THE wool interest in Australia has suffered severely from droughts. The sheep have died by millions. Nevertheless the supply of wool shows a steady increase.

A COMPANY has been formed in London, with a capital of $2,500,000, for the manufacture of aluminum, sodium and potassium. It has acquired all the best patents for the purpose.

A WARM discussion is going on in England as to whether Queen Victoria eats bread. We are inclined to think that she does. At all events, it is known that she is sometimes very crusty herself.

MORE than three hundred Italian laborers sailed from New York for home the other day, being unable to find employment. Two brigades, who have been confined ever since their arrival were sent back by the same steamer.

A DAUGHTER was born other day to Mr. and Mrs. John Logan, of Youngtown, O. The young beauty has been named Mary Louise, after Mrs. Gen. Logan and Mrs. C. H. Andrews. Mrs. Gen. Logan is still with her son, and has nearly regained her health.

THE Atlanta Constitution says that Amos Cummings is the best reporter America has produced. It doubtless refers to Amos Jay Cummings, the lawyer, whose fame is just breaking through the South. Mr. Cummings is a great journalist, and he deserves to have his name spelled properly.

THE daughter of the late Gen. John Bullows follows to Chaska, the Indian, has been fatally wounded by a moving-machine. Some people will say this is a judgment on him, but there is no historic evidence that the first man who monkey with a buzz-saw had ever committed a mis-marriage. THE food of the sultan of Turkey is cooked by one man and he aids. It is prepared in silver vessels, and each vessel is sealed by a slip of paper and a stamp after the meal is cooked. These seals are broken in the presence of the sultan by the high chamberlain, who takes a spoonful of each dish before the sultan tastes it. The annual expenditure of the sultan's household is over $41,000,000.

A CORRESPONDENT writing from the City of Mexico says: "I saw 'Don Porfirio,' as the people familiarly call the president, in the forest of Chapultepec this morning. He was mounted on a handsome horse, wore a black cutaway coat, riding trousers, top-boots and a tall, shiny hat and was as handsome a figure on horseback as he is on foot. He is saying a good deal, and was to-day accompanied by a peace, four more years of Diaz and peace, which the busy, progressive mind of the country fervently hope for."

FLANNEL shirts have become popular among the members of the United States senate. Senator Platt started the fashion by appearing in a blue and white flannel shirt some time ago. Senators Boak and Blackburn at once imitated bold shirts and the festive flannel was adopted in their place. But the establishment of the senate unbounded when Mr. Edmunds walked into the chamber Monday wearing a shirt of white flannel. Senator Edmunds, the dignified, the conservative iceberg from Vermont, had never before appeared among his colleagues attired in so free-and-easy a costume. Perhaps blazers and tennis shoes may yet find acceptance among our nation's lawmakers.

BOB WHITE.

Look! the valleys are thick with grain. Hearty and tall, Peaches droop in the grassy lane. By the orchard wall. Apples, streaked with the crimson stain, Hang in the sunshine warm and bright; Mark to the wall that place for rain! Bob White! Bob White! A surge of mischief, I feel for rain; Bob White!

Men who reap on the fruitful plain, Bickering the town, Lift their eyes to the shifting vane As the sun goes down. She is the farmer's loyal wife, With the dawn in the falling light; Bob White! Bob White! Still from the hills, pipes for rain; Bob White!

Lo, a burst at the darkened pane, Angry and loud, Water comes and winds complain To the rattling eave; House at the farm, the careless swain, Weaving across with the lumen bright. Tuice his lips he to the refrain; Bob White! Bob White! Oh, the sound of the little rattle; Bob White!

What do you think, John? The Brandon Cottage is lit. Miss Nicola White came in from the village, all in a quiver of newly-acquired information. "It was always she who brought in any stray bit of news or gossip. John never seemed to hear anything. As Miss Nicola sagely observed, 'she always lived with his nose in a book.'"

"What does it matter to me," said Miss Nicola, "what they did in the days of King Hamlets or Julius Caesar. I'm in general more interested in what is going on to-day at Harlingham or Lillo-Brigge."

