FIRST VIOLENCE OF STRIKE IN CHICAGO

FEDERAL INJUNCTIONS BEING BROUGHT INTO PLAY AND STATE TROOPS ARE BEING MOBILIZED

Chicago, July 7.—With B. M. Jewell, head of the striking railroad shopmen, still maintaining the conciliatory attitude he assumed after the strike was under way, but declining to make the first move towards negotiations for peace, and increasing number of outbreaks and disorders mark the closing hours of the first week of the strike throughout the country, which started last Saturday when the shop men walked out at 10:30 o'clock in the morning.

Federal injunctions restraining strikers from interfering with railroad operations, molesting workers and unlawfully picketing shops were issued in East St. Louis, Ill., and Shreveport, Louisiana.

Mobilization of state troops was ordered in Illinois following disturbances in the Washburn yards at Decatur. The governors of Alabama, Kansas, Missouri and Iowa were asked to send troops to the scene of disorders and where peace was threatened in their states.

First Violence

Chicago, in the past 24 hours, experienced its first outbreak of violence, in connection with the strike. A mob of strikers and sympathizers which included many women, attempted to burn the homes of two Illinois Central employees at Burnside, who refused to join the walkout.

Police arrived and scattered the mob after Mrs. Julia Gabel, 56, and the wife of one of the Illinois Central men, held the mob at bay when they attempted to storm her home. "You were all my friends once," she shouted at the mob, "but I will kill the next one of you who throws a stone."

The leaders stepped away from the porch where the woman stood with her revolver, until the police arrived. An employee of the Baltimore & Ohio shops was in a critical condition in a hospital following an attack by strike sympathizers.

Escorted Out of Town

At Ash Grove, Ill., a crowd of strikers escorted a number of people to the city limits. They were mostly colored men and who had been sent from Chicago to work in the Burlington shops. Despite numerous outbreaks by strikers, there was a general impression in railroad circles that the crest of the strike had been reached and it is believed Mr. Jewell will be brought together with Ben W. Hooper, chairman of the railroad labor board, and that there will be negotiations for a settlement.

Railroads meanwhile continued to employ new men to take jobs left by the strikers and an ultimatum has been issued by many roads to return to work this week or forfeit all seniority and pension rights.

Claim Some Returning

Strikers were reported at various points to be straggling back to the old jobs in unimportant numbers and at St. Paul it is reported that negotiations have been started for the settlement of the strike on the Northern Pacific, between the representatives of the shop men and the officials of the system.

Mr. Jewell exhibited telegrams to day from the Women's Auxiliary Shop Craft organizations, expressing their support of the strike. He also announced the first sympathetic walk-out exhibiting messages showing that 2500 members employed on railroads had joined the ranks of the strikers.

The Seniority Order

Announcement by the Union Pacific, Burlington and North Western systems that seniority and pension rights would be lost if the men were not back to work by Monday, was greeted by jeers from the strikers at some points.

State troops throughout Illinois have been notified to hold themselves in readiness to go on strike duty at any moment.

Mrs. Brady Receives Insurance Check from the Machinists Union

Joseph P. Feller, secretary of the local Machinists' Union, has received and turned over to Mrs. James P. Brady, a check for $500. The check was sent by the International Association of Machinists of which Mr. Brady had been a member for many years—previous to his death, and the money represents the insurance which membership in the organization carries. Mr. Brady died about 30 days ago and was well known and highly respected throughout this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Lin Lundgard and family of Hugo, Oklahoma, are visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lambert, of Wells.

Army Flier Dies When Machine Hits Airplane Hangar

DETROIT, Mich., July 7.—A sharp turn made in an effort to avoid striking a hangar led to the death of Capt. George Pinsky, 26, of the army air service, who crashed to death in his airplane while flying at Selfridge field at Mt. Clemens, late yesterday.

According to reports the motor died during maneuvers, and burst into flames as it struck the ground. The flier was dead when the spectators succeeded in getting the fire under control.

CHANGE IS MADE IN LOCAL BUSINESS BY BUCHANAN BROS.

Leave Firm of Anderson & Buchanan to Engage in Business in Iron Mountain.

