YOUNG SEA CAPTAIN GOES DOWN WITH SHIP

BETTER COUNTY GOVERNMENT IS NEEDED HE SAYS

William P. Lovett, Detroit, Talks to Rotarians This Noon.

Tells Why It Would Be Well to Have Commission Form of County Government in State

Affirming that hurried taxpayers today are demanding and must have relief from such governmental wastes and extravagances as can be abolished, William P. Lovett of Detroit, a campaign manager for the citizens' state committee on county re-organization, addressed the Escanaba Rotary club this noon on the proposed amendment to the state constitution which would establish an optional form of commission government in such Michigan counties as expressed themselves in favor of it.

Mr. Lovett said that the only question over the whole movement, which has already been under way about two years, was that of getting the 165,000 voters, signatures necessary to put the amendment on the state ballot in November, 1922. Everywhere he stated, the popular enthusiasm is evident because most people in Michigan are sure that the Michigan plan of county government is obsolete and must be displaced by something closer to the people and more economical.

Having filled engagements already at Marquette and Traverse City, Mr. Lovett will attend a Rotary club meeting at Sault Ste. Marie tomorrow noon returning for a conference at Gladstone Tuesday night or Wednesday, and then going to Menominee on a similar errand. It is planned to form local committees in the various counties, under auspices of the state committee elected at a public meeting held in the senate chamber at Lansing last December.

"It is a pleasure," said the speaker, "to come to the home of Senator Leclair, who helped us materially last winter when the question was before the legislature. The senate adopted the idea by 25 to 6, but a few politicians in the house got us into a jam and we lost out in committee. However, circulation of the petitions will carry the message to every corner of Michigan, and so prepare us for an intelligent meeting of the question at the polls.

Financial economy is the big argument for this change, but its adoption is subject to a majority vote in any county. The amendment provides for a commission to take over the powers now performed by the supervisors, auditors, poor commissioners, etc., and making the selection of all such county officers dependent on this commission. In Wayne county, we are told by the auditors, we can save the taxpayers about $200,000 the first year by this change. No change whatever will be made in the state and county system of taxation and equalization. The township as a small local unit will stay as it is, and so will the whole system of the judiciary. What we shall accomplish will be the centralizing of county administration, in the hands of a small, full time group, at such salaries as may be determined. Whether they shall be chosen by districts or at large is for the legislature to settle, but we do not want to show any partiality against the rural area in any urban county. This is not an issue between city and county, but a question for each county as a whole and for the entire state. A district plan would assure such a method of representation as would at all times protect the minority and that is something we do not have now.

"County finances may be all right in Delta county, but in many counties it would emaze the tax payers if a real survey were made and the people were informed of just what their actual conditions were.

Weather
For Escanaba and vicinity: Fair and warmer tonight and Tuesday; moderate west and southwest winds.

SECTION INSPECTION
The members of Escanaba Boy Scout troops 2, 7, 8 and 9 who will make up the second section to go into camp at Sault Ste. Marie leaving here Thursday morning 8 o'clock, will assemble tomorrow evening at 7:30 o'clock at the Sault Ste. Marie headquarters for the inspection.

End of Log Cut at Johnson Mill Soon

The logs to be cut at the Johnson Lumber company in Escanaba this summer are nearing the end. The mill has been operating all summer and has employed a large crew of men, but now as the end of the cut looms it is believed the mill will have to close operations in the very near future. All the logs that were cut in the woods for the company have been turned into lumber.

BOOSTER MEETING AT IRON MOUNTAIN IS WELL ATTENDED

Officers of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau for the Coming Year Are Elected.

What was considered one of the most interesting meetings of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau ever held was the annual meeting held at Iron Mountain Saturday. A large number of Escanaba and Delta county men, who attended the sessions, returned to this city Saturday night. The officers elected for the coming year were:

President, L. S. Feldman, Trout Creek.
Secretary, J. A. Doelle, Marquette.
Treasurer, H. W. Reade, Escanaba.
County Directors, Delta, I. N. Bushong, Gladstone; Menominee, R. C. A. Whitefield, Menominee; Dickinson, R. F. Pierce, Foster City; Marquette, W. P. Brownson, Ishpeming; Houghton, Ed. Hamar, Chassard; Ontonagon, August Wallen, Escanaba; Iron, W. C. Campbell, Iron River; Schoolcraft, Leo C. Harmon, Monticou; Chippewa, Fred Case, Sault Ste. Marie; Mackinac, P. M. Brown, St. Ignace; Lake, W. H. Locke, McMillan; Alger, F. W. Hild, Forest Lake; Baraga, E. O. Alter, L'Anse-au-Loup; Keweenaw, W. E. Smith, Mohawk; Gogebic, W. Y. Trivette, Bessemer; Gogebic, Walter Grutzen, Bessemer. The above officers and directors were elected at a meeting of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau at Iron Mountain Saturday.

The directors adjourned a spirited evening session to meet in Marquette August 27, when ways and means of financing a three year program will be considered.

Acceptance of the presidency by Mr. Feldman, of Trout Creek, was made conditional on the agreement of John A. Doelle, the secretary manager of the association, to continue to give his full time to the duties of the office he has filled the past few years.

