YANKS NEED BUT TWO MORE

GIANTS GO DOWN TO DEFEAT TODAY BY A SCORE OF 3 TO 1 AT THE HANDS OF THE YANKS

Waite Hoyt, the Schoolboy Pitcher, Again Takes the National League Pennant Winners Into Camp.

'Babe' Ruth Was in the Game and Showed That He Was Suffering From Injury to Arm—Meusel a Hero by His Lightning Throws.

POLITICIAN'S, OCT. 10. The Yankees stabled the bar of defeat in the Giants' eyes this afternoon and walked off the field with the third victory of the American League champions. The score was 3 to 1.

The Yankee heroes who aided in toppling the Giants were Waite Hoyt, who pitched the second win over the National League pennant winners, and Bob Meusel, whose steel whip broke up the two batting lines of the Giants by lightning throws.

'Babe' Ruth was in the game but it could be seen by all that he was not running like a horse and that he was suffering to no little degree from his arm and, while the crowd was with him, he was not able to duplicate the home run of yesterday.

A great crowd, awaiting outside the entrance to the Yankee club house to extend the honors to Waite Hoyt and Bob Meusel and both players were trying to find some means to get away from the club grounds to their hotels, without the demonstration that they were abnormal was awaiting them.

YANKS	0 1 2 0 0 0 0 3	6 1

Batteries: Yankees—Hoyt and Schang; Giants—Neft and Smith.

SUNDAY'S GAME		R. H. E.
GIANTS	0 0 0 0 0 0 3 1	4 9 1
YANKS	0 0 0 1 1 0 0 1	2 7 1

Batteries: Giants—Douglas and Snyder; Yankees—Mays and Schang.

Each team has won three games and the home winning streak goes on to the next five will be the winner of the pennant.

The Yankees entered in the club house today that they were victorious in their battle. We should expect and just to carry on in the victory, said Meusel, the Yankee third baseman.

'Babe' Ruth said he would play a few more unless injury were developing to his right arm, which had been sore since he was hit by a ball from Tom Burns on Saturday.

The Giants are riding high in the saddle, one and all declaring they have the shot at victory in the hands of the Yankee ace, Waite Hoyt, and only Hoyt and the Yankees have a chance to win today.

MAIL BAGS IN TRUNK AN AID TO THE POLICE

Detroit Officials Discover Trunk Containing Rifled Letters. Mutilated Mail Pouches Are Also Found; Police Believe Foreigners Are Guilty.

DETROIT, Oct. 10. While federal agents are questioning a man giving the name of Bob Cunningham, obtained in Toledo on suspicion of being connected with the mail robbery by a late last Friday, police today instituted a search of all foreign quarters of the city for the hand.

The first clue to the identity of the bandit was obtained yesterday when a trunk containing mutilated mail pouches and rifled envelopes were found in an alley. Finger prints taken from the envelopes and trunk were expected to aid the officers.

The trunk in which the mail bags were found were turned over to the local authorities today after it had been carefully examined by the police. There was no mark of identification on it but from the year of the city in which it was found, the officers say they are convinced the hold up was the work of foreigners.

All the mail pouches had been clipped fully opened, the men overhauling them of value.

GETS THREE YEARS FOR AIDING PRISON ESCAPE

MANTOWOC, Wis.—On the day he would have been released from the county jail where he spent a year for non-support of his wife and the taking of an automobile, Roy Bishop, 23, was sentenced to three years in the state prison after pleading guilty to the charge of assisting a fellow prisoner to escape last February. When Lawrence O'Donnell, head of a burglar gang, which operated here for several weeks last winter, broke jail on the night of Feb. 25, it was at first thought that he had received aid from the outside. But that theory was abandoned when it was known that Bishop had a key to the jail office building a trusty employed about the grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. F. T. Noyes, minister of the Methodist church, were arrested today.

Madariaga

He will endure through the ages as a great character, this cattle baron of the Argentine whom they called the Centaur because of the way he sat his horse.

