The United States is rapidly accumulating a navy. Our fighting vessels are rapidly sliding down into the water. A day or two ago the one thousand ton twin screw gunboat Machias was launched upon the Kennebec river at Bath, Me. Its main battery will be eight four-inch rapid-fire steel rifles, and the secondary battery five rapid-fire guns, a Gatling gun and a Hotchkiss revolving cannon. It can steam fourteen knots an hour and its displacement will enable it to spread over thousands of square feet of canvas. Though a small vessel and only intended for harbor and river patrol service it is a staunch and strong craft and a worthy addition to the growing navy.—Ex.

A retired farmer, who has time to try experiments and note the results, says for the last three years he has planted a bean or two in each potato hill, and has never seen a bug on the potato tops where beans are grown in the same hill. The heroic soul does not sell its justice and its nobleness. It does not ask to dine nicely and to sleep warm. The essence of greatness is the perception that virtue is enough. Poverty is its ornament. It does not need plenty, and can very well abide its loss.

Thousands of men are like a wax candle in an empty room, which some one has kindled and placed there. It spends its whole life in burning itself out, and does good to none. Many a man commences and burns the wick of life, using it up, and throwing his light out upon nobody. He is a light to himself—that is all.

The present condition of the country roads is amazing when we consider the progress of civilization in other directions. It is only in the matter of highways that the people have made no advance from the pioneer period. If improvements in other respects had depended on better thoroughfares we would be still struggling helplessly amid semi-barbaric environments. As it is, the time has arrived when the roads must be improved.

Antipathetic morality, in its best form, is a waste of material. In all its forms it is a shame and does the same harm to the cause of sound morals which the circulation of counterfeit notes inflicts upon the currency. It ought to be frowned upon and denounced as we denounce positive vice. It tends very strongly to make men hypocrites. In various ways it is unwholesome in its influence. It is based upon a false standing, and that is enough to condemn it.

We need, all of us, of every class and condition, to get personally better acquainted with each other—to study, with a view of getting at the facts individual, social, economic and political conditions in the actual lives of living men. We need to learn both sides of these matters, and, having by personal knowledge and contact discovered what really is, to combine our efforts to secure, so far as possible, what should be in the individual and general social condition of the race.

The species of insanity known as gargo seems to be peculiar to men of large spirituality and intense reflective tendencies. In other words, insanity must have a fine quality of brains to operate upon. It Goethe was a victim of psychosis, then Germany had to fall back upon a madman to find her Shakespeare. If Michael Angelo was insane, religion owes to psychosis her immortal sculptures and frescoes of the saints. If Burns was shaky in his epileptics, insanity has been singularly immortalized in song. In short, the world owes to madmen its grandest inspirations and its greatest inventions.

The observation that is taken from my single point is always wrong. It needs to be corrected by comparison with an observation taken from another distant point. This is one of the settled principles of astronomy. It is a principle that is wider than the science of astronomy. It is just as true in the much more important science of political economy. We must take our own corrections for parallelism. The look that we get of social conditions in the pages of a book must be corrected by the look we ought to get in the faces of living men. And we want no lies in this business. We want the whole truth to build on.

The hotel proprietors had issued an edict to their waiters that they must shave off their beards. The beard has been a token of liberty since the tribes unconquered by Greece and Roman civilization were given the name of "barbarian," which survives in its completed sense of "barbarian." Was it to be expected that descendants of the bearded men of Gaul and the Altemani, now playing their vocation of eliciting the elusive tip almost within sight of Panell hall and Bunker Hill would submit to such a mutilation of sumptuary despotism? The board of the juggler with hotel crockery is as dear to him as the hirsute magnificence of any other man.

