

HARDING MAKES APPEAL FOR LOYALTY

PREAMBLE OF BASIC LAW IS CITED BY HIM

Asks for a Rededication to Aims and Purposes of Government.

AMERICA MUST GET BACK TO A GREAT COMMON PURPOSE AND SHOW THE FAITH IN HER INSTITUTIONS.

Washington, May 24.—An appeal for a re-dedicating of the American people to the aims and purposes of their government as set forth in the preamble of the constitution, was set forth by President Harding today in an address at the opening session of the National American Council, an organization recently formed to encourage better American citizenship.

Such a rededication, the president said, would furnish to the nation, a compelling and dominant national interest, which, he said, had been lacking since the end of the World War.

Quoting the preamble, Mr. Harding said it constituted a "complete statement of our nation's aspiration—the chart for our course—and the inspiration of every effort to make one and all of us better citizens."

Lack Common Purpose. Deplored the lack of a common purpose such as set up by the war, the president said he had been giving, with respect to the "common observation nowadays—albeit too easily and likely made that democracy is on trial."

"We will be quite safe in admitting," he added, "that many of the institutions, which have been set up in the hope that through them the best aims of democracy might be realized, are on trial. We will make no mistake if we confess that the attitude and conduct of many people, who profess devotion to democratic institutions are on trial, but all this may be admitted without implying that any important progressive society is seeking an alternative for democracy."

"There is much questioning of ways and means and institutions, but as to the fundamentals, it certainly can be said that never has our country been more firmly committed to the broad ideals and purposes of democracy and never before were so many other countries and people seeking to establish like commitment."

DISTRESS SEEN IF WORK STOPS

Hoover Mum On Construction Council Plan to Curtail Building Erection.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—Indications here are that the administration and the department of commerce will not be drawn into the situation created by action of the American Construction Council, meeting at the home of Franklin D. Roosevelt in New York, in resolving that building operations must be curtailed until the prices of materials and labor come down. Only recently the department of commerce, advised that there was "indication in building, deemed it inadvisable to call a national conference on the subject.

Secretary Hoover has declined to discuss the far-reaching action of the construction council and he has not yet received from Mr. Roosevelt a resolution of request asking that Mr. Hoover appoint a statistical commission to prepare an authoritative index showing the trend of costs of construction and of materials and labor.

Government Building Delayed. Some months ago, and about the time time present building boom was getting under way, Secretary Hoover suggested that the government delay construction of a number of public works so as not to come into competition with private projects. The government still has no ambitious construction plans under way and it is not expected that even the new buildings in Washington, for which the president will ask congress next session, will be started until late in 1924.

Government officials are fully aware building costs have mounted to unprecedented figures and that there seems to be, as stated by the American construction council, "a serious situation throughout the country." However, it has been hoped in official circles that the situation would right itself and conditions become normal and this hope and confidence still prevails among government officials. For this and other reasons, therefore, it is not believed here that the government will either approve or disapprove of the action taken by the builders in New York.

Danger in Sudden Check. At the same time there seems to be apprehension in governmental quarters that a sudden check to all new building construction may bring distressing consequences.

Official Washington apparently intends to watch closely, but without suggestion or interference, the program of the builders and their council to defer all new construction for a few months in the hope of curbing the soaring costs of construction. It is assumed here that the builders have thoroughly canvassed the situation and their own private affairs, but for the present the government shows no inclination to step in either by calling a building conference or by an expression of opinion as to the wisdom or unwisdom of the action taken in New York.

Custom officials charged that Smith brought it in without declaration.

WINDS BLOOM WITH THE SPIRIT OF MIDSUMMER Beautiful and Colorful Displays Accompany Present Openings.

Midsommer openings are with us in all their colorful and beautiful design and the spirit of summer is the predominant note in window displays at the Fair Savings bank and the Ed. Erickson stores, both of which are now showing a most gorgeous array of the greatest assortment of summer wearing apparel seen in this city for years.

The big plate glass fairly breathe the outdoor spirit. All the major colors, with the hundreds of blends and soft-tinted tints between are woven into gauzy, filmy creations for midday, while there is also a great display of the sturdy, serviceable sport wearables so distinctly desired by every woman at this season of the year.

The interiors are veritable bowers of beauty and color and displays are arranged in the most fascinatingly fetching and attractive style. Running through every department of these two big stores is the atmosphere of summer, with its unnumbered suggestions for those who will live much out of doors this summer.

Even to the mere male, it is a treat to stroll through the stores mentioned and catch the harmonious color schemes and view the cunningly devised creations for women, which compel admiration and give one the feeling that life really is at its best in the summer season.

SEEK RECEIVER FOR PURNELL'S HOUSE OF DAVID

Court Refuses to Hear Petition While Probe Is Under Way.

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., May 24.—Judge Charles White of the Berrien county circuit court refused today to accept for trial a petition asking for a receivership for the House of David, located at Benton Harbor. The petition presented by Attorney Jerome Dobbins of Chicago asked for immediate receivership, naming H. S. Gray and Peter Dukeshoer of Benton Harbor as receivers.

In denying Mr. Dobbins' petition, Judge White held that an action for a receivership for individuals would have to come in the regular procedure and then the receivers appointed at the successful termination of the suit.

H. P. Dewhurst, attorney for the House of David colony, was summoned today to appear before the one-man grand jury investigation into charges of immorality in that cult. Indications today were that a few weeks' adjournment would follow this week's session.