Negotiations which have been pending for some time were concluded last evening, whereby the Anderson & Buchanan furniture and undertaking firm, a corporation, of which J. B. Wilkinson was President, undergoes a process of dissolution and the business will be conducted by Arthur Anderson and Hans B. Bonfeld under the firm name of Anderson & Bonfeld.

Frank N. Buchanan and Joseph Buchanan, who have for the past three years been associated with the firm, under the name of Anderson & Buchanan, have found what they believe will be a greater field for their activities in Iron Mountain and their retirement from the Escanaba firm is dictated wholly by the greater opportunity which they believe Iron Mountain holds for them.

The Buchanan Brothers are leaving a three-story building, erected for them and have taken a lease for a long period of years. They expect to be able to occupy the new home by October and will conduct a high grade furniture and undertaking business.

Popular Young Men

The Buchanan boys have contributed all the force of their personality and industry to the successful promotion of the business, which has grown steadily since the firm of Anderson & Buchanan took it over three years ago. Today the business stands as a monument to the worth of the members of the firm and the manner in which they kept faith with the public.

While Messrs. Anderson and Wilkinson, their former associates, regret to lose them from the firm, they wish them every success in their new venture and predict that the same courtesy and industry, which won such great success here, will result in the same success in the new location.

The New Firm

In the change, Arthur Anderson purchased the entire business, including Mr. Wilkinson's interests, and then sold a half interest in the business to Hans B. Bonfeld. Mr. Wilkinson, however, will remain with the new firm for a time to adjust accounts, make collections and clean up the details incident to the transfer of the property.

Mr. Bonfeld took hold today. He is one of the best known in the city having for a long period of years come in contact with the business public through the conduct of a dry line and he will bring into the new firm a ripened and mature business judgment and wide acquaintance which will be a strong asset to the business.

It is predicted that the firm of Anderson & Bonfeld will continue to merit the confidence of the public, just as did the firm of Anderson & Buchanan, and the same standard of fair treatment for all will prevail.

To Continue Dray Business

Mr. Bonfeld's entrance to the new enterprise will in no way affect his draying business, which will go on the same as usual. Mr. Bonfeld wishes all his friends to understand that he has not quit the draying business and that the trade will receive the same attention and service it always has.

The Buchanan Brothers are in Iron Mountain today looking after matters in connection with their new enterprise and Iron Mountain is to be congratulated upon acquiring two such splendid young business men to add to her roster of progressive young hustlers and community builders.

Mrs. William Baker left yesterday for a visit with relatives and friends at Negaunee.

Irish Free State Troops Assure Peace in Ireland by Victory in Recent Fighting Is the Belief

Small Squadron British Warships Arrives In Cork.

(By Associated Press)
LONDON July 7.—The provisional Irish Free State government by its substantial victory over the insurgent Republican forces in Dublin is believed to have taken a long step toward establishing more firmly the peace in Ireland.

The ready response to the national call to arms is regarded as encouraging and as further proof that most Irishmen are back of the new government and opposed to the extremists.

Indications are not lacking however, that Michael Collins and his colleagues will need all the support they can get to put down resistance in the district and they will need to enroll soldiers to the full strength and will have none too many in rounding up the guerrilla bands acting under orders of the Republican headquarters.

The arrival in Cork harbor last night of a small squadron of British warships, additional color to the report in that district, and attack on the British naval station there.

LEADER DIES OF WOUNDS

DUBLIN, Ireland, July 7.—Cathal Brugha, one of DeValera's chief lieutenants died today, from the wounds he received on Wednesday while trying to fight his way clear at the surrender of the garrison in Sackville street area.

Cathal Brugha was better known as Charles Bresser, was one of the most prominent Republican leaders, who opposed the terms of the Anglo-Irish treaty from the start and fought it to the finish. He was the minister of defense in the first Dail cabinet and led the campaign against the British in South Ireland up to the time the truce was signed in July of last year.

When Brugha learned of the pact which had been signed by Arthur Griffith and his colleagues, he immediately started a fight against the pact and made speeches throughout the southern territory against it.