Homesick.
O the green, green fields of the fair green land,
How my heart for you doth stand!
O the gray high cliffs and the surf-beat strand
With its throbs of a ceaseless pain!
O the crash of the surge, and the wild shrill cry
Of the gulls as he swoops to the wave;
And the hiss of the surge tossed in on high
In the rush from the dark sea cave.
O the yellow gorse in the bend of the hill,
Brown topped on the bleak seacoast;
O the linnets and the magpie eye can sail
For the land that I love the most!
O the poor wee church on the windy height
And the seagull's open door,
O the black cut-bow and the smoke at night
From the hearth of the faithful poor!
O the broken altar, the ruined shrine,
And my Saxon father's shame;
O the low and the tears that till death are mine,
O woe of my heart, at your name!

Where the Sweetbreads Are Found.
A woman who lives in the country where they butcher their own meat says she cannot find out, even from the butcher, in what part of the beef the sweetbread is found.

Butchers know this organ as the throat and heart or stomach sweet breads. In physiology the organs are known as the pancreatic glands, the throat sweetbread being the pancreas, and the heart sweetbread the thymus. The heart sweetbread is much better than the throat, being of good shape, compact and tender, while the throat is long, loosely put together, and inclined to be tough. In the common books on physiology nothing is said in regard to the change that takes place in these organs as the animal matures. I find many butchers who know that there are no tender sweetbreads in the matured animal, but do not know the reason why. These organs are tender and delicate only while the animal is quite young. While the calf is still on a milk diet the sweetbread will be white, sweet and tender; but just as soon as the diet is changed to grass the organ begins to grow tougher, loses its plump form, and grows darker, until in the full-grown beef, it would not be recognized. What is true of beef is also true of mutton. The sweetbread in the lamb is delicate and delicious. One never finds it in this form in the matured sheep.

Let the Girl Be Free.
Do not, I beg of you, try to make your little woman "lady-like." Nature will do that in spite of you. Of course you will teach her good manners, as you do your sons, but do not let her enjoy her youth unconscious of what custom has decreed "proper" for girls. Let her develop a strong healthy body to endure the strains which must come upon it later. Don't add another "broken-down" woman to the world. Let her man encourage her to amuse, fit her for tramps in the country with her brothers; try not to let her suspect her hereditary bondage of clothes. This is one of the hardest to accomplish, for public sentiment is all against you, but do your best. Dress her as strongly and plainly as she can bear and do not feel herself unpleasantly unlike her mates, and then let her run and grow, and forget that she is doomed to be banded and swathed and pinched and made uncomfortable all the days of her life after her happy school days. Give her a free, carefree, happy girlhood to look back upon, to keep in her mind as a sunny picture forever, writes Olive Thorr Miller, in Harper's Bazar.

Thus shall you secure to her the priceless gift of health, indispensable if she is to bear the burden of "duds" that await her on the threshold.
"Where the brook and river meet—
Womanhood and childhood meet."

Women Against Women.
It is an interesting fact that during the school election in Bloomington, Ill., where more than a thousand women voted, the women opposed the re-election of Miss Raymond, who had been for many years Superintendent of City Schools, and who had always given women the preference in appointing teachers. The opposition claimed that co-education demands co-educating facilities. The women countered that having had two men on the list of city school teachers was almost as great a mistake as having had two women voted.

Old women and young, black and white, religious and worldly, stood together in the front line that extended from the polling place half a block down the street, but the utmost good nature prevailed. One old lady of 80 years proudly cast her first ballot, rejoicing that she had been spared to enjoy her rights.
To Aid in the Summer Vacation.
The Woman's Rest Tour association is a society of women who, having made the trip across the Atlantic and discovered that foreign travel is much easier and less expensive than we know, resolved to offer self-dependent women the result of their experience. The association as organized was one of the simplest form, exacting no fees, and making the only condition of membership that the traveler should advise in return for benefits received, give to the society any information she might obtain on the trip that could be of use to other travelers. Now that a more definite organization has been effected, the membership has been placed at 31, and the privileges of clubbed advice, the best methods of travel, lists of lodgings, introductions between women of similar tastes and pursuits, etc. It is also proposed occasionally to assist, either by gift or loan, women who need a vacation trip and cannot otherwise take it. The society claims that $250 is sufficient to enable a woman of simple tastes to enjoy a summer vacation in Europe.