Yesterday's session has developed little of major importance.

PRISONERS MAY DIE IF ACTION IS DELAYED LONG

Government Troops Surrounding Brigands Fall Back Six Miles.

Bandits Puzzled by Discontinuance of Negotiations, Send Out Courier Demanding Newspapers.

(By the Associated Press) Tientsin, China, May 24.—The Chinese government troops which had surrounded the Su Chow trait bandits and their foreign captives in the mountain stronghold have fallen back a distance of six miles, according to advices received today from Liang Chwang. The outposts for the brigands are following the troops as they retire.

The bandits, apparently puzzled at the recent discontinuance of negotiations for the release of the foreign prisoners, sent messengers to the relief workers at Liang Chwang demanding that newspapers be sent up to them; but the relief party carefully cut out any matter pertaining to the kidnapping outrage.

CHINESE POLITICS. WASHINGTON, May 24.—A delayed message from Minister Schurman, who is in Peking, which was received today by the state department, expressed Mr. Schurman's belief that the task of obtaining release of American and other foreign captives held by the Chinese bandits was "now complicated by the Chinese politics."

He said that "certain hostile factions were using the bandit outrage to discredit the Chihli party, the Peking government and Tsao Kun who had been a hopeful candidate for the presidency."

The message said it did not "seem probable that the bandits would carry out their threats against the foreign captives, but there was danger that during a prolonged series of negotiations and compromises, some of the prisoners might die of exposure, starvation or disease."

HERMAN GESSNER IS SELECTED HEAD OF HUMANE MOVE

Made County Chairman of National Jewish Hospital Activities in Denver.

Herman Gessner has been appointed chairman of the delegation of leading Jews of this city who are expected to attend the Subscriber's Convention of the National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives which will be held at the institution in Denver on June 22nd. Thousands of leading Jews from all over the United States will participate in this unique affair, which has been arranged in order to give the hosts of men and women all over the country an opportunity to participate in the twenty-fifth anniversary of the founding of this institution and get a first-hand conception of its magnitude.

In the quarter century of its existence, the National Hospital, the first free hospital in the United States for the care of tubercular poor, has grown from a modest affair housing sixty-four patients, to an institution with twelve modern buildings, covering a vast acreage.

In announcing the appointment of the chairman of this city's delegation to this novel convention, Mr. Manny Strause, chairman of the Subscriber's committee, said:

"The responses that are coming in from the fifty thousand invitations we have sent out for this unique convention indicate that Denver will, on June 22nd, be the rallying place for one of the largest Jewish gatherings in the history of this country. The National Jewish Hospital for Consumptives has won a special place in the hearts of its supporters. They know it, not as a place to which the miserable victim of civilization's greatest scourge sinks off to die, but as an institution where the victim of tuberculosis is given every possible scientific reinforcement in an effort to win back to health. And in the hearts of its supporters there is the hope that out of the National Hospital may come the method by which tuberculosis may be cured, just as typhoid and diabetes are now cured. That would be a great contribution to the progress of humanity."

All of these cases grew out of raids conducted by the police here on and about May 16th.

THINK FUGITIVE WHITFIELD IS IN MILWAUKEE

Trail of Alleged Slayer of Cleveland Policeman Is Hot.

Girl With Him Likely to Be Held on Criminal Charge, Is Intimation of Police.

(By the Associated Press) MADISON, Wis., May 24.—The trail of John H. Whitfield, alleged murderer of Patrolman Griffin of Cleveland, Ohio, was seen by police to lead to Milwaukee today, in the information that a man believed to be the fugitive stopped at Okkeo, Columbia county, Wednesday morning for gasoline and oil and asked the way to the Wisconsin city.

Whitfield knows the haunts of Milwaukee and is believed by officials to be in hiding there. The general storekeeper at Okkeo reported today that a man answering the description of Whitfield stopped at his place at 4 o'clock Wednesday morning. He drove a large car answering the description of the machine stolen in Madison shortly after the fugitive escaped from the police.

H. J. William, assistant district attorney from Cleveland, and Dr. C. J. Kilbane, special investigator, and R. A. Murphy, all of Cleveland, are working on the case. They spent last night in attempting to trace the trail of the alleged murderer and were back at Madison again today.

Marie Price, the 14-year-old companion of Whitfield, may be held to face a criminal charge because of her association with Whitfield. It was learned from the police today, she is being detained at the police station awaiting the arrival of a Cleveland detective who is expected today.

Officials are working on the belief that the girl who says that she was to marry Whitfield in Madison, knows of the possible course that may be followed by the man in his escape. They are connecting her with some responsibility for his flight from Cleveland. "Chili Al" Sully, proprietor of the restaurant in which Whitfield was captured, is claiming the reward for his arrest. He says the alleged murderer was taken through his efforts and that he was in no way responsible for his later escape from the police officers.

Dr. Ryan was forced to abandon his practice and went to New Mexico in the hope of turning the tide in his favor but it is indicated that the climate of the southwest did not work an improvement.

WEEK'S CAMP FOR GIRL SCOUT HEADS WHO WISH TO STUDY

Will Have an Opportunity to Enjoy Outing at Garth While Qualifying for Leadership.

Requests for information concerning the Girl Scout movement have come to the Escanaba office during the past year from ten towns outside of Delta county, where six towns already have Girl Scout work organized.

