

PLAYING HOOKEY COSTS MONEY ON ISLAND OF GUAM

AGANA, Guam, Oct. 30.—A native mother on the island of Guam will sit all day at a school room window to prevent her offspring from playing hookey. This is not because of her desire that the child shall acquire learning, but to avoid paying the truancy fine of fifteen cents.

Chaplain W. L. Thompson, U. S. N. school superintendent, says he is endeavoring to adapt the work of education on the island to the particular needs of the natives. The Chamorros take readily to penmanship, mathematics, and all kinds of mechanics. The children frequently know American history more thoroughly than youngsters in the United States of the same age.

"We have standardized the eight grammar grades and added a high school, which places the educational facilities of Guam on a par with those in the Philippines and the United States," the superintendent says.

"The industrial classes, despite our limited funds and equipment, have been especially successful. Lace making, basketry, and hemp weaving of various articles have reached a high grade of perfection. The boys in their carpentry classes make the furniture and other wooden fittings for the schools. The girls so readily take to dressmaking that American clothes are gradually replacing the gaudy costume of the native women."

"The real problem is presented by the classes in cooking and gardening. The children enter with zest into the competitive raising of many kinds of vegetables. They also learn the principles of dietetics and do excellent cooking. But they refuse to carry home any of the vegetables they raise or to eat anything they cook, with one exception, cake."

The native diet consists mainly of rice and fish, and the natives prefer the canned Alaska salmon if they can pay for it, to the delicious fish of these waters.

"But we cannot impress upon them the desirability of eating vegetables. It is almost impossible to persuade the children or adults to even taste an unfamiliar food. Consequently the instruction in cooking and gardening, to date, has shown little practical result."

BALKAN STATES NOW RELIEVE TOURISTS OF ALL SURPLUS CASH

ATHENS, Oct. 30.—Currency is so distressingly scarce in all the Balkan states, that not a single government will permit a traveler, no matter what his nationality, to carry away with him more than the government concerned thinks he needs to get him to his next stopping place. In most cases this is 1,000 units of whatever the currency may be; anything over this sum is confiscated. This means the owner of the money will never see it again, and the procedure is legal, for the law making it so is down clearly in the statutes of virtually every country of southeastern Europe. The despoiled individual has no recourse.

Many naturalized Americans, natives originally of some Balkan country, have come home since the end of the war bringing with them wealth in dollars. Now they are beginning to get enough of the old country, and again turn their faces to the new world. Their dollars meantime have been exchanged into drachma, or dinar, or leu or lev, and they want to carry away what is left. But the government says no; only 1,000; the rest stays here.

Thereupon the naturalized citizen turns to the nearest American diplomatic representative and claims protection. The situation presents so many difficulties that the American ministers to the Balkan states have met in conference to discuss what best to do. They are warning all citizens, and particularly naturalized, not to come over here with more money than they actually need. Also they may take the matter up with Washington.

ERADICATION OF TUBERCULOSIS FROM CATTLE IS PROGRESSING

(By the Associated Press)

WASHINGTON, Oct. 30.—Eradication of cattle tuberculosis is making much progress. Nearly 5,000,000 cattle are under supervision of federal and state veterinary inspectors and there is a waiting list of more than 145,000 herds that will be tested as soon as inspectors can get to them. The Department of Agriculture states, Fully accredited herds, including both beef and dairy breeds, now total 661,250 cattle, while nearly 3,000,000 more have successfully passed the first test in the process of becoming accredited.

Adjustable window shelves for flower pots have been placed on the market.

Even Venice has to have coal, and last May imported 104,585 metric tons from Great Britain.

All of the 1,500 varieties of grapes grown in Europe were originally from one species of vines.

Middle-Aged Golfers Scorn Warning of Doctor About Sport

CLEVELAND, Oct. 30.—The warning of London physicians that persons 50 years old or more are endangering their lives by playing golf is scoffed at by Cleveland's "Indian Scouts" foursome, believed to be one of the oldest active quartets in the world, who may be seen regularly on the golf links here. Their combined age is 227 years. None of them started playing golf until he was past the half century mark.

The foursome is composed of Charles W. Burrows, 74; G. T. McIntosh, 75; J. W. S. Webb, 69, and A. W. Neale, 59. All are prominent business men here and may be seen on the links every Saturday and a couple of three times a week, "as one of them put it. When they are 'on their game' the foursome play in the low eighties or nineties. They have been playing together for about 12 years.