Dr. Howe and Julia Ward.
Once when on a visit to Boston, Julia heard the wonderful story of Laura Bridgman, who had just been led out of darkness into the light of life and joy by a certain Dr. Howe, a man of whom people spoke as a modern paladin of romance, a Roland or Bayard. She saw it as well as felt it, that he was the most remarkable man she had ever known. He, on his part, saw a youthful prophetess, radiant and inspired, crowned with golden hair. Acquaintance ripened into friendship, friendship into love; and so it happened that in the year 1833, Samuel G. Howe and Julia Ward were married. The next chapter shall tell you of Julia Ward Howe as well her children, have known her—Laura E. Richards, in May St. Nicholas.

Woman Suffrage.
The argument that voting is a natural right, however, is a dangerous basis of the claim of suffrage, because, if the common sense of the community at all in the last century, the community, it may restrict the right to the degree which it thinks necessary to secure that interest. A law providing for equal suffrage will be passed whenever the present electorate is convinced that such a law is desirable for the common welfare. The excellent remark that women will vote whenever they prove that they wish to vote is foolish, because that can never be done. They will vote whenever men think that the common interest will be promoted by their voting. It cannot be assumed that a majority of the Legislature, however courteous to women, were of that opinion.

Washington's Love Letters.
Concerning the Hon. E. E. Hale's statement that when George Washington was a great gallant prior to his marriage "there was not a single love-letter extant written by him," the Richmond Dispatch says: "We are under the impression that ex-Gov. Fitz Leo has in his possession the initial number of what might have been a series of love-letters from Washington, but the lady to whom or about whom this was written is said to have rejected George because he had big hands and feet, or because he entered a room awkwardly, or some equally good reason, and hence the correspondence was soon terminated."

An Ancient Sister, She.
A lady belonging to a community called the "Sisters of St. John the Baptist," in New York, was spending a month not long since in one of the backwoods districts, says the London Figaro. (Going to the postoffice shortly after her arrival she asked for Sister Bernamie. The local postmaster looked a bewildered for a moment. "Sister who?" he asked. "Sister Bernamie," repeated the lady. "A sister of St. John the Baptist." "Well, I should rather think not," replied the man with an uproarious laugh. "A guess he's been dead nearly a hundred years now."

A Rare Privilege.
Mrs. President Harrison and the Princess Louise are the only women who have ever been permitted to enter the cloisters of the monastery of Santa Barbara, it is said. When they had left the sacred precincts the ground trodden by their feet was consecrated with solemn ceremonies and much fasting and prayer.

Heroine of a Famous Boat.
The wife of Dean Biddell of Christ Church college, Oxford, was a remarkably beautiful woman, as, and she was a remarkably handsome man, and their children inherited charming manners and personal beauty. It was for their daughter Alice, who died in her youth, that "Alice in Wonderland" was written.

Exhibit of Women's Work.
An interesting feature of the world's fair will be a co-operative exhibit by the women's exchange from all over the country. The San Francisco exhibit of sight, from the fact that it has stuck to the part of the Long Beach fair year after year, and even he followed another man, Harry Hunter, who had been doing nothing else for eight or nine years, when he died at it. And played Catherine in a that burlesque season after season, until it got so that people would have him in nothing else.

CHAPTER ON PLAYERS.

HOW SOME THESIPIANS ARE ADMIRER FOR THEIR ROLES.

Tip Van Winkle Can Be Done by Some Rare Characters—Hooch is the Only Hamlet—Ada Gray Supreme in East Lynne.

The announcement made within a few days that Joseph Jefferson had determined to return to "Tip Van Winkle" next season, and to stick to it for the remainder of his career, forms a remarkable instance of longevity of a popular play in conjunction with a popular actor.

During the last few years Jefferson had given up "Tip Van Winkle" and had devoted himself to old comedy. It was thus that the late Mr. Florence had been identified with him. As a role Jefferson's receipts in this line were large, but as a result he found that the increased expense of a first class old comedy company outbid the increased receipts.