JOHN G. EMERY TO TALK HERE ON WEDNESDAY

Much is in store for the Lion and Kiwanis clubs next Wednesday at 6:30 o'clock in the Delta hotel, when John G. Emery, who was formerly national commander of the American Legion, will address the two clubs. Mr. Emery is now a candidate for the Republican nomination for United States senator, and was invited jointly by the two clubs here as a guest of honor, when it was found out that he would not arrive in town on a day either club held its weekly meeting.

He will arrive here from Crystal Falls Wednesday afternoon, so it was decided by the officers of the two clubs to hold a joint meeting in the Delta at 6:30.

LAKE SHORE DRIVE PROPERTY OWNERS LIKE NEW STREET

City Manager's Sample of Reconstruction Meets With Great Approval.

That Lake Shore drive, which is one of Escanaba's "show places" is very likely to be put into splendid condition, seems assured from the encouraging letters City Manager Fred Harris is receiving from property owners along the street.

Several days ago, after a section of the street had been reconstructed all but the top dressing of tarvis and gravel, Mr. Harris sent out letters to all property owners along the street, calling their attention to this work. He, at the same time, advised them the condition of city finances would not permit reconstruction of the street unless the property owners financed such portion of the work as would allow the city to come within its budget. They were also asked to inspect the completed work on the east end of the street.

Work Meets Approval

As a result of this, the city manager today received several responses approving his plan and commending the work already done.

It is particularly gratifying to Mr. Harris to receive from the individual property owner who will be hit the hardest, a letter in which the citizen states that he is quite willing to pay his share of the cost.

An excerpt from his answer follows: "I saw the work you started and I fully approve of it, and I consider it a good piece of work. After the finish has been put on, this will be a good piece of road for a long time to come and it will be used considerably more when the road is in good shape as you intend to fix it."

Cost Not Heavy

This work will cost property owners 50 cents per foot where the street is 16 feet wide and 75 cents per foot front where the road is 24 feet wide. This cost does not cover the full cost of the reconstruction but permits the city to stay within the limits of its budget.

Thirty property owners are affected by the proposed reconstruction of the street and a number of the largest taxpayers already have indicated their approval of the project. Manager Harris is anxious that the rest of those on the street, who will be benefited by the improvement, let him know their attitude at once, as he wants to put the job through immediately, so that Escanaba may have one good stretch of road along the bay shore, which is sure to be much traveled and from which tourists will get their most favorable impressions of the city.

Progressive Voters To Meet Tonight at Escanaba City Hall

Local leaders of the Progressive Voter's League announce that a cordial invitation is extended to all union men and farmers interested in the political situation, to attend this evening's meeting at the city hall. The meeting is called for 7:30 o'clock and it is expected the gathering will not only be most interesting but will be largely attended.

BROOM FACTORY FIRE MENACES BUSINESS ROOM

Firemen Handicapped by the Fumes From Burning Straw.

Blaze Is Controlled Through Hard Work of Department Before Great Damage Was Done.

The upper story of the Escanaba Broom Factory formerly known as Leumer's Hall, 308 Ludington street, was damaged badly this afternoon about 2:30 o'clock by fire. Dense smoke clouds from smoldering straw in brooms, stored upstairs, handicapped the fire fighters. However, after about a half hour's fighting, the force of the fire had been controlled.

Since about one o'clock smoke was seen drifting over Ludington street but it was not noticeable enough to be thought a fire of any great extent. However, about 2 o'clock it grew in volume and was seen to come from over the broom factory. The fire although dangerous when first discovered, was never a serious menace after the first ten minutes of fighting.

Small loss was sustained by the owners as the property is said to be covered by insurance.

Again the efficiency of the fire department asserted itself, and it deserves a great amount of praise on the capable and cool manner in which it handled the fire.

STATE MAY VOTE ON BEER-WINE PROPOSITION

Efforts Now in the Making to Get the Project Submitted at Next Spring Election.