A vigorous personality and, if you will, predatory and tyrannical over the thousands who worked his lands. But colorful: full-blooded and lusty and blunt-spoken.

You will remember Madariaga vividly: because of these things, and because he first takes the center of the stage in the most astounding drama the motion picture has achieved:

The FOUR HORSEMEN of the APOCALYPSE

from the novel by Vicente Blasco Ibanez adapted by June Mathis

A REX INGRAM PRODUCTION

It is no pale pastel of life, no timid miniature. The story is as vital and instinctively courageous as Madariaga himself. It has sweep and power and color. Ibanez, ever a writer of bold certainty, painted this, his biggest canvas, with an inspired surety transcendental even to himself.

GOVERNMENT OF GERMANY PLANS A NEW CRUSADE

This Time They Will Make an Effort to End All Gambling Which Has Become a Real Menace.

(By Associated Press)
BERLIN, Oct. 10.—The government is trying to halt a gambling fever which has been sweeping Germany for many months and which authorities are estimated to spread at a surprising rate.

Deeply hundreds of arrests, the confiscation of millions of marks, scattering of scores of persons to jail and the imposition of heavy fines.

Close upon the heels of the gambling and speculation mania which appeared among the people of all classes came a horde of stock market manipulators, race track toufs, bucket shop proprietors and organizers of get-rich-quick betting associations. Many of these with small sums subscribed by working men and women, shortly were able to open luxurious gambling houses.

been unusually successful, offered the cronies gamblers and promoters a chance which they promptly took advantage of and it is known billions of marks were wagered on alleged tips. Some of these promoters became widely known as reliable "informants" and made so much money for their clients that they became popular idols.

APPROACHING PERIL

Biologists are expressing alarm about "how the United States is going to feed itself when its population reaches 1,000,000,000." That, according to Prof. E. M. East, may come "within the span of life of the grandchildren of persons now living."

The peril is world-wide. Population of the earth now is about 1,700,000,000, and increasing about 16,000,000 a year. One American to 16 others.

Van Buren Thorne, medical scientist, writes a book, "The Control of Life." In it he gives these figures on total population of Europe: 1840, 187,000,000; 1850, 200,000,000; 1900, 400,000,000. At that rate of increase, it would seem to be only a matter of time until Europe will be so thickly populated that every one will have to stand up when he sleeps, no room to lie down.

The wave of alarm about rapidly increasing population, that now is vibrating through the scientific world, would please old Malthus, English economist who died in 1834. Malthus set loose a theory (the Malthusian doctrine), that population at all times tends to outrun subsistence. In other words, that people multiply faster than they can be fed, and that famines and wars are necessary to keep population within bounds.

England, however, reports that she has more people than in 1914, despite the big death toll of the war.

Famines and wars kill many, but the tendency is for population to increase yearly. That must be a sticker for the people who believe the fall of us are threatened, that we have lived before on earth. Since population is bigger now than in the past, when was the excess being 200 years ago?

Population does not increase faster than the ability to derive a living from the soil. Europe's big increase from 1800 to 1900 was taken care of by the machine age—mass production. Similar advancement will always be the case. Texas, according to agricultural experts could be made to grow enough to feed all of the people now living on earth.

Steadily we are getting more and more out of an acre. If the population becomes seriously large, all food will be grown in hothouses, further Luther Burbanks showing out descendants how to raise and harvest a wheat crop in a few weeks or even days.

FIFTEEN COUNTIES; SEVEN MEN

Leo Grove, the prohibition enforcement officer for this district, is not inclined to gloat over the increase of his force by three operatives. It will help some, but, as Mr. Grove suggests, the increase would have had to have been a much greater one to give him an adequate force. He has a clerk and five operatives with which to cover fifteen counties in a region of magnificent distances. He can only hit the high spots here and there. Detained surveillance of the hold of possible violators is impossible. A force several times the size of the one at his command would be no more than sufficient.

