NEWSPAPER HISTORY IN THIS STATE READS LIKE ROMANTIC TALE OF OLD WESTERN DAYS

In 1838 One Editor went to Jail on Contempt Charge.

The Detroit Free Press Dates Back to 1830, But It Was Not Much of a Paper Then.

(By the Associated Press)
 DETROIT, Mich., Oct. 15.—The Michigan Essay and Impartial Observer—established here in 1809, turned the first spade of earth for the greatest newspaper graveyard in the history of Michigan journalism.

Up to and including the year 1833, 181 publications failed. The trials of editors of these pioneer journals of Michigan, the majority of which were printed in Detroit, were manifold as is indicated by excerpts from these papers, printed in the History of Detroit and Michigan.

John P. Sheldon, editor of the Detroit Gazette, established in 1838, was sent to jail when he made light of the State Supreme Court which found him guilty of contempt of court. He served nine days in jail when public spirited citizens called a mass meeting, assessed themselves each twelve and a half cents and paid Sheldon's fine.

Early in the history of this paper a printer stole a silver watch with a steel chain and two gold seals and a key from the office of the publisher. The paper then printed the following notice: "The man who would steal from a printer ought to be compelled to drive a nail through the Black Swamp to Boston in dog days, and suck a sponge for nourishment."

In 1825 two papers were established, one the Michigan Herald, devoted to the cause of the Whigs, and the other, the Gazette Francaise, the first French paper published in this territory. The Herald continued publication until 1829. The Gazette lived one month.

Sixteen Quit in 1840.

In the next decade, from 1830 to 1840, lack of interest in newspapers, coupled with the non-paying inclinations of the subscribers, caused the suspension of sixteen newspapers and magazines. The year 1840 witnessed the establishment of a paper in the interests of agriculture—the Western Farmer. It was published semi-monthly and in 1843 was moved to Jackson. There it was issued as a monthly and called the Michigan Farmer and Western Agriculturalist. Subsequently it died. Then the Farmers' Companion and Horticultural Western Rural. Later it was moved to Chicago.

Seven publishing ventures launched during 1842 failed within a comparatively short period. Despite the long list of newspaper failures, however, newspapermen were not to be denied, for within the next ten years 29 newspapers were started, with almost an equal number of failures within the period. A few, started late in the '50's, held on until the early part of 1869, when they, too, gave up the ghost.

More Fall By Wayside.

An unusually large number of campaign papers, trade and medical and scientific periodicals, as well as a humorous publication, found their way into the massed ranks of publications during the last ten years, nearly all fed by the wayside.

It was three days late, the last decade of unprecedented newspaper failures that the first new paper made its appearance. This paper, the True Democratic, part of a campaign paper, started publication in 1867. It was followed by the Radical Demokrat, a German presidential campaign paper. Then came the Whirlpool, a weekly political organ designed to represent the ultra or radical democratic sentiment of the time.

Fifty Start in Ten Years.

The journalistic birthrate in Michigan reached its height between 1870 and 1880, when 50 newspapers, magazines and periodicals made their appearance in the state. Most of these publications were short lived.

During the more than three quarters of a century of journalistic efforts, newspapers of all descriptions were published. There were political papers, anti-slave, temperance, union and non-union publications, as well as religious, literary, scientific, mechanical, medical, agricultural, socialist, marine, travel, nature and foreign language journals.

The year 1880 virtually closed the era of reckless publications. Some of the papers that continued from 1882 to the present day have an ancestral line that can be traced to the earliest journalistic pioneers of the state. The Detroit Free Press dates back as far as 1830 when a paper by that name was discontinued because of a fire in its plant. The Detroit News, an afternoon newspaper, was established in 1873 and only last August celebrated its fiftieth anniversary. The other afternoon papers are the Detroit Times and the German Abend Post. The Journal, an afternoon paper, was one of the oldest papers in existence here up to the time of its discontinuance in 1922, when it was purchased by the Detroit News.

FREE STATE REVENUES GROW.

DUBLIN, Oct. 15.—The official figures of the Irish Free State revenue show that from the beginning of the financial year down to September, a period of five months, the exchequer received 13,369,000 pounds as compared with 9,893,576 pounds in the corresponding period last year.

The return indicates that the budget of estimated receipts of 26,000,000 pounds will be exceeded. On the other side of the account it appears that the expenditure was 14,474,852 as compared with 7,293,229 in the corresponding period last year. The ministry is being urged by the press to greater economy.

The U. C. T. Party.

The U. C. T. party at the Eagles' hall Saturday night was a huge success. Members and friends enjoyed an appetizing dinner, then the new members were initiated while the ladies were given free tickets for any movie they cared to go to. After the show there was a dance. Mr. LaVerne, a baker, won one of his own pies for being the best waltzer on the floor. The next U. C. T. party will be on Halloween.

Chiefs of Rock Island Started in Low Places

(By the Associated Press)
 CHICAGO, Oct. 15.—Each of the executives of the Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific Railroad has "come up from the ranks."

President J. E. German began as a car checker in the switch yards. Others began their railroad careers as stenographers in the law department; chairman in a surveying outfit; stenographer in the freight department; yard clerk; storekeeper's helper; clerk in the treasurer's office; and station helper. Four of them are now members of the board of directors.

"The chances are that the men who picked those men sized them up as the job farther on," said a bulletin. "Some day some member of the board will retire from active service and another office boy, stenographer," issued recently. It demonstrates that there is still opportunity for those who are willing to work, as most of them have come into their present positions within the last few years.

"Some day some member of the board will retire from active service and another office boy, stenographer, or clerk will be employed."

NOTICE - O. E. S.