"I don't know of any pastime more pleasant, more healthful and more invigorating for a man between the ages of 60 and 80," Mr. Burrows said. "Of course a man who allows his muscles to become soft and flabby from lack of exercise, smoking, overeating and drinking and then goes out on the course and overtaxes his strength is in danger, but moderate golf means health for a man past 50 who keeps himself in condition."

"Walking around the course by yourself or even with three friends would be too monotonous. Playing golf, you exert yourself for an instant with a stroke drive and then you rest while the others tee off. If you get tired you can sit down and rest, and you're resting in the open air."

"Golf holds your interest. You're continually trying to better your game, you forget the poor shots and try to remember some of the good ones. The four of us play about the same game, but we're continually trying to beat each other, and that's where a lot of the fun comes in."

"None of us can play tennis or baseball because those games are too strenuous. We're satisfied with golf, despite the English doctors warning, and I guess we'll stick to it."

Andrew Bonar Law
Dies in London Today

the difficulties at home led to the retirement of the Asquith Ministry in 1918 and it was at this time that King George called upon the former Glasgow brewer to form a cabinet. When he declined, the honor fell to David Lloyd George, the little Welshman who had within a few months of the Armistice turned the British Isles into one great arms and ammunition factory.

Bonar Law was David Lloyd George's Jonathan. As a member of the prime minister's war cabinet, as Chancellor of the Exchequer and as the Coalition government's leader in the House of Commons, he enjoyed the fullest confidence of his famous chief. It was Bonar Law who for more than four years of great national peril "interpreted" administration measures, parried thrusts against the government and answered interpellations from the door. It was his persistency that brought about the evacuation of Gallipoli, of ill-starred Dardanelles campaign fame, and the removal of more than 100,000 surviving British soldiers from an untenable position. His statements were generally lucid and convincing, for as the government's mouthpiece a serious mistake in debate might have meant the downfall of the ministry.

His services as government leader in the House of Commons, a more difficult and thankless position than that of the leader of the opposition, placed Bonar Law high among his illustrious predecessors, Disraeli, Gladstone, Campbell, Bannerman and A. J. Balfour.

Lied's Milk Plant

III Health Comes.

News of his retirement, due to ill health in the spring of 1921, came as a shock to his colleagues and tributes to his work were paid even by former bitterest opponents. Former Prime Minister Asquith said: "I have for many years been engaged in giving and taking blows from Mr. Bonar Law, but they never left any rancor behind them." Lloyd George, in reading the retiring chancellor's letter of resignation, repeatedly choked back sobs and expressed the hope that his friend might return to his duties after a prolonged rest. Finally the prime minister, who had been so courageous and powerful in the conduct of the war, was believed to have overtaken Bonar Law's strength, and to have led to his return to private life.

Born in Canada.

Bonar Law was born in New Brunswick, Canada, on Sept. 16, 1858, the son of the Rev. James Law, M. A., of New Brunswick. In early youth he was taken to Glasgow where he attended high school and finally became bookkeeper for an iron firm. Later he was made a member of the concern and when he retired from business to enter politics was one of the biggest iron merchants of Scotland. Golf and chess were his favorite recreations.

Nine years before his election to parliament he married Miss Annie Pitcairn Robley of Glasgow, who died in 1909. Four children were born to them, two sons and two daughters. One daughter, Isabella, became the bride of Sir Frederick Sykes in London in 1920. Two sons, Anthony and Lieutenant C. T. Bonar Law were lost in the war.

HALLOWE'EN.

Of pagan origin, Hallowe'en gets its name from a Christian celebration. The occasion celebrates All Hallows Eve, or the day before All Saints' day which was set aside in the seventh century when the Roman Pantheon was converted into a Christian church and dedicated to the Virgin Mary and all martyrs to Christianity. The celebration itself is much older, having been practiced by the Druids in honor of the Sun God as a ceremonial of thanksgiving.

It was believed by the pagans that at this time of the year Saman, lord of death, assembled evil souls which had been condemned to inhabit the bodies of animals during the past twelve months. It was also believed that the souls of every one could be projected from the body on that one day and could be sent wandering over the earth. Children born on Hallowe'en were supposed to have great psychic power. From these beliefs were derived the more or less spooky attributes of the present day celebration.