With a play like "Tip" he would go around the country at an exceedingly slight expense, at the same time doing a very big business. This is at least probable. It is true that the public shows a good deal of weariness over the revival of dramatic "stunts," but it may be different with a man of the celebrity of Jefferson.

The singularity of the matter is the more a good actor is versatile the less he is apt to impress himself upon the public mind. The late Mr. Booth, for example, was one of the most versatile actors that ever lived. He could play tragedy, high comedy, farce or burlesque at will, and was equally good in all of them. He was recognized as a great actor, but he never succeeded as very well as a comedian. The same was true of the late J. W. Wallack, and, in fact, of Lester Wallack himself, for though that actor was best known through "Rosalind," there was hardly an artist on the American stage who had appeared in so many different pieces. His roles numbered between 400 and 500. Financially, who made an enormous amount of money, frittered himself away during the latter part of his life in a lot of different parts, and he died leaving very little to his widow, or rather widows.

The same park men have generally been the gainers. The late Mr. Sullivan was closely identified with "Our American Cousin," and it never seemed to pall upon the public. Occasionally he would take a fling at something else, but the change was only of slight duration; he would always return to the best line part because the people insisted upon it.

Mr. Booth has played Hamlet four times as often as any other part of his repertory, and yet to the very end of his active career he could always draw twice as much money in that part as in any other. In fact the public had ceased going to see him in anything else, when he suddenly stopped acting through increased feebleness.

Frank Mayo, after swishing around in the legitimate drama and then in sensational plays, found a part to suit himself in "Harry Crockett." He suddenly began to draw money, he stuck to "Harry Crockett" year after year. At last his receipts went down to hardly paying standpoint and Mr. Mayo took to the legitimate. He desired to be appreciated in "Macbeth," and plays of the same nature.

He was a dreadful failure. He had played the part so long that he could not play anything else well, and, although he tried "Norden" and other things, his case seemed to be hopeless.

So, therefore, while the compensation may be large in keeping at one thing long, it is always a great danger. Louis Harrison played "Ty Foo" for five years. He played it too long. He found it difficult to get back to anything else, and even now the manner of Ty Foo often comes to him.

James F. Hart has completely sunk out of sight, from the fact that he has stuck to the part of the Long Beach fair year after year, and even he followed another man, Harry Hunter, who had been doing nothing else for eight or nine years, when he died at it. And played Catherine in a that burlesque season after season, until it got so that people would have him in nothing else.

and will not have "Evangeline" without him. In fact since he went to Australia with Edward E. Rice, "Evangeline" has been gradually going to the dogs.

Ada Gray is another old-timer. The great success of her play "East Lynne" were simple the way that there are characters whose reputations regarding most things can hardly be doubted who say that she first played it about 1860, right after Lucille Western began her meteoric career with it.

But even Ada Gray cannot lay claim to being the real old woman of the profession; there is one left who beats her. That one is Mrs. G. C. Howard. It is marvellous thing to relate that the woman still lives, and yet was in the original cast of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" somewhere about 1852. She was the original Eva, and then she became the most famous of Topsy.

It has been estimated that she played in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" over 1,000 times, but that estimate is too conservative a one, for it must be remembered that in the old Barnum's Museum times they gave two and sometimes three performances a day. It is very likely that Mrs. Howard played in "Uncle Tom's Cabin" fifteen or eighteen thousand times. At various times she had taken every part in it.

AUTHOR OF A FAMOUS BALLAD.

E. N. Crouch, Whose "Kathleen Mavourneen" Is Sung in Every Land.

There are few things more pathetic to those who are interested in authors, says a New York telegram, than to see literary figures, who have accomplished something worthy of recognition and were prominent in the public eye in their time, passing their last days in obscurity and by the world forgotten. Two such instances exist just at present and each has a special interest.

