WISE MODERATION.

Throughout the discussion of what the conference on limitation of armaments should attempt to do, and what it may accomplish, the President and Secretary Hughes have maintained an attitude to which the people had no right to expect too much.

Now comes the news that after a long period of doubt and hesitation both the British and French governments have decided to come to Washington to take part in the conference.

It is a relief to the public mind to see that the British and French governments have decided to come to Washington to take part in the conference. The British and French governments have decided to come to Washington to take part in the conference.

Suppose the President and Secretary Hughes had followed the lead of the other states and had called a conference to consider a program for limiting armaments, disarmament, and permanent peace.

QUALITY COUNTS

Ever since the new census made it necessary to determine how many members the national House of Representatives shall have, newspapers and politicians have been leading to the fact that a large increase in the membership will give Michigan a larger voice in its representation than almost any other state would get.

No other opinion can be held when the question is viewed as one involving the good of the country. The common factor in a large House is that of local prejudices and questions of political expediency.

The influence of a state upon national legislation does not depend upon the number of its members alone. Bulk of membership is less important in this regard than quality.

Michigan furnishes an illustration of this fact in the person of Representative Fordney, a man of no extraordinary qualities except his persistent devotion to the protective tariff.

The New York judge who ruled that a husband must give his wife three-fourths of his pay, evidently believes a man ought to be allowed to reserve enough to live in a little game.

Perhaps President Harding thinks that by stopping the congressmen in session while the conference on limitation of armaments is at work, he will put a limitation on their capacity for attempting to rob that gathering.

Now let somebody rise and assert that this fight against the decreasing birth rate among the "intellectuals" is only another subtle effort to keep down the proletariat.

Stories of Great Scouts

HOW KIT CARSON FOUGHT A DUGEL AND WON A WIFE

The Green River country in Wyoming was a famous rendezvous for trappers in the old days, and in 1840 many of them were gathered there.

Learning of this situation, an effort to bring about a quarrel with Carson, and about the camp one day cutting a broad rifle and declaring that all Americans were cowards.

Carson came to have the Indians who had been friendly, and after they had been satisfied by the Indian warriors, he became his wife in a Christian marriage.

Kit Carson was one of the most remarkable heroes in American history. Born in Kentucky in 1804, he ran away from home and lived a wild life on the Santa Fe trail.

Carson was an Indian hunter, and he learned the language of the Indians, and they called him "Red Jacket."

Carson was a brave and a true man. He was a hero in many ways, and he was a true American.

"JAMES" WHO MADE HISTORY

By James C. Young

AN UNGROWN QUEEN OF ROM

A NEWS ITEM came in from the city of Rome, Italy, that a young girl named "James" had become a queen of the city.

It is better to be loved than to be feared, wrote the philosopher. The girl named "James" was a young girl who had become a queen of the city.

When Tullia's young lover began to attract attention in Rome, he was persecuted at the court of the Vatican. Because of his beauty, Tullia was loved by many men.

Tullia was loved by many men, and she was a beautiful girl. She was a young girl who had become a queen of the city.

In Siena she met with what must have been the great humiliation of her life. Duke Cosimo had issued an order that all women of any rank must wear the yellow veil.

She was famous for her dresses, and she was a beautiful girl. She was a young girl who had become a queen of the city.

Sandy was lying face down, one hand kneeling across him, sending his rivet to hollow action, lifting his upper body in time to the pressure.

"That was splendid, Mr. Rainey! Wonderful! It was brave of you!" Pecky Shamus stood before Rainey, clinging to the man's arm.

"I am an American, and if you are determined to die, I am your man," he said. "The President has ordered me to do this."

"I have a chance, I have a chance," he said. "I have a chance, I have a chance, I have a chance, I have a chance."

words. Beyond any doubt Land expected trouble. And Rainey, for the first time, began to sense it as something approaching disaster, almost tangible.

As he crossed the main cabin to go to his own room, Carson came out of the stateroom. He did not see Rainey at first and was humming a little air under his breath as he stepped a small article into his pocket.

"Serious? I'm afraid it is serious," he said. "I'm afraid it is serious, I'm afraid it is serious, I'm afraid it is serious."

WHO'S YOUR PARTNER?

If you are married, your wife is. Make her a real partner and helpmate by putting a limit on your own spending and then turn over the rest of your income to her to pay the household bills and add a little to your Savings Account.

If you have no wife, we will be glad to act as your partner and will keep your money working for you at 3% interest.
