DE VALERA WARNS AGAINST "UNDUE CONFIDENCE"

JACK JOHNSON WALKS OUT OF PRISON TODAY

Former Heavyweight Champion Says He Never Did Like to Fight.

Gets Immediate Offer to Meet Fred Fulton in Havana Late This Year; Wife With Him.

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS)

LEAVENWORTH, Kas., July 8.—Jack Johnson, the former heavyweight champion of the United States, was released from the federal prison shortly before 10 o'clock this morning after serving 15 of ten months of a year's imprisonment for violation of the Mann act.

Johnson was sentenced to one year but he was given "good time" for not being a troublesome prisoner. The fine of $1000 was paid yesterday. Lucie Johnson, the white wife of the ex-champion, was here today having arrived from Chicago.

Johnson has received many telegrams today—coming from New York prior to containing an offer of $10,000 at a 10 per cent option to meet Fred Fulton in Havana Nov. 1st, this year.

Johnson thinks he is good for at least two years more as well as a member at the top of the heap of fighters. He said he was going to take himself to California.

He said today, "I do not like fighting and never have and if on one side of the street there was a good ball fight or an automobile race and on the other side a boxing match, you would find me at either one of the former."

DROP YOUR PEN OR SHOVEL AND SEE THE GAME

Escanaba Baseball Fans Will Turn Out in Force to Witness the Briscoe-Munn single Tangle Next Monday.

This afternoon all plans were completed by the promoters of the baseball game that will be played at South Park Monday afternoon, July 11th, for the benefit of the Girl Scouts of Escanaba between blank Olmstead's fast Briscoe team and Munns. No effort will be spared by those interested in the time to make the event of the most successful of its kind ever staged here.

Everyone wants to see the Girl Scouts of Escanaba succeed and they cannot without some support and the hosts of people attending the game. Monday will not only see one of the best games of the year on the local diamond, but they will be helping the Girl Scouts get ahead. It is expected by all interested that the largest crowd ever attending a game in Escanaba will be out at the ball park Monday.

The promoters of the game have been accredited with considerable forethought for picking the fast Munns team to face the Briscoe slammers here Monday.

Plans were also completed for handing the crowds in the grand stand and bleachers Monday. Charles Gessner with a number of Boy Scouts assisting him, will head the crew of ushers.

About 200 Tourists Make Up Party in Forty Automobiles.

Good Band and Number of Speakers Will Boost for Good Roads; No Hotels Will Be Used.

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS)

DETROIT, July 9.—The seventh annual good roads tour of the Michigan Pikes Association, Inc., left here today at noon for a 15½ day intense campaign for better highways and the popularization of their tour routes in the Great Lakes district.

The tour is international for the second time, its most northern tour being the Canadian Twin Port, Fort William and Port Arthur. It is known as the "Around Lake Superior" tour, it will traverse the Lower Michigan Peninsula, from south to north, the Upper Peninsula of the Wolverine state, from east to west, skirt the southern shore of Lake Superior, then northern Wisconsin; follow the north shore of Superior from Duluth, thru Minnesota and Ontario; then south thru Michigan to Detroit.

Forty cars and trucks and approximately 200 tourists accompanied the motorcade. Twenty men prominent in the good roads work in Canada and the United States accompanied the tour to do the speech making for the 67 good roads rallies enroute. The tour also carried a band and male quartet. No hotels will be used by the tourists, the road boosters being lodged in barrack fashion in large buildings. The train of nine light trucks carried folding beds, blankets and baggage for the tourists.

The first night's stop is Escanaba, the Michigan Capitol where Governor Alex. Grescheck and former Governor Chase S. Osborn will make speeches at the good roads meeting on the capitol lawn. The entire tour party will be the guest of the Reo Motor Car Company, being fed and lodged in the Lansing factory's club house.

Prescriptions For Liquor in City Are Normal, Anderson

That the number of liquor prescriptions written by Escanaba physicians as a whole is not large, was the statement made Friday by C. H. Anderson, who is deputy federal prohibition director for Michigan. Mr. Anderson has as a part of his duty the checking up of the liquor business of drug stores, and he was here Friday on official business.

While the number of prescriptions written and filled is not above normal, said Mr. Anderson, "nearly one half of the entire number filled by Escanaba druggists from Jan. 1 to June 29 were filled by one drug store and two drug stores filled nearly three-fourths of the entire number." Two or three Escanaba physicians appear to have more patients who require liquor to restore their bodily vigor than all the other physicians combined. One Escanaba physician has had his permit to write liquor prescriptions revoked, and others may meet the same fate if they can't find other drugs that will cure some of their patients of their ailments.

