

REAPPORTIONMENT PASSES COMMITTEE

BOTH PARTIES FIND THUNDER IN DEPRESSION

REPUBLICANS SURE BETTER TIMES ARE COMING

BY DAVID LAWRENCE (Copyright 1931, by the Escanaba Press) Washington, Mar. 23 (AP)—A discussion of the unemployment data issued by the department of commerce has naturally developed since the total of more than six million unemployed is believed to be the largest that any administration has ever acknowledged.

The Democrats are saying it will serve as a point for campaign argument because it indicates the scope of the administration's responsibility, while the Republicans, on the other hand, are contending that the publication of the figures at this time will enable favorable comparisons to be made at a later date.

A Big Job Certainly neither party expects the unemployment figures to continue at six million between now and the 1932 campaign. The Republicans believe that a substantial reduction in the number of unemployed will be viewed not merely as a sign of recovery but as the result of efforts being made to expand domestic and foreign markets through the help of the government.

At the proper time, too, the Republicans are not going to fail to argue that the relief measures taken involved the largest single job ever faced by the country. Until now there has been no accurate basis for computing the size of the administration's task.

When the unemployment figures were published last week many republicans had a sinking feeling and were glad that there would be ample time between now and the next election for the downward curve in unemployment statistics to be registered.

Data for Stump Speeches The Democrats have insisted that the unemployment problem could have been better handled if the Wagner unemployment bills had been passed two years ago. If, therefore, the unemployed totals should diminish the natural Democratic answer would be that they might have been curtailed further had there been scientific measures applied to help the unemployed get jobs.

There is little doubt already that the economic situation will continue to be the paramount subject for political discussion during the next two years. Hence the measures taken to relieve unemployment, the extent of the depression and whether it could have been diminished in intensity are all going to be thrashed out on the stump. The announcement of more than six million unemployed will probably prevent any exaggerated estimates as to any larger number.

The general impression here is that, if anything, the total unemployment is probably smaller but the government experts prefer not to take any chances in computing their percentages, based on the sample census.

PLUNKETT PASSES

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Rear Admiral Charles P. Plunkett, retired, died of heart disease tonight in the Naval hospital. He was in his sixty-seventh year.

STUDENT NURSE IS FOUND DEAD

Officers Pursue Theory That Girl Had Been Brutally Slain

Tiverton, R. I., March 24 (AP)—Verna Russell, 20-year-old student nurse, her face bruised and several teeth missing, was found dead early today on a lane off the main highway to Fall River. The exact cause of her death was undetermined pending a medical examiner's report.

Pursuing the theory that the girl, a pupil of the Truesdale hospital training school of Fall River, had been slain, police instituted a wide search for Elliot R. Hathaway, 32, of Fall River. Police were told he was her companion on an automobile ride last night.

Hathaway, the son of State Representative Louis E. Hathaway of Fall River, disappeared after telling a friend, Vernon V. Galvin, of a holdup in which, he said, the girl was struck and he ordered to "beat it."

Body in Ditch Miss Russell, daughter of E. O. Russell, prominent Portsmouth lumber company superintendent, left the Truesdale hospital about 7 p. m. yesterday. She told a fellow student nurse that she was going to meet a young man friend.

About 5 a. m. today, Fall River police received from Galvin, the information that her body was lying in a ditch in the Tiverton lane. About midnight, Galvin said, Hathaway called at his home and told of the holdup.

Galvin said he went to the scene of the holdup and after viewing the body returned with Hathaway to Fall River intent upon reporting the crime to the police. Instead of going to police headquarters with him, Galvin said, Hathaway told him he was going to "get out of here," and left.

SEALER LANDS SURVIVORS OF SHIP DISASTER

LITTLE HOPES HELD OUT FOR SAFETY OF FRISSELL

St. Johns, N. F., March 24. (AP)—Back from the twin terrors of ice and ice, the sealer Sagona today landed sick and injured survivors of an explosion which blew up the sealer Viking off Horse Island.

They brought with them first hand stories of the disaster and of the long fight against high piled floes to rescue the 126 men saved after the explosion.

More than a score still were missing after a week's search of the half frozen ocean by a fleet of sealers, but the quest was cleared from the air today by a veteran of Arctic adventure, Bernt Balchen.

Kennedy Tells Story. This flier, Byrd's pilot over the South Pole, took off from Corner Brook for Horse Island this afternoon and made a three hour survey trip. He was engaged by Dr. Lewis Frissell of New York, father of one of the two Americans missing—Varick Frissell, motion picture photographer. Dr. Frissell believes his son still may be alive.

With Balchen were Merlon Cooper of New York, organizer of the flight, and Randy Enslow, relief pilot. The last man who saw Frissell alive was William Kennedy, navigator of the Viking who died of injuries and pneumonia aboard the Sagona last night.

Before he died Kennedy told Captain Jacob Keen of the Sagona a vivid story of the explosion in the powder room which blew the deck boards into the sea and burst the ship's stern from port to starboard. As stern from port to starboard. As stern from port to starboard.

He called out as he fell and was wrapped in flames," Kennedy told Keen. "Nine casks of kerosene oil on the deck caught fire and of all the persons there, Sargent, King and myself are the only ones left."

Frissell Feared Danger. Kennedy now is dead, but Harry Sargent of Boston, who was with Frissell on the expedition to make sealing motion pictures aboard the Viking, was brought back safe and not seriously injured, also will recover. A third member of the picture expedition, A. G. Penrod, New York cameraman, is out on the somewhere, dead or alive, with Frissell and the others still missing.

France Will Denounce Austro-German Treaty

Paris, March 24 (AP)—Denunciation of the commercial treaty with Germany and a decision to obtain from all financial aid constitute the possible policy of France toward Germany if she persists in carrying out an economic pact with Austria, the Associated Press was informed tonight in official quarters.

Inquiry among diplomats accredited to France shows a prevalence of belief that the Austro-German move is one of the most important political developments since the war, embodying a possible attempt to form a central European bloc of powers just as the naval accord between France and Italy had given optimistic conviction that the war clouds of Europe had been dissipated.

Grave Affair. It is now admitted that the French representation to Vienna has taken the form of a resolute, though "friendly" protest, and it was learned that at yesterday's meeting the French cabinet judged the affair so potentially grave that it devoted the entire session to the question.

After receiving detailed reports of the nature of the Austro-German agreement, which is generally regarded as the first stage of a political union, France has decided, this correspondent was informed, that the agreement is entirely unacceptable.

What concrete steps will be taken will be elaborated after consultation with other powers, including especially Great Britain. Aristide Briand has begun to exchange views with the British foreign minister.

France does not accept the explanation that nations having the most favored nation treatment with Germany and Austria cannot profit by this clause by having free entry for their merchandise into the two countries.

So strong is the feeling in France that several writers, doubtless reflecting official views, admonish readers that Europe now has entered a critical period which recalls that at the end of the second empire when Napoleon III neglected to take notice of successive warnings.

ITALY MAY ENTER. Rome, March 24 (AP)—Italy's entrance with some of the Balkan countries into the Austro-German customs union was considered by authorities today as reasonably possible.

The government's comment momentarily was limited, officials saying they were inquiring into all aspects. Observers outside the government profess to be confident that Italy is strongly interested in the idea and quite conceivably may join what is described as "a practical United States of Europe made while Briand was dealing in words."

ROBERT EDESON, ACTOR, PASSES

Screen Veteran Dies In Hollywood at Age of 62 Years

Hollywood, Calif., March 24 (AP)—Robert Edeson, 62, the last of the four men who turned their backs on golden careers of the stage in 1914 to risk their fortunes in the untamed films, joined his old cronies in death at dawn today.

Seventeen years ago, the four: Edeson, Theodore Roberts, Dustin Farnum and James Neill, listened to the persuasive tongue of Cecil B. DeMille and with a warding of failure ringing in their ears from their compatriots of the stage, they threw up their careers to go to a dusty little town named Hollywood.

Became Wealthy. The passing of the years proved their foresight and they became richer than the stage ever could have made them. Then death played its part. First Farnum went, then Roberts. Barely two weeks ago Neill was buried and Edeson followed.

Heart disease ended the life of Edeson, who as the star of the famed Indian play "Strongheart," became one of the best known actors of the last half century. At his bedside were his widow, Aida de Martinez Edeson, his fourth wife; and a bosom companion, Edmund Brees, veteran actor.

As death approached he turned to them with a whisper: "If it's all right, make the funeral at noon. That will give the boys and girls a chance to come without holding up a picture or losing time." On Thursday he was buried by the Los Angeles Elks.

Played Many Parts. Edeson felt like a father to these "boys and girls." When the (Continued on Page Two)

TARA RETURNS AS WITNESS IN BUCKLEY CASE

DIRECT TESTIMONY IS REINSTATED IN RECORDS

Detroit, Mar. 24 (AP)—Fred Tara, whose refusal to be cross-examined threw the Gerald E. Buckley murder trial into confusion last Wednesday, returned to the witness stand in recorder's court today.

The witness had spent five days in the county jail under a contempt citation as a result of his refusal to testify. Today Sheriff Henry Behrend notified the prosecution that Tara was ready to purge himself of contempt.

Tara's direct testimony was reinstated in the record. Last Tuesday Tara testified that he had seen Ted Pizzino and Angelo Livecchi, co-defendants with Joe Bonmarito, running into the La Salle hotel 30 seconds before Buckley was shot to death early on the morning of July 23.

Defense attorneys today questioned Tara about this testimony and compared it with testimony he gave at Pizzino's extradition hearing in New York last August.

Other witnesses today included two New York detectives who assisted Detroit police when they arrested Pizzino in New York Aug. 9. These officers testified that shortly after his arrest Pizzino told them he had left Detroit "about July 26". Pizzino now claims he was in New York on July 23 when Buckley was slain.

Today's session opened at 11 a. m. with the cross-examination of George Marvin, former street railway investigator, who yesterday told of a gathering in the La Salle hotel in January 1930 when threats were made against Buckley by Livecchi and others there.

Defense counsel asked Marvin whether the John A. Klein he said he met at this gathering was the same John A. Klein who was seated next Buckley in the La Salle hotel lobby when the latter was slain. The witness replied he was a different person.

Defense Attorney Allan W. Kent started the cross-examination of Tara today. He asked Tara if he recalled testifying last Tuesday that he had seen Livecchi and Pizzino "run into the hotel just before the shooting. Tara replied that he did. Kent then read excerpts from Tara's testimony before the supreme court of New York last August in which he said he had seen Pizzino pocket a pistol. The witness replied that he had not used the terms ascribed to him.

PENSION BILL PASSAGE URGED

Lansing, March 24 (AP)—With a crowded gallery to cheer them, advocates of the old age pension law urged the legislature to adopt the Dole bill, then proceeded to wrangle over a method of financing the measure at a public hearing before the house judiciary committee tonight.

Led by Mayor Frank Murphy of Detroit, proponents of the pension system advocated state responsibility for the aged on humanitarian grounds but could not agree on a method of financing the plan. The proposed head tax of $2 as provided in the Haight house bill was vigorously criticized by most of the advocates.

HARDING BILL RELEASED BY SENATE GROUP

ADOPTION BY UPPER HOUSE APPEARS ASSURED

BY GILBERT T. SHULSIN (Associated Press Staff Writer) Lansing, March 24 (AP)—Congressional reapportionment swept over its first barrier today as the impressive style that its adoption by the state senate appeared assured.

In committee of the whole the senate brushed aside attempts to delay redistributing by substituting the proposal to a referendum. The Harding bill providing for the creation of four new districts to absorb the added congressmen allotted to Michigan, was advanced without amendment to the order of third reading, which places it on the calendar for a final vote Wednesday.