DETROIT, July 7.—The question of amending the Michigan Prohibition laws to permit sale of beer and light wines within the state in the event the Volstead act is modified will not be submitted to the voters of the state at the general election next autumn, but may be placed on the ballot at the state election next spring. This is announced by Robert Wardell, of Detroit, secretary of the Michigan Division of the National Association Opposed to the Prohibition Amendment. Some time ago it was announced by the organization that an attempt would be made to place the question on the ballot in November. Following conferences between leaders in the movement, however, it was decided to await the election next spring, at which time justices of the state supreme court and other state officers will be chosen. Reason for Delay Mr. Wardell announced that the reason for postponing the bringing up the issue before the voters had its inception in the possibility that amendments that might bring a negative vote possibly would be voted upon and that in view of the fact that the light wine and beer proposal required an affirmative vote those back of the proposed change feared the amendment might be defeated unintentionally by those who desired to vote "no" on other proposals. The association some time ago began circulation of the initiatory petitions to bring the beer and wine proposal to a vote. These petitions have been recalled so far as the election next fall is concerned. The organization will devote its attention during the remainder of the present campaign season to the task of supporting the candidacy of persons desiring national state and county offices who are favorable to a change in the prohibition laws, Mr. Wardell announced. The "Big Fight" "The big fight of those in favor of light wines and beer now is to win congress to modification of the Volstead law," Mr. Wardell said, "so nothing can be done in any of the states until the Volstead act is modified. Consequently we will concentrate in the congressional and senatorial campaigns and attempt to send to congress men who will vote for such modification. The fight will be particularly vigorous in Michigan. "As soon as the fall election is over we will begin the fight to bring a light wine and beer amendment to a vote of the people of the state next spring." Mr. Wardell announced his organization in the state now has a paid membership of about 25,000 and that a membership campaign was in progress.

"Torture Test"

TO PROVE beyond question that Lee Puncture Proof Pneumatics live up to their name, a car equipped with four of these sturdy tires was subjected to the "Torture Test" pictured above.

The car, containing four men, was run repeatedly back and forth upon improvised tracks—two planks from which 5,000 thirty-penny nails protruded, points upward.

Twenty-four keen-bladed butcher knives, edge up, formed part of the track. Fifty pounds of broken glass and 100 yards of barbed wire littered the approaches.

The tires used were not "special" in any way, and were not new—they had already delivered nearly 5,000 miles of non-puncture service.

Yet, this record is no more remarkable than the performance of Lee Puncture Proof Tires, year in and year out, in ordinary, every-day use, for the past ten years.

Equipped with Lee Puncture Proof Pneumatics, your car can be driven anywhere and everywhere, without fear—protected by our cash-refund guarantee against punctures.

"He seems, like Ben Corvet," Henry said slowly, "to have the characteristic of showing one side to you, another to me, Constance. With you, of course, he claimed nothing; but at the office—Your father showed him this morning the instruments of transfer that Ben seems to have left conveying to him all Ben had—his other properties and his interest in Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. I very naturally objected to the execution of those transfers, without considerable examination, in view of Corvet's mental condition and of the fact that they put the controlling stock of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman in the hands of a youth no one ever had heard of—and one who, by his own story, never had seen a ship until yesterday. And when I didn't dismiss my business with a dozen men this morning to take him into the company, he claimed occasion to see me alone to threaten me."

"Threaten you, Henry? How? With what?"

"I couldn't quite make out myself, but that was his tone; he demanded an 'explanation' of exactly what, he didn't make clear. He has been given by Ben, apparently, the technical control of Corvet, Sherrill and Spearman. His idea, if I oppose him, evidently is to turn me out and take the management himself."

Constance leaned back, confused. "He—Alan Conrad?" she questioned. "He can't have done that, Henry! Oh, he can't have meant that!"

"Maybe he didn't; I said I couldn't make out what he did mean," Spearman said. "Things have come upon him with rather a rush, of course; and you couldn't expect a country boy to get so many things straight. He's acting, I suppose, only in the way one might expect a boy to act who had been brought up in poverty on a Kansas prairie and was suddenly handed the possible possession of a good many millions of dollars. It's better to believe that he's only lost his head. I haven't had opportunity to tell your father these things yet; but I wanted you to understand why Conrad will hardly consider me a friend."

"I'll understand you now, Henry," she promised.

CHAPTER VIII. Violence.

At half-past three, Alan left the office. Sherrill had told him an hour earlier that Spearman had telephoned he would not be able to get back for a conference that afternoon; and Alan was certain now that in Spearman's absence Sherrill would do nothing further with respect to his affairs.

