The once-thriving resort town of Blaney Park is beginning to thrive in another way, as it becomes a mecca for antique shoppers. On Aug. 1, John Robinson (left) and Trevor Arnett opened Sherwood Forest Antiques in the old Blaney general store, across from the inn. The business joins two other established shops — Blaney Park Antiques and Sadie's Antiques — on the M-77 thoroughfare. The store, open seasonally from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. each day, buys and sells a general line of antiques and collectibles, handles several specialties such as silver and photography, and offers furniture refinishing services. Robinson calls the business "a work in progress," and notes that they have plans to expand next year, with a coffee shop, ice cream parlor and other amenities. For more information, stop by during regular business hours or call 283-2000. (Pioneer-Tribune photo)

Groups to host terrorism training

The Schoolcraft County Citizens Corps Council and Community Emergency Response Team will host free anti-terrorism training sessions on Wednesday, Sept. 19, at Bay de Noc Community College in Escanaba.

The programs will be presented by New Mexico Tech, Energetic Materials Research and Training Center, and the U.S. Department of Homeland Security.

The target audience is emergency first responders, including law enforcement officers, EMS, fire service personnel, public safety communications, public works employees, school staff, medical, hospital and public health officials, representatives of bridge authorities, emergency response agencies and volunteers, community and medical reserve corps teams, medical control authorities, emergency management officials, security and safety officers and other government officials.

Two programs will be offered. From 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., there will be a session called "Incident Response to Terrorist Bombings - Operations." It is designed to prepare responders to perform effectively and safely during bombing incidents, principally in support roles. The list of topics includes familiarization with improvised explosive devices and explosive materials, critical response actions during pre- and post-detonation, and what can be done to prevent or deter bombing attacks in communities.

From 1:30 p.m. to 5 p.m., there will be a program called "Prevention of and Response to Suicide Bombing Incidents." The session will include training on the threat of suicide bombings, familiarization with the types of explosive devices used, actions that can be taken to prevent or deter suicide bombings, techniques and tactics to support and effective and safe response, how to identify and report pre-attack indicators, and how to participate in an integrated response to a suicide bombing incident. All training and course materials are provided at no charge. Lunch and refreshments are included. The deadline to register for the training is Friday, Sept. 7. To sign up or learn more, contact Catherine Flores at Schoolcraft Memorial Hospital. She can be reached at (906) 341-3232, or by sending e-mail to cflores@scmh.org.

MacGregor and Dillon announce engagement

Lois A. Corcoran
(Send your comments to corky@dnnet.us.)

A few months back I told you about 82-year-old Robert Norton, a dyed-in-the-wool nudist. So to speak. Recently he passed away, but his last wishes were denied. His family refused to bury him in his birthday suit.

Maybe it's none of my business, but what would it have hurt? It IS what he wanted, after all, and—well—who's gonna notice? True, it's an odd request. More people prefer to be buried WITH something. Sort of a challenge to the theory that "you can't take it with you."

Believe it or not, a surprising number of folks opt to share the grave with their cell phone. In that case, they should pack the answering machine, too. ["I can't take your call right now, but don't let that stop you."]

And when Harry Flambaris, a member of Hell's Angels, passed on, he chose to be buried with his motorcycle. Where he went, helmets are optional. Being buried with one's possessions is nothing new, of course. When Sir Walter Raleigh made the final exit, his favorite pipe and a tin of tobacco escorted him. What he really needed was an ashtray.

With the current focus on preplanning funerals, loads of people are seeking offbeat ways to bid their last adieu. Wakes often center around "bemes" now, like these: For workaholics: The deceased wears his uniform or coveralls and is surrounded by the tools of his trade. So he can spend eternity working overtime.

For shop-till-you-droppers: Viewing takes place at a discount store after hours. Bargain signs and Blue Light Specials surround the departed. Sales are final, though. No returns allowed.

For television fans: Deceased appears in his favorite casual clothes and is propped on the couch with a remote control. A nearby VCR plays a suitable flick for visitors. Like maybe, "Death be not Proud."

For those who choose cremation, a Texas company called Ceestis, Inc. will launch one's ashes into orbit. I can just picture some guy with a telescope yelling, "Hey, Joe, there goes Mia again!" And a California business called Celebrate Life makes fireworks casings for sending your loved one's cremains, as they are called, off with a bang.

But that's not all—they even play a tune on the way. If they're taking requests, I'd opt for "Kick Some Ash."

And put the fun back in funeral.