Mr. Doelle recently accepted an important state appointment. He had agreed to give part of this time to the affairs of the Development Bureau. But it was the opinion of the newly elected directors that there should be a full time secretary manager, and that Mr. Doelle should be the man. Mr. Feldman, the president, is particularly insistent on Mr. Doelle's retaining the office, if he is to direct the affairs of the bureau.

Doelle May Accept.
Mr. Doelle indicated that under certain conditions, he would consent to continue as secretary manager of the bureau.

One of these conditions is the agreement of the directors on a financial program that will assure the support of the organization on the basis of a $25,000 to $30,000 annual expenditure for a period of three years. Another is that the directors shall see that a willing assent is given by the state officials to his relinquishment of the appointment with which he has been recently honored.

LENN SMALL IS BACK AT DESK AT CAPITAL

Sheriff Mester Is Waiting for Him to Furnish His Bonds.

Attorneys for Executive Called at County Office This Morning to Inspect Papers

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Aug. 8.—Gov. Small, accompanied by his son Leslie, Charles Leitch, administrative auditor, and J. H. Jenkins, director of the department of public welfare, arrived in Springfield late last night making the trip by automobile. The governor said he would go to his office in the state house this morning. George B. Gillispie and James M. Graham, the governor's attorneys, were waiting at the county clerk's office this morning and inspected Sheriff Mester's bond. They remained only a few minutes. The legal profession was believed to be a preliminary caution and an indication that a legal battle was pending.

Sheriff Mester, on learning of Governor Small's return to the city said he expected the governor to go to the court house and arrange bond. "We will probably give him a day before we do anything," said the sheriff. "If I go over to the governor's office, it is not likely that I will see him and the warrants will be served right here in my office, as everything is ready for him to come in and arrange for his bond."

Efforts to guard the arrival of the governor with secrecy were made by his friends at the executive mansion, the only word going out was to the effect that the executive would be in his office this morning.

London Timber Yard Is Fired By Laborers

(By Associated Press)
LONDON, Aug. 8.—Because of dis-appointment over the failure to secure jobs in a timber yard in London which advertised for 50 men, a thousand unemployed laborers broke in to the place and set fire to a stock of lumber valued at $5,000,000. Considerable damage was done before 500 foot and mounted police made way for the fire departments.

FIRE IN WOODS UNDER CONTROL

Volunteers Fight Blaze All Day Yesterday; Flames Had Reached the Bay Shore Road.

The city today is in no immediate danger of being destroyed by fire even if the flames continue to rage on all sides but the water front. The fire Saturday that caused a general alarm to be sounded to prevent the flames flying cinders, burning wood and grass from jumping into the city was reported today as being far enough away to keep the city from burning up. Yesterday crews of men were dispatched to the Birds Eye Veneer company's location and to the cemetery where the fires were reported as being most dangerous since the fires first started. Yesterday morning fire in the woods a short distance this way from the Catholic cemetery reached the South Shore road placing the cottages on the shore in great danger. The ground was plowed up at this point and the fire subdued. Although the men working here made a steady effort to keep the blaze out of the cemetery.

Workers Pleased
Knowing that they were to receive no compensation for the tiresome and dangerous work they were doing many men and boys volunteered to fight the fire Saturday and Sunday. Saturday the Escanaba Boy Scouts hurried to when they were called for to help put the fire under control. The spirit of the Boy Scout and the men, who went out to fight the fire was of the highest and they deserve considerable credit for the good work they have done.

LAST MEMBER OF PARLIAMENT HAS BEEN RELEASED

John J. McKeown Was Given His Freedom Late This Afternoon

All Members of the Irish Republican Parliament Will Now Attend Session.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—John J. McKeown, member of the Irish Republican parliament, whose case was at first made an exception when it was decided to free the members of the Irish Republican parliament who were in prison has been liberated. It was announced today. McKeown was convicted of the murder of a government inspector.

It was announced late last week that McKeown was not to be released with the other prisoners, but it is pointed out that this decision came from Dublin and not from officials of the government, whom it is claimed he had not decided the matter as to whether McKeown was to be allowed to go with the other prisoners or not. Premier Lloyd George is understood to be keeping a close track with the Irish situation and a courier is reported to have been sent by Mr. de Valera to the prime minister who is now in Paris attending the meeting of the supreme council and that the courier went on to France after it was found out that the prime minister had left London.

Boy Scouts in Need of Autos to Get to Camp

Automobiles will be badly needed Thursday morning to convey Boy Scouts to the scout camp on Sac Bay. Those who have cars and will drive over with some of the boys will kindly notify the scout headquarters as soon as possible in order that the officials may have your car to depend on. A large number of cars are needed—there was not anywhere near enough when the first troops went into camp and the lack of proper transportation hampered the officers considerably. Most everyone in the city wants to visit the camp and a good time to go over would be on Thursday when you can take a number of the boys with you. Please notify the office at once if you can aid in the transportation of troops.

REV. P. B. FERRIS MEETS FRIENDS AT OLD CHURCH

Former Pastor of Presbyterian Church Occupied Pulpit; Prof. Fred Erickson at Organ

A large and appreciative congregation at the First Presbyterian church yesterday morning, Rev. P. B. Ferris, former pastor of the church, preached on the theme "A man who transformed a Nation". Giving the text a practical application the speaker spoke in a very forceful manner of the need in the state, the municipality and the church of men of large build, wise heads and strong hearts who could help solve the problems and give of the highest intelligence to the boys and girls of the community.