But no doubt Michigan has been given its full share of the operatives that can be hired with the congressional appropriation for prohibition enforcement. This appropriation is a mere fraction of the amount that would be necessary to secure real enforcement. But congress would not contemplate provision of the sum actually needed. It would be too staggering.

If there is to be effective enforcement much will have to depend on the zeal in assisting the federal officials of state, county, and city police officials. In the degree of zeal shown by these officials there is wide variation. Here and there they are active and effective. Again they are found, if not actually in cahoots with the offenders, at least entirely apathetic on the subject of their activities.

Prohibition is still a long ways from prohibiting, and there are no outward evidences of a growth of a public sentiment supporting the efforts of the officers laboring to enforce it. The moral debit of prohibition continues to mount.

A GAS MANUFACTURER'S PREDICTION

It does not take such a very long memory to recall the time when the disappearance of the small merchant was confidently predicted as one of the results of the development of the great department store, and it was about that time that the introduction of electric lighting was regarded as likely to put the gas men permanently out of business.

The small merchant is still with us and the secretary of the American Gas Association said the other day that the era of gas is only beginning to dawn. This remark was in the nature of a prediction for it rests upon the belief that gas and the coke which is a by-product of gas-making, will become the standard fuels in cities to the exclusion of smoke-making fuels of all kinds.

These chilly October mornings make that prediction interesting for already the chimneys are beginning to send up their sun-obscuring fumes. It will not be long before some windless day sees cities shut in under a gray pall of their own smoke and smoky days will continue to come at frequent intervals until next spring.

If the gas industry can be developed to a point where soft coal can be driven out there will be an end of those dull days, and millions of savings besides because of the reduced cost of keeping cities and their people clean.

The funniest thing that has happened since the question of ratification of the peace treaties came up, is the effort of the New York World to find a bond of sympathy between itself and the senator from Idaho.

The Michigan Supreme court holds that the husband is the master of the home and every man will applaud the decision while privately believing the court is out of date.

"VAMPS" WHO MADE HISTORY
By JAMES C. YOUNG.

THE WOMAN WHO KILLED A GENIUS.

ANY one in the least familiar with the writings of "Georges de Balzac, perhaps the greatest novelist of France, might have been stirred by the white heat of his imagination. Just conceive such a man at the age of thirty-three, on the tide of his first success. He was being acclaimed everywhere. Letters poured in from admirers. Among these was a simple, middle-aged signed "The Stranger," mailed from Odessa. A woman had written it.

In this letter the unknown invited Balzac to answer her through a newspaper advertisement. Eagerly he did so, and soon another letter came. The young wife was Evelina Hanska, the young wife of a man twenty-five years older, and mistress of a great fortress-like castle in the Ukraine, Russia. The haunting words of Balzac drew her to the keyboard. Picture to yourself how both must have felt before and after they met. She was tall, elegant, bluish horn. He was fat, short and not handsome. He says himself that she drew back astounded when she saw him, but it was not long until the woman saw in the man's remarkable eyes the genius which was his. They loved and parted, she returning to her lonely castle and he to endless work.

Certainly the love of Balzac must have been a tribute which pleased the fancy of Evelina Hanska. But her heart seems to have been as cold as her castle walls. The two corresponded, and she toyed with the great man. There was her husband, whom she would not leave. Balzac assented and saw her at infrequent intervals over a period of years.

For seventeen years Balzac's devotion endured. Mrs. Hanska's country was the great source of his life. "The husband died," she wrote to him and he went off to that black Russia where she lived. Again there were delays. She would not leave. He came back to Paris and after more letters again started for Russia. It was in March, 1850, that he arrived, his heart almost congealed by the cold. And at last his evil genius consented to bestow upon him the happiness he had sought so long. They were married and started for France in April. But Balzac was not the only one in Dresden he fell seriously ill. She went out shopping and returned with a wondrous string of pearls.

But Balzac called and they went on to Paris. There he had prepared a rare home for her, filled with art treasures. He, at least, was happier than he ever had been. She revolved in the Paris shops. Five months later Balzac died, a victim of the Russian cold on a weakened heart. When the end came his wife "had gone to her room."