There is now lying in an humble home in Baltimore an old man 75 years of age. Only the two who watch at his bedside day and night know how late to death is he. Perhaps before the letter is printed the spirit will have left the body. And yet it is only three weeks ago that Frederick Schuch-Crouch told me the history of his famous ballad, "Kathleen Mavourneen," and in his own words and hand that story now lies before me. It was in 1845 that Crouch wrote the song that was destined to make him famous. It became almost an instantaneous success from its publication. The first year saw over 20,000 copies sold, and in fifteen years the number reached over half a million. It was translated into every tongue. Publishers issued it in every conceivable form and it has sold it in every collection of popular songs.

The Holy Shepherd Dog

The shepherd dog is the best member in the animal kingdom. A shepherd of mine has a shepherd who has pure bred or three months old, and not long ago a couple of the pups had a different and on some subject of canine interest and got to fighting. The mother heard them, and appearing to understand that the case was serious, ran out and attempted to separate them, holding one with her paws while she pushed the other away with her nose. She was unsuccessful. She began to bark and fighting and leaping then she ran into the house, and by barking and whining attracted the attention of her master, who rose and followed her into the yard. He lifted one of the pups by the tail and the other by the hind leg, and soon shook the belligerents out of their minds, and though the poor little dog had looked with terrified distress at the roughness of the master employed, she was evidently satisfied with the result, for as soon as the pups were released and snuggled up to her, she capered about her master, facing on him and in every way showing her gratitude.

Can't Breathe With an Open Mouth.

A frog cannot breathe with his mouth open. The conformation of the breathing apparatus is such that his mouth is open on his nostrils. If he is closed, and paradoxical as it may seem, all you have to do is to put a stick in his mouth and he cannot shut his jaws. It is a strange phenomenon, probably unparalleled in animal history, but nevertheless one who pleases may certainly be experiment, though it really will be dangerous to the frog.

THE HOME OF FREE TRADE.

A city like Manchester furnishes the most with very many interesting problems. It is the industrial city of England. Indeed, also takes into consideration. It is the greatest industrial city in the world. Walking about her streets, looking at the masses armies of chimneys and stacks, hearing about the iron, the cotton, silk, worsted and wool, it is no longer a surprise that Manchester has ruled Great Britain, and that her voice has been potent in shaping the financial policy of the world. No student of history should forget that this is the birthplace of the doctrine of free trade. Richard Cobden, a young business man, in 1825 started a movement for the repeal of the corn laws and for unrestricted trade. The "Manchester school" made itself a name and a power, not in England alone, but all over the world. It is an island city without water privileges, and reached a population of 150,000 before it had railway connection with Liverpool. Its growth is the natural development of its own industries. The proportion of factory hands and laboring people is much greater than in the other cities of England. For reasons partly known and partly surmised poverty is extreme in Manchester. During a single week one person out of every thirty-eight was a pauper, receiving food and coal at the expense of the city. On a former date it reached the appalling number of one to every twenty-five. In addition to these figures I find that an average of a thousand sick paupers are at the infirmary and the several hospitals.—Manchester (Eng.) Letter to Cincinnati Times-Star.

A FINE YOUNG MAN.

Hon. S. M. Taylor, Ohio Republican Candidate for Secretary of State. Hon. S. M. Taylor, who will lead the Republican ticket in Ohio this year, and who will consequently be the next secretary of state, belongs to the younger school of politicians who have recently come to the front. Mr. Taylor is but thirty-six years of age. He has served his state during several terms, and his work there gave him a state wide reputation. His nomination is indeed a compliment to a young man, and very forcibly illustrates the esteem in which Mr. Taylor is held by the Republicans of Ohio. His friends predict that he will go still higher on the ladder of political fame. His election by a large majority is practically among the certainties.

A Chestnut Tereely Stated. Colonel Henry Wattersen, in a letter from Washington to his paper, the Louisville Courier-Journal, writes as follows:

I have been in Washington nearly two weeks and have yet to meet a Democrat who does not privately agree with me as to the conditions in New York and the certain defeat which awaits the Democratic party in the nomination of Mr. Cleveland; yet these very Democrats are publicly quoted as favoring the nomination of Mr. Cleveland.