To make it possible for prospective leaders in other parts of the Upper Peninsula to gain a practical first hand knowledge of Girl Scouting, a week-end Leaders' Training Camp will be established at Garth beginning Thursday, July 5th, and ending Sunday, July 8th.

Garth is a beautiful spot six miles out from Rapid River. It has all the features that go to make up a desirable camp site. There is a large open field for sports and athletics, a wide strip of level ground between the shore and tents, plenty of large shade trees, an excellent beach and pure drinking water.

The camp program will be in charge of Miss Ann Hynes, Girl Scout Regional Director for the middle west, and Miss Elizabeth Haney, Girl Scout Recreational and Educational Director for the middle west. The services of these two women is provided free by National Headquarters as part of their service to this district. There will be therefore, no tuition charge, but a camp fee of $5.00 will be charged, to cover cost of rent, food and cooks.

The camp will be run on the patrol system, just as a Girl Scout camp is run, an intensive instruction in the technique of troop management and tenderfoot and second class work will be given. There will be plenty of time for friendliness and happy times as well.

The camp is open to any woman who wishes to learn more of the ways of the Girl Scouts, although it is especially declared that Girl Scout Leaders and sponsors of present or prospective troops attend. Enrollment up to 40 women will be accepted in the order in which they are received.

Enroll with Miss Jean Guthrie, Girl Scout Director, 716 Ludington street, Escanaba, Mich.

ROGERS REPLIES TO CRITICS ON THE CONDITION ROADS

Points Out That His Department Is Ready to Take Responsibility for Its Share.

LANSING, May 24.—Frank F. Rogers, state highway commissioner, today issued a statement answering criticisms recently made in the legislature and elsewhere against his department. The commissioner asserts that the department is willing to take its full share of whatever blame may be due it, but points out that not a single road built under the $50,000,000 bond program has been found faulty. He contends that state supervision has greatly improved since bond issues were authorized. The statement asserts that notwithstanding the fact that 12,999 miles of highway are standing up and giving satisfaction, a nine mile stretch at Flint, which was not built with bond money, and with which the state had little to do, is held up as a shocking example of the work done by the department on the entire system.

The statement follows: "Plans and specifications for road building, like the plans and specifications for motor vehicles, have undergone many revisions in the last decade, but more especially during the last five years, during which time heavier and heavier motor trucks have become common on the public highways, until the allowed truck load is 16 tons, or fully one-half the old time carloads on our highways.

In the meantime the thickness of the paved types of highways to withstand this heavy trucking has changed from six to eight and nine inches, which in many cases are heavily reinforced with steel.

During the pre-war years of 1917 and 1918 (before the heavy trucks became common) a few paved roads were built in the state under a specification calling for a five inch base and two inch asphalt top, the most notable examples being the Monroe road south, the Lapeer road east of Flint in Genesee county, and the Dixie Highway in the same county, which went to pieces under the heaviest trucking in 1922 when, for the first time, very heavy trucking came to this road. For the first three years this road stood up well under local traffic, with average repair bills of less than $500 a mile.

The Lapeer road east of Flint, built under the same specification and by the same contractor, is still standing up well and costing but nominal repairs.

The Monroe-Toledo road south of Erie, which broke up under war time trucking traffic, was so poorly built that the state refused to accept it, and no state money was paid on this road. Some sections north of Erie have broken up, through full depth in every place, and have cost rather heavy repairs. The road is admittedly too thin for present day traffic and a new road between Detroit and Toledo is being built of concrete from eight to nine inches in thickness and is being heavily reinforced across Monroe county.

The state highway department is always willing to take its full share of blame for its errors, but does not wish to answer for all the shortcomings of all the road builders in the state.

"In the case of the Flint road which failed, the contract was with the county and not the state, and it further specified that: 'All work done in the construction of said road shall be under the direction and to the satisfaction of the engineer of the county and the county road commissioner.' It was therefore entirely supervised by the county forces and had only such infrequent inspection as the state district engineer could give it in connection with his other duties. In fact, the state had no standard specification for roads of this type at that time, but in reality adopted the specifications prepared by the county when the application for state reward was accepted. At that time the state did not participate in the cost of maintenance, the county bearing all the cost, and this seemed like a very safe thing to do.

"The same was true of the work in many other counties and out of some 13,000 miles of improved roads in the state on which state reward, or state funds have been expended, this road, about 2 miles in length or seven-tenths of one per cent of the entire system, seems now to be the only one held up as a shocking example of the work of the highway department. Notwithstanding the fact that 12,999 miles of the system are giving excellent service and causing no comment, except that many people desire paved roads where only gravel or macadam exists.

"The road in question received no bond money and it can truthfully be said that before the bond money became available the specifications were so amended and the state supervision so improved that I cannot recall where a single road built in part with bond money has failed or is not giving full satisfaction, considering the cost and type of road."

Mr. Rogers and his department were severely censured by Governor Groesbeck, in his special message to the legislature regarding the highway finance proposals. He charged the department with inefficiency. Speakers on the floor of the house also declared the department to be inefficient.

The most recent development to live the members of the highway conflict was Groesbeck's recent charge that representatives of the state highway department lobbied against the automobile weight tax bill.

MICHIGAN MAY GET ITS COAL CHEAPER

I. C. C. Will Hold Hearing on Petition of V. M. Brennan of Detroit.

DETROIT, May 24.—A movement started by Circuit Judge-elect Vincent M. Brennan, former congressman from Detroit, may result in a slight decrease in anthracite coal prices to Michigan consumers.