"She was a trim, neatly dressed person of middle age, with heavily black eyes, short black curls that danced and trembled with every movement that she made, and a great many wavy ringlets in her ribbons—a sort of assertion, perhaps, that she was not yet past the age of bright colors and girlish coquetry. To say she carried a little market basket in her hand. She had been buying sweet-breads and asparagus for dinner. Mr. Whyte looked up from his desk. He had an anxious correspondence with Government officials, and was preparing to send out a batch of letters by the next mail.

"The Brandon Cottage," said he, "is a grand old place, the finest in the village, in spite of its five-and-forty years, was still fair and smooth. 'Oh, I am sorry!'"

"So am I," said Nicola. "Nobody knows how much I enjoyed the strawberries out of the garden, and the roses from the great portico bush!" "I wasn't thinking of that," said Mr. Whyte. "You never do think of anything practical," retorted Nicola, parenthetically.

"But it's the quiet of the thing that I shall miss," sighed John, examining the point of his fountain pen. "Of course it's a family with nine small children at the house!" "You're wrong there," observed his sister. "It's a gentleman with one daughter—a gentleman who came here for his health. I saw an old woman cleaning the front steps, as I came by, and a white rabbit jumping about the lawn."

"Good for the rose-trees and shrubs!" drily remarked Mr. Whyte. "I shall speak to them, and beg them to keep their feet in the mud on their own side of the fence," said Nicola. "I can't have my young plum-trees and sweet-scented shrubs all nibbled bare. They've got a parrot, too, it screams awfully."

"I wish we hadn't any neighbors!" cried she. "My dear child," solemnly remonstrated her father, "do you expect to live on a desert island?" Corinna laughed. "I don't mind for myself," said she; but the Honourable President and the dreadful wife and tan dog. I'm sure, between them all, we shall get into some scrap!" Corinna's prophecy came true. They had lived serenely two weeks in the Brandon Cottage when matters came to a crisis.

Paquita, escaped from the gilded chain and rattle, carried her investigations into the Whyte garden. Nero, in chasing her for his rightful domain, pulled a mouthful of grey-and-green feathers out of her tail. Bunny girdled the choice new rose-tree which had just been set out in the centre of Mr. Whyte's lawn, and made a meal off the tall, white dentata bush.

Miss Whyte's maid presented her "mistress's compliments, and they couldn't stand that nuisance of a rabbit-baiting at night!" Old Selma came back with Mr. Delacroix's respects, and nobody in the house could sleep for that dog's perpetual barking at night. "I had intended to call," said John Whyte; "but as this unlooked-for childishness has arisen, it is perhaps better to keep my distance."

"I'm not that Mr. Whyte is a very catlike person," said Mr. Delacroix; "but this petty quarrelling is unworthy of a gentleman or servant." One day Mr. Whyte found Nicola drowned in tears. The rabbit had lunched off her pet Brazilian tortoise, and torn up all the Japanese july-buds in the border. "I wouldn't do it," said John. "It was a self-taught man, and the sight of Nicola's tears spurred him on to sudden vengeance.

"It was a self-taught man, and the sight of Nicola's tears spurred him on to sudden vengeance. "Get me my revolver! I'll shoot the vermin!" "He's out there by the cedar tree," she whispered, through her sobs. "You never do think of anything practical," retorted Nicola, parenthetically.

A single shot and the white object collapsed and fell over into a cluster of sweet-briar bushes. Mr. Whyte laid down the revolver, and wiped his forehead. "I'm sorry for it already," said he. "The creature was a pet for all that. But we have been driven to it—horribly driven."

"But then there was a rustle in the hedge, and Nero sprang over, his mouth garlanded with a stray feather or so from Paquita. "I'm sorry," said Mr. Whyte, "the brute has been trespassing again. He must have broken his chain. The shrieking of that luckless parrot—frightening him beyond all thought."