The Druids built bonfires to mark the day but the use of apples and nuts is taken from a Roman celebration at the same time of the year. Superstitions come from all countries, but particularly Ireland and Scotland. One of the Scotch superstitions requires that each celebrator place a stone in the embers of a bonfire. If, when the person returns the next morning, the stone has been moved, the spooky belief is that he will die within the year.

In Ireland nuts are placed on a grate, each one named for a man or young woman. If one cracks, the mate of the person it represents will be untrue. If it burns, happiness is promised and if two burn together they are chosen for each other. Another quaint custom is for the celebrator to look at herself in the mirror while she eats an apple, believing that her future husband will be seen shyly looking over her shoulder.

Hallowe'en is a night for youthful mirth, when spooks are honored and ridiculed, a night of love and whispering voices dear to all who have been young. Because of the character of previous observances, however, the entire police force will be on duty tomorrow night to curb violence and prevent destruction of property. Ticklers, "wife beaters" and confetti go with boisterousness and disorder and should be discouraged by everyone even though they were not banned by the police. Celebrators and parents should aid the police to keep the peace. Indeed the celebration is trying enough on the nerves without adding rowdiness:

"For many a one has gotten a fright
And lived and died delected
On sie a night."

NAVY DAY.

The appropriateness of observing Theodore Roosevelt's birthday as Navy Day, the occasion in which the nation is invited to consider the great question of maintaining its fighting marine in full vigor and efficiency, is apparent to all. Colonel Roosevelt, the historian of the United States navy, was also the foremost of our presidents in impressing upon the people that the fleet must ever be the nation's first line of defense.

It was he who sent the battleship fleet on its memorable voyage around the world and it is known that on at least one occasion German's autocrat was induced to withdraw from a contemplated act of aggression in this hemisphere by a threat of that same president to use the efficient fleet at his disposal. The United States navy has been a factor for peace in the past and will serve as insurance against war in the future if kept up to its traditionally high standard.

There is no inconsistency between the spirit of Navy Day and the covenant entered into by our government at the Washington conference for limitation of armaments. That pledge was to cease the mad race of competitive warship building, and we shall observe it strictly, but as Secretary Hughes, the guiding genius of that conference, has said, we did not covenant to impair our existing relative strength and accept an inferior position. "I should suppose," says Mr. Hughes, "that such a proposition would require only to be stated and no one would defend it."

A disposition to confine the observance of this day to the seaboards evoked this pertinent comment from Assistant Secretary Roosevelt, who so ably fills the position once occupied by his distinguished father: "The people of the seaboard are reasonably familiar with the navy. They see the great ships. They know the navy men. In the interior of our country it is, however, a different story. The people of Kansas and Oklahoma do not get the opportunity for first-hand information that their fellow countrymen of California and New York do. They do not realize that the navy serves them equally with the people of the seaboard."

Navy Day, then, should be observed each year until the country as a whole realizes the vital importance of this arm of the service and is ready to give heartiest support to measures for its adequate maintenance.

Kentucky school endeavors to teach girls how to be beautiful. If the day ever comes when a beauty course is a matter of course, we hope the faculties won't overlook the elementary idea that handsome is as handsome does.

Mr. Lloyd George is of the usual aerobatic type of successful politician, being able to keep one ear to the ground and at the same time have both eyes peeled.

There is not much resemblance between Leon Trotsky and the ex-kaiser, but both are watching events in Germany with great interest.

Who remembers the old-fashioned woman who, about this time of year, started stringing dried apples?

President Coolidge seems to have considerable facility in the delicate work of pricking wind bags.

CURWOOD FUSSED OVER BUSH FIRES

Pens State Conservation Department for Alleged Laxity.

OWOSO—In a statement James Oliver Curwood, Owosso author and conservationist, who for two years has been waging a battle against the state conservation department, said of the Upper Peninsula forest fire situation:

"What has happened is no more than I have expected. Politics and incompetency have walked hand in hand in conservation matters at Lansing and it has at last taken this horrible tragedy of loss and death to bring the fact home to every intelligent person in the state.

