SUDDEN DEATH CAUSES SHOCK IN COMMUNITY

PARALYTIC STROKE PROVES FATAL TO LUMBERMAN

Manistique, Jan. 19 (Special)—Frank N. Cookson, 69, pioneer lumberman of Schoolcraft county who was intimately identified with the economic and political growth of Manistique, passed away at his home, 306 Main street, at 4:30 a. m. today, after he had been suddenly stricken with a paralytic stroke at the Elks' temple following a meeting of the Chamber of Commerce last evening.

His sudden death came as a great shock to the entire city and county as he had been very active up until the time of his illness. After the meeting at which he appeared to be in his usual health and good spirits, Mr. Cookson was talking with friends in the reception room of the Elks' temple.

Mr. Cookson's colorful career is closely interwoven with the old lumberjack days when the peninsula was practically unlimited. Born in Greenfield, Me., June 14, 1863, in the midst of bustling lumber camps, Mr. Cookson, even in his early youth, became connected with the business of supplying the market demand for lumber.

175 STUDENTS ARE HONORED

Never Were On Consultation List for First Semester

A list of pupils whose work for the semester was of such consistently high character that their names never appeared on the consultation list was issued from the principal's office at Escanaba Senior high school Tuesday. The first semester of the present school year closed with final classes on Tuesday afternoon.

Home Room 206, the post-graduate home room, has the best representation, 71 percent of the students being listed. Miss Irma Bangs is home room advisor. Miss Florence Langley's Senior Home Room 220 is second with 64 percent on the list. Third is Miss Helen Shipley's Senior Home Room 216 with 53 percent. Sophomore Home Rooms 200 and 213, under Miss Nina Lay and Miss Louise Sprau, were fourth and fifth with 41 and 40 percent representation. Following is a complete list of the honored pupils:

Room 100, Mr. Starr
Glen Sandberg, Grace Mulvanna, Delbert Johnson, Bernice Groth, Louise Arntzen, Robert Kosky.

Room 104, Mr. R. S. Shaw
Tom Wilkinson, Theodore Breit.

EAGER TO TELL ABOUT HER STOMACH

"I want to tell others about my experience with Pepp's Diapensin," says Mrs. B. Eastman, 1200 California St., Denver, Colo. "I tried a lot of things for my indigestion, but none of them did any good. Then a friend persuaded me to take a few tablets of this wonderful preparation. Now I even eat cabbage without any distress afterwards. It used to cause real suffering. I am not nearly so nervous as I used to be; feel much stronger and better in every way. A medicine must have real merit to bring forth enthusiastic statements like this. And when not one, but hundreds, even thousands, are telling the same story of success, there seems no reason to doubt the day-in and day-out reliability of Pepp's Diapensin to help stomach sufferers. These harmless, candy-like tablets relieve the heartburn, nausea, gas, belching, headaches, dizziness and other symptoms of indigestion."

SEWAGE PLANT NOW OPERATING

Engineers Check Up Equipment in New Escanaba System

Various items of equipment at Escanaba's new sewage disposal plant were checked under actual operating conditions Tuesday, as the first sewage was pumped into tanks.

Agitators, aerators and paddle wheels were put in operation, and pumps at the new Eighteenth avenue station were started up to force the sewage through the new line to the new treatment plant. The entire output of sewage from the city will not be handled at the plant, however, until necessary adjustments are made to insure efficient operation of the various units.

Work is still in progress on the final tank, but the project is rated as nearly 90 percent completed.

A. A. Brensley of Chicago, representing the firm of Suhr, Berryman and Peterson, municipal engineers and designers of the Escanaba establishment, is in the city checking over mechanical equipment as the plant is placed in operation.

PUBLIC PLAYGROUNDS ARE REAL NEED

PLANS of the city council and the citizens' committee to construct playgrounds in the north, west and south sides of the city cannot be looked upon as merely efforts to furnish "made work."

beautiful paved streets, many up-to-date stores, carrying large and varied stocks of goods, and best of all, the finest lot of citizens that can be found anywhere.

BE COURTEOUS!

WHEN members of the Rotary and Kiwanis clubs come to your home or place of business sometime this week to ask you to contribute to the fund raised to finance the activities of the Salvation Army, you should show them the utmost of courtesy.

Remember, they are donating as much and probably more than you are to the fund, and in addition they are also contributing of their much valued time.

Of course, personally, these men are not looking for any expression of public appreciation. The satisfaction that comes from helping an organization, like the Salvation Army, which is doing a service of inestimable value to the community, is enough reward for them.

HUNTING DUCKS

THE huge size of the army of duck-hunters that invades the marsh and lake regions of the United States every year was never better revealed than by the recent discovery that ducks on a certain lake in Minnesota are actually dying of lead poisoning.

Thousands of ducks on this lake died in a short space of time. When scientists made an investigation, they found in the gizzard of each dead duck a quantity of lead shot. Charges fired at the ducks had lodged in the muddy bottom of the lake, and the ducks, digging into the ooze for food, had eaten the pellets.

The investigators asserted that the lake's bottom contained many tons of lead. Could there be more striking evidence of the vast numbers in which duck-hunters sally forth each autumn?

FAST FREIGHT TRAINS

ONE of the ways in which the railroad trusts to hit back at the motor trucks which have taken so much business away from them was cited recently in Detroit by Julien L. Eysmans, traffic vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad, who declared that much speedier freight train schedules are now being worked out.

"Freight trains," remarked Mr. Eysmans, "can be made to run on just as fast schedules as passenger trains, if sufficiently attractive inducements to do so arise."

His implication is that the job is going to be done, and it sounds like an eminently sensible way of meeting the problem. Trucks have taken business from the railroads because, in many instances, they can move the freight from shipper to consignee more rapidly. By matching their speed the railroads would overcome the trucks' greatest advantage.

