MILLIONS OF DAMAGE DONE OUT IN KANSAS

Fort Worth Weather Bureau Warns Texas Against Deluge.

Much Additional Damage Expected as Result of Water Constantly Rising.

Fort Worth, Texas, June 11.—Police were warned by the Fort Worth weather bureau officials this morning to sound flood warnings through the Trinity river bottoms, as the water is 28 1/2 feet deep now and another rise is coming. Families are being advised to move to higher ground.

Kansas Hit Hard.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., June 11.—With five persons reported killed and thousands driven from their homes and property damage estimated at millions of dollars, many districts in Kansas remain flooded today.

Torrential rains over the state for the last three days caused many rivers and small streams to overflow their banks and destroy crops in the low lands and inundate residences and business places of several towns.

In some places today streams were reported flooding and no much additional damage was expected. Arkansas City and Winfield suffered greatly from the flood.

Three Thousand Homeless.

Three thousand persons are declared to be homeless in Arkansas City and an appeal has been sent out by the mayor for aid from surrounding territory. The estimated flood damage there is placed at two million dollars. Both the Arkansas and the Walnut rivers were out of their banks there and a large part of the residential portion of the city was flooded. A thousand persons were marooned in a school house and in other buildings in one part of the city which is higher than the rest.

Kaw River Rises.

Winfield reported a hundred families homeless and the water and lights there as well as in many other towns was out of commission. The "Santa Fe" train No. 18 was isolated by high waters all day yesterday and the passengers moved to a special relief train in row boats. There is no danger of a flood in Topeka, it was reported. The Kaw river was reported rising around Topeka and floods were feared for a time along the upper parts of the stream.

Trains were reported on time today with the exception of those passing through the flooded district in Kansas.

THE WEATHER
For Escanaba and vicinity: Fair tonight and Tuesday; not much change in temperature; gentle variable winds.

A Trained Fire Imperils Thousands Today

TERMINAL OF "PENNSY" IN QUAKER CITY ENDANGERED

Million Dollar Loss Is Estimate Given Out at Noon.

Lights Go Out in Buildings and Add to Confusion of Panicky Passengers.

(By the Associated Press)
PHILADELPHIA, Pa., June 11.—Fire early today practically destroyed the gigantic trainshed of the Broad street station, the Philadelphia terminal of the Pennsylvania railroad. A quantity of mail and baggage and a number of passenger coaches were also burned.

The flames did not reach the main building containing the waiting rooms and ticket offices. The general offices of the company were not damaged. There was no official estimate of the loss, but it is believed it will approximate at least a million dollars.

The fire started shortly after 1 o'clock this morning under the wooden platform of the trainshed, which covered several acres, and spread so rapidly that the passengers in sleeping cars standing on the tracks had difficulty in making their escape.

Dense volumes of smoke filled the shed and poured into the waiting rooms and other parts of the station. Incoming passengers managed to make their way through and find the exits. Hundreds of persons, waiting for outgoing trains, fled from the smoke-filled building, when smoke began to come through the doors.

Plunged into Darkness.

Intense excitement prevailed and to add to the confusion the lights went out in some parts of the building. Some of the arriving passengers spent the night at hotels, but the majority continued to their destination when service was restored.

Officials could not say what was the cause of the fire. A round up of the hospitals by the police, showed about 29 persons, none of them passengers, were slightly injured, the greater number of them being members of the fire departments.

LOHMILLER TO GIVE CITY'S OLDEST MAN GOLD HEADED CANE

Register the Place and Date of Your Birth With The Escanaba Daily Mirror This Week.

Harry J. Lohmiller, the jeweler, whose place of business is crowded daily and nightly at the auction sale of his stock, today announced that he is going to present to the oldest man in Escanaba a beautiful gold headed cane. This will be in the form of an endorsement for the oldest man in the city, as Mr. Lohmiller provides that the cane is to be carried by the oldest man until the time of his death, and it then passes on to the next oldest man in the city. In this way, the oldest citizen of male persuasion in Escanaba will always have a Lohmiller gold headed cane.

Mr. Lohmiller has arranged for all participants to register at the Escanaba Daily Mirror office. Every man in the city of advanced years is asked to register so there will be no question as to who shall be awarded this fine cane.

Come or send your name and address to the Mirror office. Give the date and place of your birth and any other information which may be useful in determining who actually is the oldest man living in Escanaba. Registrations will be accepted at any time during the day, and, if possible, the registrant should appear in person.

Only a great man can successfully dodge undeserved glory.

Officials Hope To Trace Purnell Through Sending Of Funds To Missing Man

ST. JOSEPH, Mich., June 11.—State and county officials today admitted they were attempting to find a leak in the House of David money, through which they believe Purnell will be located. It is thought he must be receiving funds in some way to maintain him while he is hiding.

A careful scrutiny of the records of Benton Harbor and St. Joseph banks, where the money of the colony was deposited showed no large withdrawals within the past year, therefore the police believe Benjamin has direct contact with some member or friend of the House of David of whom he is drawing upon the reserve supply of cash that he built up during his "reign as king" of the organization.