Least the buying public should storm the offices of the coal dealers, and demand immediate reductions, it is pointed out that the proposition, if anything is done about it at all, must move through the tortuous channels of interstate commerce commission procedure, perhaps be the subject of several hearings, and at last be weighed in the official scales.

Mr. Brennan some time ago voiced the belief that the freight rates on anthracite coal from Buffalo to Detroit were too high and accordingly filed a protest with the I. C. C. That body has promised an investigation, with a public hearing to be held here at which Michigan will be given an opportunity to cite its side of the case. Toledo, which pays virtually the same rate on coal from Buffalo that Detroit does, has served notice of its intention to intervene and wear Michigan's colors for the expected battle.

If a reduction is made it is not likely that as much as one dollar a ton would be topped from the freight rate, in the opinion of local traffic experts, and it might be as little as twenty or twenty-five cents. Another thing in the amount is that about a year might be required to bring about such a reduction, regardless of how slight. Whether Michigan buyers of anthracite coal will be able to procure hard coal any cheaper a year from now remains to be seen.

The bulk of Michigan's anthracite comes to Detroit from Buffalo.

FORGER SLASHES SELF TO END LIFE

(By the Associated Press)
MARSHALL, Mich., May 24.—Parys Barney, alias George Roberts, Jr., 27 years old, attempted suicide in the county jail Sunday.

Hearing a commotion in the lower cage where Barney was confined, Deputy Hartne called Sheriff Colby and Deputy Schuler. Upon opening the door they saw blood spurting from Barney's left arm. Dr. Gesner bound up deep cuts on the forearm and wrist. The man used a safety razor, he said.

Barney was arrested in 1921 for larceny. Early this year he was jailed again on similar charges. He was taken next for jumping his board bill, and at present is serving time for forging a five-dollar check.

GUARDS WATCH 'TIGER' WOMAN

Vigilance Increases for Fear Clara Phillips Will End Own Life.

TEGUCHI, Honkura, May 24.—The "Tiger woman" passed her cell in futile desperation Sunday as spying eyes of guards watched her every movement.

So great is the fear that Clara Phillips, hammer murderer, will commit suicide rather than return to California prison, American representatives have beseeched the government to let them guard her. Their request has not been granted, though her personal guard has been increased and arrangements made to hasten extradition papers.

Will Be Kept in Irons.
The American detectives expect to sail with her within a day or two if possible. She will be kept in irons aboard ship and stationed in a special cell when she is returned to California.

The woman who was convicted of murdering Mrs. Alberta Meadows in a fiendish passion of jealousy maintains sullen silence. She will not answer the questions of authorities and newspapermen fear to go near her. Several of them have been attacked. A foreigner was cast bodily out of her cell even though a guard attempted to help him.

The true story of the life she led after her daring escape from prison several months ago may never be known. She has answered all questions with a silent, icy stare. From the pieces of the story which the authorities here have been able to pick up from various sources, it is thought that she must have hid in some remote spot near Los Angeles after her break-away.

A few weeks later she is believed to have crossed the border, gone to Tia Juana and fled further into Mexico when detectives came hot upon her trail. She lost herself in southern Mexico but fell into the clutches of authorities here when she later crossed into Honkura.

Husband Is Silent

She has received no word from her husband in Los Angeles who has been closely watched since her escape. He was at one time arrested on suspicion that he had aided her in leaping the prison wall, sliding down a drain pipe, and dashing away in an automobile.

The Los Angeles detectives likewise are investigating the connection of Rita May Weaver, sister of Clara, who is held with her here. The sister came to the jail and obtained Clara's clothing after the escape. Then she too suddenly disappeared and no trace of her could be found. Her identity did not become known until Deputy Sheriff Hiscailuz from Los Angeles county arrived and confronted her. The sister will not be returned to the United States it is thought. She is facing a felony charge there and it is considered likely that Hiscailuz will permit her to remain here.

THURSDAY, MAY 24, 1923

PROSPERITY CAN NOT BE LEGISLATED.

If it develops that the State Farm Bureau and Michigan farmers generally are fighting Dr. Friday's continuance in the presidency of the state's agricultural college because he contends that farming is a business and that prosperity can not be legislated into it, these gentlemen would appear to have placed themselves in a position where they are simply unwilling to bear the truth.

These contentions may not be the whole basis of the present controversy, but since the director of the Bureau, who is also a member of the Board of Agriculture, has declared as lately as a week ago that farmers will have to enter politics if they hope to realize their aspirations, and since Dr. Friday has repeatedly warned the farmer that such a performance is doomed to fatality, it must be that this constitutes a major point of friction.

Farming, in spite of any accumulating opinion to the contrary among farmers, is a business governed by business laws which transcend the operations of political legislation. Dr. Friday is said to have opposed the recent Rural Credits measure on the ground that the way to get out of debt is not to borrow money. Certainly that contention is economically sound, and so is the opinion that the man who farms on a sound business basis has never had any serious difficulty in obtaining credit at a local bank to finance his operations.

If farmers insist on storing a class consciousness to the extent that they will make an exclusive political party, and other business men will work themselves into the same frame of mind, the country eventually will be overrun with clans having no common purpose and no capacity for effective political action for the common good of all.