CHAPTER XXXVI

"WELL, but that isn't fair, is it?" said Mary-Frances. "No, it's not. Only when Daddy said he'd rent the ponies for you were doing lots better than I was in algebra, and I guess he thought we'd help each other and all. I guess Daddy thought we'd each work for the other, like true friends should. I guess he never even dreamed that you'd go and flunk."

"It wasn't my fault I flunked, was it? We can swim, anyway." "No, we can't," said Ermintrude. "Well, why can't we?" "Daddy and Mother were up there yesterday tending to final arrangements and all, and they watched them empty the pool, and they say there is a foot, anyway, of stagnant water that won't empty out, and they won't let me swim for fear of infection, and they are going to advise against it to everybody. And Mother says she won't be responsible for the girls that do, and the tournament is out of the question."

"Well," accused Mary-Frances, "I must say! That's nice, isn't it? If we can't ride and can't swim, what can we do?" "Nothing. Everything is ruined. Just ruined. Unless, maybe, you didn't flunk in algebra after all."

Their sighs joined and sank in the sunshine. "I'll tell you one thing I won't do," said Ermintrude. "I won't sit around and read poetry all the time. I won't do it, Mary-Frances. And I won't let on to the other girls, like you said, about you and Earl, either. Suppose I did, and one of the girls—Barbara Flaxton for instance, it would be just exactly like her—should go and tell her mother, and Mrs. Flaxton would tell Mother, and it would all come back on me!"

"Ermintrude," said Mary-Frances, wisely patient, "is that very sensible? It would come back on me, wouldn't it? I wouldn't come back on you, would it?" "Well, I won't do it, anyway," declared Ermintrude. "I just have one of those strong psychic hunches of mine that I'd better not. You know how I am when I have one of those—"

Mary-Frances said, "All right, darling," hurriedly. The fire house was just around the corner. "I always trust your psychic hunches, and you know I do. I expect, maybe, we can coax you another into letting us swim."

"Nobody," said Ermintrude, from the depths of sad experience, "can coax either my mother or my daddy into anything."

"They'll mellow, I expect," prophesied Mary-Frances. "Grand and Rosalie say that age mellow everybody like everything. They," boasted Mary-Frances, "can be coaxed into anything. Ann and Cissy aren't so good. They're like your mother and daddy—they've got to mellow. I'll wait right here for you, darling."

Ermintrude took the letter, written on Rosalie's orchid note-paper, looked at it for an instant, put it to her nose. "But, I think you've got too much perfume on it," was her only voiced objection. She went. Mary-Frances waited.

"ERMINTRUDE! I thought you were never coming back. Did you find him?" "Course I found him. He was right in his room, and he opened the door when I knocked."

"What'd he say when he saw you?" "He just said, 'Hello, kind of funny.'" "What'd you say?" "I said, 'Here.'" "Did you give him the letter?" "Yes. That's what I did when I said, 'Here.'" "Nothing. He just looked funny and put it in his pocket."

"Did you tell him that you brought it 'cause there wasn't time to mail it?" "No, I forgot. He'll know, anyway, won't he, when he reads the letter?" "What'd you say he said after you said, 'Here'?" "Nothing. He just looked funny and put it in his pocket."

"Which pocket, Ermintrude?" "His outside coat pocket." "Did he start, or pale, or tremble, or anything?"

LYRICS OF LIFE

A VISIT

Oh, yes, we still go visiting, And yet it isn't quite the thing It used to be, it seems to me. It's now a car and not the horse; The diner's six or seven courses; And then they say we'll just have time To see the latest feature crime; And that's the way we spend the day, And then drive home, through streets, not clever. And say, "Thank goodness, that is over!"

But it was rather different In other days. A visit meant To sit and chat, and all of that, It's true we talked about the neighbors, But also talked about our labors, Our relatives, and recipes, The church, the school, such things as these, The baby's tricks, and politics, And stables built, and houses painted, And got a little bit acquainted.

Of course, it's nice some place to be In half an hour, instead of three, And have a meal that's napre genteel. With everything the palate wishes, And then not have to help with dishes, Just get the cards and tables out, With nothing else to talk about, Or else to go and see a show. It's rather nice—and yet why is it, When visiting, we never visit?

"NOW we can advertise it"

Products are nearly always put on the market before they are advertised. Quite frequently, changes have to be made in an article before the public generally will accept it.

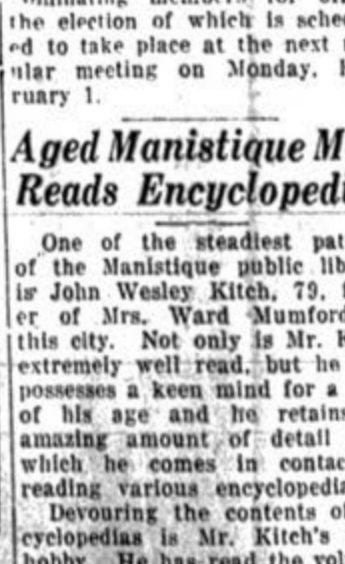

When you buy advertised goods, you may know they have gone through the experimental stages. You may be sure that the manufacturer knows they are right and that he is willing to stake his reputation on them.

Of course, advertising goes a step farther. Word of mouth hardly ever tells all the uses of a product. It often doesn't give the real reasons for its superiority.

Whatever you buy, therefore, let the advertisements be your guide. When the manufacturer says, "Now we can advertise it," you know that you can safely say, "Now we can buy it."

People who suffer with stomach trouble must remember that the stomach is an extremely delicate organ. The membranes and the tissues are extremely sensitive.

One of the steadiest patrons of the Manistique public library is John W. Ward Mumford of this city.