The message of the sermon was held the closest attention till the last word of the discourse. The sermon was closed with an illustration from the parable seen from Mark Corbally's "Parables" which made a most living application to the splendid address.

Rev. Dr. Ferris is a past pastor of the Second Presbyterian church of Wheeling, West Virginia, one of the brightest churches of this denomination in that state. The services of the First Presbyterian church were made more attractive yesterday by organ numbers presented by Frederick Erickson, Fellow of the American Guild of Organists, now in charge of the music in Immanuel Church of Baltimore, Md. A quartet choir also presented some fine musical numbers.

The many friends of the two principals of the service yesterday were extending their hearty congratulations and words of appreciation at the close of the worship.

58 MISSING OR DEAD IN WRECK OF STR. ALASKA

Passenger Steamer Hits Rock On the Pacific Coast; Boilers Burst.

Bursting of Tank Covers Sea and Passengers With Coating of Oil; Dense Fog Cause.

(By Associated Press)
EUREKA, Cal., Aug. 8.—Seventeen are known to be dead and 31 missing in the last checking up of the wreck of the Pacific coast steamer Alaska which went on a rock at Blunt's Reef, 46 miles south of here Sunday night. Captain Harry Hobe went to his death on board his ship and refused to take a life preserver from one of the passengers, J. H. Moss, of Chicago who urged him to put on the life preserver and save his own life. Capt. Hobe was one of the veterans of the steamship service, was but 40 years old and was just recently given the command of the Alaska. This was his third trip on the boat.

Only wreckage remains of the steamer Alaska. Some of the survivors of the wreck plan to leave today for San Francisco on a special train which has been arranged for by the owners of the steamship. An inquest will be held some time today over the 17 bodies which are in the morgue here. It was stated today by members of the crew, that some of the crew and passengers were blown into the sea by an explosion of the boilers on the ship. Many of those who were saved were clinging to wreckage when the life boats picked them up.

Oil from a bursting tank of the ship was scattered over one of the life boats filled with passengers and the ocean nearby, was coated over with the heavy oil which coated the bodies of the dead picked up by the small boats.

"I prefer to go down with my ship," were the last words of Capt. Hobe, as he walked away from J. H. Moss, of Chicago, who went to him with a life preserver, telling him to put it on. Ninety-six passengers and 70 of the crew were brought back here late today by the steamer Anvok, which arrived at the scene of the wreck in time to pick the survivors up from drifting life boats and from among the wreckage.

The Alaska was bound from Portland, Oregon, to San Francisco. A dense fog concealed the treacherous rocks of Blunt's Reef, which projects far into the ocean, when the Alaska crashed at 9:10 o'clock last night. Within 20 minutes the crippled steamer listed, turned, and sank to within four feet of the tips of the masts.

Three Boats Launched.
According to the stories of the survivors, three life boats were launched. The last one was but a few feet from the wreck when the Alaska plunked bow first.

George Glenn of Nebraska, who, with another passenger, and the captain were the last men on the ship, came to the surface a short time after and finally found an empty life boat. Others were struggling in the water. The steamer Anvok towed a barge to Vancouver, was twelve miles distant when the first S. Q. S. signals of the Alaska were flashed out.

Within an hour the Anvok arrived at the wreck and her crew speedily picked up those drifting in life preservers or in life boats. Through the night other ships joined in the rescue work.

In telling of the game here this morning the Edwards team said that while they did not win the game, the game was first class and the Maple Ridge fellows were a bunch of real sports and won the game because they could play a little better.

Booster Meeting Is Held, Iron Mountain

 Members of the board are confident that these conditions, which they agree are reasonable, will be met, and they expect that Mr. Doelle will continue in charge of the bureau's activities. It is likely that some definite decision on this point will be reached at the meeting in Marquette the latter part of the month.

Bureau Faces Deficit.
 To date, August 1, the bureau has a deficit of approximately $5,000. For the year ending February 1 last, the outlay was approximately $39,500. In the months since that date the bureau has suffered a shrinkage in income due to depressed conditions in the mining and lumber industries, which has led some of the large contributors to withdraw or curtail their subscriptions. The current expenses have lately been met by loans, and the meeting of the deficit, as well as provision for the new financing, will have to be taken up at the meeting here on the 24th. A minimum income of $25,000 a year is required for the work of the bureau.

Meeting Well Attended.
 The meeting in the bureau, who have been concerned at the financial crisis in its affairs, were greatly encouraged by the interest and attendance at the Iron Mountain meeting, and they believe that they warrant the conclusion that the work carried on by the organization will be continued with renewed vigor.

Over 100 men, representatives of nearly all the upper peninsula counties, were in attendance at the session, and they entered into the discussions with vigor. Marquette county was represented by one of the largest delegations present at the gathering.

The formal address on the program were:

Michigan Forestry and American Park, H. K. Gallup, Superintendent of State Forest Education, State Board of Vocational Education, Lansing, Michigan.

"Future Land Clearing in Michigan" by H. E. Livingston, Land Clearing Expert for State of Michigan, Marquette, Michigan.

The Possibilities of Michigan's Forest Land, H. J. Gray, Secretary-Manager, Michigan Tourist and Resort Association, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

"What the Newspaper Man Has Done for the Upper Peninsula," by F. J. Clifton, Editor, Iron River Standard Reporter, Iron River, Michigan.