Two Objections. Two senators voiced objections to the measure. Senator James O. Bonine, of Cassopolis, introduced an amendment proposing to submit reapportionment to the voters in 1932. He received only one vote in support of his motion.

STATE SCORES IN LINGLE CASE

Witness Identifies Leo Brothers as Man Who Ran From Tunnel

Criminal Courts Building, Chicago, March 24 (AP)—Leo Brothers was pointed out in Judge Joseph Sabath's courtroom today as the man who ran out of a pedestrian tunnel last June immediately after Alfred "Jake" Lingle, Tribune crime reporter, was assassinated.

Warren Williams, a former railway brakeman now employed by the state's attorney, said he was standing at the entrance of the subway last June 9 when he heard a "muffled report."

"Then I saw a man come running out of the tunnel. He zigzagged through traffic, almost got hit by a car, and ran within a foot and a half of me," Williams testified.

"Have you ever seen that man since?" he was asked. "Yes," replied Williams. "Is that man in this courtroom?" "Yes."

Employed by State "Point him out," Williams pointed directly at the calm youthful defendant, seated at the counsel table.

Williams was preceded on the stand by "Coroner" Herman N. Bunden and several police officers who told of seeing the Tribune police reporter alive not long before the slaying and of examining his body as it lay in the tunnel.

Williams said he had been employed by the state's attorney's office since June 15, at a salary of $290 a month, and that his principal duties were to look at suspects in the Lingle slaying. He said he had gone to St. Louis, New York, and western Illinois and Wisconsin to look at suspects or pictures of underworld characters.

"Did you ever pick out a picture or identify a suspect before you identified Leo Brothers?" he was asked.

"No, I never did," the witness answered.

HARDING BILL RELEASED BY SENATE GROUP

that it does not shift out-state district lines materially and gives Wayne only that portion of the increased representation which can be placed there without taking anything away from the balance of the state. While the senate appeared to be prepared to accept the measure, doubts as to its reception in the house were expressed.

School District Taxes Senator William F. Turner, of Morely, introduced a bill patterned after the recommendations of the state educational survey commission, designed to equalize school district taxes. The measure would create a mill tax to raise approximately $2,000,000 a year for the purpose. All districts would be allowed $1,200 a year for one room schools and would be paid by the state the difference between that amount and their receipts from the primary school fund and a five mill local tax.

The amount used for the suggested equalization would be approximately equal to the annual appropriation from the general fund now apportioned among the so-called poorer school districts.

The senate passed and sent to the house for concurrence in amendments the Armstrong bill to limit the power of the state administrative board relative to emergency appropriations.

As it passed the house the bill provided that the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the house should sit with the board when emergency claims were considered. The amended measure stipulated the chairman of the house and senate finance committees, and one additional member each, shall sit with the board.

Other Measures Other measures approved and transmitted to the house were the Wood bill to remove the 7 percent interest rate on money; two state banks may charge a higher rate on call loans; the Upjohn bill providing for the control of museums in public schools and two Branson bills requiring teachers in public schools and normal colleges to take an oath of allegiance to the constitution.

Senator Arthur E. Wood, of Detroit, introduced a bill to add four judges to the Detroit common pleas court and to make it a court of record in certain instances. Companion bills by Senator Herbert J. Rushton would ban the use of nets or set hook lines in Whiskey Bay and other northern resort territory. Senator Peter B. Lennon put in a bill to cut the monthly interest rate on small loans to one percent per month. The present rate is 3 1/2 percent on loans of $300 or less.

A bill was submitted by Senator Alex J. Cowan, of Port Huron, to permit married women to establish a separate domicile for political purposes. It would permit married women to run for office or vote in places different from that of the home of their husbands.

of his testimony was the truth of last August or that of last Tuesday. He replied that the latter was because "I have had time to collect myself."

Further excerpts of the New York testimony in which Tara was quoted as admitting he was a "stool pigeon" were read. The witness said he failed to recall such an admission.

Tara said he had been in police custody since August 15. He said he identified Pizzino from a photograph shown him by the police. He added that he had had a good look at Pizzino the night of the slaying.

New York detectives who testified today were Daniel J. Mahoney and Ignatius I. Kane. They told of meeting Lieut. John Hoffman of the Detroit police Aug. 9 and arresting Pizzino at the Bronx branch of the National City Bank in New York. Both told of Pizzino's alleged statement that he had left Detroit after July 26, three days after Buckley was slain.

Charlotte Long, who was operating an elevator at the La Salle hotel when the slaying occurred, was another witness today. She said she was in her elevator when the shots were fired and that less than five minutes before that had taken Buckley down to the lobby. Earlier witnesses have told how Buckley left a party on the eleventh floor of the hotel to go to the lobby just before he was killed.

Lieut. Earl Stephens, ballistics expert of the Detroit police department, was called to identify 14 shells found near Buckley's chair in the La Salle hotel lobby after the slaying. He said that the shells had been fired from a .30 calibre Luger and a .35 calibre Colt.

Today's session was broken frequently while opposing attorneys and Judge Edward J. Jeffries argued over the admissibility of testimony. One argument concerned the testimony of the New York detectives. Judge Jeffries ruled that the state could not introduce testimony to show how Pizzino acted at the bank at the time of his arrest.

Liberals Draw Line For Laborite Gov't

London, March 25—(Wednesday)—In a long secret session of their parliamentary party, the Liberals have drawn a chalkline for the Laborites to walk if they want to remain in power, and with the political situation what it is, it is expected that the government will walk that line punctiliously, at least in the immediate future.

The Liberal meeting, which was attended by all but five of the party M. P.'s, lasted five and one-half hours last night and ended with the acceptance over the opposition of a sizable minority of the program of procedure approved the night before by the "shadow cabinet" of men who presumably would hold cabinet posts if the Liberals should form a government.

It was decided not to make any formal compact with the MacDonald government, but instead merely to issue a declaration of party policy.

Investigation Into Sewer System Urged

Detroit, March 24 (AP)—The Wayne county grand jury is to be asked by the Detroit council to investigate the city's sewer system with a view to determining whether there has been collusion between the department of public works and contractors interested in various jobs.

This action was taken by the council today after Joseph S. Stringham, city engineer, appeared before it and announced that another serious deterioration of the Southfield sewer had been discovered. Previous breaks in the sewer which caused damage which will cost more than $700,000 to repair.

The resolution requesting the grand jury investigation was passed by the council immediately after Stringham made his report.

Tammany Hall Ready For Investigation

New York, March 24 (AP)—Tammany Hall today marshalled its defenses against the legislative investigation into the city government.

The inquiry, under the direction of Samuel Seabury, independent Democrat who was opposed by Tammany when he ran for governor in 1916, is expected to get under way about May 1. Seabury refused today to comment but from a source close to him it was learned he had agreed to run the investigation if he is guaranteed a free hand and if no effort is made to stampede him into sensationalism.

ICE FIELDS IN LAKES DRIFTING

Duluth-Superior Harbor Freed; 13 Inches at Escanaba

Detroit, March 24 (AP)—Rapid disappearance of ice fields on the Great Lakes, except in the Straits of Mackinac, is reported in the weekly ice report issued today by Norman B. Conger, U. S. Meteorologist here.

Ice is all broken up in the Duluth-Superior harbor, the report says, and no ice fields are visible in the lake. At Port Arthur, Ont., the ice has been broken up by recent winds and drifted into the open lake. There still is from nine to twelve inches of ice in the harbor. No ice fields are reported off Keeweenaw Point; some slush fields off Marquette and no ice fields east of Whitefish Point. The ice continues solid behind Grand Island, Harbor ice at Sault Ste. Marie is 16 inches thick but softening rapidly. The ferry bank operating March 20 and all team crossing has ceased.

In Lake Michigan, Escanaba reported 13 inches of harbor ice and ice fields in Green Bay frozen again after moving for a time with the winds. No ice fields are reported along the west shore nor along the east shore to near Charlevoix. Charlevoix reported fields about two miles wide and some at Beaver Island. Fish tugs are making their way through the fields. At the Straits, the ice is eight inches thick, heavily windrowed and continues firm. The field extends beyond vision to the west and east of Mackinac.

In Lake Huron, open water is visible three-miles east of Mackinac Island and the ice, extending from Bois Blanc Island to St. Martins Island, is weakening somewhat. Cheboygan reported no change. Ice extends half a mile out from Southampton but at Goderich there are no ice fields visible in the lake. Port Huron reported ice fields extending northeast beyond vision. The St. Clair river is open to below St. Clair, but continued blocked near Algonac.

Should the administration plan be carried out by adoption of the proposed amendment, a court battle is in prospect. Opponents claim the credit of the state would be impaired and have indicated that they will not surrender without a finish fight.

High School Youth Confesses Slaying

St. Joseph, Mo., March 24 (AP)—A 17-year-old high school boy, Michael Burke, already charged with a hundred St. Joseph burglaries, confessed today, county authorities announced, to the slaying of John Brown, a former peace officer, and John Fisher, Armour Packing company employee.

Brown, a colorful figure who usually carried a pistol, was shot to death at his home last December 29. He had been shot, authorities said at the time, by a man who "beat him to the draw." Fisher was shot in an attempted holdup last January as he alighted from a street car with Miss Minnie Wende.

The son of Edward C. Burke, St. Joseph attorney, the youth also was quoted by Frank Kirtley, prosecutor, as having confessed today the wounding of Harry Rash, Savannah, Mo., restaurateur, the night Brown was killed.

Solons Give Views On Reduced Revenue

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Diverse views on what to do about dwindling income tax receipts were expressed today by Republicans and Democrats.

Senator Hull of Tennessee, a former chairman of the Democratic national committee, predicted an increase in taxation would be necessary unless the administration wanted to extend a deficit over long period.

Chairman Fess of the Republican national committee, however, took the view it would be unnecessary to increase taxes, although he view the treasury situation as "somewhat alarming."

The opinion that a tax increase would be unnecessary also was expressed by Senator Harris, Democrat, Georgia, who added there must be a sharp reduction in expenditures.

Thompson Says It's His Last Campaign

Chicago, March 24 (AP)—"Big Bill" Thompson, by his own admission, is in his last political race.

"Big Bill"—more formally known as Mayor William Hale Thompson, told a campaign audience today that the April 7 election, in which he seeks a fourth term, will be "the end of Thompson in politics."

But, he added, he wants that fourth term.

3 Percent Bonds Sought by State After Amendment

contents refunding bonds could be issued at rates as low as 3 percent.

Although the enabling acts that were passed after the bond issues were authorized provided that they be "redeemable at the pleasure of the state at any time not less than five years nor more than thirty years from the date of issuance," Governor Brucker has suggested the proposed amendment to assure the validity of his plan. When the governor first advanced his proposal, it was met with the contention that the issuance of refunding bonds which would increase the total indebtedness beyond the constitutional authorization of $50,000,000 would be a violation of the constitution.

The administration plan has met with opposition and acclamation in the legislature. The resolution was given ready approval. Some members, who opposed the plan, hesitated to vote against it in the face of savings in interest rates it would affect for the state.

Bonding houses and financial experts, however, have taken issue with the governor on his refinancing plan. They point out that none of the outstanding highway bonds contains any wording regarding redemption before maturity and that all bear definite maturity dates. The bonds were sold at high premiums when issued and for a few years afterward, largely because they were expected to mature at such definite dates, opponents contend. They argue that to call the bonds now at par would mean a loss to the holders.

Should the administration plan be carried out by adoption of the proposed amendment, a court battle is in prospect. Opponents claim the credit of the state would be impaired and have indicated that they will not surrender without a finish fight.