In this connection the officials point to the testimony of Esther Hansel, at the recent Grand Rapids trial when she testified that a secret compartment in the walls of Benjamin's chamber at Shiloh contained a large sum of money as well as jewelry and precious metal. Purnell is still being sought to face a statutory charge.

IRON MOUNTAIN IS EASY FOR LOCALS IN SUNDAY BATTLE

Escanaba Runs Away With Iron Mountain Contest 10 to 1 Without Straining.

Defeating Iron Mountain 10 to 1 in Sunday's fray in Iron Mountain, Escanaba seemingly had a runaway race of it from the second inning. Quite a number of local fans went up with Perrin's team to see the slaughter.

Perrin for the locals and Becker for Iron Mountain contributed the sensations of the afternoon, Becker grabbing a shoestring catch in the fifth off Boyie's bat and doubling Olmstead at second, while in the seventh, Perrin made a sensational one-hand stab and killed a line drive for Becker. The game ended with Perrin making a running catch of a long, high one by Eckholm, spearing the ball with his bare hand.

Lantz Starts It.

Lantz started things for the locals in the second inning when he doubled to left field, down along the foul line. Olmstead, 2b., followed with a timely double, and Krasnicki singled. With the bases filled Murray Boyle poked out a double, scoring three runs.

Escanaba drove Tedeschi from the mound in the third and he was relieved by Brisson, who pitched a nice game from that time on. Krasnicki gave a good account of himself, as indicated by the box score, which follows:

Great Team Coming.

Escanaba will witness a double bill next Saturday and Sunday when the Menasha American Legion team will be in this city. This team has been burning up its section of Wisconsin and is one of the strongest amateur teams in this section of the country, according to reports received by Manager Perrin, who considers that he was fortunate in securing them for two games. Menasha is reported to have a pitcher who was with the Chicago White Sox last year.

While the crowds thus far this year have not been up to what the boys had expected, yet there is a feeling that through their winning of the bulk of their games, inspiration has grown so that next Saturday and Sunday will see the greatest crowds of

Badger Solons to Investigate Some "Serious Charges"

(By the Associated Press)
MADISON, Wis., June 11.—An investigation going deeply into alleged deals and activities of a "much more serious nature than those of the unexplained detention of Senator Bernard Moran," will be asked this week probably, one Progressive Republican legislator, and a leader in his faction, said today.

He said that the department heads and even state officials would come within the proposed quizzing, which this member declared would concern "the most serious charges."

PLAN TO PREVENT DUST ON STREETS BY SPREADING OIL

City Will Agree to Do It at a Cost of Ten Dollars a Block.

Announcement was made by the city administration today that every effort will be made to cooperate with residents of dirt streets, which have been leveled off and graded at regular intervals this spring. This grading and scraping puts the streets in fine traffic condition, but leaves a coating of dust which is stirred up by every passing car and vehicle. This has always been the case.

Inasmuch as the city has no appropriation for handling this situation, a plan has been worked out whereby relief can be given at actual cost and in units as small as a block at a time.

The administration has figured out that it will cost ten dollars a block to oil the streets; that is, put on a coating of oil and asphalt which probably will prevent and lay dust for the remainder of the summer. At the same time it will be forming a good, compact street the more it is used.

So here is the plan for residents of all blocks. Anytime they get ten dollars together and bring it to the city hall, the street in that block will be oiled. The cost is considered small and the benefits will be great.

THINK CAPTIVES OF BANDITS WILL BE FREE TONIGHT

General Chen Enters into Negotiations with Brigands Today.

PSAO CHIWANG, China, June 11.—The two representatives of the Chinese bandits who came here from their mountain stronghold last Saturday, to enter negotiations looking to the release of the captives, returned to their camp yesterday accompanied by General Chen, one of the government delegates engaged in the negotiations. It was stated that all negotiations should be completed by tonight and General Chen said he expected the captives would be released some time today.

All Chinese officials who have participated in the negotiations and Roy Anderson, the American intermediary, have been invited to the brigand camp and they are expected to arrive today. It is assumed the celebration such as usually follows the conclusion of an important agreement will be held.

Anderson, it was said, has been asked to act as guarantor to the agreement which will release the prisoners. The Shanghai gentry and the Chinese Chamber of Commerce delegates will arrange for the release of the Chinese prisoners.

Five Civilians Are Shot Dead in Town Dortmund, Germany

BERLIN, Germany, June 11.—Five civilians were shot dead and one seriously wounded in Dortmund, last night, according to semi-official views. It was not stated who was responsible, although the report adds that troop reinforcements have arrived and occupy the city hall and that more than 100 persons are under arrest.

BULGAR REVOLT THE SOURCE OF NEW OUTBREAK

Premier, Absent from Capital, Loses Leadership.

Foreign Statesmen Rendered Apprehensive by Orderly Rebellion Overturning Government.