When the Kansas Pacific railroad was being built through Kansas in 1867, it was necessary to provide food for an army of more than 1,500 tracklayers. A source of supply was found at hand—vast herds of buffalo and men were hired to do nothing else but kill these animals for food. One of the best-known of the hunters was William Frederick Cody, a young frontiersman who had been a pony express rider and soldier for General Custer.

The work was dangerous, for the Indians did all they could to stop progress on the railroad. They especially hated these hunters who killed more buffalo in one day than they destroyed in a week, and Cody took his life in his hands every time he went out. He soon became such an expert hunter that the railroad men gave him the nickname of "Buffalo Bill."

During Cody's career as a buffalo hunter, a period of 18 months, he killed a total of 4,280 bison. His greatest exploit was his victory over Billy Constock, a scout and rival hunter. The contest was arranged by officers of Fort Wallace to decide which of the two men was the greatest slayer of bison. They were to hunt one day of eight hours, and the man who killed the greatest number of the animals was to be declared the champion buffalo hunter.

A herd was found and separated into two bunches. Cody immediately began riding at the head of his bunch, shouting the leaders and crowding the followers toward the center of an eye-narrowing circle. In a short time he had killed 38, all of whom lay dead over a small area. Constock had begun shooting at the rear of his herd and, although he killed 23, they were scattered over a distance of three miles. Two more herds were found, and when the final count was made, Cody had 69 and Constock 47.

Later Cody became a famous scout and guide. He served with General Custer in Kansas and General Custer in Colorado. Cody was known as "Buffalo-Look Halt" by the Sioux, who had great respect for his prowess.

After the Indian wars ended Buffalo Bill organized his Wild West show, which added to his fame not only in America, but in Europe as well. After seventy-two years of life crowded with adventures, he died January 10, 1917. He is buried at Lookout Mountain, near Denver, Colorado.

dragged half off his feet in the fierce struggle. "A Mex! Say, fellows, this looks like Arizona. Lay hold here, Mexico! Call the sergeant, somebody; I've got this bird when there! Now, what's all this about, young lady?"

"What is it, Summers?" the sergeant, pushing through the ring of men, peered curiously up at her from under the brim of a battered campaign hat.

"She just come clearing in, sergeant, like she was going somewhere. She was sure ridin' like a—well, in she is Mex, all right."

"So I see. Well, senorita, what are you doing out here?"

"His face was kindly, if stern. 'Senior, I ride for a doctor,' she said earnestly. 'Please do not stop me—a man is dying.'"

"No, senior, an American; he was shot, he was hurt; if I find no doctor, he'll die."

"But where were you going?"

"To Grimsby, senior, there is army doctor there."

"Not now there ain't, he's back here with us somewhere. Where is this fellow who's hurt?"

"She hesitated just an instant, yet there was no avoiding the truth. If the doctor was here among these soldiers, she would have to tell the truth of the desert Machin to his fate. Besides, what did she care? Her hatred of Lund suddenly faded into new life. Here was the opportunity for revenge, as well as service."

"In Wolves' hole, senior?"

follow an' get in some way, like the Mother of God help. Hees name was Shelby."

"Shelby?" broke in the sergeant, for a moment the officer's presence in his surprise. "What Shelby? Was his other name Tom?"

"Si, senior," and she turned her eyes on him. "You know this Tom Shelby?"

"Do I? of course I do. You remember him, Major Hays. He was with us once in '97 Troop; then later detailed with the scouts. He's up in this country, I know, I ran into him down at Ponca when I came through there. Why, that was his wedding day, and I saw the bride."

"You say those renegade devils have got them both there in the Hole?" broke in the major, "prisoners?"

"They got away now; they hide in a cave," she explained.

"And you will show us the way in?"

"Senior, the doctor he will care for this man if I do?"

"I pledge you my word he will."

"And you feel Indian Joe Lund, senior?"

"We'll surely do our best."

"Then I show you—yes; who that man there?"

