

gratitude then President Hoover is entitled to gratitude."

The loudest uproar from the crowd, stopping the former president for several minutes, came with this remark:

"President Hoover was not born to the enjoyment of generations of inherited wealth so that he could be educated by private tutors and sent through schools and universities. He was never carried into political office by the way of family influence. He has always had to depend on his name and reputation."

As his farwell word of the address, Mr. Coolidge said:

"The more this campaign has progressed, the more I am convinced that the public welfare requires that he (Hoover) should be re-elected."

Tonight's rally was also the opening highlight of the New York State campaign, with William J. Donovan, nominee for governor, and George Meadell, candidate for the United States senate, adding their voices to the chorus for a Republican victory in November.

Mr. Coolidge finished reading his ten page manuscript exactly 45 minutes after he began.

He was introduced by Major General James G. Harbord, who was chairman.

to the investigation of the Titanic sinking and improvements in the rules of navigation resulted.

He fought against the Canadian reciprocity treaty and the general arbitration treaty with Great Britain and led a filibuster which blocked the British-American waterways treaty until he was convinced Michigan's interests and boundary rights, particularly along the St. Mary's river, were safeguarded by amendments.

During his 12 years in the senate he was ranking member of the committee on foreign relations, naval affairs and commerce. He declined an appointment by President McKinley as minister to The Hague.

In 1916, Senator Smith entered the presidential preference primary in Michigan, being opposed by Henry Ford. It was generally conceded that he had small hope of winning the convention nomination, but he hoped for a cabinet post. Ford, however, won the primary contest by 5,185 votes.

Born in Dowagiac, Mich., May 12, 1859, of parents in humble circumstances, he moved with his family to Grand Rapids 13 years later. The poverty of his parents made it necessary for him to leave school at the eighth grade. He and a younger brother carried messages, then sold popcorn and newspapers. Then at the age of 17, the glamor of politics attracted him and, although without influence, he induced John T. Rich, speaker of the house and later governor, to appoint him a page in the state house of representatives. He rose steadily to become assistant secretary of state. Then he studied law and it was as a successful lawyer that he first ran for office in 1894, the year he was elected to congressman.

He purchased the Grand Rapids Herald in 1906.

In 1886, he was married to Miss Nana Osterroot, of Grand Rapids. Their only child, William Alden Smith, Jr., who became general manager of the Herald, died within a year after the World war, in which he saw service.

SAMUEL INSULL GIVEN FREEDOM

APPEAL TO HOOVER
(By The Associated Press)

As Samuel Insull was released from custody Tuesday in Athens, Greece, authorities at Chicago announced they would appeal for President Hoover's aid in obtaining his extradition to face charges of larceny and embezzlement.

Athens police said Insull was "absolutely free" and would not be kept under police surveillance. He was free to leave Greece at any time, and did not discuss his plans upon leaving the jail where he slept last night.

Testimony that Insull's salary from his various enterprises at the peak of his career totaled $500,000 annually was given at the Middle-west Utilities bankruptcy hearing in federal court, Chicago.

Preferred Investors

State's Attorney John A. Swanson at Chicago prepared with two assistants to leave for Washington and ask President Hoover to assist in the extradition activities. Swanson also announced an assistant was ready to leave any time for Europe.

Also in Chicago, a list was made public of 1,301 preferred investors—political leaders, financiers, opera singers, and friends—who bought Insull stocks as underwriters and got out with profits of from 25 to 51 percent. A total of $183,238,900 worth of Middle-west stock was sold to the favored investors, some of whom paid as little as six percent down on blocks of from $10,000 to $1,000,000.

Samuel Insull, Jr., and his mother were reported conferring with attorneys in Paris regarding the elder Insull's plight.

WITNESS BACKS STATE'S CLAIM

Convict Called to Stand by Defense Testifies Against Guards

Jacksonville, Fla., Oct. 11. (AP)—A defense witness in the murder trial of two former prison guards testified today in corroboration of the prosecution claim that an effort was made to deceive authorities into believing that Arthur Mallefert, young convict from Westfield, N. J., deliberately hanged himself in a prison sweat box.

The statement by James Birmingham, convict witness, followed testimony by Harry Schneider, also a prisoner, that Mallefert had indicated he planned to hang himself on the chain locked around his neck and fastened to a rafter of the box.