(By the Associated Press)
LONDON, June 11.—No event since the Greek convulsion of last October has raised such apprehension in the minds of the foreign statesmen regarding the future stability of the Balkan states as the Bulgarian revolution. Doubt was expressed today in many quarters whether the new revolutionary regime would be strong enough to resist the powerfully organized agrarian party, which numbers among its members a great part of the Bulgarian peasantry.

Some observers fear the present episode may lead to civil war. In such an eventuality, they point out, the Bulgarian army would be helpless to cope with the situation as it is merely a police organization of a few thousand men. Dr. Stancov, the Bulgarian minister in London, still is without advice concerning the uprising; but news dispatches indicate that the revolution was carefully planned and carried out with amazing rapidity.

Little Disorder.

Like the Greek upheaval of last year, the Bulgarian revolt apparently was attended by little disorder. The officers' reserve corps, embracing all the country's best officers who fought in the World war, appears to have been a dominant factor in the revolt. This organization had the support of the active army and of the opposition political party, as well as the dangerous Macedonian revolutionary groups.

Three o'clock in the morning, when all Sofia was asleep and when Premier Stamboulsky was absent in the country, was chosen as the hour for launching of the coup d'etat. Several factors appear to have been behind the uprising. Among these are failure of the Macedonians to secure autonomy; the cessation of Karagatch, which was part of Bulgaria before the war; Turkey's denial to Bulgaria of an outlet on the Aegean Sea; dissatisfaction with Stamboulsky's alleged autocratic methods and disapproval of the wholesale imprisonment of former cabinet ministers.

Boris Holds Throne.

Although no news has been received here regarding King Boris, it is assumed that he remains on the throne. Friends of the youthful monarch say that he never at heart has sympathized with the agrarian movement. They allege that Stamboulsky never lost an opportunity for humiliating the king and rendering him powerless in the affairs of the country.

"You shall reign, but you shall not govern," Stamboulsky is reported to have told the king not long ago, and to have added: "You are king, not of the parties, but of the working people. Since you shall reign so long as you have the confidence and support of a majority of the people, who could elect you as president of the republic if they desire?"

MENOMINEE BOY KILLED BY AUTO TRUCK SATURDAY

Skull Is Fractured by Force of Blow When Child Is Knocked Down.

MENOMINEE, Mich., June 11.—John Joseph Beland, seven-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Beland of this city, died at a local hospital this morning at 6:30 o'clock as the result of being struck by an auto truck Saturday afternoon about 5:30.

According to witnesses, the little fellow was crossing the street to board a street car and ran right in front of the truck. The driver, it is alleged, did not have time to stop. The boy was hit and thrown to the pavement, striking his head with such force that the skull was fractured. The truck was driven by Victor Westman.

Aggravatin' Papa Dance Row Ends As Four Are Shot

(By the Associated Press) NEW ORLEANS, La., June 11.—Four dancers at the annual "Bon Ton blow-out" in the local black belt were wounded Thursday as the affair wound up with a shooting fray started by Arthur Lewis, who resented a honoree's request that he dance with his feet.

According to stories told the police by witnesses, Lewis and his vivacious mulatto partner were doing a special interpretation of "aggravatin' papa," when the honoree interfered.

Lewis resented the intervention and drawing his revolver, blazed away. Three persons were shot and Lewis leaped through a window and fled. Pursued by angry guests he was dropped by a bullet which struck his head. Uninjured, but somewhat dazed, he was captured and arrested.

JUNE BRIDES SWAMP LITTLE N. Y. CHURCH

Set New High Record for Weddings in Gotham; Dr. Ray Gives Nuptial Advice.

(By the Associated Press) NEW YORK, June 11.—June—the bride's own month held a positive Thursday of breaking all records for number of weddings in the history of New York.

Dr. Randolph Ray, new, handsome, youthful pastor of the historic "Marrying Church," the Little Church Around the Corner—is authority for the statement.

Gives His Views.

Between rapid fire weddings Thursday, Dr. Ray, successor to the late Dr. George C. Houghton, gave his views on "how to be happy, though wed."

"First—be sure love exists," Dr. Ray said. "More physical attraction, or mental attraction alone, is not sufficient. Real love requires a combination of both.

"Second—Remember love is a partnership and marriage is a democracy. The husband is no longer 'king of the home."

"Third—Have a financial understanding, keeping a joint checking account. The old custom of putting the wife on an allowance is just another way of saying she is on the sal-

...be prepared to sacrifice... Marriage has withstood all at... of the experimentalists. Mar... is about as popular today as... a history.

Adopt New Policy.

The Little Church Around the Corner has adopted a new policy. Under Dr. Ray there will be no secret marriages. Runaways cannot find sanctuary there.

"Many modern marriages are entered into too hastily," Dr. Ray asserted. "Investigation will prove that the majority of divorces are directly traceable to this. It is my hope that every 'little church' marriage will be a lasting one."