Democracy Likes the Bottle. Colonel Morrison thinks it is a hard case if the Democrats cannot form a presidential ticket "without the Tammany brand blown in the neck of the bottle." It does seem hard, but we have observed that the national Democracy takes very kindly to the Tammany bottle every time it is passed. It looks as if it was going to be a bitter dose as often as this year, but the party must take the medicine.—New York Tribune.

Another Favorite Son Slumps. Half of what the Democratic newspapers are saying about the great anti-monopolist governor of Pennsylvania, the Honorable State won't be inclined to pat her son on the back much longer. Far is the fall of a favorite son. Why? Because he always tumbles from the height of his self esteem.—New York Recorder.

That's What It Means There. The Arkansas statesman who says that "Democracy means the shielding of a defaulting state treasurer, then he is not a Democrat," might as well begin to shout for the Republican party.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

For Sale. A good farm three and a half miles from the village of Thompson, 160 acres, 17 cleared, good two story log house, good log barn, splendid water, horse stable and other conveniences. Will sell on easy terms. For further particulars apply to or write. JAMES DIXON, Thompson, Mich.

Pronounced Hopeless, Yet Saved. From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Grafton, N. D., we quote: "Wastaken with a bad cold, which settled on my Lungs, Cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Saviour, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all, eight bottles; it has cured me; and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman." Trial bottles free at Thompson and Putnam's Drugstore regular size, 50c. and $1.00.

Pure Leghorn. Mr. Ashford has the finest strain of Leghorn hens to be found anywhere in the west, and those wanting the best kind of poultry can purchase "settings" of eggs. It pays to raise the best.

Wanted. Four gentlemen boarders can secure good board in a private family, only a few steps from the post-office, by making application at this office.

Lakeside Lots for Sale. The undersigned has several very nice lots in Lakeside which he will sell on reasonable terms to men that will improve them. Apply at my office on the dock. C. B. MENSEREAU.

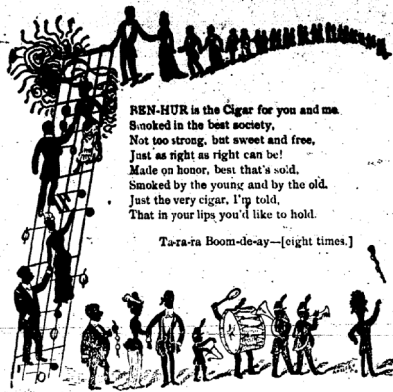

THE POPULATION of Manistique is about 4,000, and we would say one half are troubled with some affection on the Throat and Lungs, as those complaints are, according to statistics more numerous than others. We would advise all our readers not to neglect the opportunity to call on their druggist and get a bottle of Kemp's Balsam for the Throat and Lungs. Trial size Free. Large bottles 50 cents and $1. Sold by all druggists.

WANTERS LIVE! CURE SICK HEADACHE. Sick Headache is a real evil, all the troubles that attend it, such as indigestion, nervousness, dizziness, etc., are all cured by Carter's Little Liver Pills. It does seem hard, but we have observed that the national Democracy takes very kindly to the Tammany bottle every time it is passed. It looks as if it was going to be a bitter dose as often as this year, but the party must take the medicine.—New York Tribune.

SAVED BY HORNS.

"They tell wonderful tales of the chamois and the chamois hunter in Switzerland as every one who has traveled among Alpine peaks and glaciers knows," said one who has been in Switzerland frequently, to a New York Sun reporter, "but Antonio Gimlicel, a middle-aged hunter, although still agile and elastic in mind as well as body, I imagine had in his repertoire of reminiscences of that shy and surefooted antelope of the Alps more to excite the interest and strain the credulity of the listener than any other Swiss mountaineer. I ever heard give himself liberty on the subject. Antonio was a dweller in the Bernese Oberland, but to hear him tell it, he had hunted in and was familiar with every part of the Alps. His favorite narrative, for it was the first one he always told when he had a listener, was of a thrilling adventure he had once at the head of the great Zmutt Glacier. He had been following a chamois for two days among the portions, and in the deep gorges in that locality, and at last discovered it on the apex of a high rock that rose fifty feet above him. He stood at the top of a steep slope of glacial debris, where the footing was insecure, which terminated on the brink of the chamois hundreds of feet deep. The instant he saw the chamois he fired. The animal tumbled from the rock and fell at his feet. It was not dead, and it struggled to rise. Antonio seized it by both hind legs, and in doing so lost his footing; he fell forward, still holding the chamois by the legs and instantly both hunter and quarry were sliding down the slope toward the awful chasm.