Plans were also completed for handing the crowds in the grand stand and bleachers Monday. Charles Gessner with a number of Boy Scouts assisting him, will head the crew of ushers.

Tickets for the game are now on sale at the following places:

QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED

Every day a reporter will ask five or six persons a question that will have to do with the general social and cultural life of Escanaba. Look for this space every day if you want just the question that has been bothering you for some time.

These instructions go into effect on Monday next. An air of the greatest optimism prevails at No. 16 Downing street, which is the official residence and at the Irish office, a belief that the trouble in Ireland was at an end and that further shooting of blood was unlikely. It was understood the details of the conference will be discussed over the weekend in the Escanaba copy where Premier Lloyd George has been entertaining the premiers of the dominions.

Middleton Meets King

LONDON, July 9.—Percy Middleton, the British Ireland Unionist leader, reached London this morning after having traveled all night from Dublin and was immediately received in audience by King George. It is understood that he reported to the king details of yesterday's conference in Dublin at which a truce for Ireland was arranged.

The whole country is abounding with interest which no body seems to know. No hope for peace will be given, but the king received the first report of success in an interview with Sir Edward Grey, the foreign minister.

Lord Middleton expressed heavy doubt as to London that the terms of the king's proposal for a truce would prove acceptable to the prime minister. He added that plans for further peace in Ireland would depend upon two people, namely Mr. de Valera and Premier Lloyd George.

DE VALERA AND LLOYD GEORGE TO MEET SOON

Up to the British Premier to Set the Date; Will Be Soon.

All England and Ireland Excited Over Coming Conference; Middleton Meets the King.

(By ASSOCIATED PRESS)

LONDON, July 9.—Premier Lloyd George has authorized to accept Esmond de Valera, president of Asgard, and the Irish Republican leader to discuss the basis for a formal conference.

The meeting will probably be held next week. The only thing remaining is the fixing of the date, which Mr. Lloyd George will name in his reply to Valera.

The government is abiding by the problems of state to the best of Irish peace and safety, in readiness for the proposed meeting.

The Irish office stated this afternoon that de Valera has issued instructions to his supporters to cease all acts upon earth, for us and civil rights and to discontinue all hostile activities of whatsoever nature.

The office said that de Valera had also issued instructions to his people to abstain from the use of arms and to cease all interference with public or private property and to desist from and prevent actions likely to cause disturbance of the peace which might come interfere with the conference.

These instructions go into effect on Monday next. An air of the greatest optimism prevails at No. 16 Downing street, which is the official residence and at the Irish office, a belief that the trouble in Ireland was at an end and that further shooting of blood was unlikely. It was understood the details of the conference will be discussed over the weekend in the Escanaba copy where Premier Lloyd George has been entertaining the premiers of the dominions.

EVERYBODY OWES EVERYBODY ELSE IN TURKEY AND BILLS ARE NEVER SETTLED THERE

American Wholesalers Who Ship on Consignment Have to Have Goods Sent Back to America.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CONSTANTINOPLE, July 9.—Business is at a standstill here owing to the uncertainties of the Russian and Turkish political situations. Normally the importing and exporting center for the Near and Middle East and partially for the Balkans, this city is now a commercial islet. Its warehouses filled with merchandise of every description for which there is no market.

Everybody owes everybody else, with nobody paying bills. A financial crash would have come months ago but for the fact that no firm can afford to demand payment of its bills. Even so would throw the debtor into bankruptcy, force more unavoidable credits on the market at sacrifice prices, and the arm forcing payment would in its turn be called on to pay off its which, under present conditions, cannot meet.

There is an increasing number of trading ships going to South Russian ports, mostly British, Greek and Italian. To date, no American ship has gone partly because of the lack of trade and, in the case of shipping board vessels, the decision of the management not to permit any of its vessels to touch Bolshevik ports. These vessels that do go to Black Sea ports of Russia claim the voyage are failures yet keep on going apparently finding enough business to pay ship expenses.

Other than American tobacco buyers, many merchants find the risks of trading so great, partly because of fluctuating exchange, that they prefer to speculate in exchange. They claim the checks are smaller. Banking business for the present consists in good part of such speculations on the part of customers.