Friends say Dr. Friday's unpopularity with farmers grows in part from the same attitude which he has brought to his study of farming, his inclination to consider farming in the light of economic law and facts rather than in terms of emotion and sentiment. If opposition based on this condition succeeds in driving Dr. Friday from the college, it is certain that no one would lose by that performance save the farmers themselves. A frank friend is notoriously an uncomfortable counsellor, but it is about time the farmer in this country lent an ear to a recital of economic facts that are going to keep on operating long after Farmers' parties, and legislation that distinguishes between farming and other businesses, are dead.

A MAGISTRATE'S OPINION.

Frederick B. House, who presides as magistrate in New York's traffic court, challenges the opinion of all those who think that women are not as well fitted to drive automobiles as men are, by declaring his deliberate opinion that it would be better if all the taxicabs in the city had women drivers. From the thousands of cases he has tried, he finds that they drive as well as men; that they obey the law more carefully; that they seldom commit serious breaches of the traffic law, and that when they get into trouble, they are "better sports." By that last qualification the judge means that women are less likely to run away from the scene of an accident than men are, and that when they get into court they take their medicine with better grace.

Some of the elements in this complex judgment are revolutionary. That women will take fewer chances with danger or with the law than men is a part of everyday experience, but that they are able to meet the sudden emergencies of city traffic as well as men, and that they are gamier in taking the consequences of their acts, are propositions that fly in the face of tradition. However, there may be truth in what the judge says. If a woman driver is involved in an accident which results in injuries to the third persons her natural sympathy with the injured might well hold her to her duty where a man would "step on it" and escape.

As to a woman's ability to meet unexpected traffic dangers, there is more cause for doubt. Getting rattled is one of the privileges of the sex when men are around, but in favor of the judge's contention it must be admitted that women are capable when they are trained for it of the greatest nonchalance in situations that would freeze an ordinary man's blood. Take, for instance, the lady who swings from trapeze to trapeze just under the peak of the big stop.

AN OLD STORY RETOLD.

The loss of seventy-one lives in the little school house at Cleveland, South Carolina, was the result of a combination of circumstances which has been repeated in essentially the same way times without number. A crowd gathers in an inflammable building which is not sufficiently provided with exits and has no fire escapes. A fire starts, there is a panic and the strong trample the weak to death, while they block each other away from safety until the flames complete the work of death. That was the story of the Iroquois fire, of the Collingwood fire and is not told once more with little variation at Cleveland.

It would seem that such a lesson could need no enforcement by law or words of warning, and yet it is certain that the country still has innumerable fire traps which will continue to be used, and that some of them will burn in course of time, covering whole communities with woe which will be the more agonizing because a little forethought and a trifling expenditure would have prevented the tragedy.

When George Harvey landed on this side he brought twenty trunks with him. It being certain that George does not need that much clothing one naturally wonders whether an ambassador's right to forget the Volstead act works both ways.

A distinguished British neurologist says that one of the causes of suicide is that "early morning feeling" which makes so many people cranky at breakfast time. This gives the man who believes in lying abed one more argument.

"I'll pick you up most likely at Havana," said he to glaze the matter over. "I expect I'll have a good time, but rather rough. I want to do some fishing."

Simmons directed the lowering of a boat. The companionway was down. The baggage was put in, and Simmons, seated by Ratcliffe in the stern seats, took the yoke lines. Not a sign of Skeleton, not even a face at a port-hole!

"Give way!" shouted Simmons.

As they drew up to the Sarah Tyler, Ratcliffe saw Satan leaning over the rail and watching them. Jude was nowhere visible.

"Hullo!" said Ratcliffe as they came alongside. "I've come back."

"I was half-expectin' you," said Satan with a grin.

"Will you take me for that cruise right off?"

"Sure!" Satan stepped to the cabin companionway and shouted down it.

"Hullo!" came Jude's voice. "He's come back!"

As Jude came on deck the suitcase was being hoisted on board. Ratcliffe passed down a five-pound note to the boat's crew, and then stood, waiting to Simmons as the boat put away.

Then, turning to Satan, he tried to discuss terms, but was instantly silenced by Jude and Satan. They would hear nothing of money. Used to sea changes and strange happenings, they seemed to think nothing of the business, and after the first words fell to talking together.

The trend of their talk induced in Ratcliffe a vaguely uncanny feeling. It was as though they had already discussed his coming on board and the storage of himself and his baggage, as though they had known by instinct that he would return. The size of the suitcase affected Jude.

"You can't keep that," said Jude. "It's a long sight too big. Say, what have you got in it?"

"Clothes."

Jude tilted back the old Panama she was wearing and took her hat on the suitcase. Her feet were bare, and she twisted her toes in thought as she sat for a moment turning matters over in her mind.

"You can stick the things in the spare locker," said she at last. "You gonna have a gay old time if you keep this in the cabin, tumbler over it. Better empty her here an' cart the stuff below."

Ratcliffe opened the suitcase. The steward of the Dryad was an expert: in a past existence he had probably been a pack rat. In any given space he could have tucked away half as much as any other ordinary mortal. But he certainly had no imagination, or perhaps he had been too busy to cast his eye overboard and see the manner of craft Ratcliffe was joining, and Ratcliffe had been far too much exercised in his mind about Skeleton to notice what was being packed.

Jude on her knees helped.

"What's this?" asked Jude, coming on a black satin lining.

"Confound the fool!" said Ratcliffe. "He needn't have packed that: it's a dinner jacket."