Was there one upon whom Alan could tell of his encounter with Spearman in Corvet's house, with probability of receiving belief? Alan had not been thinking directly of Constance Sherrill, as he walked swiftly north to the Drive; but she was, in a way, present in all his thoughts. As he approached the Sherrill house, he saw standing at the curb an open roadster with a livelier chauffeur; he had seen that roadster, in front of the office building that morning when Constance had taken him downtown. He turned into the walk and rang the bell.

The servant who opened the door knew him and seemed to accept his right of entry to the house, for he drew back for Alan to enter. Alan went into the hall and waited for the servant to follow. "Is Miss Sherrill in?" he asked.

"I'll see, sir." The man disappeared. Alan, waiting, did not hear Constance's voice in reply to the announcement of the servant, but Spearman's vigorous tones. The servant returned. "Miss Sherrill will see you in a minute, sir."

Through the wide doorway to the drawing room, Alan could see the smaller, portiered entrance to the room beyond—Sherrill's study. The curtains parted, and Constance and Spearman came into this inner doorway; they stood an instant there in talk. As Constance started away, Spearman suddenly drew her back to him and kissed her. Alan's shoulders spontaneously jerked back and his hands clenched; he did not look away and, as she approached, she became aware that he had seen.

She came to him, very quiet and very flushed; then she was quite pale as she asked him, "You wanted me?"

He was white as she, and could not speak at once. "You told me last night, Miss Sherrill," he said, "that the last thing that Mr. Corvet did—the last that you know of—was to warn you against one of your friends. Who was that?"

She flushed uneasily. "You mustn't attach any importance to that; I didn't mean you. There was no reason for what Mr. Corvet said, except in Mr. Corvet's own mind. He had a quite unreasonable animosity—"

"Against Mr. Spearman, you mean?" She did not answer.

"His animosity was against Mr. Spearman, Miss Sherrill, wasn't it?"

That is the only animosity of Mr. Corvet's that anyone has told me about."

"Yes."

"It was against Mr. Spearman that he warned you, then?"

"Yes."

"Thank you." He turned and, not waiting for the man, let himself out. He should have known it when he had seen that Spearman, after announcing himself as unable to get back to the office, was with Constance.

He went swiftly around the block to his own house and let himself in at the front door with his key. The house was warm; a shaded lamp on the table in the larger library was lighted, a fire was burning in the open grate, and the rooms had been swept and dusted. The Indian came into the hall to take his coat and hat.

"Dinner is at seven," Wassaquam announced. "You want some change about that?"

"No; seven is all right."

Alan went upstairs to the room next to Corvet's which he had appropriated for his own use the night before, and found it now prepared for his occupancy. When he came down again to the first floor, Wassaquam was nowhere about, but he heard sounds in the service rooms on the basement floor. He went part way down the service stairs and saw the Indian in the kitchen, preparing dinner. Wassaquam had not heard his approach, and Alan stood an instant watching the Indian's tall, thin figure and the quick movements of his disproportionately small, well-shaped hands, almost like a woman's; then he scuffed his foot upon the stair, and Wassaquam turned swiftly about.

"Anybody been here today, Judah?" Alan asked.

"No, Alan. I called tradesmen; they came. There were young men from the newspapers."

"What did you tell them?"

"Nothing."

"Why not?"

"Henry telephoned I was to tell them nothing."

"You mean Henry Spearman?"

"Yes."

"Do you take orders from him, Judah?"

"I took that order, Alan."

Alan hesitated. "You've been here in the house all day?"

"Yes, Alan."

Alan went back to the first floor and into the smaller library. The room was dark with the early winter dusk, and he switched on the light; then he knelt and pulled out one of the drawers he had seen Spearman searching through the night before, and carefully examined the papers in it one by one, but found them only ordinary papers. He pulled the drawer completely out and sounded the wall behind it and the partition on both sides but they appeared solid. He put the drawer back in and went on to examine the next one, and after that, the others. The clocks in the house had been wound, for presently the clock in the library struck six, and another in the hall chimed slowly. An hour later, when the clocks chimed again, Alan looked up and saw Wassaquam's small black eyes, deep set in their large eye sockets, fixed on him intently through the door. How long the Indian had been there, Alan could not guess; he had not heard his step.