"I have been threatened, reviled and prosecuted because of the fight I have made. Truths that I have uttered have been turned into lies. Every effort has been made to discredit me. And all because I have maintained that politics and inefficiency have been driving us on to the utter destruction of our forests and wild life. Evidence of this is again shown in the statements from Lansing that instead of the best conservation money can hire, irrespective of politics, a country preacher and a verbal spellbinder is to be given the position of the recently resigned secretary of the conservation commission. This is the minute and the hour for every man, woman and child in Michigan to rise up in mighty protest even though it raises the roof from the gubernatorial palace in Lansing."

Boys Best By Test Do Well in Business

EVANSTON, Ill., Oct. 30.—Standard intelligence tests given three and one half years ago to 111 boys under 18 years of age, employed by one of the largest American industries, and who were re-examined in another year, evidence the fact that boys making high scores are more likely than others to become permanent employees.

These are the conclusions of Walter Dill Scott, president of Northwestern University, and Robert C. Clother, Harverford School for Boys, who conducted the experiment. Each boy was tested and the charts filed away, and no attention was paid to them as each boy went his way, succeeding or failing according to the merit of his work. Then the new scores made possible a comparison of the progress made by the boys during the intervening time.

The average score of all the tests was 38.7; the average score of the 63 boys then remaining in the company's service was 41.6, and the average score of the 18 boys who had left the company's service was 35.1, the report showed.

We have evidence that the boys making higher scores are more likely to remain with the company, and this point becomes more impressive when we recognize that the boys who left the employ of the company did so for one of three definite reasons: some to obtain better positions; others to return to school, while still others were discharged. The average score by the mental alertness tests of those who since obtained better positions was 44.7, while the average mental alertness test score of the boys who were discharged was 28.1."

Warns Against Practice of Transplanting Glands

BUENOS AIRES, Oct. 30.—The practice of monkey gland operations, should it be extended and carried down the generations, may change man back into the monkey from which he evolved, warns Professor Clement Onelli, director of the Buenos Aires Zoological Garden, in an article published in the Bulletin of the Argentine Society for the Protection of Animals. Moreover, removing these glands from monkeys is cruelty to animals. Moreover, removing these glands from monkeys is cruelty to animals.

Professor Onelli appeals to the local society to call an international congress of organizations for the protection of animals not only to take steps to stop "this new form of scientific cruelty," but "to avoid the alteration of the natural laws of human society with its consequent danger to modern civilization."

"In the desire to postpone as long as possible the decrepitude of age," Professor Onelli writes, "the time may come when the substitution of the secretions of such inferior animals as monkeys will become more widely practiced, and so many monkey-men produced that, after a few generations, the characteristics of the human species would show variations. The forehead might become flattened, and should the scientists succeed in combining the secretions of the orang-outang with the chimpanzee, for substitution in man, a genus of satyrs might result."

Will Improve Campus at State University

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 30.—Making the long vistas of the Huron valley one of the assets of the University of Michigan campus is one of the problems landscape artists believe they have solved in recently submitted plans for the future growth of the university. If the plans are approved and finally accepted, it is the belief of President M. A. Burton that the university will have approached its final campus stage of the present generation by 1937, the date of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the school.

The new plan calls for a mall with the Michigan Union on one end and the new University Hospital on the other. Present buildings on the old campus will break into this plan for some time to come, the start at present being to the east of the Dental building. From here the proposed mall will stretch directly to the hospital, its walls not only opening up the shortest distance between all the buildings of the university, but also clearing the way for an unobstructed view of the Huron and across to the hills beyond and, at the hospital end giving a glimpse of the beautiful landscapes down the Huron and to the distant undulating hills toward Ypsilanti.

This mall could have the present athletic field for women, Palmer Park, on its right, and also the nurses' home being constructed as the gift of Senator James Couzens. The future expansion of the university in the direction will be largely over ground now held by the University.

Creation of this mall does not interfere with the extension of the present mall north from the Library to Washington street to make an appropriate setting for the proposed Women's League building. The new plan provides for the building of women's dormitories generally near the Palmer Park area and east from the Women's League site.

MANNHEIM CASTLE, TAKEN OVER
BY FRANCE, DATES BACK TO 1720

MANNHEIM, Oct. 30.—Mannheim Castle, which the French recently took over, is the largest in Germany. Before the recent revolution it was the home of the Grand Duke of Baden, who now occupies a smaller castle which he owns in Freiburg. After the revolution the castle was used or municipal offices until the French took it over. The building has a length of 600 metres and contains 1,200 rooms. It stands in a park of more than 14 acres. The castle was begun in 1720 by the Electors Carl Philip and Carl Theodore and is regarded as one of the finest baroque buildings in Germany. It contains a museum, art gallery and chapel. The French have evacuated all German offices and closed the building to the public.