"I'm very sorry," faltered Nicola. "But what can we do?" "We must do something," said the brother, waving Nicola's disparted chain and walking grandly off toward the kennel. "Now," he thought, "I'm more sorry than ever that I shot the rabbit!"

He was crossing the lawn next day, with some other gentleman stony in his hand, when he heard a smothered sound as of sobbing, in the little trellised arbor on the other side of the house.

His heart smote him with a sudden remorse. He flung down the geraniums, went around by the gate, and presented himself before poor little Corinna Delacroix, who sat, utterly languishing, on the step of the summer house. She started guiltily at his approach, and rose to her feet. "My dear young lady," said he, "what is the matter? Is it anything in which I can help you?"

"Still Corinna weeps," added Whyte. "I regret from the bottom of my heart that I allowed myself to be carried away so far as to perform such an unmercifully and ungentlemanly action. If I could replace her in the garden, I should be glad." "But you can't!" sobbed Corinna. "Oh, please—please forgive me! I don't know what possessed me to put mygeraniums into a piece of meat at the foot of the garden." "But I did, and he has been poisoned!" "Poisoned?" gasped Mr. Whyte. "Your father?" "No," wept Corinna, with a gesture of impatience. "The dog?" "Do you mean my Irish setter?" "Yes."

"But he isn't poisoned!" cried Mr. Whyte. "He has disappeared," asserted Corinna. "I have sent him away. I did not know how to bring it to him as it should show up discussion between neighbors."

"I wish we hadn't any neighbors!" cried she. "My dear child," solemnly remonstrated her father, "do you expect to live on a desert island?" Corinna laughed. A MONSTER TREASURE VAULT.

The Largest Construction of Its Kind in the World.

The $10,000,000 vault is the largest construction of its kind in the world, writes the Washington correspondent of The Philadelphia Times. As it now appears, it is like a modern improvement on the old fastness in Spain, Italy, and Austria. Diving into depths of the massive foundations of the public thoroughfares, the surface is reached by a single, dimly-lighted bare apartment, a great square of steel, standing on four columns in a steel casing, with a total height of the new vault. The floor, about eight feet high and six feet wide, is six inches thick and weighs five thousand pounds, of cast-iron. To move it on its track, each half-ton requires the strenuous exertions of five men. A mechanical device is now being constructed to lessen the amount of muscle in handling the ponderous floor. It is a cylinder, resembling the high-pressure piston of a steam engine, and is a combination of the most durable mechanical appliances by means of a lever through the powerful lever system, the frame, and a time lock holds the door closed until any short of blowing up the vault by the roof and the floor is the most serious of the old-fashioned vaults.

Passing through the jaws of this monster of human contrivance against burglars at the vault, the door is closed and the door is closed. The door is closed and the door is closed. The door is closed and the door is closed. The door is closed and the door is closed.

Each of these will hold 100,000 pounds of refined silver bullion, or a total of 5,000 net tons, equal to 100,000,000 dollars. If the vault is closed, the aggregate could be increased to $100,000,000. Some practical idea of the extent of this treasure may be formed by realizing that to transport it would require at least 1,500 wagons, which would extend in a continuous line from the sea coast at Philadelphia to Newmarket, or a train of cars which would extend from the Grand street station to Ely street station.

Lazy Life of Washington Clerks. The clerks have a lazy life in Washington compared with persons who perform great service in commercial cities. They do not get up early in the morning, and they are off only for the day of 8 a. m. They are said more money than the average of clerks in other cities, and they are said to possibly earn in any other calling as much as they do in this one.

MAKE A CHAIN!

A Sacramental Day Sermon Preached at the Brooklyn Tabernacle.

The Rev. T. De Witt Falmagne Discourses on the Philosophy of the Chain.

Sunday was sacramental day at the Brooklyn Tabernacle, and the more than four thousand members were joined by those from other lands in sacred commemoration. The subject of the Sabbath, viz., "The Chain," was the theme.