Coy Mitchell, another convict, testified Mallefert told him the night before he was strangled to death that he planned suicide.

The defense brought the prisoners to the stand after Judge George C. Gibbs had refused to direct a verdict of not guilty. The state closed its case against the two former guards, George Courson and Solomon Higginbotham, last night. The men are charged with torturing the young prisoner until he was so weak that when he was chained by the neck in the little punishment box, he was unable to stand and so strangled on the chain.

Prisoners Testify.

One of the last state witnesses was Robert Blake, former head trusty at the camp, who testified he had arranged, after Courson told him "trouble" might come from the case, for convict testimony to indicate suicide.

The first defense witness was Schneider, who said he saw the youth "make a motion like he was going to hang himself" after being confined in the sweat box. Birmingham, called to the stand next, said Blake came to him and asked if he would join in the plan to protect Courson.

"I told him I didn't want anything to do with it," Birmingham said. "Blake wanted me to say I saw 'Jersey' make the suicide signs."

Defense counsel quickly dropped the questioning of Birmingham about his conversation with Blake and asked him about other matters.

Durrance dismissed the witness with a brief "no cross examination" when direct questioning was concluded.

The only new feature in the testimony of Ernest Henley, third convict witness of the day, was an assertion that Mallefert's knees hung a foot or more above the floor of the sweat box, indicating there was little slack in the chain around his neck.

Mitchell, the other convict, told of an attempt by Mallefert to cut his way out of the sweat box the first night of his confinement with a smuggled pen-knife. Mitchell said he occupied an adjoining cell.

Extortion Charge Against Policeman Ordered Dismissed

Detroit, Oct. 11. (AP)—An extortion charge against Patrolman Edward Podolski of the Hamtramck police department has been dismissed because the Rev. Fr. Joseph Ciszaukas, who said Podolski threatened him with death if he did not pay $10,000, announced he would refuse to testify. The prosecutor said Podolski's parents have promised to repay $2,500, which Fr. Ciszaukas said he gave the officer as an initial payment.

How Many Partridge Are There in County?

How many partridge are there in Delta county?

This has been the subject of interesting discussions in drugstores and other places, where outdoor sportsmen are wont to congregate in Escanaba.

One Escanaba business man believes there are at least three quarters of a million partridge in the county. He arrives at the figure by estimating there are about 850,000 acres of bird country in the county, and that the partridge will average about one to the acre, judging from his own observations and those of other hunters.

H. P. Williams, federal trapper in charge of predatory animal control in the upper peninsula, believes the figure is rather high, although he stated yesterday that he does not consider himself an authority on the partridge situation as his interests are confined mainly to the predatory animals.

Mr. Williams does not believe, however, that the 12-day hunting season will seriously reduce the stock of birds in the upper peninsula. Most of the damage is being done by the poachers, who hunt the year round either for the family use or to sell, and also the predatory animals, who kill and consume many partridge daily. The fox and the coyote are the real bird hunters, he said.

Reports of the Canadian grouse in the eastern section of the upper peninsula being afflicted with a worm ailment have been received from the trappers by Mr. Williams. It will be recalled that disease was the principal cause of the depletion of the stock of fowl in the upper peninsula some time ago, resulting in the closing of the partridge season for several years.

ards to be maintained by all common carriers using highways. The standards were generally similar to those now applied to railroads.

4. A joint inquiry might be held with representation by both the federal and provincial governments to promote agreement upon the general principles which should govern the regulation and taxation of motor vehicles using the public highways.

5. If the railways lose a large part of their profitable short distance traffic to the roads (highways), a readjustment of the whole freight structure may be necessary, with a possible increase in the rates charged for the long distance and heavy traffic.

6. No direct recommendation as to abandonment of lines is made, but the report incorporates the views of both the Canadian Pacific and the Canadian National. Both roads agreed some short lines should be discontinued, but neither recommended a specific procedure. The National urged caution against "wholesale abandonment" of short lines, and the Pacific urged abandonment with "minimum of disturbance to trade and hardships to individuals."

Among the general opinions given by the commission were these:

1. Private automobile is responsible chiefly for the diversion of passenger traffic from the railway to the highway.

2. The construction of the St. Lawrence waterway will not seriously prejudice the position of Canada's railways in the future.