"Antonio made desperate efforts to thrust his feet in some crack or crevice in the debris to save himself from the awful fate that yawned below him, and even the poor chamois sawed dispiritedly with its forefeet to gain a foothold and stay the journey to death. The efforts were vain. Antonio regained his hold on the chamois' legs, and the desperate hoar that impels the drowning to grasp at straws. As they neared the brink of the chasm the chamois in its struggle had turned upon its back. Antonio suddenly felt the solid ground fall away beneath him and he knew he had passed over the precipitous ledge. But instead of tumbling down into the abyss, he found himself suspended from the cliff, hanging to the chamois' legs. Antonio glanced upward. The curved horns of the chamois had plunged full length into a deep crevice near the precipice's edge and Antonio hung, and the rocks above. The strong horns withstood the shock of the sudden cessation of motion, and there with nothing but hundreds of feet of cold and unresisting space between him and the rocks below. Antonio hung.

Antonio says that he at once uttered a fervent prayer for being thus unexpectedly saved from the awful plunge, but who he had time to collect himself he was forced to change his mind. He had nothing to be thankful for, he thought, for at the best he could not see how the situation was anything more than a reprieve. It was impossible for him to draw himself back to the slope by means of the chamois; the chances of his being discovered and rescued were as one in a thousand, and even with that chance in his favor, discovery must come quickly, for that his strength could long sustain him suspended by the antelope's legs in mid-air was not within human possibility. But Antonio did not know that on the trail of the chamois were other hunters. It seemed an hour. Antonio says that he hung over that waiting abyss, suffering until torturing in mind and body, and he felt that his strength could last but a few minutes more when he heard a shout, and then another. He tried to answer the shouts but only hoarse gasps came from his throat. An age seemed to pass. Then he heard the sound of men making their way down the slope. The sounds came nearer; then voices. Presently the forms of two hunters filled the space within the range of his vision on the edge of the slope above him. Wails of cheer came from them. Antonio grasped the antelope's legs firmly with all his remaining strength. He felt himself gradually rising toward the slope. To close his eyes; his heart stood still; he scarcely breathed. By and by strong hands seized him. He knew no more until he found consciousness in a place of safety. His rescuers, with him and of course no language could tell them what was in his heart.

"Everybody knows Antonio in the Bernese Oberland. I never found any one who knew the two hunters who rescued him that day at the head of the great Zmutt Glacier."

A Tribute from the Telegraphers.

Sunday News, Baltimore, April 10, 1892.

Baltimore, April 10, 1892.

WYCKOFF, SARGENT & BIRDWICK: Dear Sirs—We the undersigned operators, employed by the Western Union of this city, using the Remington in receiving messages and press matter from the wire, take pleasure in stating that we consider it the best typewriter for telegraphers. We have tested other machines, but found none that have met the requirements of our profession so fully as the Remington.

Accuracy of work, speed, ease of manipulation, and durability are essential to the successful use of the typewriter in telegraphing, every all of which qualities are embodied in the Remington, and the keyboard is learned in a shorter space of time than DOUGLAS CASE machines, which are containing.