Dr. Ray has been constantly busy during the first week in June. It is literally true he can scarcely step out of his study door without meeting a blushing couple.

and having the manners and appearance
of a boy.

CHAPTER II.-Following a quarrel
with Skelton, Ratcliffe accepts the invitation of the Tylers to join them on their boat.
CHAPTER III.-The arrival of one Carquinez, shady character of the bank with his companion, Sellers, disturbs the Tylers. Carquinez has learned that Satan's father had been aware of the location of a sunken vessel believed to be a Spanish treasure ship, and he has been springing upon the Tylers in an effort to discover their secret.

CHAPTER IV.-Tired of Carquinez's
explores and hostility, Satan Tyler dis-clores the location of the vessel and agrees, in exchange for the services of that individual and his crew, to share the treasure when it has been brought to light. Carquinez leaves the scene, sensibly for Havana, to obtain needed
supplies, but really, as Satan well knows, for the sake of the wreck, hoping to plunder it in the absence of the Tylers.

CHAPTER V.-Satan determines to follow Carquinez. Ratcliffe kisses Jude, and promptly has his face roundly slapped.
Returning to the boat they find Satan disturbed by the arrival of a sloop owned and sailed by "Cleary," ostensible partner of Carquinez, and of a similar shady character.

CHAPTER VI.-Satan explains to Cleary the arrangement he has made with Carquinez, and with Cleary following, the Sarah Tyler sets out for the location of the supposed treasure ship.

"I did see something over there;
looked like the ghost of a cloud."
"That was rum cxy, and a sure sign the weather's going to hold. It lifts itself into the sky like that, evening times; you can see it from Lone reef, too."
"I wish I had known that and I should have looked at it more particularly. I was thinking."

"What was you thinking about?"
He laughed. "My people."
"Who made you think of them for?"
"Them?"
"Me?"

"Yes, I was wondering what you'd think of them if you saw them, especially my aunts."
"Will you take the bun," said Jude,
"you sitting there thinking of your aunts and me running with them eggs?" She stopped of a sudden; her memory had suddenly conjured up the "muzzard."

"That cuss!" said Jude. "The one I saw." She wrizzled close to him till their sides touched. "Sposin'?"
"Yes?"
"Sposin' he was to take it into his head to do a walk along here?"

"Don't you bother about him," said Ratcliffe. "I'd kick him into the sea—
besides, he was only an optical illusion. It was my stupid talk did it."
"I'm not bothering," said Jude,
"only it's a damned long time till mornin'. N'matter," she rested her hand on his shoulder in all the familiarity of companionship; then she "lifted her hand from his left to his right shoulder so that her arm was across his back, and then she fell silent and he felt something poking into his left shoulder—it was her nose! She had evidently under his protection forgotten "hants" and "muzzards," forgotten him, even, for she was humming a sort of tune under her breath.

He knew exactly her mental condition—mind wandering—and it was a strange feeling to be cuddled like that
by a person who had half-forgotten
his existence, except as a protection against fears, especially when he remembered her recent antagonism that had developed so mysteriously and as mysteriously vanished. He slipped his left arm round her to make her more comfortable. Then her nose gave place to her cheek against his shoulder and she yawned. He could feel her ribs under her guernsey and the beat of her heart just beneath the gentle swell of her breast.

She released herself from his arm
and scrambling about in the starlight on her hands and knees began to make a sand pillow.
"Here you are!" said she. "Stick
your head on it; I'll take first watch.
You be port watch, and I'll be starboard."

"No, you won't! I will. I'm not a bit sleepy."
"Neither'm I. Stick your head on
it. You've gotta turn in or you'll be no use tomorrow."
He did as he was bid, and Jude
took her place sitting on the sand
close to him.
"Give us a call if anything happens," said he.
"You bet!" replied Jude.
Then he closed his eyes. A moment before and he had been leagues away

from sleep, but with the compulsory closing of his eyes drowsiness began to steal on him. It was as though the "tide of sleep were rising to drift him off."

Now, suddenly, he was walking in the blazing sunlight on the spit, and forward him was walking the "muzzard"—
a little old man in a cocked hat with a spyglass under his arm,
who vanished giving place to Jude,
carrying a hatful of gulls' eggs.

Then Skelton landed from somewhere, and Jude, turning, was calling him a "pesky brute."
The words broke the dream, and he opened his eyes. The moon had just risen, touching the spit, and in her light, seated on the sand propped up on his stilt, a spirit crab, white as snow with ruby eyes, was staring at Jude.

Drugged with weariness and ozone,
he closed his eyes for one moment,
determined to rise up and drive the thing away in one moment. When he opened his eyes again the sun was rising.

The gulls were meowing and calling and flying above him in the blue. He was lying on his back, his left arm
out, and Jude's head on his shoulder.
She had snuggled up beside him for company, and had fallen asleep. Her arm was flung over his chest. It was the embrace of a tired child, delightful to wake up to the freshness of the air and the new life of the world and the innocence of the flower-blue sky, delightful as her breath, sweet and warm against his cheek. As he moved she stirred, grumbled something under her breath, shifted her head so that his arm was released,
and turned on her other side, with her right arm flung out on the sand.

