Heating the Home

AS new uses for petroleum products are developed, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) immediately organizes its distribution system to supply the demand, whenever and wherever it may arise.

For example, during the past two or three years a number of devices which substitute kerosene for coal in heating the home have been perfected and put on the market.

A large number of these burners have been installed in the territory served by this Company. The result has been a heavy demand for Perfection Kerosene, which has proved to be an ideal fuel.

To meet this demand for Perfection Kerosene, the Standard Oil Company (Indiana) has so arranged its distribution system as to be able to deliver to patrons Perfection Kerosene for heating purposes in any quantity which may be desired.

The bigness and efficiency of this organization enables you to adopt kerosene as a fuel for heating your home, with complete assurance that you always will be able to get this fuel in such quantities as you may require, whenever and wherever you may need it.

Thus does a big company, conscious of its responsibility to the public, and to its 19,478 stockholders, quickly adapt its organization to changing conditions.

GERMAN HARBOR OF KIEL SHOWS NO ACTIVITY

Was Once Great Naval Base, But Is Now Deserted and Lonesome.

Naval Schools, Are Closed for Country Without Navy Needs No Seamen to Man Ships.

(By Associated Press)

KIEL, Aug. 25.—German-Americans who frequent the tobacconists in Berlin can often be heard remarking that Germany has won the war.

If they were to visit Kiel and other German naval bases they would probably get a decidedly different impression. Nothing could be more complete than the desolation which hovers over Kiel harbor, formerly the port of the German navy and probably the best harbor in all Europe.

The great ships, which created most of the craft for the German navy are silent. Rusty sheds mark the scene of former activity. Idle, deserted docks stand as sad reminders of days when Kiel was the point to which all German eyes, and in fact all the eyes of Europe, were directed.

All machinery which the Allies considered as useful for war purposes has been dismantled. Floating docks, cranes and other expensive equipment have been moved away to recompense Germany's enemies for the damage done by U-boat submarines.

In normal times, Kiel had 50,000 naval officers, sailors and employees in the harbor all the time. Now the naval personnel is less than 1,000. The city, which formerly had a population of 250,000 has lost all of its great government payroll and one-fifth of its population.

Port Palkenstein and the other harbors which covered the Baltic entrance to the Kaiser William Canal have reduced to piles of crumpled concrete and twisted steel. Their great guns have been saved into bits and pitched into scrap heaps.

The naval academy is closed. An officer without a navy has no use for more naval officers. The attendance at the university has dwindled. The death of Prince Henry, overlooking the naval harbor, has been taken over by the workmen for a club, and there are no workshops in the world's longest waterway where the Kaiser Emperor William used to review his navy with pomp.

It was here that the Kaiser of the German navy lay out behind torpedoes during most of the war. At present there are only two nations, one teaching at the imperial naval dock. These were so far out of date that the English and French didn't think it was necessary to scrap them, and heaped to offer such craft to any of the nations which had helped win the war.

Small commercial shipyards are operating and the commercial harbor still has a little business.

The Kiel Canal is still quite active but Kiel derives little benefit from the business passing thru the canal, and cannot receive materially with exchange conditions become such that it can again buy lumber from the Scandinavian countries and resume its importance as a lumber depot for Central Europe.

NEW AUTO FUEL CUTS THE COST IN HALF IS CLAIMED

Italian Chemist Makes New Discovery which He Claims will Succeed Gasoline as Fuel.

ROME, Aug. 25.—Through the invention of a gas generating mixture, composed of alcohol and a sulphur carbon combination, the cost of operating automobiles and all internal combustion motors can be reduced one-half, according to the claims of Engineer Sesti, who after exhaustive experiments under the auspices of the Italian government has just completed a report on the possibilities of the new combustion.

The use of the new gas generating mixture pre-supposes the employment of a special kind of carburetor, which Sesti has evolved. The experiments have been in progress over a period of almost three years, and were begun with a special view of lessening the cost of automobile fuel.

The new fuel has a density greater than that of gasoline. The ratio of 225 to 120. It is urged that the adoption of the fuel will considerably lessen the importations of foreign gasoline. Practically all the raw materials necessary for the new fuel can be found in Italy.

The inventor claims that the exhaust gas is less objectionable to the lungs than the fumes of gasoline. The use of crude alcohol to the proportion of 70 percent is employed in the fuel, while the remaining 30 percent is taken up by the sulphur carbon combination.