Rebels Killed In Peru Revolt

Surprise Uprising Lasts Four Hours; Quelled By Gov't Troops

Lima, Peru, March 24 (AP)—After a brief period of peace, Lima was again under martial law tonight after loyal troops had put down a revolt of part of the Fifth Infantry regiment late last night by directing cannon fire against the Santa Catalina barracks. Some forty or more rebels were killed.

The surprise uprising, which followed establishment of peace under the new Junta headed by Lieutenant Colonel David Samanes Ocampo, lasted four hours. The insurgents attempted to storm the palace and fired wildly into the air. A number of persons were arrested and will be summarily court martialed.

Purpose Not Announced While the purpose of the new rebellion was not announced, there were numerous reports as to its aim. Some say the rebels claim not to have received their pay, while others connect the movement with activities of supporters of Augusto B. Leguia, overthrown as president last fall.

Another report is that the uprising had communistic connections. Communist pamphlets were found in the possession of several soldiers who participated in the revolt.

In announcing that all strength at hand would be used in punishing attempts at disturbances, the government decree stated that the siege also existed at Callao. It authorized loyalist forces to break up any groups of four or more persons not obeying orders to disperse.

Surprise Uprising Lasts Four Hours; Quelled By Gov't Troops

Lima, Peru, March 24 (AP)—After a brief period of peace, Lima was again under martial law tonight after loyal troops had put down a revolt of part of the Fifth Infantry regiment late last night by directing cannon fire against the Santa Catalina barracks. Some forty or more rebels were killed.

The surprise uprising, which followed establishment of peace under the new Junta headed by Lieutenant Colonel David Samanes Ocampo, lasted four hours. The insurgents attempted to storm the palace and fired wildly into the air. A number of persons were arrested and will be summarily court martialed.

Purpose Not Announced While the purpose of the new rebellion was not announced, there were numerous reports as to its aim. Some say the rebels claim not to have received their pay, while others connect the movement with activities of supporters of Augusto B. Leguia, overthrown as president last fall.

Another report is that the uprising had communistic connections. Communist pamphlets were found in the possession of several soldiers who participated in the revolt.

In announcing that all strength at hand would be used in punishing attempts at disturbances, the government decree stated that the siege also existed at Callao. It authorized loyalist forces to break up any groups of four or more persons not obeying orders to disperse.

Progressives Fail To Reach Agreement

Washington, March 24 (AP)—Dissension broke out among congressional progressives today over their legislative program for the next session.

The proposal by Representative LaGuardia, Republican, New York, that the senate and house independents in both parties line up behind a quartet of measures as their minimum legislation demands drew support from Representative Kvale, Farmer Labor, Minnesota.

NEW MEASURES GIVEN TO HOUSE

Re-Draft of Narcotics Code Sponsored By Rep. Culver

Lansing, March 24 (AP)—The house today looked over a wide miscellany of new bills, most of them designed to correct or relieve some local conditions.

Included in the hopper of new measures were two bills sponsored by the state crime commission submitted by Rep. Charles H. Culver, of Detroit. One is an entire re-draft of the narcotics code reinstating the penalty for offenses inadvertently omitted by the 1925 session and placing enforcement of the general provisions of the act under the jurisdiction of the state health commissioner. The maximum penalty for violations would be four years imprisonment or a fine of $2,000. The bill also strengthens the provisions requiring records on legitimate sale of drugs.

The second Culver measure would permit the state school for peace officers to be held at other locations outside of Lansing and would add to the curriculum such subjects as the ethics of the police profession, courtesy, judgment, extent of police authority and confession and state of mind. The commissioner of public safety would be authorized to send state police to localities to replace officers who were attending the school.

New State Park A new state park was visualized in the introduction of a bill by Rep. William C. Birk, of Baraga, providing for a survey by the University of Michigan and the Michigan College of Mining and Technology of the Porcupine Mountains in Ontonagon county. The bill has an appropriation of $5,000.

Another bill by the same man would permit townships of more than 750 population to own sewage disposal plants, water works and electric plants, the same as villages.

Rep. James Helme, of Adrian, offered a bill to permit counties of more than 30,000 population

Rep. James Helme, of Adrian, offered a bill to permit counties of more than 30,000 population to receive state aid for tuberculosis relief regardless of the bed capacity of their hospitals. The present statute limits state aid to hospitals of 50 bed capacity.

A bill designed to tax motor vehicles from other states was offered by Rep. John H. Callahan, Detroit. His measure would make it unlawful to operate a motor vehicle with a gasoline tank in excess of 25 gallons capacity. Operators from other states, he said, have been evading the gasoline tax by using larger tanks filled with gasoline.

Rep. Philip C. Pack, of Ann Arbor, submitted a bill to prevent college fraternities and sororities from evading their taxes by deeding their property to their particular institution. The measure would limit the occupancy of institutional buildings at the University of Michigan, Michigan State College, the Normal College, and the Michigan College of Mines to societies whose membership would be open to any member of the student body.

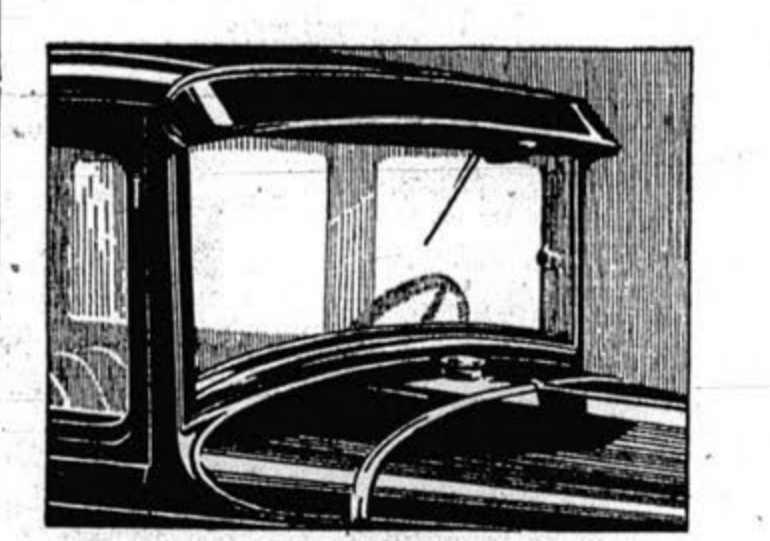

A bill by Rep. Earl L. Burnhans, of Paw Paw, would permit city treasurers to be elected for two years without limitation on the number of their terms. Rep. John W. Goodwins, of Marquette, introduced a bill to require 14 days of quarantine for horses or mules shipped into Michigan from other states.

C&NW PLANS NEW SERVICE

Door-to-Door Package Freight Hauling To Start May 1

Arrangements for door-to-door package freight service between certain designated Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota points on the Chicago and North Western railway have been completed and will go into effect May 1 with plans under way to extend this service to cover every state on the North Western system, H. W. Beyers, vice president, in charge of traffic of the road, Chicago, announces.

"The Chicago and North Western railway for a considerable period has been led to believe by its patrons that there is a quite general demand for through bills of lading from door to door, including pick-up by the railroad at the point of origin and delivery at the destination point to stores and industries.

"In order to make this possible, we have been negotiating with draymen at stations on our line to place ourselves in a position to establish a tariff which will include within its service the issuance of a bill of lading at the shipper's industry, picking up the freight at that point, and making delivery at stores or industries as the case may be.

"The North Western has been ready for several months to provide a tariff of this nature, but has held it up in order that some other lines might have an opportunity to establish similar service concurrently, if they so desired. It has been concluded definitely now that this service be made effective quite generally in Illinois, Wisconsin and Minnesota and that shortly thereafter similar arrangements will be effected and put into operation in all the nine states served by the Chicago and North Western railway.

Much Interest In Sale of Tax Land On Friday Morning

A considerable number of parcels of abandoned tax land, situated in Delta county, will be placed on sale at public auction at 9:30 o'clock Friday morning at the courthouse in Escanaba by the department of conservation.

Descriptions of the property have been appearing in the Thursday editions of the Escanaba Daily Press for the last five weeks. Judging from the interest displayed, there will be many persons attending the sale, particularly those in the market for property in Gladstone and vicinity, values of which have increased as a result of announcement of plans of the Ford Motor company to establish a furnace plant there. The land offered for sale is located in Escanaba, Gladstone and Rapid River.

Aircraft Reports Say Michigan Has 475 Ships in Use

Detroit. (AP)—Michigan, although ranking second among the states in its airport investment, is sixth in the list in number of aircraft in operation and number of licensed pilots, a survey by the aeronautics branch of the United States Department of Commerce shows.

There are 475 planes in operation in the state, the report said, of which 461 are licensed and 114 unlicensed. The survey showed 732 licensed pilots of various classes in Michigan, exactly the same number as in Texas.

New York, which has the greatest airport investment, also leads the states in the number of planes, with 1,022. California is second, Illinois third; Ohio fourth and Pennsylvania with 498 is fifth.

In the number of licensed pilots, the rankings of California and New York are reversed, the western state having 3,852, and New York, 1,641. Illinois, Pennsylvania and Ohio follow in the order named, with Michigan and Texas in a tie for sixth place.

Michigan has 276 transport pilots, 91 limited commercial pilots, 3 industrial and 326 student pilots. The state holds fifth place in the list of licensed mechanics, with 447.

The growth of aviation is shown by a comparison of national totals for January 1, 1931.

CHILDREN AT PLAY

THE tragic death of a 10-year-old Wilson boy, who was struck by an automobile while he was running after a ball on the highway, should serve to impress both automobile drivers and parents of the increased danger of traffic accidents in the spring and summer seasons.

The skating and coasting season, very hazardous for children under certain conditions, is over but the new diversions to which children turn with the coming of spring are even more dangerous. Roller skating, baseball, marbles, tag, kite flying and other pastimes can be extremely hazardous when they take the boys and girls out in heavily traveled streets and highways.

According to the National Safety Council's figures, "playing in the street" is one of the major causes of child accidents during the spring and summer months. Studies in various large cities, including Philadelphia, Chicago and Louisville, have revealed the fact that about fifty per cent of child traffic accidents occur during the hours between four in the afternoon and eight in the evening. These hours constitute the children's play-time, the period when they throw off restraint and give over their time to having fun. The safety training which keeps them comparatively safe going to and from school is too often forgotten.

Traffic, of course, is especially heavy during those hours and considerable portion of the burden falls on the automobile driver. Realizing that children are often thoughtless in their play, the really careful motorist will make every attempt to do their thinking for them.

NO WORK YET

THE influx of unemployed into Delta county, attracted by the announcement that the Ford Motor company contemplates the construction of a huge plant at Gladstone, is causing some concern to officials of both Gladstone and Escanaba.

City Manager F. R. Buechner of Gladstone has issued a statement, counseling the out-of-town unemployed to remain at home for it is still uncertain when operations will commence and anyhow there will be plenty of jobs needed to take care of the local unemployment situation. Mr. Buechner's statement should be given wide publicity throughout the middle west, if possible, for if the migration of penniless unemployed continues there will be the serious problem of caring for these people.

Similar situations have arisen in other "boom" towns, and some profit should be gained here from their experiences. At the present time, ten of thousands of unemployed are thronging Las Vegas in Nevada, near the site of the Hoover dam, creating a serious problem of housing and feeding for public welfare authorities.

Flint and other industrial towns in Lower Michigan suffered from an influx of poverty-stricken people from the Mississippi flood region and other sections of the country about three years ago, and finally were forced to resort to publicity to urge the unemployed not to come there. A form letter of the Flint Chamber of Commerce sent in reply to inquiries concerning employment opportunities at that time read: "Do not come to Flint unless you are financially able to support yourself without working for at least six months."