He stood up. The tide was in and the dinghy only waiting to be launched. Not a sail or speck upon the sea.
He turned to where the starboard
watch was lying, clinging still to Mor-pheus, and stirred it gently with his foot. Jude moved, turned, grumbled to herself, and then, as if electrified, sat up digging her fists into her eyes and yawning. Then she sat gazing at the sea as if stunned.

"Come on," said Ratcliffe, "we've got to be starting. All the grub's gone and nearly all the water. Remember, the current is against us."
"Oh, it ain't no distance," said Jude,
"and a few minutes more or less don't count. Wonder what Satan's doing?"
"Goodness knows!" said he. "I'm wondering what he'll say when we get back."

"He'll start jawing," said Jude drammily and fatefully and with her eyes closed. "I can hear him as if I was listening. He'll say, 'What you mean leaving the ship, and where's your eyes?' No use telling him they're broke. Lord! I'm sick of it all! I'm just going to lay here and die."

Then suddenly she sat up, put on her hat, scrambled to her feet, took a glance round the sea, and made for the dinghy.
"Shove in the water jar," said Jude.
He put the jar in, seized the opposite
gunnel, and ran her down.

In a minute they were afloat, the sail spread to the wind, Jude steering and holding the sheet. It was a rougher passage coming than going and a more silent one. Ratcliffe, squatting in the bottom of the boat,
had little else to do than smoke and watch Jude. Jude, engaged with her own thoughts, and with her eyes keeled for the indications of Lone reef, seemed absolutely to have forgotten him.

There was no indication of the companion who had slept with her arm round him, who had sat almost lovingly, half-forgetfully, with her arm
across his shoulder and his arm round
her waist.

It came to him suddenly and with a curious pang that Jude would never be more than that—a warm counseler if cast alone together, just as she might be with Satan, or any stranger her fancy approved of.

He gave up thinking, watching her
and how well she handled the boat.
The crying of the gulls round the spit had died down, nothing remained but the voice of the sea, silent as dumb death from the blue horizon to the planking of the dinghy when it spoke.
"That's her!" suddenly said Jude.

"What?"
"Look—I kin see the spars of the Juan an' the Sarah, and the Natchez," said Jude. "Look, close up to the Juan. Cleary's put in and we not there! I'd forgot Cleary; didn't believe he'd pick up the place so soon.
There he is. Oh, h—h!"

"No matter," said Ratcliffe; "it can't be helped."
"Guess them gulls! If they'd stuck to their laying places, we'd have got the eggs soon's we'd landed and been back last night. Wonder what's been going on?"

"Will," said he, "Satan's all right.
Cleary has no grudge against him. If there has been any bother, it has been between Cleary and Sellers."

"Maybe," said Jude.
An hour later they were so close up that they could see the reef-line and the line of the wreck with fellows perking up it. Whatever had happened business was going on as usual.
The three vessels, anchor'd, and swinging to the tide, looked peaceful enough, and as they drew up to the Sarah, Satan, who had just appeared on deck, came and stood by the starboard rail watching them.

They fastened up, preparing for an explosion. None came.
"Couldn't get back last night," said Jude as they came on board. "Left it till sundown, and then I was afraid of the current, and say, Satan, I saw a wuzzard! I was carrying the eggs when I saw him, and then I ran and
"smashed the lot."

"A which?"
"A hant—little old chap walking on the sands. D'you remember the figurehead on that old bark they broke up last year at Havana—man with a glass under his arm and the other arm wavin' his hat? That was him plain as my eye. He up with his glass and I let one yelp. Rat'll tell you; he saw me running."

"Oh, git along—git along, you and your hants! I'd been countin' on them eggs, and here you come back
like a one-eyed skite with your yarks about hants. Come along down if you want some grub. I s'pected you more'n an hour ago, and there's coffee
waitin'."

It came to Ratcliffe that the quietude
of Satan over the business came less from natural good temper than some other reason. The desertion of the Sarah was nutny and a rank crime.
Satan had been left with his food to cook, his sister had been off with an almost stranger for a whole night—
yet he was not displeased.

If Jude had done the business alone,
she most surely would have been carpeted. It was evidently his—Ratcliffe's—participation in it that fed-ed off trouble and turned wrath into complacency. Why?
Was it because he was a guest? Not a bit! Satan, had he been angry, would not have hotheaded about that.
He followed down below, and there,
over the breakfast table, the Cleary
business was cleared up.

FOOT OF GIRL HOBO
IS BADLY CRUSHED

Dinah Attempts to Beat Way to Hollywood Same as Film Heroine.
(By the Associated Press)

PIGMA, O., June 11.—Emulating a movie heroine Wednesday cost pretty Dinah Jones, 25 years old, Columbus, whatever chance she may have had to become a Hollywood favorite, Dinah's visions of becoming a movie star crystallized in the semi-darkness of a Columbus theater. She saw on the screen the story of another girl who sought movie fame. The real-life girl bobbed her head, disguised as a man, beat her way to Hollywood and made good.