"Mean to say you sit down to your dinner in a jacket?" Jude choked and snorted while Ratcliffe hurriedly, on his knees, hauled out the trousers and waistcoats that went with the garments.

"That's the lining—it's worn the other way about—I know it's tom foolery. Stick 'em all in one bundle—Lord! look at the shirts he's packed!"

"They've got tucks in them," said Jude, looking at the plaited fronts.

"I know. They go with that tom-fool dinner suit. You can't knock sense into the head of a bedroom steward. Come along and let's get them down below."

"Say," said Jude, when they had finished, "what are you when you're ashore, anyway?"

"I'm one of the idle rich," said Ratcliffe, lighting his pipe.

"Well, you won't be idle aboard here," said Jude definitely. "What was your dad?"

"He was a ship owner."

"How many ships did he own?"

"About forty."

She turned to see if he were guying her.

"There was another man in the business," said Ratcliffe, "a partner: Ratcliffe & Holt was the name of the firm. The governor died without making a will, and his money was divided up between my two brothers and me."

"How much did you get?"

"Over a hundred thousand."

"Dollars?"

"No—pounds—four hundred thousand dollars."

"Got 'em still?"

"Yes."

"In the bank?"

"Some; the rest is invested."

She seemed to lose interest in the money business and hung for a moment over the rail, whistling almost noiselessly between her teeth and kicking up a bare heel.

"Well," she said suddenly, as if waking from a reverie, "this won't bolt potatoes—I've got to get dinner ready. Come 'long and help, if you're willin'."

There was half a sack of potatoes in the galley. She set the stove going, and then, on her knees before the open sack, she sent him to fetch half a bucket of water from overboard. He found the bucket with a rope attached, brought the water, and flung the potato kettle, then he brought more water for the washing of the potatoes.

"Where did you get them from?" asked Ratcliffe.

"Get which?"

"The potatoes."

"Bought them," said Jude; then, as though suddenly smitten by recollection, "No, we didn't, nuther; we kidooled them out of a fruiter."

"What's a fruiter?"

"Fruit steamer. Satan fixed her."

"How did he fix her?"

"Well," said Jude, "it's no harm to hold up a packet if you don't throw her off her course—much. It's the owners take, and they can stand the racket. The crew likes it, and if there's passengers aboard they just love it."

"Do You Mean to Say You Hold Up Steamers?" Asked Ratcliffe.

"Do you mean to say you hold up steamers?" asked Ratcliffe.

"Yep."

"But how do you do it?"

"Oh, it's only now and then. What's easier than to lay in her course with the flag at halfmast? Then she heaves to."

"And you board her and ask for potatoes, or whatever you want?"

"Not much," said Jude. "They'd boot you off the ship. Water's what you ask for, pretendin' you're dying of thirst; then you drink till you're near bustin' and fill the breaker you've brought with you. It's all on the square. Satan would never hold up a ship unless he had some fish to offer them for whatever he wants—potatoes or fruit or tobacco. He's got the fish in the boat and hands it up. They're always glad of fresh fish and they offer to buy it; but he won't take money, but says, 'If you've got a few potatoes handy, I don't mind takin' them for the fish.' Sometimes it's fruit, he wants, or other things. Then you push off—and if it's a passenger packet the passengers, thinkin' they've saved you from dyin' of thirst, line up and cheer. It's no end of fun."

"What flag do you sail under?"

"Murrican, what else? You see," went on Jude as she put the potatoes into the kettle, "fish costs nothing to us and they're mighty glad of it, but reckon they'd bat our heads off if they knew about the dyin' of thirst business."

"But suppose you struck the same ship twice?"

"It's not a job one does every day," said Jude, with a trace of contempt in her tone, "and Satan don't wear blinkers, and it's not a job you could do at all if you didn't know the lie of the fishin' banks by where the ship tracks run. I reckon you've got to learn something about things."

"I reckon I have," said Ratcliffe, laughing, "and I bet you'll teach me!"

"Well, shy that over to begin with," said Jude, giving him the pail of dirty water.

He flung the water over the side.

When dinner was over Jude made Ratcliffe help to wash up the plates and things in the galley.

"Satan's cap," said Jude. "He never helps in the washin' or swillin'. Not cold water—land's make! where did you learn washin' up?—hot! I've left some in that billy on the stove."

She had taken off her old coat and rolled her guernsey sleeves up to the shoulders nearly, and it came to Ratcliffe as he helped, without a word of remonstrance, naturally, and as a part adapts itself to the economy of a whole, he had sunk into the position of kitchen maid and general help to the Tyler family; furthermore that Satan was less a person than a subtle influence. Satan seemed to obtain his ends more by wishing than by willing. He wanted an extra hand, and he had somehow put the spell of his wish on him, Ratcliffe.

HAVE NO FEARS OF THIRD PARTY

Political Leaders See Most Danger in Attitude of Independent Voters.

(By The Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, May 24.—"Nomination of Senator Borah as a third party presidential candidate by the Committee of Forty-eight has again set the vigilant observers of the two old parties to appraising the possibilities of a real third party in 1924.

The result of their survey of the situation is this: Republican leaders do not believe there will be a third party worthy the name. Return of industrial and business prosperity, increased wages, better conditions all over the country, have stilled unrest to a great degree, they say. They count on tax revision and other legislative steps planned for the coming session of congress still further to appease the dissatisfaction that always is manifested against the party in power. Popular belief in the old saw "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" will discount promises held out by the third party progressives, the "regulars" claim.