There was a time when ambitious communities took a keen delight in scanning census figures that showed phenomenal growth. Nowadays, however, they are more interested in a "quality" population, composed of people, able to support themselves, rather than an over-swollen population, of which a great part must depend upon public charity for subsistence.

ENOUGH TAXES NOW

THE proposal for a four-cent gasoline tax in Michigan is followed by another for a tobacco tax, although the latter has already been once rejected in a referendum vote throughout the state.

The incidents reveal the modern trend to extort all the money from the people that it is possible to obtain, and this despite the fact that if these taxes are made effective they will tap pockets now well drained.

The revenue from the three-cent gasoline tax should be sufficient to provide the highway department with funds for a steady, progressive program. The only excuse for increasing the tax is to accelerate road improvements, but we doubt the necessity. There is no emergency requiring that all of the highways in Michigan be paved over night. The state has been making splendid advances in its construction and maintenance work, but why go to excess? Moderation is just as essential in highway work as in other departments, particularly when it is remembered that the motorist is now taxed to the extreme.

The tobacco tax is another that should receive the axe. The difficulty is that once these taxes are levied it is next to impossible to get rid of them after the purpose for which they were intended has been achieved. The excuse offered is that the revenue would pay for the state's building program. What we would like to know is why the user of tobacco is any more responsible for financing this program than the non-user. It should be a burden for all and not a class. If we are to pursue this special taxation plan to what should be a logical conclusion we should also include tea and coffee, ice cream, candy and all of a dozen other things which are not vital to existence but help to ease it.

Instead of busying itself trying to find new sources of revenue the legislature ought to study methods of reducing present levies. The taxation situation throughout the United States is fast reaching the point of virtual confiscation. Business as well as the individual is feeling the effect. In Michigan the delinquency on general property this year is 50 per cent. What more need be said about the ability of the public to pay? The claim that a reduction in the state tax, when distributed, would make little difference in the average tax bill is piffle. The general property levy is complemented by many others, and the total gives the state a huge revenue. Effect a slice in all, and also in county, township and city taxes, and the accumulative effect will give the taxpayer relief that he will appreciate.

The time has arrived for decreasing taxes, not increasing them, whether through old methods or new ones. The legislature should turn thumbs down on the four-cent gas tax and the tobacco tax. Enough is plenty.—Iron Mountain News.

Anniversary

On March 25, 1634, the first Roman Catholic mass was celebrated in Maryland.

Two years before, Cecilius Calvert, second Lord of Baltimore, received a charter from Charles I conferring on him possession of the territory now forming the states of Maryland and Delaware. One of the chief causes that led to the settlement of Maryland was the desire of Lord Baltimore, a Catholic, to found a colony where his fellow believers might profess their religion openly without incurring the penalties to which they were subjected in England.

Other denominations, however, were to be on equal footing with the Catholics, and of the 200 or more who arrived at Point Comfort, Va., in February, 1634, it is probable that half of them were Protestants. On the 25th of March mass was celebrated on St. Clement's Island in the Potomac, and shortly after the site of the city of St. Mary's was traced on land bought from the Indians, near the banks of the river.

They wear the queerest bonnets,
And fine, old fashion lace,
But things that other women wear
They wear with twice the grace.

Age has not made them helpless.
Time has not left them said,
Their laugh is just as quick to come,
Their smile is just as glad.
We find a boy is fretful,
A girl inclined to scold,
And discontent among the young,
But not among the old.

God bless them for their laughter,
The twinkle in their eyes,
Like stars that twinkle brightest in
The time of wintry skies.
For when the heart is heavy,
And sick of life are men,
Some little gray-haired woman comes
And sets things right again.

MAD MARRIAGE

(By NEA Service) By LAURA LOU BROOKMAN

CHAPTER XVIII

"Now there's no use taking it that way, Sophronia!" Ellen Wallace said sharply. "It's no worse for you than for the rest of us. Besides, if there was anything to do I'd have done it."

Sophronia Nicholson straightened. She was like a small, older replica of Ellen, dressed in black instead of gray. She wore her hair in the same high knot, and when she talked she emphasized her words exactly as Ellen did. The two were sisters, Sophronia, five years older, was the widow of the late Charles Nicholson. Her son and daughter were both away at school. Mrs. Nicholson lived alone and was a leading figure in the Ladies' Aid and church sewing circle. She had been knitting but at her sister's words she put down the needles.

"Do you mean to tell me, Ellen Wallace," she demanded, "that you'd stand aside and see your own brother's son run his life?"

Lucia Wallace, third of the trio, broke in with "That's exactly the way I feel about it! Surely there's something—"

Lucia was younger than the others. She had been a Wilbur before her marriage to Ben Wallace, cousin of Jim. The Wilburs lacked money but their social rank was unquestioned.

"I tell you there's nothing to be done," Ellen insisted staunchly. "They're married and that's all there is to it."

"How're you so sure that they're married? With a woman like that you can't tell anything about it!"

"Sophronia—" Ellen eyed her sister sternly. "I don't know where this girl came from. I don't know anything about what she's done or been or why Jim married her. But I do know Jim Wallace is a gentleman. Oh, yes, they're married!"

"But haven't you been able to find out anything?" Lucia asked.

"I've found out that she doesn't want to talk about herself. Always has a way of turning questions off so she doesn't give you an answer. You'll see when you talk to her. I tried questioning Jim but I'm sorry to say that for the present I am no longer in his confidence."

"Well, all this is getting us upstairs window, she saw two black-clad figures going down the walk.

The next three days were uneventful. Gypsy learned the routine of the Wallace household and tried to adjust herself to it. At eight o'clock each morning breakfast was served, giving Jim time to glance through the morning newspaper before driving downtown to the office. After breakfast Miss Wallace went to the kitchen to consult Harriet about the day's tasks. Harriet appeared to be a paragon. She cooked and served the meals and assumed responsibility for the smooth operation of the entire household. The only other full-time employee was Sam Matson who kept the fires, took care of the yard and was handy at all sorts of carpentry and repair work. Three times a week Sam's wife, Cora, came to the house to wash and iron and do the cleaning.

Marketing was one task which Miss Wallace always attended to herself. By 10 o'clock she was out of the house with her market basket on her arm. Gypsy wondered why she carried the cumbersome basket. Almost always the purchases were sent home. Miss Wallace, however, clung to traditions.

Gypsy was not bold enough to ask if she might be included in these expeditions and Miss Wallace did not invite her. Before the older woman's energetic efficiency Gypsy wilted. She was torn between eagerness for something to do to pass the time and fear that anything she might attempt would fail to pass Miss Wallace's critical eye.

There was the time she found a mending basket on the davenport in the living room. On top was a pair of Jim's socks, the heels worn and in need of mending.

Health Tips

BY DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN

Since 1924, Drs. D. F. Smiley and G. F. Maughan of the department of hygiene and of physiology in Cornell University have been investigating the incidence of colds among the students. The vast majority of colds occur during December, January, February and March.

As a result of their investigation they found that colds and their complications are the commonest cause of disability among students, and that all of the students can be divided up into two groups—those who are easily susceptible to colds and those who are what might be called normally resistant.

The students who are easily susceptible constitute 17.9 to 27.5 per cent of all the students. It was found that special attention to those who are susceptible to colds is an effective way of modifying or averting epidemics.

In other words, the prevention and treatment of colds is given special attention in the 25 per cent of students who have colds most frequently. Each freshman on entering the school is given an explanation as to the importance of controlling ventilation, the importance of treating the nose and throat secretions as infective materials and not disseminating them about, and the importance of including in the daily diet two to four glasses of milk, two helpings of leafy or fruit vegetables, two helpings of fiber and one or two salads.

Those students who are found to be easily susceptible to colds join a cold prevention class in which they receive a 15-minute ultra-violet light treatment once each week, and a teaspoonful of baking soda and magnesium carbonate mixed in a glass of water twice a day for three days whenever they feel a cold developing.

A careful study of the nose, throat and sinus is made by a competent physician to make sure that there is no chronic infection. They are instructed concerning the danger of exposure and the importance of the use of proper clothing.

The results of those who have followed this routine as compared with those who have not indicated to the authors that epidemics of colds could be controlled, if all of those who are susceptible to colds would co-operate in making effective the methods that have been described.

$595

Essex is the only low-priced car that follows the motor design of the highest-priced cars in using light-weight moving parts and in engine speed

This design enables Essex to develop more power at the same motor speed and the same power at a lower motor speed than the "Low-Speed" cars. It permits greater power in proportion to weight, better balancing of crankshaft loads, improved bearing lubrication, more efficient cooling and enables Essex motors to outlast low-speed engines.

Essex introduces fine-car style and Super-Six smoothness to the low-priced field. It is strongly built to assure lasting satisfaction and enduring dependability. It challenges the performance of any six and matches the economy of cars most noted for low operating cost. It gives you Rare Riding Comfort for the first time at its low price.

Post Officers Honored—As a result of the outstanding membership record made by Cloverland Post 82, American Legion, for the year 1931, silver achievement stars have been awarded by Legion headquarters to Henry Besselt, commander of the local post, and Elroy W. Andrews, adjutant. Membership in the Escanaba Legion was reported to have passed the 300 mark yesterday. Last year the total enrollment was 252.

Medal for Bruce—Sergeant Philip Bruce of the Escanaba police department, has added still another N. R. A. marksmanship medal to his steadily growing collection. The other day he received a bronze medal for the individual police pistol championship, one of the postal events of the N. R. A. series. The local officer entered five events, and won medals in two.

Practice at Coliseum—The Legion drum and bugle corps will practice at the Coliseum tonight at 7:30. Members of the organization have started an active campaign to get the corps into uniforms for their first outdoor appearance at Escanaba on Memorial Day.

Speeders Warned—Two arrests intended as a warning to motorists who exceed the speed limit in the city of Escanaba were made by the Escanaba police department. Sixty miles an hour on Tenth street brought a fine for the two drivers brought into court.

gent, president of the Chicago and North Western railway, on Monday, returned yesterday morning. The members reported having had a satisfactory conference with regard to the possibility of reopening of the railroad shops here.

City Health Good—So far this year Escanaba has had no runs of contagious diseases serious enough to be called epidemics, and the arrival of rain yesterday was welcomed by health authorities as a means of "washing the dust out of the air." Several cases of measles were reported during the last few weeks, but most of them were of a mild nature, and there were no new cases reported this week. Scarlet fever cases are on the decline, and there has been no new patients in the last two weeks.

Doctor Has Operation—Dr. W. B. Boyce, 1301 First avenue south, is a patient at St. Francis hospital, where he underwent a serious operation Sunday for a gangrenous appendix. Dr. Boyce's condition is reported as favorable but visitors will not be allowed for several days.

Father Tom Recovering—Rev. Fr. Tom Dregacz, who has been a patient at St. Francis hospital for several weeks, is now able to sit up part of the time. Father Tom was suffering with phlebitis (inflammation of a vein) in his left leg and was unable to walk until a few days ago. He plans to return to his home some time next week and will offer Mass at St. Michael's church on Easter Sunday.

Lenten Service
Lenten services will be held in the Swedish, M. E. Church, this evening at 7:30 o'clock. Rev. Hammar will speak on the subject, "A Disciple of Jesus in the Midst of Jesus' Enemies." Mrs. Carl Gustafson will sing a solo. The public is invited.

Ladies' Aid
The members of the Ladies' Aid of the Swedish M. E. Church are requested to meet in the church this evening after the mid-week service.