This mall could have the present athletic field for women, Palmer Park, on its right, and also the nurses' home being constructed as the gift of Senator James Couzens. The future expansion of the university in the direction will be largely over ground now held by the University.

Creation of this mall does not interfere with the extension of the present mall north from the Library to Washington street to make an appropriate setting for the proposed Women's League building. The new plan provides for the building of women's dormitories generally near the Palmer Park area and east from the Women's League site.

RED CROSS HELPS WAR'S SUFFERERS

Aids 200,000 Veterans and Their Families—27,000 Disabled Still in Hospitals.

SPENDS $5,866,255 IN YEAR

Individual Attention Assured to All Physically Ailing or In Distress.

Washington.—War service five years after the armistice, which on November 11 the American Red Cross marks with the opening of the annual membership canvass, shows that during the past year assistance was extended by the Red Cross to some 200,000 ex-service men or their families. To 130 hospitals throughout the country approximately 75,000 ex-service men were admitted for treatment, and to 63,296 of these men definite and specialized service was extended, the Red Cross annual report discloses. In all hospitals under government operation a total of nearly 27,000 disabled veterans were reported by the Surgeon General of the Army.

These facts of the aftermath of physical and mental disability five years after the World War, and the burden resting upon the relatives and dependents of the ex-service men, show conclusively the great need of the Red Cross to act as a supplementary arm of the government in service to these many thousands of men who wore the uniform of the United States. It should be emphasized that government assistance is necessarily standardized along specified lines affecting them as a whole. The Red Cross service is to the individual man and the solution of his problems. This the Red Cross designates "home service" for its aims to give the loving care and interest of the home to these men undergoing physical reconstruction far from their actual home influences.

Year's Expenditures $5,866,255

In the year ended last June 30 the Red Cross reports $3,920,000 spent by its Chapters in extending individual attention to the ex-service men and $1,946,255 spent by National Headquarters of the Red Cross, a total of $5,866,255. In behalf of the men called to duty in the World War the Red Cross since July 1, 1917, has spent nearly $164,000,000. Today there are 2,605 Chapters in as many localities carrying on this work, aiding the individual veteran, assisting his family, furnishing creature comforts and funds to tide over troubousome periods.

The strong connecting link between the Red Cross and the United States Veterans' Bureau takes the complications out of difficult cases of claims. The Red Cross in this work requiring personal representation of the ex-service man has acted in appeal cases, insurance matters, personal and family problems, camp and hospital activities, and in cases of death. This service handled nearly 12,000 compensation and insurance claims, and 2,225 allotment and other claims.