"What are you looking for, Alan?" the Indian asked.

Alan reflected a moment. "Mr. Sherrill thought that Mr. Corvet might have left a record of some sort here for me, Judah. Do you know of anything like that?"

"No. That is what you are looking for?"

"Yes. Do you know of any place where Mr. Corvet would have been likely to put away anything like that?"

"Ben put papers in all these drawers; he put them upstairs, too—where you have seen."

"Nowhere else, Judah?"

"If he put things anywhere else, Alan, I have not seen. Dinner is served, Alan."

Alan went to the lavatory on the first floor and washed the dust from his hands and face; then he went into the dining room. Wassaquam, having served the dinner, took his place behind Alan's chair, ready to pass him what he needed; but the Indian's silent, watchful presence there behind him where he could not see his face, disturbed Alan, and he twisted himself about to look at him.

"Would you mind, Judah," he inquired, "if I asked you to stand over there instead of where you are?"

The Indian, without answering, moved around to the other side of the table, where he stood facing Alan.

"You're a Chippewa, aren't you, Judah?" Alan asked.

"Yes."

"Your people live at the other end of the lake, don't they?"

"Yes, Alan."

"Have you ever heard of the Indian Drum they talk about up there that they say sounds when a ship goes down on the lake?"

The Indian's eyes sparkled excitedly. "Yes," he said.

"Do you believe in it?"

"Not just believe; I know. Everybody knows that it sounds for those who die on the lake. I have heard it. It sounded for my father."

"How was that?"

"Like this. My father sold some bullocks to a man on Beaver Island. The man kept store on Beaver Island, Alan. No Indian liked him. He would not hand anything to an Indian or wrap anything in paper for an Indian. Say it was like this: An Indian comes in to buy salt pork. First the man would get the money. Then, Alan, he would take his hook and pull the pork up out of the barrel and throw it on the dirty floor for the Indian to pick up. He said Indians must take their food off of the floor—like dogs."

"My father had to take the bullocks to the man, across to Beaver Island. At first the Indians did not know who the bullocks were for, so they helped him. When they found out the bullocks were for the man on Beaver Island, the Indians would not help him any longer. He had to take them across alone. Besides, it was bad weather, the beginning of a storm."

"He went away, and my mother went to pick berries—I was small then. Pretty soon I saw my mother coming back. She had no berries, and her hair was hanging down, and she was wailing. She took me in her arms and said my father was dead. Other Indians came around and asked her how she knew, and she said she heard the Drum. The Indians found my father's body."

"Did you ever hear of a ship called the Miwaka, Judah?"

"That was long ago," the Indian answered.

"They say that the Drum beat wrong when the Miwaka went down—that it was one beat short of the right number."

"That was long ago," Wassaquam merely repeated.

"Did Mr. Corvet ever speak to you about the Miwaka?"

"No; he asked me once if I had ever heard the Drum. I told him."

Wassaquam removed the dinner and brought Alan a dessert. He returned to stand in the place across the table that Alan had assigned to him, and stood looking down at Alan, steadily and thoughtfully.

"Do I look like any one you ever saw before, Judah?" Alan inquired of him.

"No."

"Is that what you are thinking?"

"That is what I was thinking. Will coffee be served in the library, Alan?"

HOUSEWORK IS A BURDEN

Woman's lot is a weary one at best. But with backache and other distressing kidney ills life indeed becomes a burden. Don's Kidney Pills have made life brighter for many Escanaba women.

Mrs. John Carlson, 415 South 15th St., Escanaba, says: "My kidneys were not acting properly and as a result, my back ached and was often lame, causing me quite a bit of annoyance. Work about the house became burdensome and when I attempted to straighten after stooping, sharp pains caught me through my back. I was run down and often felt nervous and depressed. I was dizzy and headaches were troublesome. My kidneys were weak, but I heard so much of Don's Kidney Pills I bought them at the City Drug Store and they cured me so I haven't needed a kidney remedy since."

"Let's Make Escanaba A Better City"

A NATIONAL TRAIT.