Navy Pilot, Lost for Six Days, Tells of Floating With Sharks

(EDITOR'S NOTE: Verne Warren Harshman, United States navy aviation pilot who was lost for six days off the coast of Colombia, has written this story for the Associated Press.)

VERNE WARREN HARSHMAN
Buenaventura, Columbia, Mar. 24. (AP)—While flying last Tuesday with other pilots of the squadron to which I am attached, near the main body of the fleet which was about 36 hours' steaming south of the Panama Canal, my auxiliary tank ran dry while we were going through a cloud-bank.

The clouds had become thick since we had left the U. S. S. Langley earlier in the morning, and during the time it took me to get pressure on my main tank and to get the motor started again, I lost altitude and lost sight of the rest of the squadron.

Couldn't Find Fleet
I circled below the clouds for a few minutes and then climbed up above them, but I could see no other planes.

Then I went down below again and made a scouting circuit, first to the right and then to the left, trying to get back to my original starting point, for I figured I couldn't be very far from the fleet.

Still I didn't see any ships, so I flew up-wind for ten minutes and set her down on the water because my gas supply was getting very low.

I put out the flotation gear with which the plane was equipped and it functioned properly. This was about 11 a. m. on Tuesday.

It started to rain hard—right after I landed and the visibility, of course, was very poor. I got out the rubber lifeboat on top of the upper wing, put in a canteen of water, a signal pistol and a red flag.

About 8 o'clock Tuesday night the left wing flotation bag deflated and the wing went under. I saw that she could not stay afloat much longer so I inflated the rubber lifeboat and launched it, tying up to the fuselage so I could stick with the plane as long as possible.

Plane Sinks
About 2 a. m. on Wednesday I heard the air hissing out of the right flotation tank, so I shoved off and the plane sank quickly. Wednesday was overcast with much rain. I sighted nothing, but estimated my general drift at about two knots northeast.

Thursday and Friday were uneventful, and all my sensations of hunger had gone. I conserved my strength, not bothering to use the oars, but I was sopping wet from the rain which poured down without a letup.

On Saturday the visibility got better and at about 8:30 p. m. I sighted a ship fairly close on the port side, heading south. I shot off all the red stars I had but they didn't notice them so I heaved the pistol overboard. Rescued by Steamer

Sunday was clear. At 8 a. m. I sighted a Pan-American Airways plane bound north and flying low, but she was too far away to see me.

Then about 15 minutes past noon I saw in the distance a steamer coming my way. I broke out the oars and rowed over right into her path. She picked me up at 12:30.

As soon as I got aboard I tried to radio the canal station, but the ship's outfit was too weak to reach more than 50 miles. She was the Cerigo of the Hamburg-American line, and no other ship in the world will ever look so good to me. The officer treated me splendidly.

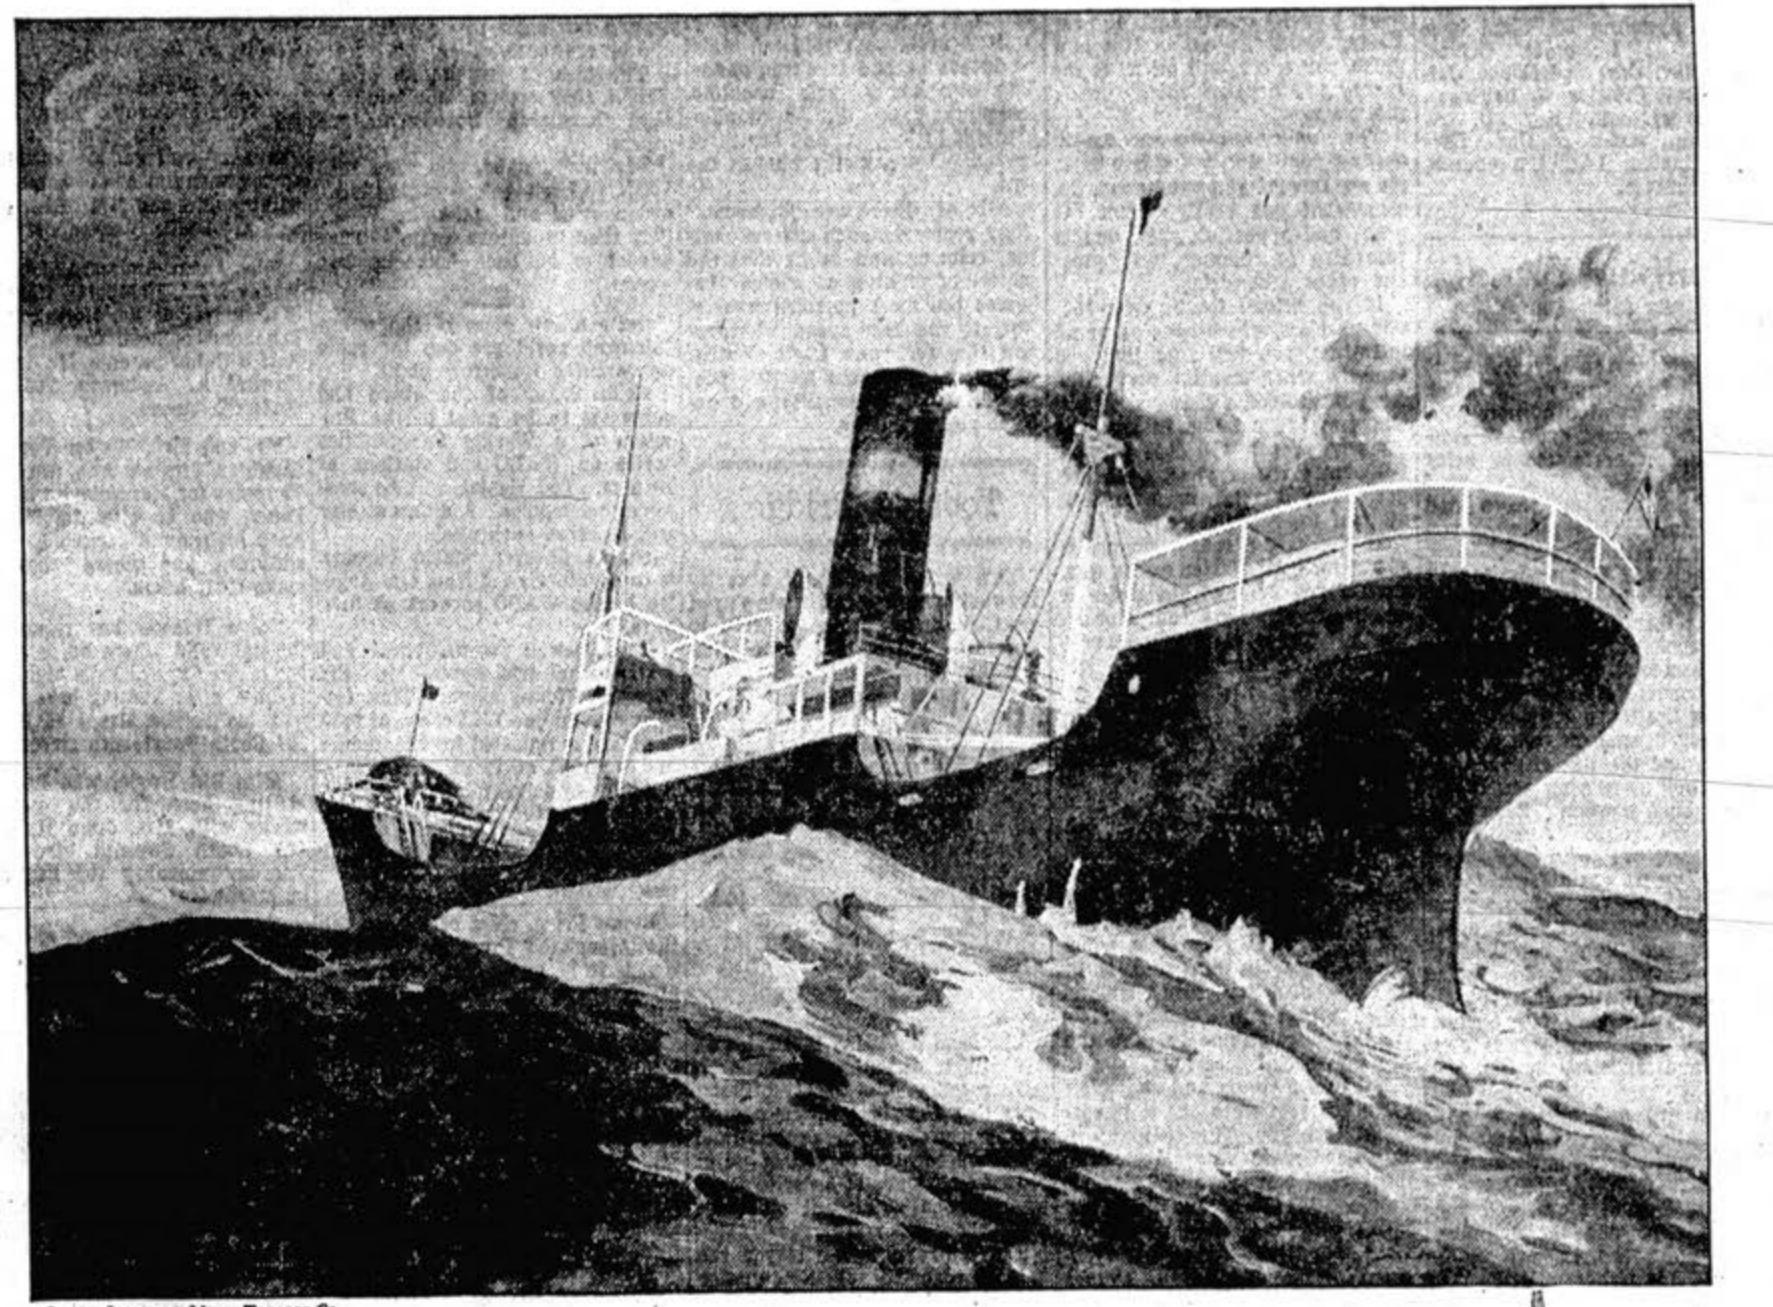

Now that I think it over, I remember that during the first couple of days I was sort of worried about the sharks which tried to tip me out of my lifeboat several times, but after a while I got used to them.

Opening Session Of Conference This Evening

The opening session of the Foreign Missionary Conference which will be conducted here at Bethany Lutheran church...

Rev. Mr. Wyman and the missionaries, who are at present in this country on furlough, are arriving in Escanaba this morning.

At the opening meeting tonight Rev. Mr. Wyman will give an illustrated lecture covering the three foreign mission fields, Africa, China and India.

Seasons of the conference will continue through Sunday with the closing services Sunday evening at 7:30 o'clock.

Rev. Lund Speaker At Installation And Dedication

Rev. Dr. C. Albert Lund, pastor of Bethany Lutheran church, and president of the Augustana Synod conference, fulfilled two missions in Iron Mountain Tuesday, delivering the sermon at a dedication service and conducting the installation of a new pastor.

The dedication, which took place Tuesday afternoon, was that of the Kingsford Heights chapel of Our Saviour's English Lutheran church. The chapel was recently improved and re-decorated.

Glorifying Yourself

Spring being the adventuresome time it is, I hope you are not going in for pastel colored evening powders, in a big way, and then stopping short of perfection by using the wrong rouge.

Do it right! Your rouge and lipstick must be changed when you change to exotic colored powders. This thing called glamor doesn't come too easily. But it's worth the effort.