In the face of such a situation, Constantinople remains the deepest of world capitals, from the point of view of living. Retailers of foods and clothing have turned practically a trust to keep up prices. They claim their goods at high prices and must sell them so. As there is no such thing as price controls or public opinion here, retailers are permitted to gouge the refugee population at will.

American wholesalers in many cases have preferred to take their losses on merchandise sent here on consignment, reship it to the United States. Others' wholesalers attempted to net out of stocks locally by organizing refugee Russians into street vendors of articles like tea and chocolate and small drygoods, but the plan hasn't worked, will because the vendors, in many instances, failed to make returns.

Business is expected to improve when such a government is established in Russia that it can obtain long time credits.

Federal Court in Alaska Has Many Locations

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, July 9.—A federal traveling federal court, which moves from place to place to hold trials, will again part of the coming summer at points in the lower section of the Yukon basin.

Most of the members of the court, including District Attorney E. Roth, Clerk H. Clark Kelly, chief assistant clerk, a chief deputy marshal, an attorney, U.S. marshal recently by boat for the Alaskan circuit, will hold sessions.

All parts of Alaska are visited by the court. When cases are not on the coast, the members travel from town to town by regular passenger steamers. In the interior, when necessary, they go by dog teams, when possible, and by "mushing" it along.

"Aggie" Head to Be Named at the Next Meeting

LANSING, July 9.—It is not unlikely according to the belief in many quarters here, that the state agricultural board, when it meets July 15, will not select a new president for the Michigan Agricultural College. At its last meeting the board deferred naming a successor to President Frank Kiddle, because of the absence of one of the board members. The choice of a man for the place was left open to decide at the next meeting.

Since the former meeting, however, a number of things have happened. Chief among them is the fact that Prof David Friday, of the University of Michigan who was most prominently mentioned for the place, has let it be known that he is not anxious to head the state school. It is more or less of a question whether he will accept if it is offered to him, but it is known that probably he will be just as well pleased if it is not preferred.

That E. Johnson, substitute for public instruction, is often being mentioned as the next successor to President Kiddle, Mr. Johnson has made no move to advance his candidacy for the position, but it is believed that he would accept.

LATIN QUARTER IN PARIS PLAN TO MOVE AWAY

PARIS, July 9.—A long discussed project for the transfer of the student quarter of Paris from the old Latin Quarter to the outskirts of Paris on spacious ground by the demolition of the wall of Paris appears to be on the way to realization.

The city of Paris will sell about 20 acres of land for the building of a students' city, including lodgings, recreation grounds and gymnasium. The University of Paris will undertake the construction of the necessary buildings, toward which the philanthropist has already contributed 10,000,000 francs.

It is not expected that this will greatly change the aspect or the characteristics of the Latin Quarter, but it will provide accommodations for many foreign students who, unable to find lodgings, are presently scattered from the university. The choice of the Students' Association attaches to lack of lodgings the fact that the number of students matriculated at the university fell from 11,000 to 8,000 this year.

Bids for Highway Bonds Open Soon

LANSING, Mich., July 9.—It is as yet predicted during the recent session of the legislature by men who were opposed to the highway bonding bill as passed that increasing the interest on bonds leads to a possibility that per cent would destroy the market for highway bonds. Bids on several million dollars worth of highway bonds, some of them of twenty years and one half percent issued to be opened shortly after July 12 when bids on $15,000,000 worth of short-term notes for compensation purposes will be opened. The question of whether the highway bonds will still be a pertinent one to State Highway Commissioners remains. It needs the money, and without it faces the prospect of halting work which promised to be a record breaking year in highway construction.

ELECTRIC LIGHT FOR ANGLER

Contrivance Enables Fisherman to Inveigle the Finny Tribe, Even on the Blackest Night.

Fisherman born is a fisherman to the last minnow. He hates to waste a night, though it is in the dark of the moon when it is too black to bait a hook. So now comes a fisherman's friend with a "night light" for the angler. If he puts a small battery in his pocket, along with the cheese sandwich and bottle of far-from-beer, the angler can try for a speckled crappie or catfish for a brown-backed pickerel or eel for a brook-backed pickerel all night long. The instant a fish begins to uncurl his line, a light bulb fastened on his rod, flashes.

The contrivance is ingenious. Fastened in the middle of the rod, it permits the line to be run out or wound up without being interfered with, but a jerk of the line from the hook causes a special trigger switch on a flashlight to close the circuit and light the lamp.