At school and in college, in announcing the mechanical process, we learned the story of the pulley, the inclined plane, the screw, the wedge, the wheel, and the lever, and we were to study the philosophy of the chain. These links of metal, one with another, attached to the old link, and we have the chain from Genesis to Revelation, fishing as we go, and catching as we go, in the study of the Bible in connection with its own history. To do this, I have taken a chain of links, and when the weight of the burden was laid on it, the bridge broke, and the chain was broken. The bridge of character may be made up of many links, but if one link is weak, the whole bridge will be broken.

The Bible refers to the church as having such a character, and says: "The church is built upon a rock, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." The rock is Christ, and the gates are the powers of darkness. If the church is built upon a weak foundation, it will be broken. The church is built upon the foundation of Christ, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

What I wish to impress upon you is that you are the strength in right and wrong directions, and you are the strength in right and wrong directions. The church is built upon the foundation of Christ, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The church is built upon the foundation of Christ, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

That which explains the greatest impregnability of the church is the unity of the church. The church is built upon the foundation of Christ, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. The church is built upon the foundation of Christ, and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

power in the chain that pulls you this power toward God and Christ, and heaven. On the subject of the long chain of early years influences?

By all people between 20 and 40 years of age, well, need a surrounding conjunction of good influences. We forget to apply the old-fashioned rule that a chain is made up of links, and that if one link is weak, the whole chain will be broken.

The first chain bridge was built in Scotland. Walter Scott tells how the French built it in France, and how the British built it in England. The chain bridge was built in Scotland, and it was built in Scotland.

Most interesting is for us to get into the mind of the man who built the chain bridge. He was a man of great power, and he was a man of great power.

Most interesting is for us to get into the mind of the man who built the chain bridge. He was a man of great power, and he was a man of great power.

and a chain on your tongue and a chain on your eye and a chain on your brain and a chain on your property and a chain on your soul. Some day you wake up and you find that you are a man of great power.

I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind. I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind. I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind.

I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind. I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind. I am tired of this, and I am going to lose my mind.

Some of the boys in blue were standing in front of a window on Fifth avenue, in which was a picture of General Pitt Sheridan. "When I was in Washington, one of them said, 'I met a General Sheridan who was with General Jubal Early in Shenandoah Valley. You know how Sheridan and Early used to chase each other in that section. First it was Sheridan, and then it was Early. One day Sheridan had got every gun but Early had, and the next day Early would get some from Sheridan. This old Confederate said that on one occasion he was at the station where a lot of cannon had been delivered. On each one of them was a General Jubal Early, Shenandoah Valley. The Confederate took his pen and wrote underneath the address the following: 'Care of J. H. Sheridan.'"

The Detroit "Journal" will pay $1,000 in gold to the person who shall guess between now and the 1st of December, the four coldest days between Dec. 1st and March 15. Chance to make some money.

Monday night there was a fearful storm on Lake Huron. The large St. Clair lumberer near Sand Beach and the crew were taken on board of the life-boat, but the gale drove that down the lake and in an attempt to land at Port Sanilac the boat capsized and four of the eight men on board of the St. Clair were drowned. Several other vessels suffered badly.

The second number of the pamphlet issued by the State Board of Corrections and Charities has reached our table, through the kindness of the secretary, Hon. L. C. Steers. It is a valuable publication and should be read by many. The Hon. Rev. Geo. D. Gillespie has an article addressed to the clergy, recommending that the 2nd Sunday in this month be observed as prison Sunday and that discourses be delivered that day on crime and pauperism; an article from Mrs. Coffin, of Chicago, on reformatories, police matrons, etc.; and several other well written chapters on subjects of great interest to all who have the welfare of society and the decrease of crime at heart. We read the pamphlet carefully and endorse every line in it.