It is impossible to lay down flat rules for lipstick and rouge color, since they depend on your general coloring, and the tint of your own skin as well as on your new lavender or blue powder.

Color plays a large part, off shades are made for you, rich furs, perhaps one of the new felt hats—which are long necklaces of exquisite fox skins, sables or other rich furs.

Distinction and Elegance In the Easter Wardrobe

Young as spring itself is a cape-sleeve redingote of delectable stained glass blue velvet, with a youthful frock of fresh blue, red velvet ribbon trim, blue purse and long white gloves, are from de-Pinna.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Luxurious new clothes for the woman of considerable means are described in the following article, the last of a series of three on "Budgeting Your Easter Wardrobe" which were written for The Daily Press by Julia Blanshard, NEA Service fashion authority.

BY JULIA BLANSHARD New York, March 24.—Getting your money's worth out of your Easter wardrobe, no matter how much you can spend on it, is the sporting American thing to do this year.

The only way to succeed in getting your money's worth is to set an amount you can spend, decide what you really want to wear, and apportion your budget according to costume, hat, shoes and other accessories.

If you belong in the over-$50-a-week class, which goes on up to infinity, you will find that you spend a much smaller proportion for your costume than the girl who has $25 a week. In fact, the costume budget will cost only 50 per cent or so of your total budget. That leaves you a princely amount for accessories.

If you have plenty of money to spend for your Easter outfit what should you demand, in order to be sure that you get your money's worth. Three things, certainly: Exclusive outfits, Elegance, Distinction.

Color plays a large part, off shades are made for you, rich furs, perhaps one of the new felt hats—which are long necklaces of exquisite fox skins, sables or other rich furs.

If you are young and charming a modish redingote outfit is sure to intrigue you. The redingote is commonly known as the Grand Coup and consists of getting rid of redundant trumps in order to make an additional trick not otherwise available.

The ordinary bridge player can hardly conceive of a situation wherein the Goddess of Good Fortune has blessed him with too many trumps. It is true that this annoying situation is indeed rare. However, there are occasions when, with an unfavorable trump distribution against you, you are hampered by the possession of too many cards of the trump suit.

The hand for today illustrates an exceedingly difficult piece of strategy, possibly the most brilliant one that has yet been discovered. It is commonly known as the Grand Coup and consists of getting rid of redundant trumps in order to make an additional trick not otherwise available.

Special Services to Mark Reopening of Church Sunday

Reopening services at the First Methodist Episcopal church in which redecoration and renovation have been in progress for the past few weeks, will be held on Sunday with special music and sermons at both the morning and evening services.

In the morning Rev. R. C. G. Williams, pastor, will speak on the topic, "The King of Love and Peace," delivering a Palm Sunday message. In the evening the topic will be "The Breath of God," a theme based upon the Prophet Ezekiel's vision of the valley of dry bones.

Final touches in the work on the interior of the church will be taken care of in the next few days. The entire church proper has been re-decorated its walls a mottled green and its ceiling ivory with harmonizing stencil work. The archway over the pulpit and choir loft has been refinished in ivory with gold stencilling, and the organ pipes have been regilded. The church has also been newly carpeted throughout.

RADIO

BY C. E. BUTTERFIELD (Associated Press Radio Editor) (Time is eastern standard throughout.)

New York, March 24 (AP)—Nearly a quarter of a ton of Chicago humor, otherwise Ed East and Ralph Dumke, are looking around New York, meanwhile doing their daily broadcast skit, "Sisters of the Skillet."

Chock full of humor even when far away from the microphone, they are back in the town they played for several years when on the vaudeville stage. The principal object of their trip is a possible sponsored program and to augment the membership of Sisters of the Skillet.

East and Dumke, whose combined weight of about 500 pounds is almost equally divided between them, had a song set on the stage. About a year ago they went on radio. They evolved the idea for a burlesqued household hint program in which they reply to any question sent in. And they get real puzzlers, some that their brief permit on the WJZ chain will not permit answering. The boys write no script for the programs, ad libbing from a few notes they jot down on the letters received.

The idea of the Sisters of the Skillet, they explain, is a "club" to help "harrassed" housewives and others. East and Dumke, who were with WGN, Chicago, before joining NBC, are married and make the Windy City their broadcast capital. They expect to be back home in two weeks.

Quite a few stars of the entertainment world are due for radio appearances tomorrow night. Belle Baker of the stage and screen is to be guest in the Premiere of a Weekly Personalities series on WABC and stations at 10 p. m. Ted Husing will be master of ceremonies. A different star will be heard each week.

Norma Shearer, movie heroine, is to be interviewed from Los Angeles by the WABC network at 8:30 p. m. The Boxell sisters, vocal and instrumental trio, appear in the Pleasure House arzo. This feature goes on one WJZ chain at 9:30 p. m. and is repeated for the middle and far west at 11:15.

Abram Chasins, pianist-composer, is to play in the concert program, WABC and group at 10:30 p. m. concluding the series until next fall.

Byron Price, chief of bureau for the Associated Press at Washington, is to be guest speaker in back of the news in Washington on WEAFA and stations at 7:45 p. m. Otherwise, your dials may be set for:

Club, physiologist, WEAFA chain. 6:00—Talk by Fred Payne, assistant secretary of war, on "Citizens Military Training Camps," WEAFA hookup; Eugene S. ### Early Logging Tales

The Man Who Walked With Death.

It was the evening of January 12, 1920. Some twelve or fifteen members of the mill crew were gathered in the men's room of the sawmill boarding house at Thompson. From time to time one of the crew stoked the big box stove with hardwood slabs from the mill. The men smoked. A single kerosene lamp lent a half light to the scene. The story tellers of the group were busy with their inevitable yarns. Outside, the wind was picking up. A few clouds, harbingers of a coming storm, swung across a frigid, star-dotted sky.

A tall, thin young fellow sat over in the corner of the room. A man silent and of soldierly bearing. A stranger in town. He sat there half listening to the conversation, his thoughts perhaps on himself. No one knew where he hailed from. Evidently he was there in Thompson seeking work.

An observant person might have gathered much from his appearance. Apparently he was down on his luck. His thin, threadbare mackinaw coat, his shabby suit, his thin cotton socks, his rumbled, rubberless shoes, told as much. Even the sober look of the fellow, the flat cheeks and the staring eyes of him, bespoke adversity.

He spoke only once during the evening. He asked one of the crew whether they were hiring men at the mill. And he inquired as to the distance to Escanaba and the best road there. The crew shuffled upstairs to bed shortly afterward. Whether the fellow had money enough to pay for a bed, or whether he sat there by the stove all night, is a matter of conjecture.

Stranger Disappears

In the morning it was snowing. Vicious gusts of wind, coming down out of the northwest, whined under the boarding house eaves and frosted the windows. The storm was just getting under way. When the crew came downstairs for breakfast, the stranger was seated close to the stove in the men's room, slouched over in a chair asleep.

The mill ran all that day. The bull chain clanked complainingly in the cold. Ice-coated logs came up into the mill and went to the bandsaw, a narrow ribbon of silver-steel traveling endlessly before the sawyer. Dump cart horses pulled loads of slabs out to the yard, then hurried back to the partial shelter of the mill.

At noon the storm had taken on the proportions of a blizzard. By night the wind was a heli blast of hurdling snow. And come night the stranger was gone. Someone said he had failed to obtain work at the mill. Another person told of seeing him striking down the Little Harbor-Garden road, swirls of snow almost hiding him from sight at times.

Wouldn't Go Back

From the man's own story the following is gathered: In a storm-clouded dusk he set out from Thompson. He took the south road intending to go to Garden and from there to Escanaba. Before he was outside the town limits his feet and hands were cold. And the wind tore through his thin mackinaw as though it were calico.

Snowdrifts along the road. Series of them, high, broad, and pecked so as to impede the footsteps of an already weary traveler. At times the wind all but lifted him off his feet. At other times it thrust him off the road. Once or twice it bowled him over. The pelting snow stung his face like whip lashes. He labored on nevertheless. Cringing? Yes. But he knew there was little use of his returning to town. For he was broke, and he hated to beg for food and lodging.

Darkness settled over the fields and woodland. He plodded on. Crazy howl of the wind. Snow swirling before him, around him, far ahead of him, like shrouds of the dead.

His hands were very cold. A mile out of town he stopped to swing them. A few minutes of this and the members were appreciably warmer. And it was then that he noticed that his feet were numb. Well, to warm them he would run.

He did run. A hundred yards two hundred yards, hurdling over drifts, plunging through snow almost thigh deep, racing along stretches where the wind had swept the road clean, he ran. There, his feet were warm. He could feel the warm blood tingling in his toes.

But his hands were cold again. He thrust along nevertheless, swinging the members as he went. The top button on his mackinaw persisted in becoming unbuttoned. His numbed fingers were not equal to the task of keeping it buttoned. His feet were getting cold again. He could feel the ice working through the thin leather where sweat and moisture had damped his shoes. Maybe it was a good idea to turn about and strike back for town? But no, he was broke and . . .

The night became black. The storm settled down harder. He swung his thinly gloved hands. He ran again, each time there was a partial return of warmth to the members. During the next half hour he repeated his arm-waving and running several times. But each time he noticed that the period of safe warmth was shorter than the preceding period. Longer runs were needed now. The numbness was creeping into his feet again in spite of his exertions, and he was tiring.

Tried to Light Fire

He stopped, why not build a fire? Suicide to try fighting off the cold any longer. And so he stepped off the road into the brush, by now his feet were without feeling, his legs were riven with fatigue and pain. His hands too, were stiff with the frost. Best to lose no time in getting a fire started.

He gathered birch bark and dry twigs. Then he scooped out a hole in the snow on the lee side of a stump. This done he fumbled in his pockets for matches. He found only two stubs of matches, but dry and serviceable. He lit the first match, but the tiny stick turned suddenly in his fumbling fingers and fell into the snow. The fellow got the second match out of his pocket. Upon that match hinged life itself. But it was no time to ponder or hesitate. Carefully he scratched the stick against the side of his trousers high up under his mackinaw where the cloth was dry. The match lighted. Guarding its puny flame with cupped hands the fellow bore it to the waiting birch bark. But at the moment of applying the match to the tinder a gust of wind, swishing around the stump, blew out the flame.

The man slowly rose; went through his pockets again in a futile search for another match. The wind tore through his sweat-dampened clothing. His feet were dead now, frozen as far up as the ankles. He got into the road once more and essayed to run. A forlorn hope, this, with his strength almost petered out. The numb, club-like members carried him along as before, but, odd fact, no amount of running or stamping or scampering about induced any semblance of returning circulation in his feet. The members were rigid and seemed encased in steel.

Knew He Would Lose

According to the fellow's story, he knew then that he was done. Some men would have quit right there, but he had pluck, he had the will to fight a losing fight. Will kept him on those club-feet, kept him moving.

Hours later, miles out of Thompson, he came to a fork in the road. He took the trail straight ahead. Perhaps it didn't matter much. The thing to do was to keep moving.

Later on, walking along like one on a dream, he unwittingly, perhaps, turned off on a side road, a blind trail leading through the brush-land toward Lake Michigan. The storm demons buffeted him about; leered at him. The frost bit at his face, seared his hands, and rose steadily higher in his frozen legs. He plodded on—an old, old man of the night.

All that night the blizzard continued. The howl and clamor of it made sleep almost impossible at the Thompson boarding house. Cold seeping in through the siding of the old building caused at least a few of the men to get up out of bed to throw spare blankets even their coats atop the comforters.