Shameless wheeled about to face the fellow she pointed at, gripping him with one hand, and dragging him forth from among the circle of soldiers.

"This is the bird they gave us for a guide," he said shortly. "You know him?"

"He," she gave vent to a bitter laugh. "That fellow Don't-Know; had Indian, horse thief. Why they give you them?"

"I—I know, what'll I do with the cast, senior?"

"Have a couple of men hold him under guard. We seem to be on the right track now; senorita, where is this Wolves' hole?"

"Over there, not far; across the mesa. You come, I show you. That be better, senior—just you and some other, so you can tell what to do. Maybe we'll better go on foot, so we be not seen."

looking the valley of the Cottonwood. It had been the plan to drop silently over the edge of the bank, and work their way along, so as to attack the outlaw from the rear, thus rendering the escape of any impossible. But once there on the ground the slope was found to be far too abrupt for this purpose, and the idea had to be abandoned. The only other procedure was to creep along under the protection of the ridge resting to swiftness of attack. The sergeant crept forward, inch by inch, watching of everything in front. He never glanced back, but his carbine was hung forward, cocked and ready. It was fifty yards to where the guarded cedar protruded above the bank, but no sign of any movement greeted him until he had nearly reached that point. Then, suddenly, with no warning of any kind, a red, bleated face showed itself up above the edge of the bank. The startled eyes looked directly into the muzzle of the carbine.

"Stop right there, buddy!" said the sergeant sternly. "Now lads, over you go!"

They took the leap recklessly, some rolling down the steep slope, others finding some sort of foothold and rushing forward. The guard was taken by complete surprise, helpless most of them before they could even reach their feet or grasp their weapons. Shameless backed his prisoner down to where the others stood solemnly and surveyed the scene.

"Five; that's the whole bunch," he said with satisfaction. "A very good job. Now, Gates, go up there and zig-zag the major."

Ten minutes later the advance files of the squadron topped the edge of the bluff and began to slowly move down the steep trail. Hays expressed his approval.

"Exceedingly well done, sergeant; got the whole outfit, I see. Have your men bring up your horses. The girls tell us we have a fine road out into the valley, so we will move right along. Quietly, men, and keep your distance. Unpacking carbines! Forward!"

They moved steadily on a scale, the troopers expertly perfect about, yet continually retreating back their mounts. There was scarcely a building of acacias in the bare valley of the crooked trail toward the snow-covered valley far below. Finding nothing, the sergeant led the way through the curtains to where the Cottonwood plunged over the rock precipice into the deeper gorge beyond. To be sure, the hand of warning the trooper halted, the Major was leaning over to explain the situation ahead.

"Let us verra steep grade," she said, "but a sharp turn at the bottom where the trail runs under the falls. On the other side is a log house, and they always keep a cure there, senior."

"And beyond?"

"The valley is open."

He tried to see through the snow squalls, but with little success.

"How many is the guard?"

"That I cannot tell, senior. There were but two men there, when I come out. But the log has a saloon, and tummy men be there now. Let us best to use utmost caution."

"No one is likely to be between this point and that?"

"Not on watch—no; some one might be passing out; they come and go."

"Of course, we can't risk. The falling water makes noise enough to prevent our being heard, yet I think it may be best to use a warning party. The only way we can trap those fellows into a fight is through a surprise."

"There is something going on, sir, up yonder in that canon," spoke up the lieutenant eagerly. "Listen. Those are rifles popping, and I can see white puffs of smoke through the glass. There's a fight going on down there."

"D—d if you ain't right, Boyd, they are certainly popping away rather lively. Cornered Shelby likely, and, as I remember the lad, he'll stay with them as long as he has a cartridge left. By jingo! we've got to get down, and clear this nest out. Where's the trail, senorita?"

HOPE TO COME BACK

Deported Radicals Are Fleeing From Soviet Rule.

Reported to Be Greatly Disappointed at What They Found in the "Promised Land."