Michigan and Her Resources, A. P. Johnson, Editor, Grand Rapids News, Grand Rapids, Michigan.

Michigan, A. C. Moore, Menominee, Michigan.

Mr. Johnson of the Grand Rapids News, gave a particularly spirited address, which was received with much approval.

The general discussion covered the whole range of the bureau's activities, with special attention to its financial affairs. Every speaker went unambiguously on record as favoring continuance of the work, and as expressing confidence that its adequate financing can be provided for. A budget plan for the bureau was urged, and also the more intensive working of the counties for funds for the support of the effort. F. J. Baldwin advocated the appointment of the estimated expenses to the counties, with fair regard to their population and wealth, and placing the responsibility of raising the appropriations on the county directors and local committees.

Some of the visitors at Iron Mountain went out to the Ford plant where they surveyed the work in hand with much interest.

Publishers to Meet.

At an informal meeting of upper peninsula publishers following the Iron Mountain banquet sessions, it was decided to call a meeting of publishers and commercial printers of the upper peninsula in Marquette for some date late this month or early in September, when the revival of the defunct Lake Superior Press association will be proposed. Frank J. Russell was designated temporary president of the organization, and F. L. Baldwin, the secretary, will at once take up plans for the meeting. It will be sought to obtain a representative gathering of publishers and commercial printers.

SALTS IF BACKACHE AND KIDNEYS HURT

Drink lots of water and stop eating meat for a while if your bladder troubles you.

When you make up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat toxins are acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and logy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, like you relieve your bowels, removing all the body's urinous waste, also you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells, your stomach sour, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The urine is cloudy, full of sediment, channels often get sore, water scalds and you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night.

Either consult a most reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jod Salts, take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate stomach kidneys, also to neutralize acids. In the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness. Jod Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters; it is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink.

IT MAY be presumptuous to compare any story with the immortal "Treasure Island," but there is a real basis for it here, for the narrative does deal with treasure, pirates and a Pacific island in an uncommonly delightful way.

In thrills, it must yield to its great predecessor; in humor, it is at least a good second; in variety and up-to-dateness, it has the advantage.

It is a real treasure hunt with the unique quality, giving rise to delicious humor, that the hunters are led by women. It is a genuine treat.

MOSCOW HAS A HOLIDAY WHEN MILK ARRIVED

Nothing Was Doing in Outside of Trying to Get the Milk.

Two Thousand Cases of Cottonseed Oil Was Also Distributed by the Relief Association.

(By Associated Press)

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 8.—A three-day holiday interrupted work in Moscow the week of May-day, writes Anna J. Haines of Morristown, N. J., with regard to the distribution of 2,000 cases of cottonseed oil and 1,500 cases of condensed milk which the American Relief Administration recently donated to the Russian Friends Service Committee for use in Russia. Miss Haines was in the midst of carrying out the work of distributing the fats to the anemic children in the forest schools, of whom there are 10,000 in and near Moscow, when the holidays interfered. Not even relief work could be carried on during these gala days. The Friends supplies waited under bonds in the warehouse until the celebration was over. "Open-air theatres," continues Miss Haines, "had been erected in many squares where choral recitations and pantomimes were given, as well as individual speeches and music. Decorated autos and decorated street cars were given over to showing the kiddies a good time, taking them all over the city. One big truck had a little hand printing press mounted on it and printed handbills of labor songs and motor which children tossed into the air as the auto passed them the crowd. All the main streets were decorated and no one was on the side streets. "In the evening there were fire works and searchlights and fountain playing. Bonfires at midnight there was an entertainment at the Foreign Affairs Club, where Tentchev made an interesting speech, which was followed by some good Russian instrumental and vocal music. Similar entertainments were given in the recreation centers of other governmental departments. The fact that it was also Easter Sunday, according to the Greek calendar, and the Jewish New Year, contributed to make everyone happy and good natured. The church bells added considerably, if involuntarily, to the day's gaiety.

COMMISSION FORM OF GOVERNMENT IS SPREADING FAST

(By Associated Press)

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—With practically every city in the 10,000 class in Michigan now under the commission form of government, the movement now is spreading to villages and townships. Within the present year, seven or eight villages have swung into the commission column, bringing the total of communities that have discarded the aldermanic form close to 100.

Efficient functioning of governmental agencies has been the argument most frequently used in campaigns for the commission form in villages. It has been an issue in almost a score of local elections in Michigan this year and has been uniformly successful, its proponents declare.

In one or two instances, notably Kalamazoo, the pendulum has swung back to the aldermanic form. Because of sweeping "home rule" provisions in the Kalamazoo charter, which the state supreme court found unconstitutional, considerable dissatisfaction developed in that city and the new charter, about ready for a vote, is more closely patterned after the aldermanic form. The city of Pontiac has referred to the attorney general at Lansing the question of the legality of initiatory petitions, freshly signed, asking submission of the question of abandonment of the commission form and substitution of the aldermanic form.

Benton Harbor is one of the latest additions to the commission form column. Recently Monroe voted to enlarge its commission to give all wards more complete representation.