And long before daylight in the morning almost every man of the crew was downstairs in the warm stove when the five o'clock whistle, bawling forth into the inferno of the storm, announced the beginning of another workday. The blizzard let up early in the forenoon, but the logging railroad was so snowed in that no timber could be got out. An hour or so after dinner the mill closed down. The crew started for home.

On their way up from the mill these fellows noticed a man walking up the slope some rods ahead of them. A staggering man he was, his form coated with snow, his head hung low as though in deep thought, his steps stiff, oddly unnatural.

"A drunk" one of the crew ventured. But no, it was no drunken man. It was he of the frozen feet, the man had reached the ice-bound lake in that black hour preceding dawn. Had heard the booming voice of the Thompson whistle miles up shore. Had taken to the ice and struck north on those very unstable legs. Hours it had taken him to travel those blizzard swept miles, but he had made it.

He turned in at the boarding house, later, over a tub of cold water into which the men had put his frozen legs, he told the story of that terrible night. With frost-touched, staring eyes absently seeking out the white expanse of the lake beyond, he gave a broken, troubled account of his fight to save off death.

And there were men there in the boarding house, looking at those dead gray-white legs in the tub, looking at those staring eyes turned away to hide the tears.

The fellow was taken to the hospital at Manistique, both of his legs were amputated in an attempt to save his life, but he died either during the operation or shortly afterward.

WOLF LAKE TO HAVE HATCHERY

State Appropriates $22,100 to Cover the Cost of Construction

Lansing.—Bids have been received and a contract is expected to be awarded within another week for the construction of a hatchery building and an overseer's residence at the Wolf Lake Fish Hatchery.

The State Administrative Board recently released $22,100 to cover the cost of building and pond development.

In addition to the two buildings at Wolf Lake, a bass rearing pond will be constructed at Alpena, at an old mill site purchased last summer.

The Wolf Lake station now has ten bass rearing ponds, including one completed last fall. The new hatchery building will be devoted to the hatching of trout. Two hundred troughs, each with a capacity for 6,000 trout will be placed in the hatchery as soon as it is completed.

800 Troughs

When the entire plant is finished it will have 800 of these troughs, with a capacity of hatching 3,500,000 brook, brown and rainbow trout annually.

The Wolf Lake Hatchery, when completed, will rival the Thompson Hatchery in Schoolcraft County in size and hatching capacity.

With the Thompson and Watersmeet units in a position to hatch and rear trout for stocking field trout rearing stations of the upper peninsula, and Oden, Harlette, and Wolf Lake for the field rearing stations in the lower peninsula, the trout fingerling program will be an established fact and on a sound basis. When planted, these trout will be more uniform and larger in size, and all healthy, vigorous fish due to winter water temperatures prevailing at the several places, and which is conducive to early hatching and rapid development.

Brook Trout by the Millions Growing at Thompson Hatchery

More than 10 million brook trout have been hatched this season at the new state fish hatchery near Thompson, says Stanley Shust, superintendent at the hatchery, who was in Escanaba last week to confer with E. C. Voght, local member of the conservation commission.

The trout are now about an inch and a half in length and will be ready to put out in feeder streams early in April. At that time they will be about two inches long or over, and the problem now is to provide sufficient feeder ponds for the baby trout.

The feeder ponds are constructed by changing the course of streams, cutting a new channel in a horse-shoe shape, with outlets and inlets dammed up so that the flow of water may be controlled.

A. B. Cook, field supervisor of fisheries for the conservation department, visited the Thompson hatchery on an inspection trip last week, and expressed himself as highly pleased with the fine condition of the trout and whitefish at Thompson.

Almost 50,000,000 whitefish eggs are now hatching in two of the department of conservation's hatcheries, and planting in Saginaw Bay and Lake Michigan is expected to begin as soon as ice conditions permit.

Bay City station is hatching 60,120,000 eggs and the Thompson hatchery, 20,040,000 eggs. Some of the fry from the latter hatchery has already been planted by tugs out of Manistiquic.

The fry are planted as soon as possible after they are hatched, the Bay City hatchery fish being planted in Saginaw Bay and the Thompson hatchery fish in Lake Michigan. Whitefish plants in other parts of the Great Lakes are made by the United States Bureau of Fisheries from its hatcheries.

If possible the department's patrol-boat No. 1 will be used for planting the fish in Saginaw Bay. Last year the first plants in Saginaw Bay were made April 12. However, with the fish hatching now it is expected that planting will take place earlier this year. Last year's planting in Saginaw Bay included 64,000,000 fry.

As soon as the whitefish fry have been removed from the hatcheries, eggs of yellow pickerel will be taken in the jars. These eggs are placed by commercial fishermen during the spring run. About three weeks are ordinarily required to hatch yellow pickerel eggs.

After she had finished Gypsy returned the socks to the basket and picked up a magazine. She was in the midst of a story and had forgotten the mending when Miss Wallace entered the room. She saw the older woman pick up the sewing basket, draw one of the mended socks over her hand and read.

Gypsy quickly looked down at the page before her. Her cheeks were burning. When she glanced up again Miss Wallace had gone from the room. The socks were no longer in the basket.

It was discouraging and after that Gypsy did not volunteer to assist with the mending. She spent a good part of each morning in her room. She went through her own wardrobe, making repairs that had long been put off. It was possible, she found, to spend long stretches of time before the mirror trying new ways of arranging her hair or achieving a glossy manicure. The hours passed but they were lonesome.

Afternoons were the dreariest. Luncheon was over by 1:30 and it was five o'clock or later before Jim arrived. Gypsy acquired the habit of taking a walk with Pat for company, each afternoon. She enjoyed exploring streets with no idea where they might lead, and wandered far away from the neighborhood of the Wallace home. Pat, trotting along beside her, seemed to enjoy their excursions as much as the girl.

They were returning from such a walk on Friday when the dog suddenly whirled with such force that the leash fell from Gypsy's hand. She turned to see him flying at full speed across a yard.

"Pat!" the girl called. "Pat—come back here!" There was no sign that the terrier heard.

"Pat!" Gypsy cried louder. Now she could see what had excited the dog. Half way up the trunk of a tree the bushy tail of a squirrel was visible, then disappeared.

The dog was at the base of the tree, leaping and barking furiously. Gypsy ran forward. She tried to get the leash but it was several moments before she had him reproach-branch over head, had turned and was looking down at them. He chattered and scolded shrilly.

Gypsy tugged at the leather strap but the terrier held back. She coaxed and pled. It required all the girl's will power and a good deal of force before she could drag him, still unwilling, back to the sidewalk. The squirrel's shrill insolence followed them.

ing. Gypsy rummaged in the basket for thread the right color, found it and set to work. She had never done much sewing. Her needle wove through the threads clumsily and for more than half an hour she bent over one sock. When completed the darned place was thick and slightly drawn. Gypsy eyed it with dissatisfaction and tried to make the next darn smoother.

Gypsy tugged at the leather strap but the terrier held back. She coaxed and pled. It required all the girl's will power and a good deal of force before she could drag him, still unwilling, back to the sidewalk. The squirrel's shrill insolence followed them.

The girl sank to her knees beside the dog. "You mustn't chase squirrels, Pat," she told him reproachfully. "Don't you know that? You mustn't run away from me when we go on walks or I'll have to leave you home. That's what I'll have to do!"

Pat's ears drooped with the knowledge that he was being scolded but one shining, black eye still watched the squirrel.

"You're not paying any attention—" Gypsy began and stopped. Standing beside her, with breath coming in great gasps as though he had been running, was a small red figure.

"Did he get the squirrel?" puffed the newcomer.

Gypsy took her head. "No," she said, "he didn't."

The little fellow might have been four years old. The red knitted suit enveloped him completely. He had blue eyes and a bit of brown hair showing beneath the edge of the red cap. His nose and cheeks were nearly as crimson as his costume. The eyes just then were big with excitement. He looked first at Gypsy, then down at the fox terrier.

"Well," said the youngster, "I'm glad, 'ol thquirrel can run fath, can't he?"

"He certainly can," Gypsy agreed. "Pat was a bad dog to chase a nice little squirrel. I've been telling him he must never do it any more."

"Bad dog," the child echoed after her. He stared at Pat for a moment then reached forward cautiously and touched the dog's head. The terrier endured this complacently.

"He won't hurt you," Gypsy said. "He's really a good dog except when he runs away and chases squirrels. That's right. Rub his head. Pat loves to have his head rubbed."

"It's his name Pat?" the child demanded.

Gypsy nodded.

"But that's my name!" the child told her. "I'm Pat!"

"Really? Then I think you two should be friends. Here, Pat—Gypsy raised the dog's right fore paw—"shake hands with this little boy. Now then, you're acquainted!"

The child was delighted. When he laughed he wrinkled his nose in a way that was irresistible. The terrier responded to the general good humor and wagged his tail.

"I haven't got a dog," the boy announced, "but I've got a theoter!"

"That's nice," Gypsy agreed. "Can you ride it?"

"Theoter! Ride it all the time. Only I can't today. I can't ride it today for a thpeical reason."

"What's the reason you can't ride today?" Gypsy wanted to know.

Small Pat looked at her with perfect composure. "I'm being punished," he announced.

"Oh, that's too bad! What are you being punished for?"

The child studied the dog's collar, apparently preoccupied.

"What are you being punished for?" Gypsy repeated.

"I ran away."

"I'm sorry," the girl said seriously. "It's naughty to run away."

Pat eyed her with interest. "I think it's fun," he said. "I've run away today too."

If she wanted to scold him she couldn't have done so. The little face was so artless and free of guile.

"Well," said Gypsy, "I think in that case we'd better be starting home. Don't you think so? Who do you live with?"

"Oh—down that way."

He pointed in the direction of the Wallace home.

"That's fine," the girl told him. "That's where Pat and I live too."

They walked slowly. Gypsy would have taken the child's hand but he drew away independently. He was eager to talk, though, and chattered and asked questions. Small Pat announced that he had an electric train, that last summer he had been to the sea shore and that his father could wiggle his ears.

He was a diverting companion. Half a block from the Wallace home the small boy stopped before the walk leading to a brick bungalow.

"Thith ith my houth," he said. "Want to come in?"

Gypsy smiled and shook her head. "Not today," she said. "Some other time. We ought to see each other often because we're neighbors. See that white house down there? That's where Pat and I live."

The child stared. "Down there?" he asked pointing.

Gypsy nodded.

The boy clasped one hand over his mouth and drew back. "Oh—!" he exclaimed, his eyes widening. "Oh, are you the New York woman?"

"Why—I don't know," the girl said. "I used to live in New York."

The child drew away further. "Thath who you are," he said with conviction. "The New York woman. My mother thaid she wouldn't tpeak to you!" He turned, frightened, and fled toward the house.

The little fox terrier, running ahead, turned impatiently half a dozen times waiting for Gypsy to catch up with him on the remainder of the walk home.

Two hours later at the dinner table Ellen Wallace announced her ultimatum.

AMUSEMENTS

AT THE DELFT

A stirring drama of human souls lost in passion and redemption in love—that is "Resurrection," the Universal photoplay presented last night at the Delft Theatre.

"Resurrection" is a triumph in screen technique. Its dialogue and musical-effects are vibrant with dramatic tenacity; its photography is glamorous, pictorial; the adaptation is scintillant with romantic charm and poignant tragedy.

Edwin Carewe, the noted director, has caught the psychology and philosophy of Tolstoy, and has faithfully brought to life on the screen the virtue, fascinating characters of the book.

The screen adaptation and dialogue were, written by Finis Fox. His continuity is vivid and facile, and his dialogue moves with direct, compelling force.

John Boles plays Prince Dmitri with romantic realism. His portrayal of this difficult role is a commendable expression of histrionic art; his characterization is human and sympathetic; his speaking voice rings with sincerity and his singing is captivating.