Democrats are circulating bogus copies of the Mills bill, with the proposed "moonshine" legislation left out, so that when their speakers are confronted with the fact that it is the Democratic party, and not the Republican, that is squarely on record in favor of free whisky, they can pretend to quote from the record to prove that the so-called moonshine legislation is not in the bill. They have been caught at this disreputable trick and exposed, but they presume upon the ignorance of the people, and many of their speakers continue to play their audiences for suckers. In their campaign text book for 1888 containing nearly 700 pages, there are 22 pages of fine print devoted to telling "what the Mills bill is," and in all these pages there is not a word about the moonshine legislation which really opens wide the door to fraud which will inevitably result in "free whisky," and which is one of the prominent and most objectionable features of the Mills bill. -Manistique "Daily Eagle."

Remember that Orr Bros. & Co. keep constantly on hand fresh fish at their East and West side markets.

In Medina, N. Y., is displayed a banner, which reads as follows: "For Governor, David B. Hill, for President, Benjamin Harrison, for Vice President, Levi P. Morton."

A man living in this county, who owes over two years subscription, put his paper back in the office last week marked "refused." We have heard of many mean men - there is a man who used the wart on his neck for a collar button, the one who "pastured" a goat on his grandmother's grave, and the fellow who got rich - by giving his children a nickel each to go to bed without their supper, then stealing the nickel after the children were asleep, but for pure downright essentialness the man that will take a paper two years, or any length of time, mark it "refused" and then stick it back in the post-office is entitled to first premium.

Buy your sausage of Orr Bros. & Co., as they make it themselves.

There is proof positive that a great many Prohibitionists, this year, are going to take the world as they find it, and accomplish the most good possible by direct methods. -Rev. E. Marsh, of Fort Ann, N. Y., pastor of the Methodist church there, voices the sentiment of many a Prohibitionist in the following:

"I believe in prohibition and have voted for Prohibition candidates. But I consider the issues of this campaign too important to throw away my vote. Of the Prohibitionists here I know of only one who says he will not vote for Harrison and Morton, and he may come over to Harrison before election. I believe in the principles of Prohibition, but the interests of the country demand that I shall vote for Harrison and Morton. Nothing would be accomplished by voting the Prohibition national ticket."

Watch the Enemy.

The Democrat managers know full well that, unless something is done, and quickly done, to stop the stampede from Cleveland to Harrison their cause is hopeless and their cause is lost.

Democrats in private conversation admit this, and it is apparent that the feeling is universal. The names of thousands of Democrats who have come out for Harrison and protection have been published, and today the chairman of the New York Republican state committee has the names and postoffice addresses of over five thousand Democrats of that state who have declared for Harrison and Morton.

With sure defeat staring them in the face, the Democrat managers are forced into a campaign of "tactics." This includes bluff, buncombe and bluster. It also includes newly-coined falsehoods, false claims and startling surprises. Henceforth they will claim many conversions from Harrison to Cleveland, but they will not publish proofs of such conversions. When they find a genuine case they will make the most of it and make it count a hundred in guess work. We know their program. We have knowledge of their plans and purposes and before the campaign is over they will know that some of their secrets at least are in our possession.

Let no Republican in Michigan or elsewhere be deceived or disturbed by roaring roobacks, startling surprises, dreadful disclosures, or anything of the sort that may be sprung by the Democrat managers or press. All this is a part of their program.

Let Republicans keep right on working faithfully and hard every day from now until election, and then see to it that the full Republican protection vote is polled and honestly counted.

The enemy is beaten to-day and knows it. To recover lost grounds he will resort to ways that are dark. It is now a contest of tactics with the enemy. Republicans must see to it that the enemy is kept safely corralled. -Detroit "Tribune."

The Indian Post Stamp.