It has cost more in lives and injuries to celebrate this nation's independence than it cost to win it. That is the estimate of the Safety Institute of America at New York.

It cost this nation more in lives and injuries, during the World war period, in industrial accidents than it cost in battle casualties.

Today it is costing it more in lives and injuries in traffic accidents other than train wrecks—that is mostly auto accidents or those in which the auto figures—than it cost the army to fight the battles in France.

It is costing more in industrial accidents right now than it cost to fight the war.

And everyone knows the terrible extent of the fire loss. Students of these accidents and fire losses claim that a very large proportion of them, some estimate as high as 90 and most of them above 80 per cent, are due directly to carelessness—recklessness figuring as a part of carelessness.

It is not necessary to comment at length on these facts. It is not needful to give sure advice or to make speeches. Despite the large amount of both of these things the record grows. And despite the well organized and consistent and persistent safety work which is going on and which has had some good effect.

But these facts indicate that the safety workers have either failed to touch the psychology of the case, or that carelessness is the strongest element in mankind.

Comment, as said before, is wasteful, but serious study of the actions and reactions of the human mind, and especially of the mind of the average, instead of that of the above the average, person would seem to be in demand.

TIME FOR PLAIN TALK.

The coal strike conferees at Washington have adjourned until next Monday, with nothing accomplished toward a settlement. "Angry charges" marked their last session, we are told. Angry charges will not retain their heat long enough to warm American homes this winter or keep factory fires going.

It is pretty nearly time for someone else to get mad. President Harding and the government representatives at the conference, Secretaries Davis and Hoover, ought to be able to work up a sufficient volume of wrath to convince the stubborn operators and strike leaders that it is to their mutual interest to get together quickly.

The two sides have not yet got down to a discussion of the merits of the controversy because the operators insist on district conferences, while the miners want the dispute adjusted on a basis of the central competitive field. That is indeed thrilling to the man whose coal bin is empty.

The chief trouble evidently is that it has not yet penetrated the skulls of the mine owners and mine workers that the American people are going to have coal to burn, whether the Washington conferees can agree on a basis of negotiations or not. And that coal is coming out of the mines which an all-wise Providence placed in this country for the comfort and convenience of its inhabitants.

President Harding tried to make it plain that the government would see to it that when he addressed the opening session of the conference. He couched his firm warning in courteous language, so perhaps those to whom he spoke, being given to "angry charges," did not get his drift. Maybe they thought he was just fooling. If so, he should undeceive them when they reassemble. Let him give them a sample of the plain talk they understand, the sort they use to one another.

Then, if that doesn't have the desired effect, let the strong arm of the government act, as the President declared it would, if need be, "in the name of American safety and for the greatest good of all the people!"

THE SLEEPER ON THE BENCHES.

Leslie M. Shaw, whose services as secretary of the treasury in Roosevelt's time, are well remembered, is not pleased with the American educational system. He thinks the schools are trying to teach the young to get along without work and he ventures the opinion that a census of the men found dozing away their time on park benches would reveal that the sleepers are all educated. The illiterate men, he told the Army and Navy club, are awake and at work.

With all due respect to the high authority of the former secretary an opinion may be ventured that the men who are addicted to slumber on park benches, are simply born that way. They belong to the shiftless ineffectual class and the cause of their trouble is to be found in a deficiency of brains rather than in an excess of education.

If, as the former secretary implies, the schools inculcate idleness why is this not a nation of idlers? All but a very small percentage of Americans go to school, but instead of being unproductive the American worker is the most efficient in the world. He turns out more for a day's work than any other laborer.

A great many people who are following ex-President Taft's travels through England are wondering whether he is taking full advantage of the fact that the Volstead act does not run beyond the three-mile line.

And now that the British nation has sent the Prince of Wales around the world they are talking about marrying him to somebody. Can't they leave the poor fellow alone for a minute?

DRUGS EXCITE YOUR KIDNEYS; USE SALTS

If your Back is aching or Bladder bothers, drink lots of water and eat less meat.

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salt which removes the body's unclean waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from 600 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salt is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice combined with litbia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

PLINT—Several men's clothing stores and tailoring establishments have agreed to close their places of business on each Wednesday after noon during July and August.