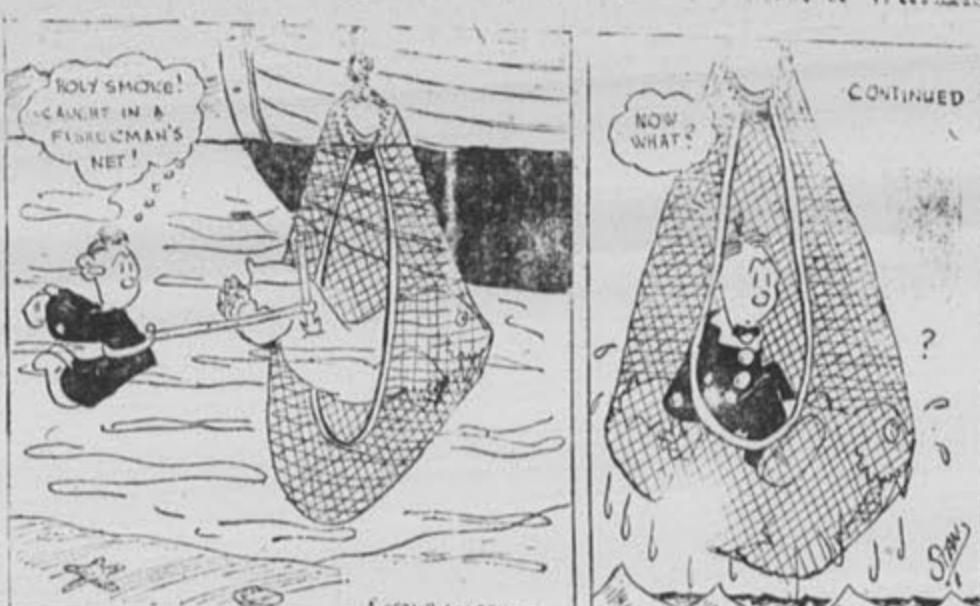

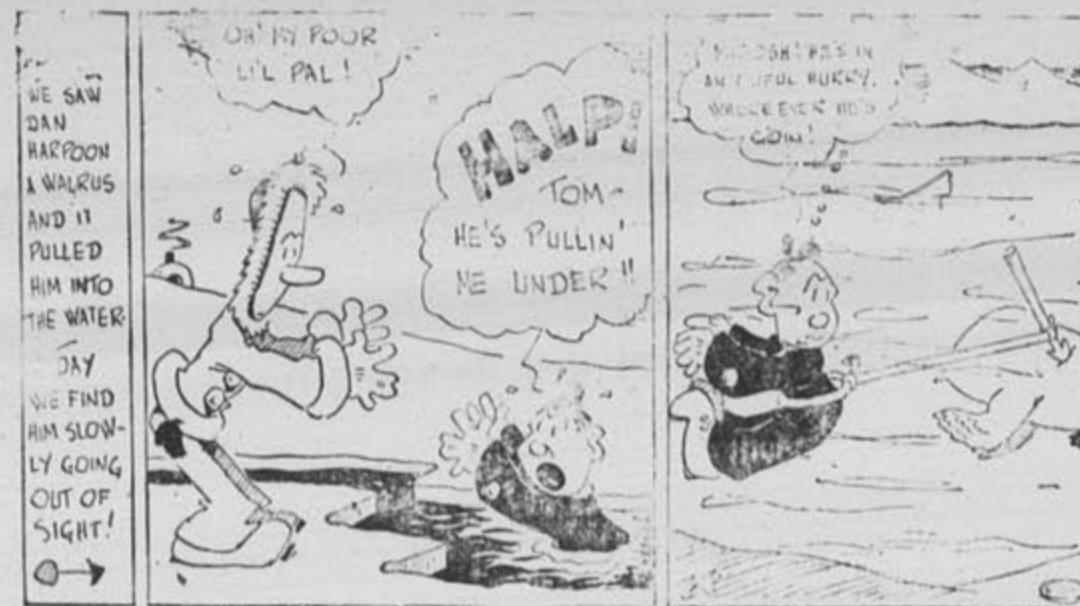

Solves Serious Problem

The financial problem of the ex-service man when travelling to and from hospitals is a serious one, and in meeting this constant demand the Red Cross expended $158,334.17 during the year. For extra recreational equipment in Veterans' Bureau training centers $14,206 was spent, and for the blinded veterans in the government school funds were supplied to enable some of these unfortunate men to enter business as storekeepers and poultry raisers.

In Veterans' Bureau hospitals the record of a single month illustrates the large service rendered by the Red Cross. For example, 15,504 new cases required attention, and a total of 25,007 cases were acted upon; 49,385 letters and 1,563 telegraph messages written, and more than 1,600 entertainments given in recreation houses for the benefit of the patients.

Authorities declare that the present is a critical time in the lives of many of the disabled ex-service men who during the five years since the

HUSBAND GETS A $5,000 VERDICT

After being out a little over on our the jury hearing the case in which Louis Kauffman was suing the estate of his wife for nearly $20,000 for services and money expended, brought in a verdict for $5,000 for Mr. Kauffman.

The will of Mrs. Kauffman left all or her property to two children by a former marriage. Mr. Kauffman brought in a bill against the estate for services rendered and money expended estimated at $15,000 to $18,000, claiming that he had expended this money with the expectation that he would be reimbursed. The will did not provide for such reimbursement.

The defense denied that there was a contract or agreement between Mr. and Mrs. Kauffman setting forth that Louis Kauffman had contributed nothing to the estate except as he was obligated, as a husband, to provide. It was further contended that Mr. Kauffman received more from the estate, during Mrs. Kauffman's life, than he ever had contributed to it.

A large part of the day yesterday was given over to oratory by the opposing attorney, M. J. Doyle of Menominee for the plaintiff and H. J. Rushton for the defendant.