Two lines that are inseparable from your husband, your wife, your child. The father, the mother, the child. The health and spare of individuals. You sit before each other, and you were wedded up and about. You could hardly be more inaccessible to each other, more intimate from face to face. You have the best idea of life. It is possible in that brief before what memories in which you have always at this moment sweep through you? What old sorrows, gloominess, again at some chance encounter of an old friend, or a shadow over the eye for an instant, and you have seen the heart beat more quickly and you know nothing of it. With the knowledge of each other, for absolute life melting into life, a sensual inextinguishable, inexplicable little threads catch and hold you in their grasp. You and your child and your child's daughter is nearly at one with her, might find, and she but penetrates the recesses of your child's heart, a life as distinct from the outer one, lived all unconsciously but a necessary fact of identity with the individual's development and growth, as the ripening seed is distinct from the corolla of the flower. Many these souls desire and long to approach each other, to be known, to know a part each of the other, to feel this loneliness. But yet it is loneliness they must treat the witness of their sufferings, only in less selfishness must drink their draught of loneliness that can only be laid with life, if even then. And the most refreshing fact of all this loneliness is the loneliness of death at the going down alone. Into the night of the dark river, the sound of cold waters, the moment when neither pitying face nor loving lips nor hand can reach us, the entrance of that as we enter into this world to meet with loving arms, it is being arms again that shall meet us here, alone unless a great hope walks with us a hope which would have us companionship when the waters close around us, without which the loneliness is indeed appalling, but with which it ceases to be known, or felt, or to exist. —Harper's Bazar.

Diamond Covered Boots.

Few persons would think of looking for fresh knowledge in the simple blacking of a boot; but it is nevertheless the most interesting subject. "It'llt ever occur" to you," said a chemist, what a remarkable and unique process the blacking of a boot is? You see, we smear the boot with a preparation of bone-black, which is entirely devoid of luster; and then by the friction of dry brush, make it shine like the sun. There is not another process like this anywhere in the arts so far as I know and I never read anywhere any scientific explanation of the process. I have a theory of my own, however, which I will give you for that it is worth.

"The key to the mystery lies in the fact that diamond is nothing more than crystallized carbon. The blacking of a boot is nothing more than the application of a mass of diamonds would. Of course this is not a perfect explanation of the phenomenon. What part the other ingredients play and especially why it is that the blacking must be mechanical, I cannot tell; perhaps some one else can. But I feel pretty sure that the bootblacks are engaged in turning blacking into diamonds."

—New York Graphic.

Swaying on the Eiffel Tower.

A Frenchman who was a close neighbor of mine at dinner the other evening was full of the marvelous Eiffel Tower, which already dominates Paris. He had, in his capacity as a journalist, been allowed to ascend as high as the present state of the structure permits, and was most eloquent as to the spectacular results of the gigantic undertaking. The view from the top of the completed tower will be one such as nobody but a successful aeronaut will have ever beheld, while the oscillating sensation which will be experienced will be positively unique. It is difficult as it is to realize the fact, but a mathematical certainty that the top of the Eiffel Tower will oscillate in a high wind to the extent of a yard, or more. Fancy, then, what the experience of enterprising climbers will be when they find themselves sensibly swaying about in the upper air. —London Figaro.

In New York women, married ones among them, are becoming real estate agents, druggists, clerks, doctors, lawyers and barbers as well as type writers, florists, milliners and actresses. In another generation it is thought that the New York home will have passed out of existence entirely.

"Try Ayer's Pills"

For Rheumatism, Neuralgia, and Gout. Stephen Lansing, of Yonkers, N. Y., says: "I recommended Ayer's Pills have relieved me from that trouble and also from Gout. If every victim of this disease would have only three boxes of mine, I could banish Gout from the land. These words would be—'Try Ayer's Pills.'"

"By the use of Ayer's Pills alone, I cured myself permanently of rheumatism which had troubled me several and eternal, and, I believe, would prove a specific in all cases of incipient Rheumatism. No medicine could have served me in better stead."—C. C. Rock, Corner, Ayer's Pills, Paris, La.

C. F. Hopkins, Nevada City, writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for sixteen years, and I think they are the best pills in the world. We keep a box of them in the house all the time. They save much trouble and suffering from rheumatism. Since taking Ayer's Pills, I have been free from these complaints."

"I have derived great benefit from Ayer's Pills. Five years ago I was taken so ill with rheumatism that I was unable to do any work. I took three boxes of Ayer's Pills and was entirely cured. Since that time I am never without a box of these pills."—Peter Christensen, Greenock, Wis.