Ron Wiegand of Curtis (center) presents his annual donation to Lisa Lauzon and Mark Dahmen of Hiawatha Behavioral Health to assist with the Harbor Enterprises program. The money is raised each year by the Curtis Cruisers snowmobile club, which works with the Knights of Columbus from dowstate Utica. Each winter, the club and KC council hold a snowmobile ride, hayride and related events. The proceeds, along with money raised through the KC's annual Tootsie Roll sales, is earmarked for the Special Olympics and programs for the mentally impaired in the eastern Upper Peninsula. awarded the district's yearly cash flow loan to State Savings Bank of Manistique, which bid an interest rate of 4.05 percent, the lower of two bids received. The district takes out the short-term loans annually to cover expenses during the beginning of the fiscal year on July 1 and the arrival of the first state aid payment in the fall. This year, $1.7 million will be borrowed; approved the annual resolutions to participate in Michigan's schools of choice program. One of the programs allows students to come to MAS from districts within the Delta-Schoolcraft ISD, the other accepts students from bordering schools outside the ISD; accepted the resignations of bus driver Paul Scott and aide Amy Krantz. The positions have been posted in the internal posting period, has filled temporarily to start the year while the job is advertised. Chandler noted that the district pays the training costs for new drivers; appointed the following fall coaches: Todd Kangas, varsity football; Ed Marietti, assistant varsity football; Phil Krebhiel, assistant football; Chris Marana, junior varsity football; Phil Krumm, assistant junior varsity football; Kim Hayward, varsity cheer; Jackie Bilaski, junior varsity cheer; John Ziemba, varsity volleyball; Stacy Morrison, junior varsity volleyball; Jay Pawlak, eighth grade girls' basketball; Travis Ashbrook, seventh grade girls' basketball; heard a request from Dave McNeil to place a possible girls' softball program on the September meeting agenda. McNeil had previously proposed the new varsity program, saying it would be fully funded at no cost to the district. Chardler said he would arrange a meeting with McNeil and Ryan to discuss the issue prior to bringing it to the board next month; appointed Debbie Musgrave and Rosemary Sablack to the Library Advisory Board; learned that the district will not receive a tower and anemometer from Michigan State University. The district had applied for the MSU program to undertake a 12-month study, looking at the feasibility of using wind power to supply electricity at the new elementary school. Board Secretary Robyn Loviska said MSU had only eight anemometers to award and received 90 applications; held a workshop to continue discussion of the superintendent evaluation process, including the board's goals and expectations for Chandler.

An open house was held at the Elks Lodge Tuesday night to welcome Bay De Noc Community College back to Schoolcraft County. After a two-and-a-half year absence, the college will once again be offering courses in Manistique this fall. High school teacher Mike Powers, local coordinator, said they are starting with a schedule of four classes — essential biology, rhetoric and composition, stress management and American Government — and hope to expand the state of offerings with the winter semester. Tuesday's open house gave Bay College administration and faculty a chance to meet and mingle with Manistique Area Schools officials, community leaders and interested residents. Western Lime Continued from A1

Granhom used her remarks to discuss the new state program called No Worker Left Behind, a one-time effort designed to help people who are "unemployed or underemployed" by providing up to two years of tuition assistance at a state college, university or other approved training program. Granhom also praised the Upper Peninsula workforce. Describing a pre-ceremony meeting with Western Lime management, she said they unanimously agreed that "their best resource is the people who work here."

with city and county officials. Among other things, they discussed the pending shutdown of the Camp Manistique correctional facility and the state's commitment to helping local leaders find an alternate use for the facility. Granhom also discussed the prison issue during a short media interview, but preferred to focus the majority of her attention on the Western Lime celebration. Granhom came to Schoolcraft County direct from an appearance in Marquette, where she had announced a major agreement between Cleveland-Cliffs and Kobe Steel of Japan to build a new $200 million iron ore nugget facility, assuring that the Empire Mine would continue to operate beyond its previously-expected shutdown date a few years from now. Western Lime officials learned of the deal in their meeting with Granhom. "It's very good news," said Chief Executive Officer Fred Nast, who noted that Cleveland-Cliffs is already one of their clients. "It sounds like an exciting project, and they will be a natural customer for us." Granhom summed up her visits to Marquette and Port Inland in just a few words. "This is a good day for Michigan," she said. She described the visit to Western Lime as gratifying. "We were able to help out with a Community Development Block Grant, so I'm very pleased to see the results of that assistance and our other investments," she said. "This is exactly the kind of thing we have to do. We have to focus on using our natural resources in a sound, sustainable way."