"Would a regular fisherman consent to toting a battery in his pocket in order to catch a blue gill?"

"Of course he would," says Steve Meender of Milwaukee, who is a great fisherman himself. "Any fisherman wants to catch what he can, and if he hasn't used one of these new-fangled things it is only because he has never seen one. I have had my friends buy belt and small belts for all kinds of several years, so why not an electric light?"—Milwaukee Journal.

Uses for the Sweet Potato.

A negro scientist of Tuskegee, Ala., has discovered manifold uses for the sweet potato, that near relation of the peanut, yielding everything from ice cream to ink. Mr. Carter enlightened the Ways and Means committee of congress and incidentally asked for a little "protection" on the products of southern soil. Said Mr. Carter, "Here is a bottle of mock oysters. Here is a bottle of relish for the oysters, made from peanuts. Peanuts make fine cereal coffee. The sweet potato produces number 10, up to date. I have not finished working with them." So, after all, some of the tariff hearings are not so dull and humdrum as one would think. Southern American.

Consider the Sun Dial.

At the very bottom of the rubber pile since April 24 is the sun dial. There was a time when the sun dial regulated the comings and the goings of mankind. The clock was a new idea which changed the world's ideal, and the sun dial was merely tolerated. But the latest idea, daylight saving, has wiped the sun dial from the picture. No matter how it tries, it cannot bring itself into step with today. If the sun dial could voice its protest it would proclaim that it represents all that is stable in the universe. The sun has marked the course for ages; it would warn, and to deviate from this must lead to destruction. It would demand respect for its vested right. Because the world would not listen it would call the world awry. The sun dial is a standpatter.—Milwaukee Journal.

Do Workers Need Parlors?

The question whether a parlor is a necessary part of a workingman's house has caused heated argument among several of the local councils organized to promote building of such homes in the industrial centers of England. Many women members of these councils argue that the workingmen's daughters need parlors to receive their callers during the visiting period. Those opposed declare that the workingmen's "best room" is little more than a "cemetery for waxed flowers."

Shipbuilding in Holland.

Shipbuilding in Holland still is on the increase, although in other countries marked tailing off in the output of yards has been noted since the high marks set during progress of war construction.

Cyrus, a tobacco-pipe smoker, a six weeks-old son, a concrete floor, she straddled atop. Rambles down New York, possibly. The net weighed about 100 lbs. Mrs. McElroy's concern to the safety of her son.

John Kelly, who leased the Hotel No. 1 in Toledo, the regimental at the beginning of the year, was returned from New Mexico. He had left his speed-superior auto to others to carry him. On his return to the Toledo residence, his thoughts only in writing.

Very recently he was taken in a general chair to a party, which was very full, and where some most uninviting stories were told. One of them, Kelly into a paroxysm of laughter and, in the midst of it, he suddenly expired.

"Oh, that's a good 'un!"

Kelly told a newspaper reporter that while he was laughing a man seemed to gather in his throat and heart, and to his amazement he found himself able to speak.

"I did not sleep that night for fear I should lose my voice," he said. "I was talking to myself all the night through."

His doctor was astounded at the unusual attack. Kelly expressed the hope that by a similar attack he will eventually be able to recover the use of his legs.

CATCHES BIG CARP

Made What is Believed to Be a Local Record.

Samuel Eltzner of Delaware City, Del., made what is believed to be a local record in catching carp the other day, when he landed one fish that weighed the scales at twenty-five pounds and his entire catch totaled 150 pounds. The presence of so many fish in the Chesapeake and Delaware Canal is attracting scores of fishermen daily and some splendid catches of fish are reported.

AMERICAN DEPORTEES

Are Forced to Give Up Extra Cash in Soviet Russia for Meal Coupons.

Russians who leave America, either as deportees or willingly in hope of finding a new land of promise in Soviet Russia, receive their first hard jolt on being turned over to the Bolshevik mission which greets them here and arranges their transportation to Moscow.

Many of them who have signed a statement in America that they desire to go to Russia, ardent American consul and Red Cross officials here, after they have had a few experiences with the Bolsheviks, ask that they may go back to the United States.

The Bolshevik personnel in Libau, Estonia, consists of about 15 persons. As soon as the boat arrives with Russian bound passengers aboard agents of the Bolshevik consulate board it and question all Russians aboard. Every effort is made to prevent all mystics from landing. Those who are permitted to board the train for Moscow are generally told that they should then give up all their extra money and extra clothing to the Bolshevik cause.