The spread of the movement to counties expresses itself in initiatory petitions, circulation of which was started in the northern part of the state, awaiting for submission to all the people at large in November, 1922, or an amendment to the state constitution paving the way for adoption of the commission form by counties as a substitute for boards of supervisors. The campaign committee has set out to obtain more than 100,000 signatures necessary to bring this issue before the voters.

CAPTAIN OF THE VACATION GUARD HAS RESIGNED

Could Not Induce the Pope to Place Army of 70 Men on a Real Fighting War Basis.

(By Associated Press)

ROME, Aug. 8.—Colonel Repond who was called to be commander of the Swiss guards at the Vatican during the pontificate of Pius X and who gained considerable distinction because of his efforts to place the 70 soldiers who compose the guard on a "war footing," has resigned. Pope Benedict has appointed Colonel Hirschbuhl, the next senior officer of the corps, to succeed him.

Colonel Repond was an officer of the Swiss regular army and came to the Vatican under the impression that he could give the Pope's body guard a more martial spirit. They were put on strict military discipline, aroused at 1:30 o'clock in the morning and put in a drill in the most rigid fashion. The 70 men were taken out on the Belvedere court inside the Vatican gardens and given maneuvers.

One day, Colonel Repond had an audience with His Holiness Pius X and laid plans for the fortification of the Vatican. These included the placing of cannons on the roof of St. Peter's. The Holy Father looked upon the colonel, smiling one of benign smiles and said:

"Cannon? What for? Not to shoot?"

"No, your Holiness," replied the colonel.

"Well, then?" interrogated the venerable Pontiff.

The colonel did not answer and he was excused.

Colonel Repond had also issued to the Swiss Guards a certain amount of ammunition. One day a guard began shooting near the barracks. The report stirred the whole Vatican. The issue of cartridges was ordered prohibited and the guard deprived of those they still had.

This was the last attempt of the colonel to institute war tactics. The guards continue to use the 15th century halberd when on duty.

The treasury department of the Mexican federal government has authorized the issuance of fifty million pesos in agrarian bonds. These bonds are to be used only to purchase arable land for distribution among the people of Mexico. The bonds are not to be sold but are to be exchanged with land owners for large tracts which are not now cultivated.

The wireless train has arrived in Sweden. By employing anti-friction bearings, technically known as disk bearings, in place of the present journal bearings on passenger cars, the resistance at starting cars is so reduced that from ten to fifteen per cent of the pulling force required with journal bearings will cause the train to move.

GRAY HAIR BECOMES DARK AND BEAUTIFUL

Try Grandmother's Old Favorite Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is messy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wynth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, prevention or prevention of dandruff.

ENRICO CARUSO

Enrico Caruso is dead. The golden voice that lifted the lowliest music lover into the seventh heaven of ecstasy and held the senseless enraptured and forever silenced. To the world at large pews of the incomparable tenor's demise in Italy will be a source of sincere regret. To America it comes with peculiar poignancy, because in the land of his adoption Caruso had long since taken rank as more than a mere singer, however great his qualifications for that score, and has assumed the enviable status of one of the nation's most cherished institutions.

Caruso's appearance was always the signal for an outpouring such as none of his made contemporaries could muster. This was as much a tribute to the man as to his marvelous voice. He sang for the sheer love of singing, and those privileged to know the man intimately were aware that the pleasure he afforded his audiences of all classes brought him far more satisfaction than the princely earnings that were his material reward.

In a single season he made no less than fifty appearances, a test of endurance that few operatic singers of far less consequence would care to undertake. His versatility was amazing. In concert work he was as discerning in his efforts to meet all tastes as he was unsparring of his vocal powers. This had much to do with endearing him to the public, and enabling him to reign for two decades with an undiminished grip upon the public.

Not since the days of Campanini and Jean de Reszke has America known such a tenor as Enrico Caruso, whose climb from an humble station and unpropitious beginning to the foremost pinnacle of fame in his chosen field came as the deserved reward of merit, ungrudgingly accorded him by his professional associates as well as by the laity.

Caruso is no more, but in the years to come his memory will be cherished in the humblest homes as well as the gilded mansions, and he will be affectionately recalled as one who gave freely, almost recklessly, of his talent that his fellow men might have the enjoyment which is all to infrequently their portion. On this score he would have been content to have his fame rest had it been given him to express a final wish.

A JOB FOR BRYAN

From Columbia, Missouri, comes the news that a movement is on foot in that state to secure the services of William Jennings Bryan as president of the state university which is located in that town. It has been supposed that Mr. Bryan is wedded to his new home in Florida, but if he should be summoned by Missouri and should accept he ought to make a very interesting university president.

A university president is generally expected to possess two major qualifications. Administrative ability is one and the other is an exceptional appreciation of the meaning and nature of scholarship.

Just which of these qualifications the Missouri admirers of Mr. Bryan think they will get the most of is difficult to say, but Mr. Bryan is not greatly distinguished in either. Perhaps the idea is to leave that sort of thing to be taken of by somebody else while Mr. Bryan furnishes inspiration and advertising. There is no question about the immense attraction which he exerts over the minds of a very numerous following and if he should lend his personal magnetism to Missouri it ought to boom Missouri U. amazingly among the people who instinctively turn toward him.