We are greatly pleased with the release key, which saves much wear of the type, and adds to the speed of the machine, and with the space gauge, with which to make narrow or wide space between the lines, very useful in message work. Very truly,

TRI-WEEKLY PIONEER

Incidents of a Fire.
 Just as the school bell rang for school after dinner yesterday the tug Elmer sounded an alarm of fire, and it was soon located at the dock. Everybody rushed in that direction and it was found that the fire had broken out between the Booth Company office and the adjoining building commonly used for storing fish. The Elmer lost no time in getting a stream of water on to the fire, the Manistique Engine was soon on the ground adding another stream and the tug Evans ran up and joined in the fight. In a few minutes they had the fire under control and soon after the job was complete and the buildings saved. Had it had a few moments more of a start before being discovered that immense block of buildings would have been in ashes. The citizens and firemen worked hard and made no mistakes. The loss will not exceed $500, fully covered by insurance.

World's Fair.—Cheap Rate.

D. W. Thompson, one of the Commissioners for this County, is the agent for this "Transportation Company" and will give all information required, to enable any one to take advantage of this cheap fare arrangement.

Delicate Operation.
 Mrs. Arnold Vincent, of Thompson township, has been sick for a long time with a complication of diseases that would not yield to treatment. The skill of physicians were baffled and one after another, called in consultation decided that she could not recover. Herself and husband requested Dr. Hafford to make a surgical operation and ascertain the true state of things. Dr. H. assisted by Drs. Sattler, Burdick and Rainie, performed the operation yesterday and found a general disarrangement of intestines, some parts entirely gone, a large amount of pus, etc. The surprise is that the lady has lived as long as she has, and they did what they could to make her as comfortable as possible; but could give no hope of final recovery.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., May 26.—Gilbert Roswell, a farmer living two miles south of Augusta, in this county, shortly after two yesterday afternoon killed his wife with a potato masher and then shot himself with a revolver. He lived 17 minutes. The house in which they lived belonged to Mrs. Roswell, and they quarreled over the possession of it. Roswell was over 60 and his wife 58 years old. They had each been married before and had four grown up children. The couple having separated some time ago on account of their domestic troubles. Mrs. Roswell went to Kalamazoo to live, the husband remaining in possession of her property in Charleston township. She owned the house and 2 acres of land and he 40 acres of land adjoining. She returned Tuesday, passing the night at the house of her brother, Samuel Vanorman, and yesterday went to her own place, ordering her husband to leave. He demanded that she come and live with him and she refused. In his rage he struck her three blows with the domestic utensil. The first two blows broke the bone of each arm and the third smashed her skull. He beat her head to a mass and, placing a revolver to his mouth, fired. He had borrowed the revolver from a neighbor, Elmer Dowd, for the alleged purpose of shooting gophers. Roswell's last words were an expression of satisfaction that he had done a good job.

Some of the Detroit papers say that an effort will be made by the Republicans in this district to elect the Hon. Sam Stephenson on this fall. That will be news to the Republicans of this district. Nothing of the kind is being attempted.

OMAHA, Neb., May 25.—Michigan delegates to the Methodist Episcopal general conference, and the delegates from the Pacific coast have decided to make one more determined effort to get definite action upon the matter of locating episcopal residences. They want a bishop's residence in Detroit and one in the state of Washington, and they desire to have the selection of these locations made obligatory on the part of the bishops. The committee on state of the church will hand in two reports upon the amusement question. The majority report is opposed to the effort that has been made to secure a more liberal construction of the rules concerning dancing and theatergoing. The minority report favors the idea of having a general statement upon the amusement question, commanding all members of the church to refrain from unbecoming, frivolous and unchristian conduct, leaving each individual to be, to some extent his own judge as to the nature of amusements that are becoming and Christian. The indications are that there will not be any radical change in the discipline.

The Chinese have a kitchen god, which is supposed to go to the Chinese heaven at the beginning of each year to report upon the private life of the families under his care. White people have these kitchen gods, also. But they do not go to heaven. They go around to each other's kitchens and report upon the private lives of the families they live with.

MELBOURNE, May 23.—When the clergyman went to Deeming's cell a few minutes before the time for the execution yesterday Deeming, falling on his knees, wept and cried: "Lord, forgive me for dispatching my wife and family without warning."

Deeming left two wills. In the first he leaves $300 to Miss Rouseville, and in the second he disinherits and upbraids her.