Some of the enthusiastic ones do this, and in return they receive coupons entitling them to meals in Russia for periods of time commensurate with the amounts they have given.

If they refuse to give up their money the Bolshevik consulate changes their foreign currency for them at an official rate, giving them Russian rubles which they had generally no purchasing power.

BABSON SEES COTTON-MADE

Statistical Expert Also Believes Generating Power Will Come From Coal Dust.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

CHICAGO, July 9.—A automobile made of cotton and driven by power generated from coal dust are possibilities of the not remote future. Such radical departures in the design of automobiles may not come immediately but until changes almost as startling are made, the automobile business will continue to suffer depression.

This is the opinion of Roger W. Babson, head of the statistical organization bearing his name. He says in part:

The principal factor in the decline in the automobile industry has been the steady increase in the price of gasoline. The car of the future will be built by other fuel. Already the use of coal dust has passed the experimental stage.

In my opinion it will be soon established within a short time. The coal dust is blown into the cylinders under pressure and exploded by spark. A slight ash is formed which falls out through the bottom of the cylinder, or through the top for the cylinders of the coal dust engine are open.

Tanher cars must be manufactured to reduce the cost of name, right, buckles and other articles.

Doors and windows must be used.

A VALID OBJECTION

Judge Robert L. Marx, national commander of the Disabled Veterans of the World War, makes a strong point when in discussing the Sweet bill, which on the whole he endorses, he protests against the provision under which disabled veterans may be deprived of their compensations for breaches of discipline in hospitals where they are being treated.

Such a provision is an outrage. When ordinary patients in private hospitals are morally do those in charge have the privilege of confiscating a part of their bank account? Not that anybody knows about. And the compensation given by the government to men who are victims of their experiences in the World War is the private property of those men. It is no charity to be withdrawn at will. It is, in a small fractional way, a payment of a debt which the nation owes the recipient. It is not to be made subject to the judgment or caprice of any military or hospital official.

Further than this, the suggestion of military discipline conveyed in the paragraph is unpleasant and impossible. The disabled veterans who look to the United States for care are out of the service now. They are as much civilians as the remainder of us, and there is no more reason for subjecting them to special discipline than there is for subjecting ordinary hospital patients to such discipline. The feeling among the men themselves is probably set forth well by the statement of one of the disabled soldiers before the Senate investigating committee which is trying to find out why ill and wounded veterans have been neglected and abused.

This ex-service man, a tubercular patient, says that all the men in the government hospitals would rather be in private institutions because there is too much army discipline in the government hospitals, and the men do not like it. He affirms that at Greenwich, S. C., patients must salute the public health officer, and must get up and stand at attention unless they are too ill. If this story about Greenwich hospital is reliable, the condition there is more than ridiculous—it is an abuse.

Congress ought to take steps to put a stop to it both now and hereafter. Some way government officials must be made to understand that they are the servants, not the masters, of the veterans who are in hospitals or in treatment under their care.

SENATOR HITCHCOCK'S BANK

Senator Hitchcock proposes his plan for a bank of nations with a capital of $2,100,000,000 as a remedy for existing trade depression. He points out that the United States as a creditor nation, with more gold than all of Europe put together, should take the lead in financing world trade and predicts that the nations a large will consent to American leadership and subscribe for their share of the stock even though this country proposes to control a majority of the stock.

The effect of the plan if it worked out according to the senator's dreams would be to put world trade on a dollar basis and to make this country the world's financial center for a period that might prove to be limitless.

Very little comment has been ventured upon the plan, but this is manifestly because it is so bold and so novel rather than because it lacks interest. Those who are generally ready with offhand opinions upon every subject find nothing in experience or precedent upon which to base a judgment of the senator's super-bank. But anyone may venture a guess that he is a little too sanguine when he says that the other great trading nations will be glad to contribute to the establishment of a world bank in New York. Certainly England has not yet admitted that the setback which London has undergone as the financial center of the world is permanent and irrecoverable.

And it may be said further that although the plan is intended to meet a present emergency it certainly cannot be carried through as an emergency measure. Putting such a bank into readiness for business involves action by congress, which would require months, and then there must come assent by the legislatures of all of the member nations. After that the bank would have to be organized and by the time it got to work the emergency it was organized to meet might be a matter of history.

