Ellis Manufactured Opinion.
Attorney-General Ellis has strained the election law pretty severely in a partisan attempt to do a favor to his poplite friends, who haven't yet completed all the fusion schemes they want to work in the several counties. To give these fusionists time to patch up their tickets the attorney-general has ruled that the provision requiring nominations to be certified to boards of election commissioners is directory and not mandatory, and that the boards may "waive" the time and accept certified nominations up to within ten days of election. This airy method of waiving the law simply makes the board of election commissioners a law unto itself, and if it may waive one provision we do not see why it may not waive others not a whit more explicit or emphatic in their language. It is undoubtedly true that cases may arise where the board should receive nominations after the expiration of the twenty-day limit, and where the courts would compel it so to do, but it seems to us that there should be some evidence in such cases that there was an effort to comply with the law, that there was an absence of negligence. As Attorney-General Ellis' opinion now stands the provision of the law referred to is of no consequence whatever, the discretion of the board being of superior authority. The opinion is extremely careless in language and interpretation and was obviously made as a matter of political accommodation.—Detroit Tribune.

There will be given a grand masquerade ball at the Star Opera House, on election night, Nov. 8. Two prizes will be given: One for the most comical and one for the neatest. Be ready to take it in.

The campaign waxes warm in this county, and the enemies of the Republican ticket are circulating all kinds of stories to bolster up their sinking cause. We were in hopes that there would be no personalities resorted to; but it does seem as though the Democrats cannot carry on a campaign without something of that kind. Great allowance should be made when one hears any campaign story repeated.

Columbus Day.

The schools of Manistique celebrated last Friday in a becoming manner. The day was fine and by half past eight that morning the scholars, under charge of their teachers were seen marching from the Westside and Lakeside building towards the Central and there joined those of the several departments that find their school home in that building. Quite a number of citizens also assembled on the grounds and at nine o'clock the little folks filled out of the building and took their position facing the west. The sight was grand indeed and reminded us of the time when the "boys in blue" closed up with company front and stood a regiment deep to await the reading of orders. Prof. Beggs stepped upon the platform and briefly addressed the assemblage, and then read the President's proclamation setting apart Columbus Day as a legal holiday to be observed throughout the United States; a National anthem was then sung and the Stars and Stripes were ordered to be run to the top of the staff on the tower of the building. This was done when at the suggestion of the veteran soldiers "Old Glory" was saluted by three rousing cheers. Another beautiful and appropriate song was sung by the teachers and scholars and a prayer was offered by the Rev. Mr. Rogers, followed by a very fine address by one of the teachers, Miss Ross, and a reading by Miss Anna May McInyre. Every part of these out-door exercises were well carried out and the scholars acquitted themselves admirably. The order was given by Prof. Beggs for each school to march to their own rooms, which was done, and the visitors distributed themselves around among the several schools and enjoyed the special exercises, appropriate to that occasion. We expected to receive these several programs for publication but have not. Suffice it to say that there was no unaltering mistake made anywhere from first to last, and it can be set down that the schools of Manistique properly observed the 400th anniversary of the discovery of the western continent.

Columbus Day at Cooks.

The anniversary of the discovery of America was duly observed in Inwood Township on Friday in the school house at Cooks by the scholars of both schools of ladies and gentlemen, Mr. D. J. McInnis, a member of the School Board, in the unavoidable absence of the Chairman, presiding. The local resident, veterans Messrs. Messenger, A. Lyman, Ruska and Thompson, took part in the exercises and formed a firing squad to salute the National flag (for the first time) was raised on the pole surrounding the dome of the school house.

The following exercises were observed:

- 1 Reading of the President's Proclamation;
 - 2 Short address by the Chairman;
 - 3 Raising the Flag, and
 - 4 Salute by the Veterans and children;
 - 5 Singing—"America";
 - 6 Address—"Four hundred years ago"—Mr. F. Lee;
 - 7 Recitation—"Columbian Ode"—Miss Sarah McGee;
 - 8 Recitation—"The American Flag"—Harry Theriault;
 - 9 Singing by the children.
- At the close of the exercises the Chairman dismissed the assembly with a well appropriate remark.

We hear many comments made upon the action of the Board of Supervisors in fixing the salary of the Prosecuting Attorney at only $400. There may be a good reason for doing so; but none has been given to us. Certainly the man that accepts the post cannot expect to become very rich on that salary.

SOME HYPNOTIC CURES. ACTIVE AND PASSIVE PATIENTS ALIKE SUCCESSFUL.

Dr. Hamilton Osgood related to me many instances where extraordinary cures had followed positive suggestion made to the patient when in a perfectly normal condition.