3. At the moment any adjustment of freight tolls and traffics would not be advisable.

Building permits issued at Miami and Miami Beach, Fla., the first seven months of 1932 totaled $1,652,495.

BORAH URGES 4-POINT PLAN FOR RECOVERY

which brings prosperity to business.

"Third—The last 25 years have witnessed such an increase of waste and extravagance in the government from the lowest unit of government to the highest, that taxes are now literally destructive to our property and invite ruin. The expenditure of public money approaches a national crime.

"Fourth—by reason of adverse economic forces and the change in money values, debts have piled up beginning with the farm and ending with government until men are no longer working with a view to build, to construct, to develop, but to pay, as it were, for a dead horse.

"These are the problems for which answer must be found.

"In discussing these matters, let me say I do not criticize the efforts which have been made in the way of extending loans and in extending credit by the government, and in helping in this way to steady the situation to arrest somewhat the trend of the depression. But I do say that unless we find a solution for the problems which I have stated, there is no ultimate relief in the policies thus far pursued.

Commende Candidates

"I say to you frankly what I shall have to say in this campaign will not be in harmony with either the Republican or Democratic platforms adopted at Chicago. But in this respect I am neither exceptional nor original. Both candidates for the presidency of the leading parties have in important particulars disregarded their platforms. After paying lip service to these sterile declarations early in the campaign, they proceeded to put them aside. For this they are entitled to high commendation. It is the most encouraging event in the campaign. So let us in our poor way discuss the questions as we see them.

"The first proposition which I wish to present, is that commodity prices cannot permanently rise and the purchasing power of the people cannot be restored until the great post war problems, which have destroyed commerce and broken up trade, are adjusted. The potatoes which are to rot out yonder in the field and the crops which will go ungarnered, or unsold, are the result of the almost insane economic policies which for 12 long years.

"The second proposition, to which I direct your attention, is the money question. The monetary systems have broken down. The farmer cannot get sufficient credit or find sufficient currency to pay the expenses of gathering his crop. A great deal is said about an honest dollar. That is precisely what we desire, what everybody would have.

"But I contend that a dollar which takes three times as much wheat, four times as much cotton, three times as much pork, to buy as it would have taken three years ago, is not an honest dollar. It is not a sound dollar. It is a dishonest dollar. It cheats the toiler between the time he eats his breakfast and the time he returns for his supper.

"Nobody is proposing to abandon the gold standard, although 28 nations have done so. But it is my contention that much can be added to the use of gold and with perfect safety. We have sufficient gold in this country to give a basis for a sufficient amount of currency with which to do business and afford the people a medium of exchange."

He-men like 'em Mild

You might think that a two-fisted fellow like the steel jack in the picture would like his tobacco strong. Not at all.

He wants his cigarettes mild and that's why he picks Chesterfields.

Mildness doesn't mean a smoke that's weak or flat or insipid or anything like that. In fact it's just the reverse. Two-fisted fellows as well as anyone else—men and women—want a cigarette that's mild . . . one that satisfies—and that's Chesterfield.

We believe that every smoker is looking for a cigarette without any "bite" or bitterness, and a cigarette that has a pleasing taste—and that's Chesterfield.

THE STORM HAS PASSED

THE American people, depressed for many months by unprecedented economic conditions, are beginning to leave a sigh of relief over the appearance of definite evidence that the crisis has been passed.

Unquestionably many bank failures, recorded during the days that are now passed, were not due to the frailty of those banks, but rather to idle and malicious gossip, spread either thoughtlessly or with deliberate intent among an easily excited people.

POLITICAL POT BOILS

FROM now on, the political pot in the upper peninsula will be boiling as candidates stage their political rallies to secure support for their respective tickets.

The 1932 political campaign is a highly educational affair. The depression of the last three years has brought forward many economic, social and political problems, which provide topics for lively discussions.

The newspapers and the radio transmit the views of the various political parties to millions of people. All sides of the issues are presented in detail and intelligently.

ences into their lives. He rose from a pit-boy in a Scottish coal mine to a world famous singer comedian and a knighthood, conferred upon him by King George as a reward for his service in entertaining the soldiers behind the firing lines during the world war.

The appearance of Sir Harry Lauder here will be a great event for the admirers of the famous singer, and the local theatre management is to be complimented for bringing such a high class attraction here.

