

AIRSHIP ZR-2 BREAKS IN TWO ON TRIAL TRIP

NAVY DEPARTMENT BELIEVES ONLY FEW AMERICANS WERE ABOARD WHEN SHIP EXPLODED

Only Five Said to Have Been Saved Out of 49 Persons Who Were on Ship for the Flight; Three Descend Upon One Parachute.

Accident Occurred Over Hull at 5:40 O'clock This Afternoon and Was Witnessed by Thousands of People Who Saw Ship Drop into the Humber River; Details of the Accident Are Lacking.

(By Associated Press)

LONDON, Aug. 24. The big dirigible airship ZR-2, purchased by the United States from Great Britain, sailing over the city of Hull today with 49 men on board, according to witnesses received here shortly after 6:00 o'clock this afternoon, broke in two and is a wreck in the Humber and only five of the 49 men were rescued.

The airship was passing over Hull when suddenly it was seen to break in two. Instantly there were terrific explosions and the ship burst into flames and commenced to descend. Three parachutes were seen to leave it.

Thousands of people in Hull watched the disaster which occurred at 5:40 o'clock. As the explosion occurred, the people rushed panic-stricken in all directions for fear of being enveloped by the wreckage which fell into the Humber right over Victoria Pier.

Burning fragments of the big airship, belching great clouds of smoke and fire, extended for hundreds of feet along the water. Eye-witnesses saw at least four men descend from the burning airship in parachutes and it is said that there were three saved who were all hanging to a single parachute.

The body of Lieut. Marcus Esterly, a radio officer, was recovered and taken to a mortuary. It is claimed that Capt. Sween, the British officer who commanded the ship, was unhurt.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24. Navy department officials being informed of the explosion of the dirigible ZR-2 in dispatches express the opinion that no more than 7 or 8 Americans were upon the craft. When the ZR-2 started on her flight from Howden, Tuesday, she had on board Commandeur Louis H. Mackfield, who was designated by the navy department to sail the ship to the United States, five other American officers, seven engineers and four riggers, in addition to the regular British crew.

Largest ever built.
The ZR-2 was the largest dirigible ever built, and the largest being built, 435 feet in diameter, 200 feet in length, and 100 feet in height. It had a total lifting power of 24 tons, 4000 horsepower, and a maximum altitude of 25,000 feet. It carried 49 passengers and 40 crew members.

List of Men in Crew.
The following is a list of those who were on board the airship at the time of the accident:

Commandeur Louis H. Mackfield, commanding officer, Washington, D. C.; Lieutenant Commander Valentine N. Black, senior engineer, Boston, Mass.; Lieut. Commander Commander Ernest C. Lester, radio officer, Boston, Mass.; Lieut. Commander R. E. Byrd, Jr., air mechanical officer, Washington, D. C.; Lieut. Commander R. C. McLaughlin, Boston, Mass.; Lieut. Commander Ralph H. Pennington, Boston, Mass.; Lieut. Commander Henry H. Byrd, radio officer, Clearwater, Fla.; Lieut. Commander John S. Lester, radio officer, Clearwater, Fla.; Lieut. Commander John S. Lester, radio officer, Clearwater, Fla.; Lieut. Commander John S. Lester, radio officer, Clearwater, Fla.

Better Ship Than R-31.
Mackfield, the ZR-2's commander, the Navy department said, was a more experienced pilot than the R-31's commander, Lieut. Commander Byrd. The R-31, however, had superior accommodations for the officers and crew, and was a more comfortable ship.

Watch Your Sleeve!

The sleeve's the thing—after you get through deciding about the skirt length. And a very critical thing it is, too—sleeves on many strange and capricious terms. The very best of these can be a best to the outgoing society fashion—the full straight sleeve, or the arm, some-times reaching to the wrist, sometimes just below the elbow. The latest sleeve is a combination of both—a sleeve that is gathered in like a bellows sleeve. Even the very tiny sleeve can be made—it has "ruffles" and ruffles. The thing is to watch your sleeve.

Admits Shooting

"Did you see anyone come out of the woods near here with a gun?" he asked.

"No, I came out with one myself a little while ago," Rowe replied.