Tries Same Method.
"Why," mused Dinah, "cannot I do the same thing?"
The question was answered Wednesday by physicians who worked over the girl in a Pigma hospital. She may lose her right foot, they said, as a result of crushing it in the coupling
of a freight train.

After seeing the movie thriller in Columbus, Dinah bobbed her hair, disguised as a man and started to beat her way to Hollywood and make good.
Sleeps in Hobo Camp.
Last night she slept in a hobo camp near Urbana. Early Wednesday she passed through Pigma and at Bradford, 10 miles from here, the freight stopped on a siding.

Dinah was sitting on a flat car half filled with scrap iron when she saw 1200 detectives approaching. She slipped down between two cars just as the freight started up. Her foot was crushed by the sudden start.

She was dragged head down, movie fashion, several yards before the detectives could stop the train.

KIN OF HARRIMAN SEEKS
HONORS IN FILMDOOM
NEW YORK, June 11.—J. Borden Harriman, son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Harriman, and nephew of E. H. Harriman, has embarked on the career of a motion picture actor. For the last few days Harriman has been mixing drinks behind an East Side bar in a scene in the production of "Gilt" by the Film Guild. He plays the hard-boiled bartender.

The Film Guild is a group of recent graduates from Yale, Harvard and Princeton, who have assembled an organization for motion picture production similar to the Theatre Guild
in the legitimate field.

According to present plans Harriman will work in other Guild pictures and, following the policy of the group of developing inter-changeability
of roles, will study photography, scenario writing, editing and the general
mechanics of film production.

Drugs Excite
the Kidneys,
Drink Water

Take Salts at First Sign of Bladder Irritation or Backache

The American men and women must guard constantly against kidney trouble,
because we often eat too much rich food.
Our blood is filled with acids which the kidneys strive to filter out; they weaken from overwork, become sluggish, the eliminative tissues clog and the result is kidney trouble, bladder weakness and a general decline in health.

When your kidneys feel like lumps
of lead; your back hurts or the urine is cloudy, full of sediment, or you are obliged to seek relief two or three times during the night; if you suffer with sick headache, or dizzy, nervous spells, acid stomach, or if you have rheumatism
when the weather is bad, begin drinking lots of good soft water and get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts. Take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys may then act fine.

This famous salts is made from the acid
of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for years to help flush and stimulate clogged kidneys, to neutralize the acids in the system so they no longer are a source of irritation, thus often relieving bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; can not injure, makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink and belongs in every home, because nobody can make a mistake by having a good kidney flushing any time. By all means have your physician examine your kidneys at least twice a year.

Dr. A.W. Chase's
Tonic Pills
The Old Reliable Family
Remedy for Building Up
the System, Nervous Affections, Insomnia, etc.
In this strenuous age, most people are afflicted with some form of nervous trouble. Hospitals are overflowing with men and women seeking to win back health of body and mind. If you are nervous, irritable,
"jumpy," if your system is run down, if you feel that you may be on the verge of a nervous breakdown, read what P. J. Cole, of 628 S. Lambert Street, Brazil, Indiana, says:
"it would be hard for me to tell how much good I have received from the use of Dr. A. W. Chase's Tonic (serre) Pills.
I was so run down in health I could hardly go. I had insomnia. Could not sleep or rest. I was weak and so very certainly suffered some pain but the worst of my trouble was because I felt so weak and easy to get tired the nervous condition was worse than the pain.
I decided to use your Tonic (serre) Pills. A few bottles restored me to perfect health. I can eat and sleep well. I have never had anything better for a nervous nervous condition."

MONDAY, JUNE 11, 1923

ONE POINT CONCEDED.

With the latest statement of Stanley Baldwin, the British prime minister, the difference of opinion between this country and his over the right to bring liquor within the three-mile limit becomes one of equity and not of law. Baldwin agrees with Washington that any country may assume jurisdiction over foreign ships when they enter territorial waters. But he did not agree that this country ought to do so, and said in reply to a question asked in Parliament, that no possible disturbance or public order in the United States interests could arise if British ships were allowed to enter our ports with liquor under sail.

If that were entirely true, then there would be no objection in case some way could be found to get around the law which now threatens to put foreign shipping to great inconvenience. But the moment this government makes it easy for foreign passenger ships to carry stocks of liquor it puts its own ships at a disadvantage.

It might be said that America could make an equally easy rule for its own ships, but in the light of the protests sounded when American ships quietly ignored the prohibition law, that will hardly be possible as a matter either of logical consistency or political expediency. As a matter of law, it would be utterly impossible. International equity certainly cannot be asked for the convenience of American ships in American waters. They are under the Eighteenth amendment in all of its rigor.