BRITISH AID WAS RESPONSIBLE FOR CHICAGO LIBRARY

Event Will Be Commemorated During the 50th Anniversary of the Great Chicago Fire.

CHICAGO, Aug. 25.—When Chicago this fall observes the 50th anniversary of the great fire that destroyed this city, it will recall that its public library, now the second largest in the world, was born in that conflagration. The library owes its start to British sympathy for the stricken city which found its expression in books.

The prime mover in England was Thomas Hughes, author of "Tom Brown's School Days." His proposal resulted in 12,000 volumes being sent from Great Britain. The children's room in the library is called the "Thomas Hughes Room."

consideration, and very powerfully, affected the different branches of the English race."

The appeal was at once taken by the British press. A noted publisher at Leipzig began the collection of books in Germany. A thousand volumes were sent by the Germans.

This activity abroad led the citizens of Chicago to bestir themselves. Hughes and his associates took it for granted that Chicago had had a public library and that it had been destroyed. They supposed they were helping to replace it. There had, however, been none of this sort before.

Chicago began to take the necessary steps to start a library. On April 3, 1872 six months after the fire, the city council passed an ordinance for a free city library. The city then got a law through the legislature authorizing a library tax.

After its fearful experience, Chicago felt no place would be proper to receive the precious books from abroad except one that was thoroughly fire-proof. The only fire-proof thing left in the city was an abandoned iron water tank that had served as a reservoir for the south side. It was 50 feet in diameter and 30 feet high. It was roofed over, a hole cut in the side for a door, shelves built around its curving sides, and turned into a library. There during 1872 and 1873, 12,000 volumes received from English contributors and elsewhere were stored, and in May, 1874, the library proper was opened.

The British contributions included autographed works of Gladstone, Herbert Spencer, John Stuart Mill, Herriot, Carlyle, Ruskin, Huxley, John Bright, Lyell, Freeman and Russett. Lady Trevelyan, sister of Macaulay, autographed a set of his works, she had edited. The British government sent 1,000 volumes, including a calendar of state papers with a copy of the "Domesday Book." Oxford University bought several thousand volumes with its best binding, and Cambridge University and Great Britain publishers contributed liberally. The British patent office put the Chicago library on its mailing list and is still sending its publications.

A number of the autographed volumes have been preserved in a memorial collection. Out of this start the Chicago public library has grown to a collection of 1,100,000 volumes. Its annual circulation is 8,000,000, which places it at the head of any library in England.

The Tire Sensation of 1921

A Cord Puncture-proof Pneumatic Automobile Tire has been Perfected

THIS will be good news to motorists who base their tire purchases upon satisfactory service.

It is well-known that the Lee Tire & Rubber Company, makers of the only successful puncture-proof pneumatic tire, have been working to incorporate their steel disc system of protection into the cord tire.

During two years of scientific factory and road tests, this sensational new tire has proven out in an amazing manner.

In addition to being the equal of any other tire on the market in its cord construction, the Lee Puncture-proof Cord has the added feature of immunity from puncture.

So thoroughly has the Lee Cord Puncture-proof proven its ability to stand up under the most unfavorable tests that the company makes a sweeping cash-refund guarantee against puncture.

This is in addition to the unusually liberal mileage guarantee carried by all Lee Tires.

Lee Cord Puncture-proofs on loaded cars have been run repeatedly over spiked boards, roads strewn with tacks, nails and broken glass.

In every instance Lee Cord Puncture-proof tires have triumphed—shown themselves worthy of their name and reputation.

Tire experts hail the Lee Cord Puncture-proof as the climax of tire manufacture—at last the perfect tire—which in material-quality and performance—whether on light or heavy passenger car, or business car, delivery car, light or heavy truck—makes good.

No matter what your service, the Lee Line of Pneumatic offers a tire for every purpose. Lee Fabric Tires, Lee Cords, Lee Puncture-proof Fabrics and—greatest of all—Lee Cord Puncture-proofs—the tire sensation of 1921.

Three layers of case-hardened steel discs, individually imbedded in pure rubber, built into every Lee Puncture-proof Cord tire protect inner-tube and carcass, and enable it to live up to its name.

BASIC INDUSTRY TURNS CORNER

The following optimistic statement was written last week by J. Barton Nealey, metal trades editor of the New York Commercial:

Steel, the barometric industry, has at last turned the corner and is now gaining steadily. This long-delayed and long-hoped-for change came about the middle of July, after the industry had sounded the depths of the slough of despond and when stagnation ruled to an extent never before experienced or thought possible.