"We are looking for the man who shot a boy here this afternoon," the officer continued.

"I shot him," was the answer.

When informed that he was under arrest, Rowe followed without resistance. He has since said little except to maintain that the occurrence was an accident, and to express regret that it happened.

It is expected that the case will come up for trial before Judge Plamington at the next term of circuit court, which convenes September 25.

What Women Talk About
by Mrs. R. J. Adams

WHY WOMEN FAIL IN BUSINESS

When a woman fails in business, and they sometimes do, just the same as men—it is usually due to one thing— inability to adapt herself to the routine of the work and the surroundings. Women in business ask the same salaries as men, yet they are not willing to accept it on the same terms. They think they can make mistakes and get them for taking which a man would immediately be asked to resign in any well-regulated business.

A woman employe usually thinks it is her right to take a few days off every now and again, without being required to give any explanation. She comes late whenever she feels like it because, well, everybody knows that it takes a girl a long time to get ready in the morning, and, well, the boss won't mind. What's a few minutes, hey, hey?

But the boss does mind, he really worries, the girl or woman whose desk is still closed and silent after the others are busting with activity.

Women think they cannot work unless the surroundings are specially prepared for them. If the temperature isn't just right if the sun isn't shining or if the door is not open at exactly the right angle, they cannot concentrate on their job. But a man works on a job that interests him, he does not know what is going on beyond his desk. He is heart and soul in the job and the temperature or the weather do not make any difference to him.

Women are used to being petted and given special privileges and consideration at home. But in business, everything is give and take, and those who cannot keep the pace and have been waiting for special favors and special legs, are soon left behind. All other things being equal, there is no reason why a woman cannot be as successful as a man in business if she will forget that she is a woman, and remember only that she is a work girl, being paid to turn out a specified amount of work in a given time.

TURKS LOOK NOT UPON UNVEILED TURKISH WOMEN

Cannot Conform to the New Custom of Anaholing the Women to Discard Their Veils.

ANASSIYA, Aug. 24.—Turkish men will refuse to look upon unveiled Turkish women when passing there in the streets, or on the roads, despite the attempt of the latter to adopt the dress of the former.

The custom of veiling has long been practiced in the extent that the face may be shown freely to the men of the village or of the party with whom the women are working or traveling. But as, for example, a stranger, whether Turk or foreigner, approaches, the veil is drawn. If the stranger is a Turk he looks straight ahead, as if the women were not present. If the European or American, they are best to catch a glimpse of the veils, they hurriedly pull their veils down, so only the eyes can be seen. The older the woman, the closer the veil is drawn.

As the veils are of thin cloth of grey or black, or white, but black or brown, cannot be had, the veils are often of coarse white cotton, and in the case of the wealthy women, the cloth may be a stiff heavy material which is fast as a sun helmet. Some times the headpiece drops to the waist or further, and can scarcely be distinguished from the loose flowing garments so characteristic of the Orient. If the garment is very poor, the veil and other garments may be but a coarse cloth of patches of an inferior material, and is not worn by any and all.

Among the latest war inventions is a gun with a velocity ranging from one to five miles a second, which may be developed to hurl a projectile of one ton from 200 to 300 miles. The weapon is noiseless and smokeless and fires without recoil.

JOHN S. ROWE, OF IRON MOUNTAIN, SLAYER OF YOUTH

Witness Examined; Prisoner Admits Shooting of Leo Cant, Aged 12.

IRON MOUNTAIN, Aug. 24.—John S. Rowe, slayer of 12-year-old Leo Cant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edmund Cant of Norway, was formally charged with murder yesterday by Prosecuting Attorney J. C. Koehn, after a hearing before Justice Molander. The hearing was postponed until Thursday to give Rowe an opportunity to examine witnesses.

Several witnesses were examined, including the boys who were with young Cant at the time, the officers who arrested Rowe, the boys' parents, the doctors who performed the operation in an attempt to save the lad's life, and Rowe himself. The general trend of the evidence, together with statements previously made by Rowe, forms a story as follows:

Rowe owned one of five garden patches located between the Wisconsin & Michigan and the Northwestern spur tracks on the north side of the city. All of them had been subject to the depredations of boys, young Cant being one of the offenders. Cucumber boxes, particularly were being stolen.