THE CAMP FIRE.

Logan in Battle—The Confederate, "Home Sweet Home."

Sheridan's Last Ride.

The last time that General Sheridan was ever in the saddle was when he led the men in blue and the men in gray past Independence Hall, in Philadelphia, at the Constitution's Centennial Celebration, Sept. 16, 1887.

Through the multitude's cheering and shouting and roar, it told that the southern were coming once more. But this time with Sheridan leading the way.

How anxious we watched at that old Hall door. As we saw the first Union rider.

"Not a hair of that red man's hair shall be blown toward the North." Sheridan's last ride.

"The flag is coming!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

"There he comes!" up went a shout. And at once all eyes were strained down the pike.

Second Dudo—Hain't General Logan ever been to college? "First Dudo—Why, naw! Why, they say that he has nevah studied gwinnins, you know!

Second Dudo—Aw! What a disgrace, you know!

The old veteran had been curling his temper during this conversation, and now felt called upon to say something.

"See here, fellers, I don't know whether General Logan ever went to college or not; but I heard him make a little remark on this, and he nevah said no more."

"That's right," then the old veteran went on to describe the battle of the 22d of July, in front of Atlanta.

His corps, the 19th, was at the extreme right of the Union army, extending to the rebel attack. Overwhelmed by numbers they were driven back, but forming new lines, they resisted every advance of the rebel columns.

They were cut off, however, and the fields and woods strewn with their dead, wounded and dying comrades.

At the afternoon their broken, bleeding and almost disheartened line, their ammunition almost exhausted, they were fighting to stay the rebel advance, but hope had almost fled.

Then the remnant of that gallant corps heard in their rear a roar like that of the ocean in a storm, and turning their faces a moment in that direction they saw as far as the eye could reach to the right and left, a solid line of blue; and borne in the centre of each regiment the stars and stripes floating proudly in the breeze.

"It was a gallant sight, bayonets were fixed into their rifles, they were coming on the "double quick." It was a fresh division of the Seventeenth Corps.

At their head led more than a hundred yards in advance of the line was John A. Logan, bareheaded, and his black eye glistening with sweat.

The old veteran described it all, and continued: "As Logan dashed up to our line, which had just been ready to break and retreat, he yelled to us: 'Fall back, boys! Fall back! Get down!' Then, we're coming for them!"

And "entiremen," continued the old soldier, "I never heard a more grammatical remark in my life."

The last shot of the morning was a sally to the front, and a man in blue, wearing a hat, and a rifle, was seen to be the first to advance.

The crack of the carbine rang out upon the sultry air, and the men in blue caught a glimpse of a gaunt, gray figure, leaping up from the dust, and speeding away like the wind.

They looked upon the man, and he looked back at them with a look of defiance and a smile of contempt.

The man was a young man, and his name was John A. Logan. He was a member of the Seventeenth Corps, and he was a member of the Union army.

He was a member of the Union army, and he was a member of the Union army. He was a member of the Union army, and he was a member of the Union army.

MAKING A MAN OVER.

A Formulator Gives Away the Secrets of His Art. "Formulating done here!" read a sign on One Hundred and Twenty-ninth street over a store.

A New York Star reporter who was ignorant of the meaning ventured to ask. He went in to a close, dark apartment on the second floor of the building and as he entered he heard the remark: "If they were not as vain as women I wouldn't be here today."

The speaker was a tall, thin man with a full beard and an unctuous gray eye. Scattered around him on the floor were pieces of silk, satin, serge, and bundles of hair and packages of dyes.

The little man was busily taking line satin quilted article that looked like the back of a baby's carriage.

"Yes, I am what tailors term a formulator," he continued, in a thin, squeaky voice. "The word is indicative of my trade, or rather of my life's occupation."

DOCTORS IN OLIVE-GREEN.

A Proposition that Sealed Men Wear some MARK of DISTINCTION.