The general appearance of a subject in the hypnotic trance is that of natural sleep, although sometimes, when in a profound slumber, one is reminded of a patient under the influence of ether.

As I noted before, some patients yield more readily than others. It was indeed interesting and curious to witness the subtle and inherent traits of different patients, even in the moment when the patient's will power was momentarily yielding more and more to the hypnotizer.

'Your eyes are heavy. It is difficult for you to raise your lids.' he with an effort, kept his eyes open for a moment and later when the doctor said: 'You cannot open your eyes,' he strove to do so and a gleam of triumph lit his countenance when he succeeded...

THE AUTUMN GIRL.

HOW SHE REPLACES THE SUMMER GIRL'S ARTICLE.

How the Autumn Girl is being put in the place of the Summer Girl is shown in the following illustration.

HAVE READ UPON the subject of the Summer Girl in the columns of this paper. On the basis of male creation all the people of the world have wondered when she was born and where she was reared. When the wistful eyes of the Summer Girl were first seen in the pages of the S. G. G.?

The society poet—one of those soul-eyed fellows with Vandylke beards and turn-down collars—once wrote his wonder thus: "He spoke in the language that echoed out into realms of space, but brought back no answer." The passing of the summer girl and the emergence of the maid of autumn upon the scene so lately filled by her coy sister has been and always will be, perhaps, one of those weird mysteries that make the earnest student of human nature think deep and awful thoughts.

Today, like Richelieu, she is here. Her French heels click merrily across the piazzas; her laughter rippling over the sea and the trails of her flirtatious gowns on over the land. Russet hooded, merry-eyed and audacious, she perches upon every niche in history's summer temple and rules all by divine right of her prettiness and grace. And the leaves grow golden and red beneath September's sun and are wafted down in a russet pall upon the grave of the dead summer. She has gone—she is no longer with us. Her hammock swings idly in the breeze, her tennis racket chucked in one corner of the hall and her empty bathing suit hangs limp and shapeless upon the back-yard fence—a miserable mockery of her we knew. Search as you will, by mountain stream or sandy beach, there is no sign of her. The team turn of her hands is silent and the "chomp" she used to make to a sister to sties alone on the breakwater and tries to think that the wild waves are giving him some straight tips as to her whereabouts. But she has vanished completely and gloom settles upon the land, descending like a leaden cloak and rampant cholera germ, and even the haughty hotel clerk sheds a great hot tear.

It was then that the soulful-eyed added this second stanza—
"Oh my poor heart, you are not the same and radiant maid
With her swaggery coat about her and her sunny interest
With her cheeks all rose glowing and her eyes with laughter laden, Might I ask you what's the matter with the autumn girl?"

"There is positively nothing the matter with this autumn's girl. She out distances all fall products of previous years and there are none like her. I discovered her—the first one of the season—upon Broadway one afternoon last week. It dawned upon me suddenly that she was a genuine autumn girl, and for a moment I paused breathless, for she was reminiscent of the girl I had made love to at Bar Harbor, and I looked closely once more into her riant face and demure eyes for some answering look of recognition. But her orbs looked off into the realms of space before her as she ebbed away unconsciously, while the big policeman on the corner began to hum a sentimental song and a clubman who had been gazing at her in an oppressed admiration staggered into a drug store in a rattled sort of way and called for sarsaparilla with a dash of think she knew it. A fair ware of some delicate odor permeated my senses as she passed and then all was over. But as that vague scent of summer roses greeted me a wild thought entered my brain. Could it be? But no—it was impossible—and—perhaps I was, destined to be a discoverer. Perhaps the sudden disappearance of the summer girl and the coincidental dawn of the autumn daisy could be explained by the theory of evolution! My brain whirled. I went in and had an ammonia and sarsaparilla myself. I was elated. I wanted to go off by myself somewhere and exult. Had I not breathed that same faint, sweet odor when I rode with her through summer lanes, and she leaned across in her saddle to fasten a rose in my cap? Had it not greeted me repeatedly as she waited with me beneath shaded lights, or talked platonic affection in her bathing suit and dug persistively in the sand with her silk stockings to see what she had unearthed? I thought, "Where was I at?" This proud young goddess with her blue Dresden umbrella! This same girl that turned a back somersault off the hotel diving board. This cold, fair creature in the top coat! She! The same young woman who ate a whole cantaloupe each morning at breakfast and took three lumps of sugar in her coffee? Impossible!—and yet—that faint, sweet perfume! I pulled myself together and started down Broadway. I peered into the shops like a maniac and went through Higg's like a human cyclone. I could see naught of her, but that accidental meeting on Broadway has aroused a train of thought that will not be quelled. I feel that I am on the verge of a great discovery.