Steel mills were turning out less than 20 per cent of their rated capacity and furnaces everywhere were cold and their crews scattered to the four winds. The 1920 bubble burst, despite frantic efforts to keep it inflated, and the greatest industrial collapse of modern times was on. Today men have stooped to pick up the fragments of their house of cards and build again, but of real material this time. The process of deflation is well along, and most, if not all, the steel mills are operating at a loss in a mighty effort to meet the low-price demands of the buying public on the one hand, and the high wages and freight rates demanded by labor and the railroads on the other.

Since the middle of July there has been an increase in demand—not from a single interest, as happened twice before this year only to flatten out again later, but from a number of diversified interests, and simultaneously. Those most prominent in the buying movement are the railroads, railroad equipment shops, automobile and other manufacturers, builders, tank shops and municipalities. The movement has been slow but sure—small but basic in nature. Steel mills have increased their rate of operation and furnaces have been re-lighted.

The improvement is real and not physiological this time. It is due to two things—increased confidence on the part of the buyers and the absorption of stocks that have overhung the market like a pall since the beginning of the business depression, and which have diverted a large part of the current demand for steel products. This demand is now diverted to steel mills and it is the growing opinion that the average rate of operation of the mills will be thereby increased to from 35 to 45 per cent before fall from this source alone. The steel industry has been sub-normal when compared to general business for some time, and with this depressing factor removed the normal relation is about to be re-established.

HOW MUCH DOES IT DO?

We sometimes wonder just how much is accomplished for good by the professional reformer. Undoubtedly it has a stimulating effect and in the right direction, when a sincere well-wisher of a community takes it upon himself or herself to speak plainly about existing evils. And we are willing to class Mrs. Sharples as a sincere well-wisher, and to thank her for pointing out some of our defects. She comes here under respectable auspices and we do our part, as a newspaper, by giving her the publicity without which she could do little or nothing.

In allying ourselves with her in this manner, then, we are sort of accessory after the fact, as it were, and this is our excuse, if an excuse be needed, for wondering whether, after all, it does much good. There is such a thing, it is certain, as rubbing people the wrong way, and without the slightest doubt one of the greatest assets under the sun, when one is dealing with human beings, is tact. From comments which are rather off-repeated, it would seem that Mrs. Sharples has rubbed a lot of people the wrong way and has shown herself more or less tactless. Not that we would advise tact as a cardinal virtue in a campaigner intent on cleaning out a red light district. A bludgeon, wielded by a strong arm, would at first thought seem more apropos.

But how, actually, is a thing of this sort to be accomplished? Certainly not by words alone, or even by antagonizing those who are officially entrusted with enforcement of the law. Mrs. Sharples is doing a good deal in calling attention to existing evils if her remarks convince the public of their truth and arouse to action. Time will tell.

As to her tirades against modern dress and dancing, and that sort of thing, the majority, we feel, cannot take them very seriously. Reformers have ranted against the minute, and every dance down through the tango to the fox-trot, and dress has been a favorite target since Eve first fixed up a fig leaf.

If we are as bad as she paints us, it is high time that we knew it, and we are much obliged to the stranger that sees our shortcomings and we should feel thankful to her. There should be no possible doubt as to her sincerity, however, and it would seem that certain specific charges should be backed up with conclusive and convincing proof.

The Lemme-Trotzky combination has once more reversed itself. After nationalizing land in Russia it is now prepared to sell the land it has confiscated to the former owners. It is not explained whether the nationalization theory was found to be unworkable or if this is just a plain ordinary hold-up.

The Port Huron chamber of commerce proposes purchasing steamers to resume the route to Mackinaw. A simpler method would be to induce congress to modify the LaFollette seaman's act. The existing companies would then be able to restore their steamers to the route.

The shipping board is asking congress for $125,000,000 to meet deficits for the next five months. If somebody would only take a few hundred of the worst of those ships out and sink them what a relief it would be to the treasury.

The census bureau announces that the value of farm lands and buildings in Michigan has increased over $500,000,000 in the last ten years. Like the late Warren Hastings the assessors must feel surprised at their own moderation.

The third day of the third month in Japan is the day of all young men. It corresponds with the fifteenth of April according to our calendar, and is the date set for coronation as far as possible with the flowering of the sakaki tree, which corresponds with our peach tree in general character and the color of the blossoms.