Boy Refuses Aid

The day of the shooting three of the boys were seated on the Wisconsin & Michigan tracks keeping watch, while two others were stealing cucumbers in one of the garden patches, not Rowe's. Seeing Rowe coming out of the nearby woods with a shotgun, the boys on the track shouted a warning and fled. Those in the garden followed, young Cant screamed, and apparently crawled up but succeeded in getting through the fence. Rowe came up and asked the lad his name, offering to take him home, but that Cant refused to accept assistance or to disclose his identity.

When Cant reached home, he was rushed to the hospital, where the ball was extracted. It was found that one of the charges of buckshot had entered the lower part of his back, taking an upward course, and almost coming out through the abdomen. An operation made in an attempt to save his life proved in vain, and he died the following day. Later, his father found another buckshot imbedded in a fence post at the spot where, his son had attempted to crawl through when he was shot.

Rowe Is Depressed

Throughout the hearing, Rowe exhibited extreme depression. He maintained that he only shot to scare the boys, and had no intention of hitting them. Confident parent by his father, and himself, as well as the owners of adjoining gardens, had been fruitless in stopping the depredations, he said.

While the courtroom was packed to the doors during the hearing, there was no real hostility, nor indication of violence. Immediately following the shooting, Chief of Police Margaret Hatzberg thought it wise to remove the prisoner to the county jail at Iron Mountain.

The chief's story showed that Rowe made an attempt to arrest. While the chief, accompanied by Sheriff Farrell, was trying to break the owner of the garden patches, an attempt to find out who did the shooting, he accosted Rowe, who was sitting at the

Melted Snow to Make Cement in National Park

YELLOWSTONE PARK, Aug. 24.—Melted snow in Yellowstone is being used to make cement for the new road in the National Park. The National Park Service in the construction of a new road through and across the top of Mount Washburn here, installed more than 1000 feet above the sea level, the building of the picturesque stone structure presented a water problem that threatened to stop the engineers. They had upon using artificial means of melting snow but, recently, the summer engineer has melted it so rapidly that work has had to be suspended to keep it from running out. New pumps stations and community houses to distribute water, also being built by the landscape architect.

AN OPINION FROM JAPAN

Robert Young, editor of the Japan Chronicle, which voices the opinions of the British colony in Japan, denounces the new treaty...

The cannot help wondering why the treaty should be renewed, as all the conditions it was intended to meet have disappeared...

It may satisfy the national vanity of Japan to be allied to one of the great powers, but the alliance is not of the slightest benefit to Great Britain...

That there is some truth in the statement that the treaty has aroused suspicion in America is undoubted, although by the terms of the treaty Great Britain would be absolved from lending aid to Japan...

OF THE MAKING OF NEWSPAPERS

The figures given out by the census bureau on newspapers and their circulation when compared with the figures of twenty years ago show the remarkable fact that while the number of daily newspapers in the country has increased only about ten per cent...

The mortality among daily newspapers is well known to have been large in recent years, but this is evidently not due to any falling off in the desire of American people to read. The high cost of everything that goes into a newspaper during the war period was the real reason for the disappearance of many newspapers...

The older the country grows, the more completely established newspapers fill the field. Nobody, except perhaps a newspaper genius, can now start a great newspaper with a press, a few cases of type, a little paper and a kind pencil, but that was really all that was needed when many of the greatest newspapers in the United States had their beginnings.

Last year the daily newspapers of the United States had, on the enormous total of 11,250,000,000 copies, and to that must be added more than 4,000,000,000 copies of other periodicals, a very large part of which were country weeklies and semi-weeklies.

No other country reads as many newspapers as the United States. When the comparison was last made this country had about two-fifths of all the newspapers in the world, and this great total was largely due to the multitude of little papers, each representing its own home town and serving its own little community...

ASSAULT AND BATTERY APPROVED

Judge Fleming, of Kansas City, has ruled that a jealous husband has a right to "beat up" the other man as often as he sees fit. "Beat him up every time you see him speaking to your wife," said the judge...