An Amusing Invention.
A well known Santa Rosa horseman has a scheme for trotting horses which promises to beat the "boot" track all or in part as an important factor in aiding a horse to attain a fast record. He is planning a sulky that will not like a mania, and will push the horse only on a bit too. He says it is to be built on the plan of the watch. It will have big coil springs to drive the wheels, and he contends that it will revolutionize trotting. Right under the driver's seat the springs will be located, and it is his intention to have catered, and so nicely adjusted that when he wishes to go a 2:10 just all he will have to do is set it at the 2:10 figure and it will do the rest. When wound up the sulky will run one mile and a half. A very clever feature of the sulky is the self-winding apparatus. By simply touching a little spring near his stirrup, the driver can make the wheels wind up the spring, and by a hand device, he can throw them out of gear when the indicator tells him that the spring has been wound up to the proper tension. Thus in winding up, ever power is lost can be regained. And it is so arranged that the power can be turned on at will by the driver. The gentleman claims everything from the slowest scrub into a world-beater and make a three-minute horse able to go a 2:08 record. The inventor apparently had nothing green in his eyes when he was talking about his wonderful sulky, but time and development will tell whether he has been indulging in too many air castles or not.—Santa Rosa Republican.

Whalebone.
The amount of whalebone taken annually does not now exceed 200,000 pounds. The largest part of this is taken by the whalers sailing out of ports on the Pacific coast. A few years ago the amount taken reached as high as 600,000 pounds annually, and in some years it went above these figures. The price has gone up from 30 cents a pound to 85 wholesale.

An Improved Book Yoke.
This simple harness attachment shown in the illustration is mainly designed for securing the breast straps to the neck yoke, although capable of other uses. It has been patented by Mr. Lewis W. Rethrock, of Morrisdale, Minn. Pa. As shown more in detail

MOTHOOD'S NECK YOKER ATTACHMENT.
In the small view the attachment consists of a ring having parallel arms, supporting a roller movement held position by a bolt, there being on the bolt a loose screw slightly longer than the roller, preventing the binding of the arms against the roller. The device is light and strong and saves the breast strap from wear.

A Horse with a Tube in Its Neck.
For half an hour one afternoon recently a crowd surrounded a truck which had halted in front of the exchange place door of the Mills building. Attached to the truck was a horse, and there was a peculiarity in the animal's appearance which had caused the crowd to gather.

The horse was doing his breathing, not through its nostrils, but through a tube inserted in its neck. The contrivance looked very much like an old-fashioned candlestick with the base and an inch or two of the shank showing. In the tube was a sort of filter, to catch impurities in the air which passed through it and the arrangement appeared to work very satisfactorily.

The driver explained that tracheotomy had been resorted to to save the life of the horse, which had suffered from asthma. The tube had been in use for several months, and through it he appeared to be as well as ever. It was certainly able to do its full share of work. Every two or three days the tube was taken out and cleaned, but the horse had it in its neck the rest of the time.—N. Y. Times.

American Railways.
According to Poor's "Manual," the total number of mile of railroad in the United States at the close of 1901 was 179,261, of which 4,471 miles were constructed during the year.

The total share capital and indebtedness of all kinds of all the roads making returns equalled at the close of the year $10,360,834,228, an increase in the year of $27,108,328 over the total of 1890 ($10,333,725,900), the rate of increase for the year being 2.6 per cent. The cost per mile of all roads making return, as measured by the amount of their stocks and bonded indebtedness, equalled $59,820, against $59,377 for 1890.

In 1891 the gross earnings of $1,138,024,450 equalled 9.1 per cent of the total investment, aggregating $10,389,834,228; and net earnings, $356,299,889, equalled 3.1 per cent. The total amount of the payments in 1891 was equal to 4.25 per cent of the aggregate bonded indebtedness of all companies, as against 4.37 per cent in 1890 and 4.40 per cent in 1889; and the total amount of dividend payments was equal to 1.85 per cent on all paid up capital stock in 1891, 1.80 per cent in 1890 and 1.81 per cent in 1889.

During the period for which a large proportion of the companies reported in 1891, the business interests of the country were in a depressed condition, but the abundant crops of last year, and those now to a large extent assured for this year, would seem to predetermine an unusually brilliant showing.