Rika Latvia. Little groups of Russian-Americans, who were deported or volunteered to go from America to Soviet Russia, are trickling back across the Latvian frontier from the land of the Bolsheviks very frequently these days. All hope to get back to the United States.

These emigrants, according to American consular officials who hear their stories and have to tell them there is not much chance for them to get back are greatly disappointed with what they found in the "promised land."

They tell of starvation and long trips in trains crowded with people that there is scarcely room to breathe. Besides, those who have succeeded in getting to Latvia, there are many others who have suffered, friends in Rika asking for money from America.

The Moscow correspondent of the Rika News Service writes as follows about the Russian-Americans inside the country:

"The members of Russian communists expelled from America, who with very few are selling their last goods and chattels on the Moscow market place, are increasing every day."

"The Soviet government is doing its utmost to keep these people above water by giving them even while factories to run and manage. But as these factories are very much run down, even American spirit and energy is not sufficiently strong to get them in operation."

"A little better off are those of the immigrants who have managed to take with them from America their tools or goods produced by their trade. Such people are doing a big business and can afford to live well. This one part of emigrants has succeeded in installing a small sewing factory, containing about 200 sewing machines."

"Formerly the Soviet government simply would have confiscated this lucrative enterprise, but at present the government is a little wary, the more so as in this case they have to do with immigrants whom they make a point of treating with the greatest possible courtesy and consideration."

"Quite recently these arrived a party of Americans whose specialty is the construction of small dwelling houses. They are welcomed and aided by the Soviet government."

"Yes, sir; we've got to get in behind and cut them off."

Down the Crooked Trail.

If they become alarmed they'll scatter and find a way out before we can strike a blow. Isn't that your idea, captain?"

"Yes, sir; we've got to get in behind and cut them off."

"I presume there is a back door to this hole, somewhere, senorita?"

"Yes, senior; way down yonder, but see—can only be made on foot."

World's Record For Quick Loading Is Broken by the Big Steel Freighter Kerr; 12,352 Gross Tons in But 16 1/2 Minutes

The Kerr was Poured Into the Ship Through 35 Hatches at Rate of 1,000 Tons a Minute.

(By Associated Press) CLEVELAND, Oct. 10.—The great lakes steel freighter, the Kerr, one of the crack 500-foot long, 90-foot wide steamers of the Pittsburgh Steamship Company, subsidiary of the U. S. Steel Corporation, has broken the world's record in loading and unloading iron ore.

The Kerr, commanded by Captain W. P. Sperry, left the pier at the head of the vessel of the company, containing the largest load of steam boats in the world and 1/2 of the third largest loads of the Great Lakes.

On Wednesday Sept. 7, 1921 at the Two Harbors, Minn., each of the 35 hatches and two iron chutes were loaded 325,000 tons of iron ore in 16 1/2 minutes at the rate of 1,000 tons per 3 1/2 minutes breaking the former record which stood for 12 1/2 minutes on the steamer Argo, 9,362 gross tons in 25 minutes at the rate of 1,900 tons per 2 1/2 minutes.

The Kerr docked at 2:12 p. m. started to load at 2:28 p. m. and finished loading at 5:24 p. m. and left the dock at 6:31 p. m. on her voyage down the lake. She was in the dock 16 minutes.

The cargo was piled into the Kerr through 35 hatches all hatches being in operation two minutes after the signal was given to start loading. No time was lost in trimming, or in any other way. The boat's hatches being hatched 3000 ton capacity after the hatches were cast off. The cargo is "rollable" requiring no extra labor to be lifted on. The weight of the steamer when loaded was 19,000 tons.

The loading was under the supervision of Captain Sperry, Jack, West, George, Watt and Mark W. Walker. A newspaperman on board the Kerr was the official timekeeper.

When the cargo reached the company docks at Cleveland, Ohio, on Sept. 12 another record was broken in unloading. The 12,352 tons being unloaded in three hours and 45 minutes at the rate of 1,000 tons per 1 1/2 minutes against the previous record of the steamer Vertigo, made in 1919 of 11,750 tons in 12 hours, 25 minutes at the rate of 1,000 tons per 5 1/2 minutes and the steamer P. A. B. Widener made in 1912 when 10,636 tons of ore were discharged in 2 hours and 50 minutes at the rate of 1,000 tons per 10 minutes. The Mackinac and Widener also unloaded at Cleveland.