Blaney Park Reunion August 18 and 19, 2007

Nearly 150 former employees, guests and friends gathered at Blaney Park last weekend for a reunion, celebrating the town's storied history as a major resort. Attendees arrived from all around the Midwest, and from as far away as Florida, Colorado and the west coast. Top left: The dining room of the Blaney Inn was packed for the Saturday afternoon program, which included an introduction of employees representing all the decades from the 1930s through the 1960s, a history of Blaney and the sharing of personal stories. Top center: Reunion organizers (from left) Bunny Ennis, Jim Surrell, and Mary Margaret Earle welcome the guests. Top right: Visitors had a chance to browse through a vast display of photos, brochures, scrapbooks and other memorabilia. Bottom left: After dinner, the employees gathered on the steps of the Inn for a group photo. Bottom center: One table in the dining room was reserved for several special guests — late resort owners Stewart and Elsie Earle and Inn manager Ruth Webber, who organizers said were attending the reunion in spirit. Bottom right: Former Blaney waitresses helped close out the evening program by singing a rousing rendition of the Blaney Park Alma Mater. (Pioneer-Tribune photos)

Comments on forest criteria sought

The Department of Natural Resources is seeking public input on the proposed use of management areas in regional state forest management plans. According to the DNR, the concept is similar to past state forest planning initiatives. It would involve paring the state forest into distinct management areas based on a number of criteria, such as areas already designated for specific management purposes, concentrations of similar land forms and cover types, or ownership patterns. An initial concept of management areas that is being considered can be viewed on the DNR Web site at www.michigan.gov/dnr. The department will provide a formal opportunity for public comment on the proposed management area criteria at the Sept. 13 meeting of the Michigan Natural Resources Commission in Lansing, and through an e-mail-based comment system.

Comments can be sent by mail to Dnr-SFPlanning@michigan.gov any time prior to Oct. 7. "This will be an opportunity for the public to provide comment on this element of our regional state forest management planning," says Lynne Boyd, chief of the DNR's Forest, Mineral and Fire Management Division. "We value public opinion on the concept of management areas, and it is important that we involve the public in this stage of the planning process. Regional state forest management plans will be a key component of DNR efforts to manage state forest resources in a sustainable manner, while providing for the many public uses of the resource." Regional plans are currently being drafted for the northern Lower Peninsula and the eastern and western Upper Peninsula regions.

In the future, the DNR will announce additional opportunities for public review of the plans. When completed, the plans will serve as a framework for forest treatment decisions at the local level.

Ruling

"This ruling from the federal court is yet another vindication of state and municipal rights to protect their natural resources from invasive species that are costing taxpayers billions of dollars every year," Tracy said. The ruling has implications for the other seven Great Lakes states, several of which have introduced similar legislation aimed at curbing the introduction of invasive species discharged from ballast water tanks.

for too long allowed invaders to harm Michigan's vast water resources. We know these species enter our state through ballast water, and it is time for the shipping industry to acknowledge this threat and join with us to protect our lakes."

Felkens' ruling came on the same day as lawmakers in Ohio introduced legislation that would follow Michigan's lead. "We encourage all of our Great Lakes' partners to join with us and ensure the Great Lakes are protected for generations to come," said Chester. "Michigan has shown true leadership in putting an end to this open-door system that has

If you were out on Indian Lake last weekend, you almost surely encountered the "Ladies of the Lake." Roughly 100 women sea kayakers participated in a four-day symposium in Manistique, sponsored by Down Wind Sports. The event gave participants a chance to learn everything from basic paddling to kayak repair, rolling, navigation, rescue and much more. After playing in rough waters on Friday, the group took time out of Saturday's busy schedule to enjoy calmer seas and a peaceful lunch on the lake. Following a brief presentation on Manistique's Central Park recreation project, 80 kayakers took advantage of a meal put on by the city recreation department at Mike Powers' lakefront home. According to Powers, the fund-raiser brought in $800, which will be used to leverage additional state grant funds for Central Park construction. Above: Following lunch, the group headed back out for more workshops. Below: 16-year-old Morgan Hatch of Champion, Mich., the youngest of the group, stands with her kayak. Hatch has been attending the Ladies of Lake symposiums for four years. (Pioneer-Tribune photos)

Performance-Enhancing Drug Critics: Do As We Say Not As We Blah, Blah, Blah

By Roger Mursick

For several weeks we heard sportswriters and TV commentators yacking away about Barry Bonds, steroids and performance-enhancing drugs. And now that he's broken Henry Aaron's home run record, should it really count? Americans are talking out both sides of their mouth on such issues.