Democrats aren't worried by fears of a third party for they figure it would draw more votes from the Republicans than from the Democratic candidates. They are not encouraging it though because organization politicians never encourage any movement that ultimately might threaten their control of the government.

The "regulars" of both parties say the progressives never can get together well enough or stay together long enough to get anywhere from 1912 on to prove this.

The danger to them, they admit, lies not in the efforts of the committee of forty-eight, or any other so-called radical or progressive group to put a third party in the field, but in the growing independence of the American voter, who each election manifests greater disregard for party lines.

Independence in Congress. This has been reflected lately in congress, and in the new congress probably will be even more evident, as the progressive bloc maneuvers first with one side and then with the other.

When they think of a third party, the old-line politicians, always speak of Hiram Johnson. For some reason, they apparently regard Johnson as more dangerous, if turned loose as a candidate, than either Borah or La Follette. This probably is because to Johnson there still clings some remnant of the old Rooseveltian mantle. But the politicians here cannot see Johnson leading a revolt now, either inside the Republican party or out of it. They know he will be urged to oppose Harding on the international issue, but they do not believe he will.

LaFollette they regard as an extremist, and Borah could not win, they hold, because he has no constructive program. He is most influential and effective, they claim, when he is opposing some one else's program.

ROGERS DENIED HIGHWAYS FAIL

State Commissioner Defends System; Says Only One Per Cent Is Faulty.

Of some 13,000 miles of improved roads throughout the state, only nine miles, or less than one per cent of the entire system, have failed to give satisfactory service.

Virtually all improved roads have been generally satisfactory to users, Mr. Rogers said, with the exception of a nine-mile stretch of the Dixie highway in Genesee county.

Mr. Rogers pointed out that a new method of setting roads before their acceptance by the state practically precludes the possibility of unsatisfactory highways.

Michigan, according to Mr. Rogers, has about 75,000 miles of public wagon roads outside of the town and cities.

"So far as I know," Mr. Rogers said, "none of the roads built under a state contract where bond money was used has failed to give the service a road of its particular type was expected to render."

Part of the Monroe highway, south of Erie failed to hold up, he asserted, but the state discovered its defects and did not accept it.

No paved types of road will be accepted in the future, he said, until they have been bored and thoroughly tested.

Mr. Rogers emphasized the fact that increased traffic over state roads, especially by heavy trucks, has necessitated a corresponding increase in the thickness of paving.

The Lapeer road east of Flint, which failed to hold up, Mr. Rogers pointed out, was built under a county and not a state contract, and was approved by the Genesee county road commissioners.

Cider, 75 Years In Jar, Is Soft

(By The Associated Press) PIQUA, O., May 24.—The only American rival of the ancient morsels of food unearthed with the treasures of King Tut is in the basement of Mrs. Maude Carter's home near here.

The food—all canned goods—has been conceded the oldest in the country by the United States department of agriculture and soon will be taken to Washington as an exhibit of proper canning methods and perfect sterilization.

One glass of elder is 75 years old. Two years ago, soon after prohibition, members of Mrs. Carter's household, not believing the elder could still be "soft" after so many years, opened the jar. They found it still sweet.

Ann Arbor—Enrollment for the university school is expected to set a new record this year. Last year nearly 2,900 students came for the short session.

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich., May 24.—Ralph Bosch and Donald Randle, 13-year-old firebugs, who confessed to setting fires here which caused losses amounting to $500,000, were to be arraigned in juvenile court today before Judge Clark E. Higbee.

BOY TAKES FAMILY CAR FOR RIDE AND IS KILLED

BIG RAPIDS, Mich., May 24.—Louis Haney, 14 years old, of Remus, died last night of injuries received in the afternoon in an automobile accident. Louis and two other boys had taken out the family car. In going down hill they overturned and the Haney boy was pinned underneath.

ASSERTS MANY AUTO LAMPS ARE FAULTY

Bureau of Standards Finds High Percentage Off Focus.

WASHINGTON, May 24.—A very large proportion of automobile headlights are not doing their proper work. Probably a majority of those in use everywhere are inadequate for the drivers of their cars, or for other users of the roads.

In one week 415 cars have been inspected, and the bureau's summary shows that the lamps were out of focus in 73.3 per cent of them, that 52.8 per cent had dirty lenses, that the lamps were not correctly tilted in 45.7 per cent, that the reflectors were dirty, rusted or dented in 40 per cent, and that the lenses were twisted in 35.8 per cent.

When it is remembered, the bureau officials say, that the owners of these 415 cars were so much interested in having good lamps that they drove out of their way of their own accord to go to the bureau and that they waited in line for their turn to have their test, it is obvious that if there could be such a large proportion of defects in cars whose owners were concerned about having everything in proper condition there must be an appalling number of automobiles on the roads that are in bad need of attention.

Presbyterian Assembly Told Pensions Are Inadequate.

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., May 24.—Dr. Henry B. Master, of Philadelphia, has submitted to the Presbyterian General Assembly the 68th annual report of the Presbyterian Board of Ministerial Relief and Sustentation, of which he is general secretary. He said more than half of the Presbyterian churches had a membership of less than 100, which made necessary a pension system sustained by the larger and richer churches.

The relief department of the board needed $1,600,000 a year for income for retired ministers, widows and orphans of ministers, and for support of three Presbyterian homes and the tuberculosis sanitarium. The board needed another $500,000 a year for the church's share of annuities in the sustentation department, which is one-fifth supported by previous savings.