Frame Building Destroyed Saturday Night by Fire
A large frame building used as a stock shed in the Foster and Thayer building concern was destroyed Saturday night as a result of sparks from a furnace nearby which was lit by children playing around it. When the fire department arrived a few minutes after the alarm was given the fire had gained considerable headway. Efficient work on the part of the department saved other buildings nearby from destruction. Officials of the company announced that a new stock shed will be constructed of fire proof material and work was started on the new building this morning.

EAT LESS AND TAKE SALTS FOR KIDNEYS

Take a glass of Salts before breakfast if your Back hurts or Bladder bothers you.

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble, because we eat too much and all our food is rich. Our blood is filled with uric acid which the kidneys strive to filter out, they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health. When your kidneys feel like lumps of lead, your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night, if you suffer with sick headache or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or you have rheumatism when the weather is bad, get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush and stimulate clogged kidneys; to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder disorders. Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water beverage, and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time.

HEAD OFF IONIA INFUX, IS PLAN

Judges Asked to Refrain From Sentencing Men There for Minor Offenses.

LANSING—In an effort to prevent further crowding of the temporary quarters at the Ionia reformatory, Fred E. Lemite, commissioner of prisons, is asking circuit judges to refrain from sentencing of petty criminals to the county jail instead of to the reformatory.

In checking over the men confined at Ionia for violations of the prohibition laws, he discovered several sentenced from the northern part of the state as liquor violators for slight infractions of the prohibition laws. One man had been found guilty of giving a glass of hard cider to a neighbor and sentenced to serve one year at the reformatory.

An Indian had been taken from one of the islands in Lake Michigan and sent to the prison for a year because a gallon of sugar was found in his possession. The Indian, who could not speak a word of English, had been unable to understand the proceedings against him or the reason for them. The judge that sentenced him recorded the fact that he believed the Indian did not know that he was committing any crime or that there was such a thing as a prohibition law.

A number of the prisoners at Ionia were found to be here because of failure to pay fines of $200. They had been sentenced to pay these fines or serve six months in the reformatory. Among them was one boy who had been caught with a pair of liquor in his possession, and several who were convicted of possessing quantities less than a quart.

The commissioner is urging that men convicted of such offenses be sent to the county jail, and he is asking the judges if they are not willing to recommend the parole of several at ready cost to the reformatory. In some cases, men are being paroled from the reformatory back to the county jail from which they came and in the rest they are being paroled to the sheriffs of their counties.

YOSEMITE PARK DREW LARGEST CROWD IN 1921

90,000 People vacationed at the National Park Playground.

Park Is Open the Year Around Which Helps to Increase Number Who Can Visit Annually.

YOSEMITE, Cal., Oct. 17. Yosemite National Park, California's great playground this year took first place in the race among the national parks for first place in attendance. The total was recorded from Yellowstone National Park by a margin of approximately 10,000 visitors.

A telegram from Horace M. Albright, superintendent at Yellowstone recently announced that 81,317 visited that park during its 1921 season which closed September 30. On September 19 Yosemite had a record of 89,157 with heavy travel continuing. Never before has Yellowstone the oldest of the national parks, been topped from the lead.

As Yosemite is open the year around the totals for the year will be even higher. Final figures for the government's statistical "travel year," which closes September 30, will bring Yosemite total for the twelve months ending that date to about 90,000.

Mr. Albright reported that Yellowstone had 12,573 automobiles, carrying 52,771 passengers this year. Yosemite had 18,466 automobiles with 67,157 passengers. Railroad travel to Yellowstone decreased by about 7,000 passengers from Yosemite since an increase in railroad travel, one of the few instances of an increase this year in travel by rail to the national parks, despite higher railroad rates which went into effect late in 1920.