This has the Kansas City municipal court given its sanction to men taking the law into their own hands in such cases, and constituting themselves both judge and executioner. That this will lead to unwarrented breaches of the peace is undoubted, for a jealous man is not at all qualified to judge his own case...

'PLAIN ENGLISH' AT CONFERENCE

Paris newspapers are excited because French will not be the official language at the Washington disarmament conference. The meeting will speak and write in English.

Diplomats used to do everything in Latin. Then Latin went into cold storage and French took its place. That's because it permits finer shades of meaning.

Which is exactly what isn't wanted at the conference. The sessions should be open and public, with no secrecy. The delegates should call a spade a spade.

"Throw your gun away and I'll do the same!" That's the keynote of disarmament. Plain English expresses it. No fancy talk is necessary.

SPANISH DOUBLOONS By CAMILLA KENTON

Copyright, The Radio World Company (Continued from Yesterday) CHAPTER XX

The Bishop's Chest

We waited nine days for the coming of the Bishop Smith. During that time an episode occurred as a result of which I sat one morning by myself on the rocks beside the sloop, on which such ardent hopes had been centered...

"You mean the chest—the chest that held the Spanish doubloons—that lies under the sand in the ship?" "Exactly. And now I shall know whether you are the true prince of the isle, because he always succeeds in the trials he undertakes to win the princess."

"I was very late, such a fine as I am but I had to go to my death in the cave. One could go and return two days along the coast, without climbing the steep path up the side. It was not long before Dougal was back again with speed and pride. The fore of the sloop, snatched from the rain roof, and felt in every crevice. The crown was small and the chest large. I waited with the priest of proprietorship the white cross which the steel-studded walls of the sea had left behind it."

"At length, kneeling before it, I raised with an effort the heavy lid. Empty, of course—no more doubloons. But oh, Dougal, had ever a crown such a wonderful bride's chest as this?" "What's wrong?" "Nothing, only there is a crack in the bottom, running all the way along where it joins the side."

"Warped a bit, I suppose. No matter, it can be easily repaired—crack! I say, lassie, look here!" Under the pressure of Dougal's fingers the flap of the chest was springing upward on an invisible hinge. Between it and the true bottom was a space of about three inches in depth. It seemed to be filled with a layer of yellow cotton-wool.

For a long moment we held our breath, gazing at each other with eyes which asked the same question. Then Dougal lifted a corner of the sheet of cotton and plucked it away. At once all the hues of the rainbow seemed to be flashing and sparkling before us. Brights were there like great drops of the blood that the chest and its treasure had sprung from the hearts of men; sapphires, interspersing the blue of the tropic sky; emeralds, green as the island verdure; pearls, white as the milk of the coconuts and softly lustrous as the phosphorescent foam which breaks on the beach in the darkness. And there were diamonds that caught gleams of all the other beauty, and they mounted them with a most blessed splendor.

Dougal Shaw Took Me in His Arms by the forehead and gleefully with surprise, or burst my stomach and heartbreak under the waters of the cave. And then Dougal Shaw took me in his arms. By and by he said suddenly, 'Beloved, I had no right to ask you to share such a life as mine must be—the life of a poor sailor.' At this I raised my head from its nestling-place and laughed. 'Ask me? Silly, I asked you! Of course you could have refused me, but I depended on your not having the courage.' 'And indeed that is a charge I'll not allow—that I am so little of a man as to let my courting be done for me. No, no, it was my love compelling you that made you speak the words you did—the love of a selfish man who should have thought only of shielding you from the hardships of such a wandering, homeless life as mine.' 'Well, heaven reward you for your selfishness,' I said sulkily. 'I am thankful you were not so noble as to let me throw myself at your head in vain. I have been doing it for ever so long, in fact, but it is such a thick Scotch head that I dare say I made no impression.' 'Sweet lass! You'll pay for that—oh, Virginia, if I had only something to offer you!' 'You can offer me something that I want very much, if you will, and at no cost but your strong right arm.' 'It is an arm which is at your service for life—but what am I to do with it now?' And indeed I think it is very well employed at this moment."