DAWES ON THE JOB

It would be difficult to read the account of the big budget conference in the national capitol building last week without feeling encouraged over the prospect for an inauguration of a real era of economical administration of the public finances. Plainly, the budget director is to have the unqualified and active support of the President, and quite as clearly, General Dawes means business.

We may count on it, he is going to rampage through the departments and bureaus now made open territory for him, and woe betide the official, high or low, who attempts to get in the way. Woe also to anybody who tries to perpetuate any little "unauthorized perquisite" or who pleads against the elimination of waste.

For purposes of the budget, General Dawes is going to be an assistant president or something of the sort, superior to red tape and precedent. He will be a rather new creature in Washington, but there is every reason to hope that he will be a valuable one. Dawes likewise is going to be a shock to the sensibilities of a good many bureaucrats for reasons quite aside from his ability to say, "Hell and Maria." And the country will approve and applaud, and regain its spirits as it watches.

Captain Amundsen, who is now in Seattle, plans to sail north until his boat wedges in the ice and then drift to the North Pole. If he wants to recruit a crew he can do it easily by advertising anywhere in the area covered by the present hot wave.

The Story of Our States

By JONATHAN BRAKE
XXIV.—MISSOURI

W. HETHER was actually created by the State at the time of his discovery of the Mississippi. It is not definitely known. The first authentic exploration of this territory was by the French, Juliette Marquette in 1673. French settlers gradually located in Missouri, in 1681 St. Louis being settled. This was one year after Spain acquired from France the Louisiana Territory of which Missouri was a part.

Colonization greatly increased after the ordinance of 1787, which excluded slavery from the Northwest territory, as this naturally attracted many to the territory west of the Mississippi who otherwise would have settled in the north. The slavery question continued to hold the stage in Missouri history. After the Louisiana Purchase in 1803 added this vast western area to the United States, emigration increased to such an extent that in 1820 Missouri formed a state government and applied for admission to the Union. Bitter antagonism immediately arose in Congress against the addition of another slave state. On the other hand the slavery adherents pointed out that Maine had just been taken into the Union as a free state and one state would therefore balance the other. A final settlement was made by the famous Missouri compromise, which accepted Missouri as a slave state but prohibited slavery in the rest of the territory north of a line extending from the southern boundary of Missouri to the Rocky Mountains. Indeed, it was this agitation which temporarily smothered at that time, burst forth in the Civil war.

Missouri is in the forefront of the important states in national politics as it has eighteen electoral votes for president, its area is 69,429 square miles.

Embarassing Moment

Several years ago I had a fancy white dress that I kept on a coat hanger in my closet, but on close examination I noticed that the hanger was leaving its print on the sleeves in order to draw away with that I pinned the dress by the belt to the back of a coat. One evening two friends called and asked me to go with them to the postoffice. As it was cool, I put on a coat and had reached the street when my friends simultaneously noticed that I was wearing the coat that had my elaborate white dress fastened to the back of it. My embarrassment was little short of frenzy.—Chicago American.

CHAPTER IV.

THE KILLING OF ERIC BOYNE.

"There's many a government has made a mess of things in Ireland," said Eric.

"I'm not talking about the days of Cromwell, the English, this is the worst."

"Is there a man in Ireland that believes in it or trusts it? There are not many."

"They panned it."

Obedience the Law.

"What did the critics say about Number 1's new picture entitled 'Pan'?" They panned it."

"When a lady kisses a man on the lips, of her own free will, and puts her arm around his neck, is it done, do you think, because it's her duty to do it or die? No, it's because she likes the man; because the man is a good friend to her; because it's money in her pocket. That's the case with old Swinburne. France kisses him, as it were, because he's—she paused, as though debating what to say—"because France knows he'd rather be under her own revolutionary government than under the monarchy of England."

With these words, Dyck filled up the long glass out of which Dyck Calhoun had been drinking—drinking too much. Shortly before, Dyck had lost all his cash at the card-table. He had journeyed from it penitently and disconsolately to see Boyne, smiling, and gay with wine, in front of him.

Dyck took him by the arm.

"Come with me," said he. "There's no luck for you at the tables today. Let's go where we can forget the world, where we can lift the banner of freedom and beat the drums of our peace. Come along, lad!"