WHEN FAME FADES

ONE of the most interesting developments of the depression has been the way in which certain great reputations have been deflated. Painful as they have been, the years of hardship have at least succeeded in opening the public's eyes.

The point is that until comparatively recently Mr. Insull was one of those public characters on whose words men hung with bated breath. He was a builder, a doper, a fantastically rich man, a master of men and machines and finance.

Now all of this does not mean that it is up to the ordinary citizen to sit back and ord exultantly over a great financier's downfall. What it does indicate is that during the prosperous years we got into the habit of over-estimating the value of financial jugglers.

We are getting a new light on things now. The collapse of the Insull chain shows that this business of pyramiding and interlocking industrial securities is strictly a fair-weather game.

WHAT PRICE FOOTBALL?

THE fall football season is still young, but already reports of fatal injuries on the playing field are beginning to come in. The reports are inexpressibly saddening. The lads who give up their lives are such fine chaps, and their sacrifice is so needless.

CHAPTER XXIV

FOR the first time since their arrival at Three Rivers Dona and Dudley were now aware of Swergin's seriousness in the matter of capturing Stan Ball.

Dudley found the whole thing intensely exciting. The plan was to comb Folly Mountain as clean as a swept floor. Not a foot of the high country was to be left unchecked.

CARTER smiled a thin smile but did not add anything. "You knew Ball—that is, before he started his fight against the Timber Company?" Dona was seeking information.

"Sure. Knew him fer a strap-pin' big cowpuncher that rode a black horse. "And you saw him last night?" Dona put the question abruptly.

Dona nodded sympathetically. "Remember, I will see that Father rewards you." She gave him a smile and walked back toward the scene in the big yard.

"I was poking about," Dona smiled as she noted the flush of excitement on Dudley's face. "The boys have all gone. I'll be back after a while."

living orders, as the floor was cracked with boot marks and cigaret stumps. Dona crossed to his side and perched on the foot of his bed.

"You have been violating my orders again!" she shook a finger under his nose. "Do you want me to move in here and make you behave?"

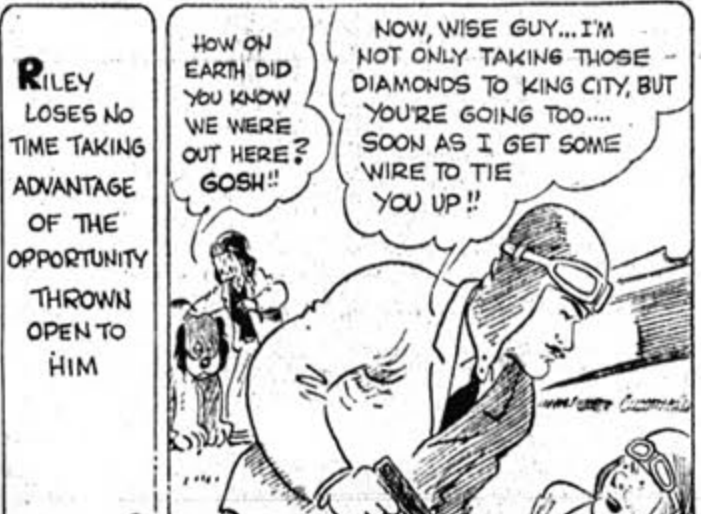

A tender smile spread over the girl's face as she ran for the slippers. Asper was nearly his old self again and would be well in time. For a moment she was really happy and a great weight lifted from her heart.

Dona wanted to him until he had vanished. In her heart she half hoped Ball was all ready beyond the rim of Folly Mountain.

BLANCHE NOYES TO SPEAK HERE

Noted Aviatrix to Talk at School Assemblies Monday

Blanche W. Noyes, one of the outstanding women fliers in America, will address the Escanaba Junior and senior high school student assemblies next Monday, October 17.

Until she married Dewey L. Noyes, now chief pilot for the Good Will department of the Standard Oil company of Ohio, she knew no more about flying than the average school girl does. However, she has traveled a long way since then.

From the moment of her first solo flight, her story is a series of fascinating experiences. In the Los Angeles to Cleveland air derby, first race for women pilots, she had the most thrilling experience of her career when her plane caught fire over the West Texas desert.

Mrs. Noyes was selected in 1930 as the foremost woman pilot in America. She is a fine speaker and has an interesting story to tell concerning her flying experiences.