So the matter stands. Unless this country is willing to accept the disadvantage incident to granting a favor to foreigners which it withholds from its own people the Eighteenth amendment will continue to apply impartially in the three-mile zone.

AN INSTANCE OF GERMAN CALM.

Although it is officially decided that the Reichstag building of the Republic of Germany is not a fitting place for the statue of the Emperor William I, the edifice is to remain where it is, at least for the present because its great weight of metal and marble makes removal too expensive. The treasury cannot at this time afford the 39,000,000 marks required for an engineering work of such magnitude.

In this decision one may see a reflection of the German attitude toward the old monarchy and the Hohenzollern family. Merely as a matter of logical congruity, the government sees that the memorials of the old regime are out of place in the halls, where they are trying to carry on a republican government, but no heat goes with the light they have on that subject.

Revolutionists of the passionate type would see no difficulty in getting rid of the statue of the old Kaiser. What if the floors are too weak to sustain the weight of the figure and why strengthen them when the statue can be taken out in pieces? A mob of good stout fellows with sledges would soon reduce the thing to manageable proportions and charge nothing for casting the fragments on the rubbish heap.

That would be the argument if the Germans hated the monarchy, but they do not and never have. They would like to remove the evidences of other days reverently and in order, but that would cost a large sum. The treasury is hard put to take care of the most pressing needs of government. Therefore the first William may stay, and pending his removal it is sufficient to make an official record of the decision that he remains on sufferance.

A WHOLESALE DECISION.

The decision of the Supreme Court of Michigan in the Hertz case declares that there are three lawful reasons for searching a man's home under the liquor law of this state. The house must be a place of public resort, a place where liquor is unlawfully sold. In the Hertz case the search was made simply upon the ground that the home contained liquor and that was not sufficient.

It may seem to the ardent dry that this distinction is unimportant, but it is to be remembered that the court did not make the law. It was declaring what the law is, and was setting its hand against any attempt to stretch the right of the police to invade the homes of this state beyond the limits permitted by law.

That is the only attitude the court could take, and the only policy which thinking people will approve. If a majority of the people think the laws wrong they can change it, but surely no one wishes to weaken the doctrine that the homes of the people are exempt from arbitrary intrusion or to permit policemen and prosecutors to formulate their rules under which the doors of homes may be battered down.

NEITHER SLANDER NOR FLATTER.

Most certainly it is wrong to place in school histories statements that are unjust to the fathers of the Republic, that merely snare their characters or sneer at their efforts and achievements as founders. But at the same time it is only fair to youngsters to permit them to realize that the great men of the early days were merely great men, not demigods, and that consequently they had their human limitations and frailties like other men. If this is brought home to children in the proper way, they will not love their regard for the heroes of the nation, and they will get a more understanding, sympathetic conception of them, because they will seem more real.

The sixteen young ladies who practiced one of those undraped classic dances in a bed of poison ivy now know one reason why the purity league is right.

The fact that carpenters in Russia are paid 50 cents a day must make them wish they could suffer under the capitalist system in the United States.

Conan Doyle might perform a real service if he would ring up Peabodias and get her to tell the searchers where her bones really lie.

This Might Happen in a Fire

Locking the stable door after the horse is stolen and ascertaining the protective qualities of a fire window after the fire are alike.

Until 1903, the usual way of learning about the qualities of a fire-resistant window, was to examine what was left of it when the blaze was over. Frequently, it was found that the flames had not been much impeded. When the Underwriters' Laboratories took up this question and perfected its standard of requirements, not a single fire window was able to pass its tests. The manufacturers did not like this and tried to call the tests a joke.

Today, more than one hundred manufacturers are making windows whose protective value is certified by these same tests. Had they been in service on the exposed side of the Burlington Building in Chicago in March, 1922, millions of dollars of loss would doubtless have been prevented.

The illustration shows a movable wall containing a fire-resistant metal window frame which has just been rolled away from the terrific heat of a great testing furnace at the Laboratories. The window is being deluged with a fire stream, and might happen in a fire.

ROTARIANS TO SEEK A CODE OF ETHICS

10,000 Delegates to Gather at St. Louis Meet.

(By the Associated Press) ST. LOUIS, June 11.—Administrative problems and the best way to introduce a standard of ethics among business and professional men throughout the world will focus the attention of 10,000 delegates to the fourteenth annual convention of the Rotary International, which opens here June 18.

The number of Rotary clubs in the world has almost doubled within the last five years, and there now are more than 4,000 club units, divided into 20 districts, in cities of the United States, Canada, Mexico, Denmark, Uruguay, Spain, Panama and Argentina, with one international organization in the British Isles, Australia and South Africa.

Probably the most interesting business to come before the convention will be the discussion of the proposition that Rotary clubs concentrate their energies for a year in developing programs that will have for an object the introduction of standard codes of ethical practices among business and professional men in all business or professions represented in Rotary.

An unusually large number of delegates from clubs overseas, particularly those from the British Isles and various parts of the British Empire, have announced their intention of coming and some have already started.