The time was critical for Dyck—critical and dangerous. He had lost money heavily; he had even exhausted his mother's legacy. Of late he had seen little of his father, and the little he had seen was not fortunate—they had quarreled over Dyck's wayward doings. He had angered his father terribly, and Miles, in a burst of temper, had disclosed the fact that his own property was in peril. They had been estranged ever since; but the time had come when Dyck must at least secure the credit of his father's name at his bank to find the means of living.

It was with this staring him in the face that Eric Boyne's company seemed to offer at least a recovery of his good spirits. Dublin knew little of Boyne's present domestic life. It did not know that he had injured his second wife as badly as he had wronged his first—with this difference, however, that his first wife was a lady, while his second wife, Noreen, was a beautiful, quick-tempered, lovable, eighteen-year-old girl, a graduate of the kitchen and dairy, when he took her to himself. He had married her in a mad moment, after his first wife.

Mrs. Noreen, as she was now called, had divorced him; and after the first thrill of married life was over, nothing remained with Boyne except regret that he had sold his freedom for what he might, perhaps, have had without marriage.

Then began a process of domestic torture which alienated Noreen from him, and roused in her the worst passions of human nature. She came to know of his infidelities, and they maddened her. They had no children, and in the end he had threatened her with desertion. When she had returned in strong words, he slapped her face, and left her with an ugly stain.

Of visitors they had few, if any, and the young wife was left alone to brood upon her wrongs. Eric Boyne had stopped her face on the morning of his last visit, and the hatred in his eyes.

"In fact, it was no worse," said Eric, not touching the bloody hand. "It's clean dried, and you'll be better from it soon. These great men," he snorted toward the surgeon, "will soon put you right. I got my chance when I was stroke, and took it, because I knew I didn't need have me present."

With a very low Mallow now seated on the old stump of a tree, held out his left hand. It was covered with blood. "Look at the state of my hand! It's good blood," he added grimly. "It's d—d good blood, but it won't do you see."

"I think we'll have to forge that contrary callow," he said. "Look at the state of my hand! It's good blood," he added grimly. "It's d—d good blood, but it won't do you see."

"Well, I tell you Calhoun, I don't know which is worse—Ireland bloody with shootings and hangings, Clonmel in the north and Cork in the south from the Giant's embassy to Tralee, two sets of feet dancing alike with the bloody hand of England stretching out over the Irish parliament like death itself, or France, dulling its teeth by bribery and purchased. It buys its way. Isn't that true?"

Dyck nodded.

"Yes, it's true in a way," he replied. "It's so, because we're what we are. We've never been properly put in our place in the French army that counts for so much—style of war. When they're out on a country like this, they let their officers loose their uniforms and hats. If you ever hear tell of French army being marched for orders, or going thirsty for drink, or losing its head for poverty or indigence."

"No, I never did."

"Well, then, take the advice of an officer of the French army resident to Dublin, contained in the speech of Dyck Calhoun, I tell you, 'Take your hand in the game that's going on.' For a man as young as you, with brains and ambition, there's no height he might reach in this country. That's one way."

So on that I'm fit for nothing but the sword, eh?" asked Dyck with a frown. "You think I've got no brains for anything except the army?"

Boyne laughed.

"Have another drink, Calhoun!" He poured out more wine. "It's no navy and the army alone; there's the navy and the army of the French navy." It's the best navy in the world, the freest and the greatest, and with Bonaparte going at us, England will have enough to do to me. I'm thinking, there's a career in the French navy open. And listen—before you and I are two months older, the French navy will be in the harbors of Ireland, and the French army will land here."

He reached out and grasped Dyck's arm. "There's no liberty of freedom under the Union Jack. What's the French army doing? It's a great army, and under it the world is going to be ruled—England, Spain, Italy, Holland, Prussia, Austria and Russia—all of them. The time is ripe. You've got your chance. Take it on, dear lad, take it on!"

Dyck did not raise his head. He was leaning forward with both arms on the table, supporting himself firmly; his head was bowed as though with deep interest in what he said.

And, indeed, his interest was great—so great that all his muscles, vigor, all his enthusiasm were utterly alive. Yet he did not lift his head.

"What's that you say about French ships in the harbors of Ireland?" he said in a tone that showed interest.

"Of course, I know there's been a lot of talk of a French raid on Ireland, but I didn't know it was to be so soon."

"Oh, it's near enough! It's all been arranged," replied Boyne. "There'll be ships—warships, commanded by Hoche. They'll have orders to land on the coast, to join the Irish patriots, to take control of the operations, and then to march on—"

He was going to say "march on Dublin," but he stopped. He was playing a daring game, he had not been sure of his man, he would not have been so frank and fearless.