MR. LONGWORTH'S ADVICE

While the ways and means committee is looking about for new sources of revenue it will do well to keep in mind the opinion expressed by Representative Longworth, when he said: "I am in favor of raising the smallest possible amount by the new revenue bill. If we are to make mistakes I would rather make them in the direction of reducing taxes now, with the possibility of having to supplement the revenues later."

An excellent rule for saving money is to keep it where it cannot be spent and that is something congress can do most effectively by leaving the money in the pockets of the people. Economy is relatively easy when a shortage impends, but government economy with the treasury full would be a miracle. By all means let the committee make its mistakes if it must make them, by keeping taxes down.

It is reported from Washington that Woodrow Wilson is about to hang out his shingle as a practicing lawyer, but he would probably rather use it to spank Senator Borah.

Having recovered from its first attack of nerves, Japan is coming to the conclusion that it will be safe to trust to American fair-play at the Washington conference.

The booze ship which is said to linger outside the three-mile limit off Atlantic City ought to popularize long distance swimming among those who don't own yachts.

The president of Austria says it was booze that put the Germans to the bad in the great war. Then record one good deed for the wicked John Barleycorn.

Clemenceau says he won the war. If keeping France in the fight won the war, then Clemenceau can at least make out a prima facie case for himself.

That professor who married his wife by written contract may think that a lawyer can do the job better than a preacher but there is room for doubt.

SPANISH DOUBLOONS BY CAMILLA KENTON

But that he had, was lent on treasure-seeking? He that as it may, the little brig found her way into the bay on the northeast side of the island, where she anchored. Water was needed, and there is refreshment in tropical fruits after a diet of salt horse and hard-tack. So all hands had a holiday ashore, where the captain did not disdain to join them. Only he went apart, and had other occupation than swarming up the palms for coconuts.

One fancies then, a moonless night, a crew sleeping of double grog generously allowed them by the captain, a boat putting off from the Bonny Lass, in which were captain, mate, and one Bill Hallwell, able seaman, a man of mighty muscle, and as freight an object large, angular and ponderous, so that the boat jiggered heavily beneath the rowers' strokes.

Later, Bill, the able seaman, grows presumptuous on the strength of this excursion with his betters. It is a word and a blow with the captain of the Bonny Lass, and Bill is conveniently disposed of. Dead, as well as living, he serves the purpose of the captain, but not that later.

Away sailed the Bonny Lass, sailing once for all but of the story. As for Captain Sampson, there is a long gap in his history, fully filled by the story of his having been lieutenant to Bonito Bonito, and one of the two survivors when Bonito's black flag was brought down by the British frigate Epiphany. But solely history knows nothing of him until he reappears years later, an aged and broken man, in a back street of Bristol. Here was living a certain Hopperdown, who had been boatswain on the Bonny Lass at the time that she so regretfully lost her passengers overboard. He saw and recognized his old skipper hobbling along the Bristol quays, and perhaps from pity took the shabby creature home with him.

Hopperdown dealt in sailors' slops, and had a snug room or two behind the shop. Here for a while the former Captain Sampson dwelt, and after a swift illness here he died. With the hand of death upon him, his grim lips at last gave up their secret. With stiffening fingers he traced a rough map, to refresh Hopperdown's memory after the lapse of time since either had seen the wave-beaten cliffs of Leeward Island. For Captain Sampson had never been able to return to claim the treasure which he had left to Bill Hallwell's silent guardianship. If he had, indeed, sailed with Bonito, he had kept his secret from his formidable commander. Even as he had dealt with Bill Hallwell, so might Bonito deal by him—or at least the lion's share must be yielded to the pirate captain. And the passion of Captain Sampson's life had come to be his gold—his hidden hoard on far-off Leeward Island. It was his now, all his. The only other who knew its hiding place, his former mate, had been killed in Havana in a tavern brawl. The secret of the bright, unattainable treasure was all the captain's own. He dreamed of the doubloons, glowered over them, longed for them with a ceaseless gnawing passion of desire. And in the end he died, in Hopperdown's little shop in the narrow Bristol by-street.

Hopperdown, an aging man himself, and in his humble way contented, fell straightway victim to the gold-virus. He sold all he had, and bought passage in a sailing ship for Valparaiso, trusting that once so far on the way he would find means to accomplish the rest. But the raging of the fever in his thin old blood brought him to his bed, and the ship sailed without him. Before she was midway in the Atlantic Hopperdown was dead.

The old man died in the house of a niece, to whom by way of legacy he left his map. For years the map lay among other papers in a drawer, and here it was at length discovered by her son, himself a sailor. He learned from her its history, and having been in the Pacific, and heard the tales and rumors that cling about Leeward Island like the exhilarating surf of its encompassing seas, this good-nephew of old Hopperdown's, by name David Jenkins, became for the rest of his days a follower of the lewis fatus. All his restless, hungry life he spent in wandering up and down the seas, ever on the watch for some dimly imagined chance by which he might come at the treasure. And so at last he wandered into the London hospital where he died.

And to me the wildest feature of the whole wild tale was that at the last he should have parted with the cherished secret of a lifetime to Miss Higgleby-Browne. In a general way, every one of us knew his history. Even I had had an outline of it from Cuthbert Vane. But so far nobody had seen the map. And now we were to see it; the time that intervened before that great event had already dwindled to minutes, to seconds.