After waking up and shaking off the effects of their own "performance enhancing drug" (PED) sleep aid, they step out of the shower and apply Rogaine before having a cup of coffee, tea or Mountain Dew, or maybe a double or triple espresso to help bring them back from the dead and jump start their day.

Have you ever heard the non-caffeinated co-workers complain, "The work by the coffee drinkers doesn't really count. Those people are cheating. We could work fast like that too if we were jacked up on caffeine. It's not fair! Say, when are they going to fire Bob Jackson? He's not the same person the firm hired. He's trying to look better. That's not his real hair. He's using Propecia to stimulate growth hormones."

Professional sports and the media don't really care if these guys are taking PEDs. I mean, does it seem a bit odd that you never hear the opposing team register a complaint during the game? "No fair! Run doesn't count!" Everyone knows after this brief word from our sponsor:

"Cialis" will be up all night!"

Roger Mursick is a touring headline comedian working nightclubs, colleges and corporate events. He is also a favorite opener for major concert tours such as Natalie Cole and Smokey Robinson, as well as being a contributing writer to the Tonight Show with Jay Leno.

Hall of Fame inductees named

Five of next year's 10 inductees to the Upper Peninsula Sports Hall of Fame are from Delta County. It is the largest delegation of inductees from that area since the Hall of Fame was created in 1972.

The timing is good as the traditional induction banquet will move to Escanaba next year. The 37th annual dinner and ceremony will take place April 26, 2008, at Danforth Place.

Joining the Hall of Fame that night will be skier Terry Ahola of Gladstone and four people representing Escanaba: log-roller Don Jacobs, the late football player Joe LaFleur, sports-writer Bob McGinn and hockey and softball player Joe Ricci.

Other 2008 inductees include basketball player Sonja (Paquin) Duncan of Cedarville, the late football player Clifford "Red" Erickson of Newberry, coach, official and softball player Fran "Pudgy" L'Hullier of Marquette, basketball player Shana (DeCremier) Ojala of Trout Creek, and baseball player Don Rambo of Sault Ste. Marie.

Hall of Fame banquets were held in Marquette until 2002 and in Iron Mountain the past five years. Organizers say the move to Escanaba is taking place because the only facility in Iron Mountain big enough to host the event will be demolished.

Hall of Fame displays will remain at Farners Restaurant, located at the Pine Mountain Resort in Iron Mountain.

Maddox pleased with results of ORV program

It's only been up and running for a few weeks, but Schoolcraft County Sheriff Gary Maddox says their new off-road vehicle patrol program is already paying dividends.
The program, which involves deputies patrolling various areas of the county to create a law enforcement "presence" on the trails, has a $3,200 budget, funded by a Department of Natural Resources grant that also paid for the purchase of a patrol ORV earlier this year. The grant requires no local matching funds.
According to Deputy Larry Trzil, who has been conducting the patrols the past several weekends, coverage areas are chosen based on need and are coordinated with the department's road patrol officer, so that assistance is nearby, if needed.
So far, Trzil said, they have been focusing on education, stopping riders who are traveling on the wrong side of the road, riding two to a vehicle, not wearing helmets, or committing other violations. Rather than citations, the riders receive a warning and instruction on proper ORV operation.

Despite that, one arrest was made this past weekend, when Trzil stopped a rider whose blood alcohol level was more than three times over the legal limit. The driver was taken into custody for operating under the influence and lodged at the county jail.
Maddox said that arrest highlighted the importance of the program.
"Think about what might have happened with that guy riding around with that kind of alcohol level," he said. "He could have been killed or he could have killed or injured somebody else." That was a tragedy averted.
While he might expect some ORV operators to be disgruntled finding a deputy on the trails, Maddox said the response to the new program has been overwhelmingly positive.
"People are thanking us for being out there," he said. "They're glad to see someone enforcing the rules and making sure everyone is safe, and it's a local agency that's doing it, which makes it all that much better."

Trzil agreed, saying the people he's made contact with on the trails have been "Very responsive. They're happy to see us."
Maddox said they pursued the DNR grant at the urging of SORVA, the local ORV riders' organization.
"They asked us to look for grants, so we did," he said. "ORV use is just exploding, and they were concerned about safety."
Maddox also acknowledged the support of the County Board of Commissioners, which authorized the grant application, and offered special thanks to DNR Conservation Officer Bob Madden, who wired the new ORV for police flasher lights.
"There's been a lot of help from a lot of people," he said, noting that they will continue to work with the County Board, SORVA, the DNR, Michigan State Police and Manistique Public Safety. "This program is a real partnership."