He did not, however, mislead Dyck greatly. Dyck had been drinking a good deal, but this knowledge of a French invasion, and a sense of what Boyne was trying to do, steadied his shaken emotions, held him firmly in the grip of practical common sense.

"Why is he such a favorite?" asked Dyck.

Eric Boyne laughed, not loudly, but suggestively.

"When a lady kisses a man on the lips, of her own free will, and puts her arm around his neck, is it done, do you think, because it's her duty to do it or die? No, it's because she likes the man; because the man is a good friend to her; because it's money in her pocket. That's the case with old Swinburne. France kisses him, as it were, because he's—she paused, as though debating what to say—"because France knows he'd rather be under her own revolutionary government than under the monarchy of England."

"Of course the French would like to come to Ireland; they'd like to seize it and hold it. Why, of course they would! Of course; but what astounds me is that a man of your standing should believe the French are coming here now to Ireland. No, Boyne; I'm not taking your word for any of these things. You're a gossip; you're a d—d, pertinacious, preposterous gossip, and I'll say it as often as you like."

"So it's proof you want, is it? Well, then, here it is."

Boyne drew from his pocket a small leather-bound case and took from it a letter, which he laid on the table in front of Dyck.

Dyck looked at the document, then said:

"Ah, that's what you are, eh?"

CHARITY WORK IS REDUCED AMONG THE POLISH JEWS

Up to the Present Time Twenty-five Million Has Been Expended.

BY ASSOCIATED PRESS

WARSAW, July 9.—The American joint distribution committee—which has been doing relief work among the Jewish population in Poland nearly two years—is preparing to greatly reduce its activities early in July, it was announced in Warsaw recently. Approximately $25,000,000 has been expended to date.

One of the principal tasks undertaken by the joint distribution committee was the sending of money from individuals in America to poor relatives in Poland. This work has already been discontinued.

While the welfare work of the joint distribution committee is to be cut down about one-third, the care of a limited number of orphans in Poland and Jewish refugees coming from Russia is to be continued. Reconstruction work in the war-stricken districts is also to go on. 300 villages scattered along the eastern borders of Poland already having been benefited by water supply stations.

An educational campaign, under direction of Dr. Harry Flagg of New York City, designed to teach the benefits of sanitation was inaugurated this year. In these operations it is planned to touch virtually every Jewish home in the smaller towns throughout Poland which has a Jewish population of something like 4,000,000. The total population of the new republic is approximately 30,000,000.

Sixteen doctors from America who began their field work last fall are to continue indefinitely, working in the districts where there is the most need. Under supervision of the joint distributing committee medical department, ninety-two hospitals have been established in various Jewish settlements. Some 500 public bath houses have also been erected in as many villages, many of which had never had such an institution until this spring.

Within the last few months more than 100,000 children have been vaccinated against smallpox by the joint distribution committee doctors and their assistants.

Hereafter, virtually all efforts are to be directed more toward productive work designed to help permanently the thousands of war sufferers and others who have been aided to get a new start in life and who are gradually becoming independent of charity.

Committee Raises $196 for the City's Beach; $200 Is Aim

Up until this afternoon the committee of young women conducting the drive for funds to clean the bathing beach at stones, logs, bottles and wire had raised approximately $196 from local business men. It was originally intended to try to raise $100 just to clean out the beach, but the first hundred was raised easily, so the committee decided to raise another hundred dollars to be used in building a new raft and springboard.

When the drive closes late this afternoon the entire $200 will have been received and the work of cleaning the beach and building the raft and springboard will be started Monday morning.

be the Guests of Canadian Government for Portion of the Tour; Problem Is Being Studied.

JARA PALES, N. Y., right, the federal government and sixteen states will be represented on a tour of proposed Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Waterway project to start from July 11.

Several members of President Harding's cabinet, U. S. Senators, representatives, state executives and engineers will probably make up the party which will make the trip under the auspices of the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Waterway association.

The trip will be planned so that the official representatives of the association will call on Great Lakes navigation companies, proposed improvements necessary to open the Great Lakes to ocean commerce.

Party will be the guests of the Canadian government which will receive a portion of their disposal fee for the use of the Waterway. It is to be hoped that the tour will give the delegation a better knowledge of the project.