He is dashing as a lover; sinister as a soldier; eloquent in his final resurrection.

As Katusha Maslova, the peasant girl in love with Prince Dmitri, Lupe Velez invests her role with deep understanding, poignant emotion and artistic conception. Indeed, this brilliant young artiste lends lustre to the finest traditions of the screen. Her gift of character delineation, stirring in its emotional appeal, finds full expression in romantic scenes, and in the deep nuances of pathos and tragedy.

The musical score has been admirably written by Dmitri Tiomkin, the famous young Russian composer. The photography by Robert Kurrie has sweep and surge, mood and brilliance.

WHEN A CHILD TAKES COLD watch his Bowels

A child's cold can often be checked in a few hours by giving his bowels the proper care. Dr. Caldwell proved this, time after time, in his 47 years' practice.

Dr. Caldwell's fame was acquired as a specialist in the care of women and children. His record of having attended over 3500 births without loss of one mother or baby is believed unique in American medical history.

The laxative used in his practice—a compound of pure herbs, pepsin and other mild ingredients—is ideal for the bowels of any child. You have this famous doctor's word that it is safe even for a tiny infant. Every child likes its syrupy taste. It acts quickly; but cannot gripe.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin will remove all the sickening mucus waste when a child has caught cold. It relieves the headaches, biliousness, belching, bloating, etc., due to constipation. It keeps the bowels open in children's diseases.

Keep Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin handy to use when any member of your family needs a safe, certain laxative. It is good for all ages! All drugstores have the big bottles.

Dr. W. B. CALDWELL'S SYRUP PEPSIN A Doctor's Family Laxative

NEWPORT NEWS, VA. (NEA)—Man has a right to expect to live 125 years, Dr. B. B. Bagby of the Virginia State Health Department declared in an address here. Biologists, Dr. Bagby said, have found that normal human life expectancy should be that long. This statement is based on the fact that the normal life span of the lower animals is approximately five times their growing periods. Since man continues to grow until he is 25, his normal life expectation should be five times that number, Dr. Bagby said.

Restoration Ass'n

Iron Mountain.—The Upper Peninsula Restoration association will hold its second annual meeting at 7:30 o'clock Friday evening at the Norway city auditorium. Officers will be elected.

The meeting has been changed from Thursday until Friday evening because of the basketball game to be played Thursday evening at the Norway high school.

The Upper Peninsula Restoration association was organized a year ago and has grown to a membership of 1,400.

Ted Meilleur, of Iron Mountain, is the president. Martin Anderson, of Norway, is the secretary, and George Sanford, teacher at Twin Falls, is the treasurer.

Peter Trudell, president of the Northern Michigan Sportsmen's association, of Negaunee, is expected to attend the meeting.

Plans for a membership drive will be made.

New Cattle Barn

Iron River.—Plans and specifications for the new cattle barn at the fair grounds were tentatively approved at a meeting of the board of supervisors Saturday, and arrangements were made to advertise for bids, which will be received at the next meeting.

D. E. Anderson, of Marquette, former Iron River architect estimated that the building will cost $15,380. It will be of "concrete" blocks, and the two wings will be large enough to accommodate 114 head of cattle.

The board may run into a snag when the bids are opened, as Tom Conlin, head of the Iron County Taxpayers' association, who favors the construction of the building, warned that his organization will not tolerate spending more than $10,000 for it. Chairman Mahon pointed out that the board also appropriated $2,500 for repair of old buildings at the fair grounds, and that this amount could be applied on the new structure.

Joins Association

Crystal Falls.—Although there were four dissenting votes, the board of supervisors Saturday decided to again become affiliated with the Upper Peninsula Supervisors' association.

Iron county was not a member of the association last year, due largely to Supervisor Laiter, of Stambaugh, who said that nothing was to be gained by belonging.

Chairman Mahon urged that the board again join, believing that some good will be derived out of the $10 dues per year. The four voting against the resolution were Laing, Miller, Udd and Uren.

Reckless Driver

Menominee.—His face cut, his body bruised and his automobile a wreck, George Abritis, 52, Marinette, was in the county jail today charged with reckless driving. He is charged by Clyde Merrill, county traffic officer, with "wobbling his car all over the road" near Bagley and into the automobile of M. Andrews of Escanaba. The Andrews car was also damaged considerably. Abritis who said he was returning from Bagley where he was working for a farmer, denied he was to blame, declaring the other car ran into him.

Back From Venezuela

Negaunee.—Michael Kelly, Negaunee diamond drill operator, has arrived home from South America where he worked two years on an oil drilling contract in Venezuela for the Dutch Shell Oil company.

Mr. Kelly has been away from Negaunee for seven years having been engaged in drilling in Mexico for five years before going to South America.

Because of his long stay in the tropics, Mr. Kelly, who at one time was a member of the Negaunee police department, is having difficulty becoming acclimated and his many friends see him about the city only when the weather is ideal.

Mr. Kelly's trip home was an enjoyable experience. He took the opportunity to travel from Venezuela to the Panama Canal zone via the Pan-American Airways

COMMUNICATIONS

OLD LICENSE PLATES
Escanaba Press, Escanaba, Mich.

Gentlemen:
On March 16th, you printed an article stating that Wisconsin motorists driving with 1930 plates, would not be molested in Michigan, as Wisconsin has extended the time limit to purchase 1931 plates to May 1st.

However on March 17th I was arrested in Newberry by the State Police and fined five ($5.00) dollars and costs amounting to $9.50.

As there are hundreds of law abiding Wisconsin drivers in Michigan with 1930 plates, I think it only fair to them to publish the true facts, so they may protect themselves from being beat out of their money.

The people who are now driving with old licenses, are people who can ill afford to lose $10.00. Yours for fairness,
Per D. J. RAYMOND.

Local Girl Wins Second Prize at State Spud Show

Beatrice Kasten of Ford River, an Escanaba high school senior and a raiser of prize winning potatoes has added another ribbon to her collection. It is a second prize for exhibits of russet rural potatoes grown by Smith-Hughes high school pupils of the state. The award was made at the state-wide potato show which was a part of Farmers' Week at East Lansing Feb. 2 to 7.

Last fall Miss Kasten's exhibit of russet rurals won the ten dollar first prize in the Smith-Hughes division of the Upper Peninsula Potato show held in Escanaba October 22, 23 and 24. Following the Escanaba show Henry Wylie, Smith-Hughes instructor at Escanaba high school sent the exhibit to East Lansing where it was kept in cold storage until the February show, when it was awarded second prize in competition with exhibits from all over the state. The first intimation Miss Kasten had that her exhibit had won a prize was the arrival of the place-ribbon.

DEER ARE BEING KILLED IN YARD

Pack of Wolves Active in Tahquamenon Swamps

Newberry, March 24 (Special)—Deer are being killed by a pack of wolves running in the deer yards in the Tahquamenon swamp north of the village of McMillan according to reports of a caretaker at the Hatch camp. Adam Messick has found the bodies of eight deer, one of them a big buck freshly killed and says that he believes a dozen or more wolves are operating in that locality. The swamp is at present impassable. It is one of the wilder territories in this section of the country.

H. P. Williams of Muising, predatory animal officer, has been sent for but it is believed that little can be done to capture or kill any of the animals unless freezing weather should set in. Assistant District Warden Julius Thorson made an attempt to reach the yard where the killing is going on the first of the week but was unable to push his way through the slush filled ravines between the ridges. The wolves are reported in several sections more prevalent than they have been for years.

It is a growing conviction among woodsmen and sportsmen here that a return to the bounty system or some such step is necessary to again get the animals checked. An attempt will be made to reach the McMillan yards within the next day or so warden report.

Marinette Says Al Capone Paid Peninsula Visit

Is Al Capone taking a vacation in the peninsula, or is he on a "business" trip?

Marinette has brought up the question as a result of a reported visit made to the twin cities Saturday evening by the Chicago beer baron and mayor of gangland.

According to Levi Cahoe, Marinette barber, and Robert Moore, shoe shine artist in the barber shop, Capone stopped there to get a shave. The porter said that he had shined Capone's shoes several times in Chicago, and that there was no doubt about his identification of the visitor. As further proof, Moore says that he felt a revolver in Capone's pocket as he helped put on the overcoat.

"Heavy coat, eh? Well, I'm a heavy man, too," Capone is reported to have said, and left the barber shop hurriedly with four bodyguards who were hovering about. The barbers said that the group got in a car farther down the street and drove northward, but they didn't bother to follow. Rumors were that the Chicagoans were en route to Iron Mountain or Marquette for "recreation."

Large Crowd at Hi-Y Conference

Newberry, March 24 (Special)—About 65 guests were present from other towns and cities at the Hi-Y conference held here on Monday. The local Hi-Y club, John Underwood, president, and Fred Hicks, as club leader, was the host for the event.

Dr. W. W. Whitehouse, dean of Albion college and Clifton Drury U. P. leader for the Young Men's Christian Association were the speakers of the afternoon and evening. The first session was held in the high school auditorium at 4:45 when Dr. Whitehouse was introduced by Mr. Hicks for his talk on vocational guidance.

There are two things that make for success, the speaker believes, they are personality and environment. He told of his own boyhood and of a boy who, although he remained a common laborer all of his life, still was a real leader.

A wife is the most important of any influences in the life of any boy, he stated. The sort of a girl he marries will make or break him. The right wife can make an dishonest gangster boy into a fine honest man providing he can find the right vocation and the right environment. The boy of talent has an easier time in his vocation selection than others but the boy who does not know what he wants to do should seek all the advice he can find on the subject, weigh it carefully, and decide for himself. He should know himself, his likes and dislikes, his personality and ability and his temperament before deciding on a life work. And if he should discover, having once started on a profession that he does not like it or is not suited to it, he should make a change. It would be wise for boys to experiment with various professions and vocations during his spare time in high school.

Every boy begins his career in high school. Good grades do count, the speaker stated, in spite of the remarks to the contrary which are often heard. Good grades are necessary for the best schools and universities and athletics must be subsidiary to scholarship. At the close of the lecture the boys were divided into three groups for discussion of questions to be asked at the evening session which was held in the community diningroom. Clifton Drury presided as toastmaster and introduced the speakers. Each of the clubs represented had selected a speaker who made a report of his club's activities. Manistique, Rudyard, Sault Ste. Marie and Newberry responding to Mr. Drury's request.

Dr. Whitehouse talked on "Youth" at this meeting. The young people of today as just a fine and good as those of yesterday in spite of conditions of stress and speed. The daring of youth was one of its most valuable traits and history was being made by boys who do things in spite of criticism and hard knocks. He also stressed the need of balance in the place of blind extremes and showed the interrelation of all people and of all nations. Dr. Whitehouse advised his listeners to dare to be idealistic in this age of materialism.

Following the lecture Mr. Drury showed a movie film of a Canadian canoe trip which he took last year with a group of Hi-Y boys. This is the first of the conferences held in this district and was a decided success both from the standpoint of attendance and interest.

Bay de Noc Ice Getting Thinner

Bay de Noc ice showed a loss of 2 1/2 inches in thickness to start of the week, according to measurements taken by the weather bureau at Escanaba. The ice is now about 12 1/2 inches, with the surface water-soaked, and about 3 1/2 inches of soft slush on top. Fishermen are deserting their posts on the bay, and most of the shelter shanties have been removed.

Rain yesterday helped to weaken the ice fields, and most of the bay was covered with water. Tuesday's drizzle was scheduled to continue through most of the night. Colder weather was forecast by the weather bureau, with a possibility that the rain might change to snow.