All of Japan goes in holiday attire on that day. The chambers of state in each household is humbly decorated, and transformed into a house of dolls, gifts of which are sent to all the daughters of every household from far and near. It is said that no rare gift exhibits in the occasion of more treasures being displayed in the houses of wealth and culture.

Fricolets, screens, insect with pearls and kale are strewn about, with lavish embroideries and rare carvings, and exceptions are held from houses to houses. The gifts of all the succeeding years to the household are kept and exhibited on this day, the dolls of the mother and grandmother, and sometimes of many generations being included.

The children prepare an elaborate banquet of dainty foods which is served to the dolls in a mock ceremony, and later to the grown people.

How Do Children Learn Best? The Answer Is Sought

(By Associated Press) PARIS, Aug. 25.—Whether children learn better from written texts or oral lectures is a question under investigation in the college of Paris.

A technical committee of the League of Mental Hygiene has set to work in a boys' school to study the processes of teaching and learning.

Pedagogical experts agree that some persons' brains receive deeper impressions by the sense of hearing and others by the sense of sight. The committee proposes to seek some method of education that will take advantage of these faculties and possibly also try to find some way to develop the

Giant Mountain Slowly Going Out of Sight

VIENNA, Aug. 25.—The geological break of a great mountain disintegrating so fast that it is disappearing day by day is a thing that ordinarily takes thousands of years—if occurring in the Alps region.

The Ansee-Santling, rising over 5,000 feet, is simply collapsing. Its great cones and pyramids of rock are crumbling and tumbling as it underlies by erosion the forest that clothed the slopes. The fall is more slowly and steadily downward, plugging into the valleys and the top creper moves with them.

Over three and three-quarter miles of territory are involved in the movement and hundreds of engineers view the conical peaks from opposite slopes. The phenomenon has been in progress for nearly a year with gradually increasing acceleration.

One scientific explanation is the presence of an abnormal quantity of water in the chalky limestone core of the mountain causing the collapse of great caverns and the slipping of strata.

Monument for the Inventor of Food Famous Over Sea

(By Associated Press) PARIS, Aug. 25.—A committee has been formed at Strasbourg for the erection of a monument to the memory of the inventor of pate de foies gras (that delicious liver) with Périgord truffles. His name was Closé and he was cook to the Marshal de Soubise.

That some gratitude is due from the ancient city is shown by the fact that the liver and truffle delicacy brought 20,000,000 francs a year to it before the war.

IMMIGRATION TO BE INSPECTED BEFORE LEAVING

United States Immigration Bureau Would Establish Offices to Save Much Trouble.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The transfer to foreign parts of a part of the machinery of the Bureau of Immigration by Chairman Johnson of the House Immigration Committee, will obviate turning back hundreds of immigrants arriving at ports who have sold their homes to come to America, Secretary Davis said in a statement made public today.

The measure proposes to maintain two agents at each of the principal ports abroad, one a member of the public health service and one from the immigration bureau. The selection of immigrants would operate through the visa system, which requires the immigrant to procure from his government a passport which must be viced by an American consular officer before he can embark for the United States. This visa, it is proposed, would be granted only after inspection by the immigrant and health inspectors.

At present, the secretary of labor said, the immigrant has no assurance that he will be permitted to land in this country. Many cases of a political nature are appealed to the secretary daily.

Recently a child of two years was ordered deported in custody of his mother on account of illegality of the ship. The family had sailed for years, looking forward to life in the United States, and had sold all they had at a sacrifice in order to become citizens.

"The family thus separated," Secretary Davis said, "must cease to be a happy family, must go back to Poland, whence they came to industry and wait, for they had used their money from the sale of their possessions in coming to the country."

Other cases, the secretary said, would be humorous if they were not so pathetic.

"A certain Hebrew merchant," he said, "sent his brother pocket money and offered him $20 a week in his store. The money money to be returned a little at a time. Upon arrival, the immigrant testified that his brother had sent him money and professed him a job. Technically this was a violation of the contract labor law, and the brother denied that he had advanced the money and offered the immigrant a job. Whereupon the immigrant brother became indignant and declared in effect that he had been 'double crossed'—little knowing that he was signing his warrant for deportation."

The difficulty, in many cases, works a hardship, the secretary said, but maintenance of agents abroad can prevent much suffering due to ignorance of the law.