But not for Miss Browne arose and began to make a speech. The beginning of it dealt in a large and generalizing manner with comradeship and loyalty, and the necessity of the proper mental attitude in approaching the business we had in hand. I did not listen, closely. The truth is, I wanted to see that map. Under the spell of the island, I had almost begun to believe in the chest of doubloons.

Suddenly I awoke with a start to the fact that Miss Brown was talking about me. Yes, I, indubitably, was the Young Person whose motives in attaching herself to the party were so at variance with the party and mutual confidence which elicit all other benefits. It was I who had uttered words that were painful and astounding to one conscious of undiminished integrity. In the days of old to come, we were reminded the Young Person to visit, by itself, would have no share. She would be but a scapegoat, blame in the hour of need. That it was obvious that the Young Person could get with any trace of justice claim part or lot in the treasure. Were it not well, then, that the Young Person be required to make formal and written renunciation of all interest in the golden hoard soon to reward the faith and enterprise of the Harding-Browne expedition? Miss Browne requested the sense of the meeting as the matter.

Aunt Jane was quivering, her round eyes fixed on Miss Higgleby-Browne like a frightened rabbit on a serpent. Mr. Hamilton, Tubbs had pursed his lips to an insupportable smile, and alternately regarded the summit of the pulpit and stole swift, regretful glances at the faces of the company. Mr. Vane had remained for some time in happy unconsciousness of the significance of Miss Browne's oration. It was something to see it probably penetrate to his perceptions, vexing the nightster brook with a faint wrinkle of perplexity, then suffusing his cheeks with agonized and indignant blushes. "Oh, I say, really, you know?" hovered in unspoken protest on his tongue. He threw imploring looks at Mr. Shaw, who alone of all the party sat imperturbable, except for a vicious bitten lip.

Miss Higgleby-Browne had drawn a deep breath, preparatory to resuming her verbal ramble, but I sprang to my feet. "Miss Browne," I said, in tones less coldly calm than I could have wished. "If you have thought it necessary to—to orate at this length merely to tell me that I am to have no share in this ridiculous treasure of yours, you have wasted a good deal of energy. In the first place, I don't believe in your treasure." (Which, of course, despite my temporary lapse, I really didn't.) "I think you are—sillier than any grown-up people I ever saw. In the second place, anything you do that you are welcome to keep. Do you think I came along with people who didn't want me, and have turned my aunt against me, for the sake of filthy lucre? Did I come intentionally at all, or because I was lashed and couldn't help myself? Aunt Jane?" I demanded, turning to my stricken relative, who was gazing in anguish and doubt from Miss Browne to me. "haven't you one spark left of family pride—I don't talk of affection any longer—that you sit still and hear me made speeches at in this fashion? Have you grown so sordid

"I Don't Believe in Your Treasure."

And grasping that you can think of nothing but this blood-stained pirate gold?" Aunt Jane burst into tears. "Good gracious, Virginia," she wailed, "how shocking of you to say such things. I am sure we all got along very pleasantly until you came—and in that dreadfully sudden way. You might at least have been considerate enough to wire beforehand."

It was impossible to feel that these remarks helped greatly to clear the situation. I opened my mouth, but Miss Browne was beforehand with me. "Miss Virginia Harding has herself admitted that she has no just or equitable claim to participate in the profits of this expedition—I believe I give the gist of your verdict. Miss Harding?"

"Have it your own way," I said, shrugging. "I move then, Mr. Secretary—Miss Browne inclined her head in a stately manner toward Mr. Tubbs—that you offer for Miss Virginia Harding's signature the document prepared by you?"

"Oh, I say!" broke out Mr. Vane suddenly. "Call this rotten, you know?" "In case of objection by any person," said Miss Browne loftily, "the matter may be put to a vote. All those in favor say 'aye!'" An irregular fire of eyes followed. Mr. Shaw said briefly, "I think the distribution of the treasure, if any is recovered, should be that agreed upon by the original members of the party. 'Aye!'"

Aunt Jane's awaiting voice issued from the depths of her handkerchief, which was rapidly becoming so bulky and inadequate that I passed her a new one. From Cuthbert Vane along there came a steadfast 'aye'—and the Scotchman put a hand on the boy's shoulder with a smile which was like sudden sunlight in a bleak sky.

Mr. Tubbs then produced a legal-looking document which I took to be the original agreement of the members of the expedition. Beneath their signatures he had inscribed a sort of codicil, by which I relinquished all claim on any treasure recovered by the party. I signed the clause in a bold and defiant hand, under the attentive eye of the company. A sort of sigh went round, as though something of vast moment had been concluded. And indeed it had, for now the way was clear for Violet's map.

Coverly I watched the faces around me. Mr. Tubbs' eyes had grown bright; he licked his dry lips. His nose, tipped and slightly bulbous, took on a more than usually rosyate hue. Captain Magnus, who was of a restless and jerky habit at the best of times, was like a leashed animal scenting blood. Beneath his open shirt you saw the quick rise and fall of his hairy chest. His lips, drawn back wolfishly, displayed yellow, fan-like teeth. Enter the raw crude greed of the man you seemed to glimpse something indescribably vague and ferocious.

The face of Dugald Shaw was controlled, but there was a slight rigidity in his quiet. A pulse beat rapidly in his cheek. All worldly good, all hope of place, power, independence, hung for him on the contents of the small flat package, wrapped in oil-silk, which Miss Browne was at this moment withdrawing from her pocket.