And there were diamonds that caught gleams of all the other beauty, and they mounted them with a most blessed splendor.

There were nine heavy bracelets, all jeweled; twenty three rings, eight of them for the hand of a man. Some of these rings contained the finest of the diamonds, except for three splendid amethysts. There were hundreds of elaborate old-fashioned earrings, two royal-like chains of gold adorned with jewels at intervals, and several jeweled lockets. There was a solid gold snuff-box, engraved with a coat of arms and ornamented with seventeen fine emeralds. There were, besides the three diamonds, eighty-two amethysts, enough them, wrapped by itself in cotton, a ruby of extraordinary size and luster. And there was a sort of coronet or tiara, seven all over with clear white brilliants.

Quest! Yes, for whether or not there were an infection of piracy in the very air of the island, so that to seize with the high hand, to hold with the iron grasp, seemed the law of life, we decided without a qualm against the surrender of our treasure-trove to its rightful owners. Technical only; for one felt that, in essence, all talk of ownership by this man or that had long ago become idle. Fate had held the treasure in fee to give or to withhold. Senior Gonzalez had had his chance at the chest, and he had missed the secret of the hidden hoard, had left it to be forgotten, under the sand until in some tropic storm it should be engulfed by the waters of the cove. THE CROOKED GIANT

When you darken your hair with Sage Tea and Sulphur, no one can tell because it's done so naturally, an evening's preparation. This mixture, though, at home is messy and troublesome. At little cost you can buy at any drug store the ready-to-use preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients called 'Wynia's Sage and Sulphur Compound.' You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning all gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dyed, glossy and luxuriant. Gray, faded hair, though no disgrace, is a sign of old age, and as we all desire a youthful and attractive appearance, get busy at once with Wynia's Sage and Sulphur Compound and look years younger. This ready-to-use preparation is a delightful toilet requisite and not a medicine. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

No preparation in France is so famous as this. After the machine has served its purpose, it is a gratification of order.

SAGE TEA DARKENS HAIR TO ANY SHADE

Don't Stay Gray! Here's an Old-time Remedy that Anybody can Apply.

The use of Sage Tea Sulfur for restorative faded, gray hair to its natural color dates back to grandmother's time. Sage Tea Sulfur is a natural product of the Sage and Sulfur Compound. You will get this famous old preparation, improved by the addition of other ingredients, which are depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair.

Apply to the hair as naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dip your sponge or soft brush with it and draw it through your hair, taking care to stand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, it becomes beautifully dark and glossy.

Write to Sage and Sulfur Compound for those who desire a more youthful appearance. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

Kalamazoo Young Man Finds Wedded Life More Economical Than Single

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 21—The old saying that two can live as cheaply as one has been disproved in recent years by a young man of Kalamazoo.

QUAINT CUSTOMS

Opportunities for the display of home-made goods on the part of the local and about have not existed since in old days. No job more from a point of view could rival in value the fair of the Procession of the Minutemen which is a matter of actual history in Escanaba.

The play, the greatest of modern productions, were the occasion of all honors and criminals being given holidays. A white glove socially was a mark of the market place was a sign that they were immune from arrest, penalty or punishment for the crime.

It was during a fair that Randolph B. Randolph, East of Chicago, was arrested in his hotel by the unnamed man. When news of it came to the market place, the constable called to the market place.

At the time of their approach, the West have one look and fled. The Earl of Chester was so grateful and so pleased that he commanded all those rogues, beggars, murderers, debtors and other criminals to be turned into a military company forever with Hugh Dunbar as their captain and with the constables as their head.

So quickly during the fair they appeared at the Eastgate Street for a crowd of people from the East believed they were on marching with banners unfurled about the town.

MENOMINEE, Aug. 23—Another development in the water front case of Capt. John J. Shanahan, who was arrested yesterday morning when Attorney Shanahan of Charlevoix, Mich., in a letter to District Attorney Murphy informed him that he was representing Captain John J. Attorney Shanahan informed Attorney Shanahan that all his dealings in the case had been with Attorney Murphy of Marquette, who was representing Capt. New developments in the case are expected to occur in a very short time and what they will be are not for publication at this time.