Dr. Master also reported as American secretary of the Alliance of Reformed Churches Throughout the World Holding the Presbyterian System. After reviewing relief work in Europe, and fixing at approximately $42,200,000 the sum sent abroad, the report, referring to evangelization, says in part: "More than half of the 100,000 of our brethren in Russia live along the Volga river, in southeastern Russia, where the famine is worst. And now there is a great movement to carry on the work on a larger scale."

ALASKAN TRIP OF HARDING BELITTLED

Old-Timers There Say Harding's Visit Will Result in Big Rumpus.

(By The Associated Press) WASHINGTON, May 24.—President Harding has been under the "spell of the Yukon" for 25 years. The secret of what is drawing the president to the vast northern domain was learned from Ohio friends. Old timers, however, regard the president's trip as futile from a practical standpoint.

Alaskan pioneers declare that no man can "learn" Alaska in two or three weeks. Railroad and other traveling facilities are so limited that Mr. Harding and his cabinet advisers can gain but a fleeting glimpse of Alaska and its complex problems.

So far as placing Alaska under jurisdiction of one department is concerned, Alaskans declare it "can't be done" under the constitution, which divides the functions of government.

KILLS WIFE WHO CAUSED ARREST FOR NON-SUPPORT

LUDINGTON, Mich., May 24.—Adolph Musil, Summit township fruit grower, who killed his wife Saturday by slashing her throat and then attempted to take his own life in the same manner, is still alive in a local hospital, where he is under arrest. Musil, who had spent the winter in Milwaukee, was placed on suspended sentence here Friday after pleading guilty to a non-support charge brought by his wife. Following his release officers say he remarked: "Her complaint against me was her death warrant."

Beautify Your Lawn

Have Your Lawn Mower Sharpened by Machinery—Make Mowing a Pleasure Instead of a Drudge.

This Is the Machine That Does It.

It is a well known fact that owing to the peculiar shape of the blades it is next to impossible to sharpen a Lawn Mower with a file, and many first-class Mowers have been ruined in the attempt. Your Mower ground with this machine will be sharp and stay sharp longer than the old style way which is usually done by inexperienced workmen with an emery wheel, file or emery dust, etc. While the emery dust method is a cheap one it is not desirable. The clearance of the cutting blade is reduced, making more surface in contact with the lower bar, so that it TEARS the grass instead of SHEARING it, at the same time making it run harder than ever. Next time your Mower needs sharpening, bring it in or notify us, and we will make it cut so nicely that it will surprise you. YOUR MONEY BACK IF NOT SATISFACTORY

50,000 FIRMS MADE OUTLAW

Declared Illegally Formed Through Stock Purchase by Personal Notes.

(By the Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, May 24.—Fifty thousand American business concerns, representing a total investment of at least $2,500,000,000, are affected by a federal court decision here, holding void the purchase of stock through personal notes in all corporations organized under the laws of the state of Delaware, it was learned last week.

The decision, handed down by Judge Robert E. Mattingly in a test case, was based on a clause in the Delaware state constitution, which prohibits the use of personal notes in purchasing stock from Delaware corporations.

Fear Many Suits
Revocation of this clause in the Delaware constitution, according to corporation experts here, will have far-reaching effect, and may lead to the institution of thousands of suits to recover funds paid by investors using personal notes in stock transactions with Delaware corporations. Lawyers also predicted it might lead to the collapse of many corporations as a result of the recovery suits.

The decision is retroactive and applies to all stock subscriptions which included a personal note of the investor, even though the note has long since been paid. Suits to throw out such transactions, it was established, may be filed not only by the investor who has the note, but by any other stockholder in the corporation.

Judge Mattingly's decision was rendered in a double test case initiated between Henry H. Byrne, and assistant attorney general, and the Stock Exchange Security corporation. Byrne had purchased $1,500 in the corporation stock, paying $500 in cash, and giving a note for $1,000. Byrne sued to recover the cash, and the corporation, sued to make him pay his note, long overdue. Judge Mattingly threw out the corporation's case, and, in addition, upheld Byrne's claim for recovery of the $500 cash.

Effect of Ruling.
Corporation lawyers here were agreed Thursday that the decision would cause:

- 1—Elimination of most so-called "wild-cat" corporations, which took advantage of the loose Delaware laws to incorporate.
- 2—A flood of suits by "big" stockholders to drive out "small holders," who used personal notes in purchasing stock from Delaware corporations whose stock valuation has since been sharply increased.
- 3—Other suits by stockholders, who gave notes to recover their investments from Delaware corporations, whose stock valuation has sharply decreased.
- 4—Additional suits by investors to recover cash paid into unstable Delaware corporations, along with notes which have not yet matured.
- 5—A barrier to Delaware corporations against collecting on unpaid notes given for the purchase of stock.

Magnesite Plant To Be Completed Within Thirty Days

Officers of the Universal Magnesite Products Company expect to have their new plant on Stephenson avenue in full operation within the next thirty days. The big new building is now moving toward completion rapidly and it is expected it will be under roof and ready for occupancy within the next few days. While a small amount of magnesite material is being produced now in the old plant, it is of negligible quantity compared with the amount the company expects to turn out when the new plant is ready to function.

Among the other gifts were an obelisk of coal from the Silesian miners and several rugs woven by Polish peasants.