Only Cuthbert Vane, seated next to me, maintained without effort his serenity. For him the whole affair belonged in the category known as sporting, where a gentleman played his stakes and accepted with equanimity the issue.

The dead sailor's legacy consisted of a single sheet of time-stained paper. Two-thirds of the sheet was covered by a roughly-drawn sketch in faded ink, giving the outline of the island shores as we had seen them from the Rufus Smith. Here was the cove, with the name it bears in the Admiralty charts—Lantern Bay—written in, and a dotted line indicating the channel.

To all appearance the map was merely to give Hopperdown his directions for entering the cove. There was absolutely no mark upon it to show where the treasure had been buried.

Now for the writing on the sheet behind the map. It was in another hand than that which had written Lantern Bay across the face of the cove, and which, though labored, was precise and clear. This other was so uneven, wavy, and scrawly: "Be sed it is to a Cave with 2 months near by the grave of Bill Hallwell which was cut down for he saw to much. He said you can bring a boat to the cave at the half-tide but beware the turn for the pull is strong. He said to find the grave again look for the stone at the head marked B. H. and a Cross Bones. In the chest is gold Doubloons, a vast lot, also a silver Cross which he said leads to the grave for he said Bill walks and that's unlucky."

That was all. A fairly clear direction for any friend who had attended the bequest of Bill and knew where to look for the stone marked B. H. and a cross-bones, but to perfect strangers it was vague.

A blank look crept into the intent faces about the table. "It—if it don't happen, to say in more detail just precisely where that cave might be looked for?" inquired Mr. Tubbs hopefully.

"In more detail?" repeated Miss Browne, challengingly. "Pray, Mr. Tubbs, what further detail could be required?"

"A good deal more, I am afraid," remarked the Scotchman grimly. "Miss Browne waited upon him. In her cold eye a spark had kindled. And suddenly I had a new vision of her. I saw her no longer as the daughter of Aunt Jane, but as herself the heiress of Aunt Jane, with her treasure was an obsession. This map was her talisman, her way of escape from an existence which had been drab and dull enough, I dare say."

"Mr. Shaw"—Miss Browne gave the effect of drawing herself up in line of battle—"I feel that I must give expression to the thought which comes to me at this moment. It is this: that if the members of this party are to be chilled by carping doubts, the wave of enthusiasm which has flooded us thus far must inevitably recede, leaving us floundering on a barren shore. What can one weak woman—pardon my unflattering Jane—two women believe against the thought of failure firmly held by him to whom we looked to lead us boldly in our forward march? Mr. Shaw, this is no time for crawling earthworm antics. It is with the bold and sweeping glance of the eagle that we must survey this island, until the proper point discerned, we swoop with majestic flight upon our predestined goal!"

Miss Browne was somewhat exhausted by this effort, and paused for breath, whereupon Mr. Tubbs, anxious to retrieve his recent blunder, blazed with dexterity the opportunity. "I get you, Miss Browne, I get you," said Mr. Tubbs with conviction. "Victory ain't within the grasp of any individual that carries a heart like a cold panicle in his bosom. I may be father's man at thought than action, ma'am, but at present far from my native heath, which is the financial center of the country, but if I remember right, it was Ulysses, while the Aeneas was for the Greeks, while certain persons that was depended on talked de their tents. Miss Higgleby-Browne, you can count—count—on old H. H.!"

"Thank you, Mr. Tubbs," I think you" replied Miss Browne with emphasis. As for Aunt Jane, she gazed upon the noble countenance of Mr. Tubbs with such ecstatic admiration that her little nose quivered like a cat's paw.

What Women Talk About by Mrs. R. J. Adams

ON COLOR

As I was walking down the street recently, said the Man Who Travels, I saw a girl whose appearance was so striking that, hurried though I was, I could not help noticing her. And in that brief instant I read a story.

The girl was dressed in blue and if ever a color typified a girl, blue typified her. She was a blue woman.

Her features were hard, she looked cold and subtle, her very eyes seemed to radiate the blue of her hair. Instantly I drew my coat closer to my feet.

"Perhaps I was in a foolish, cynic mood," he continued, "but never did I see a girl whose appearance was so striking that, hurried though I was, I could not help noticing her. And in that brief instant I read a story."

What was considered one of the best games of baseball ever to be played on the local diamond was witnessed yesterday afternoon when the Escanaba team, coached by the late Marquette occupation, the team was one of the fastest and most exciting that the fans can recall. The score at the end of the game was 1 and 0 with Escanaba on the long end. Hundreds of local fans and members of the local team turned the whole square and sand to see Capt. Duane's team try to overthrow a sort of rivalry that had sprung up some time ago about the ball playing ability of both teams. The game was a double play took Escanaba early and...

Man Finds His Arm Is Broken One Week After the Accident

Harry Winchester employed at the Clayfield Garage is suffering from a fracture of the left arm which he received in an accident while working at the garage a little over a week ago. Winchester was suffering considerable pain from the time the accident happened but thinking the arm was only wrenched, took care of the injury himself, and continued to work with his right hand. On Saturday, however, the pain became so severe that he consulted a doctor who informed him that he had fractured his arm. The arm was immediately set and placed in a cast by the physician. Winchester will be away from his work for some time it is said.