An olive-colored button adorned the lapel of Dr. James E. Briggs' coat as he started out yesterday from his office to sit patients, was the New York Star.

He has worn the button three months to the wonderment of many of his patients, who could not imagine whether he was a Knight of Labor or belonged to some secret political organization.

The olive button simply signified that he was a physician. He is a believer in doctors wearing some distinguishing style of dress, or insignia. Some time ago the Philadelphia Medical World started a discussion upon the advisability of a doctor's uniform.

A physician at Lynn, Mass., has recently expressed his views on the subject in favor of the olive. It has not been much agitated in this city, though the question will probably come up again.

Dr. Briggs sent last night that often there were accidents on boats and trains and even in the street when a formulator's hat was a great deal in the way.

The doctor's hat was a great deal in the way. The doctor's hat was a great deal in the way.

ALCOHOLIC TRANCE.

Strange Things that Men do Under the Influence of Drink. In some instances the person may get drunk and do many intricate acts without consciousness or recollection of the same.

Science in epilepsy delirium tremens, or some other kind of delirium, which is a more or less of an unconscious state, which has no recollection of his acts during his time. From the many clinical studies of cases which have been made, the following general conclusions seem to be sustained:

1. Alcoholic trance is not an unusual condition of fever. The victim is usually unconscious and acts without memory of the scenes of passing events—a state which may last from a few minutes to several days.

2. It is distinct from epilepsy, although the known forms of mania, and is found associated with some unknown condition following alcoholic poisoning or intoxication. Some cases seem to be due to an unusual form of brain exhaustion, followed by a temporary consciousness but events are no longer remembered; or a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act.

3. Paralysis of brain function; lower brain, profound disturbances of brain energy, and impaired and lessened responsibility. One group of cases are characterized by no anything unusual, a natural, accustomed order of everyday life.

4. There is a further increase in such cases, and a gradual conductor among his patients, and a gradual conductor among his patients, and a gradual conductor among his patients.

5. A second group of cases consists of a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act. This is a very unusual form of delirium, and is characterized by a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act.

6. A third group of cases consists of a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act. This is a very unusual form of delirium, and is characterized by a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act.

7. A fourth group of cases consists of a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act. This is a very unusual form of delirium, and is characterized by a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act.

8. A fifth group of cases consists of a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act. This is a very unusual form of delirium, and is characterized by a suspension of memory for a certain direction, but not of the details of the act.

Reducing the Surplus.
 The disposition of the surplus in the U. S. Treasury engages the attention of our Statesmen, but a more vital question has our attention, and that is the reduction of the Surplus Consumptives. Since the discovery and introduction of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, there has been a marked decrease in the mortality from this dreaded disease, and it is possible to still further reduce the number of Consumptives. How? By keeping on hand a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery and using according to directions, upon the appearance of the first symptoms such as a Cough, a Cold, a Sore Throat, a Chest or Side Pain. Taken thus early a cure is guaranteed. Trial bottles free at R. N. Orr's Drug Store.

Eminent Doctors, say WARNER'S WHITE WINE OF TAR will never be equalled as a Cough Medicine in use For Sale By E. N. Orr.

Advices from Africa say that an expedition consisting of 300 Houssas, led by an English officer, left Wintemba, on the gold coast, to punish the Togo negroes for murdering Capt. Derymple. The expedition was met by a well-armed force of natives, and a severe engagement took place. The battle resulted in the defeat of the natives, with a loss of three hundred killed. The Houssas also suffered heavily. 64 of their number were killed and most of the survivors wounded. The Germans at Bagnomo, on the east coast of Africa, are preparing for an expected attack by natives. The Italian envoy, Sig. Cecchi, has left Zanzibar, having failed to arrange the dispute with the Sultan. A number of British subjects are arriving at Zanzibar from the districts in which the natives have revolted.

Our Candidate for President. He will be nominated by the convention and elected by the people, because he will come the nearest to filling their ideal of a Chief Magistrate.
