CAMP STRICT

All Games and Exercises in Camp at Sac Bay Will Be Supervised With Care.

Any successful camp must be run somewhat as a business proposition and with real business efficiency as to the camp directors are under obligation to serve the boys in attendance to the best of their ability and make their stay worth while, to so conduct the camp that it will meet with the approval of parents whose boys are present, and to protect the interests of the public at large. Hence some regulations are necessary and should be applied rigidly but with leniency in all cases.

The following will be some of the general regulations for the first scout camp at Sac Bay:

1. The Scout law will be the law of the camp at all times.
2. Profanity, roughhouse, rowdyism, smoking, and card playing will have no place in the camp.
3. No firearms will be allowed in camp.
4. No boy will be allowed to leave camp without the permission of the Camp Executive.
5. No boy will be allowed to go in swimming or into the water at any but the regular times in the daily program when the adult instructors will be with them.
6. Eating between meals will be considered unhealthful and will not be permitted.
7. Each day's program has been carefully prepared and is filled with a wide variety of activities. Every Scout attending camp will be expected to abide by this program unless excused by the camp executive for sickness or other good reasons.
8. No boy will be allowed to go out in one of the boats except with permission of the camp executive.
9. All money brought to camp must be deposited in the camp bank.
10. Sunday in camp will be observed in accord with the spirit of the twelfth Scout law.
11. Every boy registering for camp will be required to register for one full period of two weeks, unless special arrangements are made with the camp executive for less than that time, and should the boy be called home or have to be sent home because of a breach of rule, before his period is up, no part of the money can be refunded.
12. Taps will be sounded at midnight every night and any boy creating a disturbance or commotion after that time will be severely dealt with.
13. It should be understood by boys and parents alike that these rules have been made for the good of all, that every effort will be made to enforce them rigidly, that any violation of them will be considered before the justice court of the camp and punishment recommended to the Camp Executive. The camp executive reserves the authority to send any boy home at any time should he persist in violating camp rules.