Fewer Delays With Fordson Farming

PROBABLY the most costly part of farming is represented by the time lost in delayed work. Those who have been using the Fordson tractor and the Standard Equipment that goes with it have been remarkably free from delays occasioned by breakage.

Take, for example, the MONEY-MAKER ensilage cutter. It is built on such a firm foundation and is made of such high grade materials that it is seldom the cause of delays at harvest time. The cutter shaft is mounted on three bearings instead of two and it operates so smoothly that a glass filled with water can be placed anywhere on the cutter while it is operating at full speed, without the water being spilled.

The heavy shocks that would otherwise reach the gears as green corn is fed into the cutter are taken up by a patented cushion drive.

Every farmer in this community should look into the possibilities for saving time and money with this remarkable cutter.

L. K. EDWARDS, INC.

A complete line of power farming tools from plows to ensilage cutters can be supplied here at Power Farming Headquarters

U. P. CONVENTION

Locals Fully Expect to Land Next Year's Convention for This City.

Two groups of delegates, one leaving this morning and one to leave tomorrow morning at 5:30 a. m. from in front of the Delta hotel, will represent Escanaba in the Upper Peninsula convention of the American Legion at Iron Mountain.

Determined to get the convention next year here, over 150 Legion men and seven delegates will endeavor to land the meeting for 1923 in this city. "We are very enthusiastic over the prospect of Escanaba being selected as the convention city for next year," Nathan Frenn, commander of the local post, remarked today. "Rapid River, Gladstone, Iron Mountain, Nahma, the Sou, Marquette and Ironwood are with us."

City Manager, Fred Harris, also an ex-service man, and a member of the local post, will speak for the people of Escanaba, and it is thought that his influence will be far-reaching.

Asked to wear uniforms. It was emphasized today, that there will be enough cars to accommodate all the Legion members, so everybody is asked to be at the Delta promptly at 5:30 tomorrow morning. All members who expect to go should wear their uniforms. If their size will conform to their suit, otherwise they should wear their Legion button and have their membership card.

NEW SUBSCRIBERS SUPPORT BUREAU

Contributions will Total $15,000, Financial Secretary Says.

MARQUETTE, Mich., July 7.—At the last meeting of the finance committee of the Upper Peninsula Development Bureau, held at Iron Mountain, a budget for the ensuing year was proposed and accepted, and recommendations as to a paid advertising program for the future were discussed.

A report of the work of Harry R. Snyder, the bureau's financial secretary, showed that his efforts have brought liberal response. Singular honors, however, go to the villages of Wakefield, Powers, and the townships of Bergland and Topaz. They voted to appropriate a definite annual subscription to the bureau and they are the only individual communities taking this action. Mr. Snyder declared that contributions by individuals and corporations will total $15,000 by the end of the fiscal year, and that over 600 new subscribers will be added to the bureau's membership list.

OBITUARY

MISS EVELYN TRUDEAU

Word was received in this city yesterday of the death at Chicago of Miss Evelyn Trudeau, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Trudeau, former residents of this city. Mrs. Trudeau was formerly Miss Lucy Denton. Both Mr. and Mrs. Trudeau were born and raised in this city, the family moving to Chicago several years ago. Miss Trudeau was 21 years of age July 3rd and had been ailing for 18 months from complications which set in after an attack of the flu.

She was a graduate of one of the Chicago high schools and had a large circle of friends in this city, having visited here many times. The parents had planned to bring the body here for burial but it was her wish to be buried at the side of her girl chum who died six weeks ago. The two families had lived in the same house for years and the two girls were inseparable.

The funeral services will be held from St. Mel's church, Chicago, Saturday morning at nine o'clock. Mrs. Peter Arnold and daughter, Mrs. William E. Thomas and William Denton left this morning to attend the funeral.

Local Fight Fans Look for King to Clean Young Morris

Escanaba will not only be represented at the convention in Iron Mountain by a large delegation of Legion men, but also by Henry King, local pug champion. He will meet "Young" Harris of Hurley, and it is suspected that he has some sleep medicine packed away in his glove. King is in the pink of condition having gone through his last workout Wednesday evening and it is expected that he will put up a good fight tonight.