St. Louis is making great preparations for the reception of the visitors, and already reservations have been made for more than 8,000 Rotarians.

STATUE TO HONOR NOTED U. P. LAWYER

(By the Associated Press) IRONWOOD, Mich., June 11.—The cemetery in Ironwood, Mich., one of the greatest criminal lawyers of the Upper Peninsula, and ex-mayor of Ironwood, will be honored by the erection of a bronze statue in the city's new three-quarter million dollar municipal building. The unveiling probably will be held the same time as the dedication of the building. O'Neill was a poor boy and had to work to put himself through high school. At the time of his death he was in his early forties, and was being tried for the most republican senator from Michigan. As mayor of Ironwood he fought the mining interests and obtained for the city many improvements.

SUES TO STOP CITY WORK IN ST. CLAIR

PORT HURON, Mich., June 11.—All improvements planned and under way in St. Clair are held up pending the outcome of an injunction suit brought by Jacob Vossen against the City of St. Clair.

A temporary order was issued in circuit court here halting the improvements and a hearing on the injunction will be held June 11.

In recognition of military service citizens of Illinois recently presented $30,000 to Major General George Bell, Jr., retired commander of the Third division during the World war.

brought victory. It was the second time this season that the Marquette catcher has broken up a game with his willow.

Gladstone looked dangerous in the first inning. With two men on the base and none out, Marquette worked a double play, but the bases were filled on a hit, walk and an error. It looked bad, but Harris struck the next man out.

Urquhart Drives in Run. Marquette scored in the second frame. Embloom drew a life at first on an infield error. Cameron sacrificed him to second and Bohman grounded out, Embloom going to third on the hit. "Doc" scored when Dewey Urquhart drove out a two-base hit. Richardson walked, but Harris fanned.

Gladstone tied the count in the third after two men were out, when Marquette made two errors. With a man on first and third, a single brought in a run. The next man struck out.

Marquette put two tallies over the platter in the fourth. Cameron hit a fast grounder and went to second when the Gladstone shortstop threw the ball over first base. Urquhart stepped up and drove out his second double, bringing Cameron in. Richardson followed with a two-base swat, scoring Urquhart.

Two hits and three errors gave Gladstone three runs in the fourth, and Embloom's homer in the fifth put Marquette in the lead again.

Marquette played erratic ball in the field in the early innings, putting Harris in several bad holes, but he pitched a steady game, getting stronger in every frame.

Gladstone will play a return game in Marquette next Sunday.

ESCANABA LEADING WITH MARQUETTE ON U. P. TAX LISTS

Have the Largest Number of Remitters of Any Cities and Counties in Northern Peninsula.

Escanaba and Marquette, each with 1,200, lead upper peninsula cities in the number of persons paying income taxes to the United States for 1921, and Marquette county, with 2,600, leads the upper peninsula counties.

Michigan people paid personal income taxes amounting to $24,197,840 into the treasury of Uncle Sam during 1921. This was about 3.36 per cent of the total personal income taxes paid by all people in the country, amounting to $719,387,106. Out of the total population of 3,668,412 in Michigan in 1920, 256,147 or 6.82 per cent, paid income taxes. Their total net income was the huge sum of $657,779,854 which was an average net income of $2,629.

These statistics were made public in a report of the internal revenue bureau. They indicate general prosperity and a fairly reasonable distribution of wealth in Michigan. Figures for sixty leading cities of the state show that the number of persons paying income taxes increases almost proportionately with the increase in the population. Thus Detroit, the state's metropolis, has 111,195 persons paying income taxes, while Grand Rapids is second with 16,000, and Flint third was 6,358.

Upper Peninsula Figures.

The number of taxpayers in upper peninsula cities are reported as follows:

Escanaba, 1,200; Marquette, 1,200; Bessemer, 300; Hancock, 450; Iron Mountain, 600; Ironwood, 1,900; Ishpeming, 750; Laurium, 200; Manistique, 350; Menominee, 675; Munising, 375; Negaunee, 350; Sault Ste. Marie, 500.

The reports for upper peninsula counties are:

Greatest Game in Sister City in Many Years Is Staged There Sunday.

A single by Richardson, with Behlman working at their best. In the man on second in the thirteenth in the ninth frame, with two men on and the score 5 to 5 in favor of Gladstone, Joe Belanger swiped the first ball pitched to him and it sailed over the wall, evening up the count.

In the extra innings, the pitchers in the ninth frame, with two men on and the score 5 to 5 in favor of Gladstone, Joe Belanger swiped the first ball pitched to him and it sailed over the wall, evening up the count.

Twice the game appeared to be on one slapped out the single which for Gladstone, but each time the tables were turned when Marquette batters delivered home run blows over the right field fence. The first four-inning was poked out by "Doc" Embloom in the fifth inning, with the score 4 to 2 in Gladstone's favor. Embloom scored Belanger ahead of him, giving Marquette a one run lead.