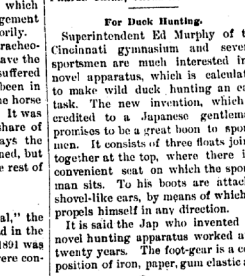

The Arsenic Poison in the New Hebrides.
M. Danetz has examined and experimented with the arsenic poison used by the natives of the New Hebrides. He finds that it contains neither vegetable poison nor serpent virus, but consists of earth impregnated with vegetable matter taken from marshy places and containing Pasteur's vibron septique, or bacillus of malignant oedema and also the bacillus of tetanus. If the arrows have been kept a long time, or have been much exposed to the sun, the vibron septique may have been destroyed, the danger then is from tetanus. When the arrows have been freshly prepared and the vibron septique is still active, a wound from them causes death in a guinea pig from septicaemia in from twelve to fifteen hours; tetanus, which takes longer than that period of time to develop, does not under these circumstances show itself. It is interesting to remark that the virus is unknown in these islands, consequently the theory of the equine origin of tetanus would seem to be negated by these resources.—Lancet.

The Drawing Frame.
Drawing or doubling is the operation through which the cotton has to pass after it has been carded. The ends, bands, or silver, as they come from the card, are exceedingly tender and loose, the fibres of cotton not being yet arranged in the parallel form requisite for good spinning. Before any twist is given to the bands, the fibres should be in a proper position for the manufacture of smooth yarn. The doubling and drawing out of the bands, which accomplishes this perfectly, is done on the drawing frame. Some drawing frames are constructed with three pairs of rollers, and some with four pairs; the latter having the advantage of doing more work in the same time. The rollers in a drawing frame are generally so adjusted that the drawing is done between the first and third rollers, the middle roller having but little influence on the result so far as the stretching is concerned. Where the drawing is performed twice; each pair of rollers draws a certain amount.

Detection of Frozen Meat.
The process adopted by the author for distinguishing between fresh meat and that which has been preserved in the frozen state consists in expressing a little blood or meat juice from the sample, and examining it under the microscope. The whole operation must be performed quickly, in order to prevent any drying up of the liquid. When the juice of fresh flesh is thus examined, it is seen to contain numerous red corpuscles, which are normal in color, and float in a clear serum. In the case of blood from frozen flesh the corpuscles have dissolved in the serum under the influence of the low temperature, and not a single normal red corpuscle can be seen. The hemoglobin escapes into the serum, and appears as irregular yellow-brown crystals. These may be frequently seen by the naked eye, but, in every case, can be readily detected under the microscope.—Maljeun, in J. Phara. Chim. Chem. Zeit.

For Duck Hunting.
Superintendent Ed Murphy of the Cincinnati gymnasium and several sportsmen are much interested in a novel apparatus, which is calculated to make wild duck hunting an easy task. The novel invention, which may be compared to a Japanese gentleman, promises to be a great boon to sportsmen. It consists of three floats joined together at the top, where there is a convenient seat on which the sportsman sits. To his boots are attached short-like cars, by means of which he propels himself in any direction. It is said the Jap who invented the novel hunting apparatus worked at it twenty years. The foot-gear is a composition of iron, paper, gun elastic and wood, elliptical in shape, with gutta percha tubes and a life belt attached. Just how locomotion is achieved is not known, but it is said that the "wearer" can make five miles an hour and carry a five-pound load of baggage. The twenty-five pounds of luggage are kept in a case certainly a popular one and a few Cincinnati sportsmen are very anxious to see one of the new machines.

Improvement of Aluminum.
An account of a process invented by Reinhardt Mannesmann for increasing the resistance of aluminum to atmospheric, chemical or mechanical influences is given in the Montieur scientific. The inventor says that the addition of a little tungsten to the pure aluminum or its alloys communicates a remarkable resistance to the action of cold or hot water, salt water, and other reagents. When the proportion of tungsten is sufficient, the alloys form also the resistance to traction and tension. The proportion of tungsten can be varied within extremely wide limits, according to the composition and nature of the alloy, and according to the usage for which it is destined. The tungsten can be added, alloyed with other metals; still the most advantageous way consists in adding the tungsten before the aluminum is melted.

CURIOUS LAWS OF OPTICS.

The Zebra's Stripes Make It Visible 20 Days.
Almost every writer who treats of the colors of animals refers to Galton's observations that in the bright sunlight of an African night zebras are practically invisible even at a short distance; but there can be no doubt that their peculiar striped appearance is also of great protective value in broad daylight. Says a correspondent of London's Standard: "On a recent zebra hunt near Cradock, in which I took part, several members of our party commented on the difficulty of seeing zebras even at moderate distances although there was nothing to hide them. The black and white stripes blending so completely that the animals assume a dark brown appearance quite in harmony with the general color of the locality in which they were found, and in which, for instance, Rooi Rebok (Pelecap-revolant) is also well protected on account of its peculiar brownish coat."

A member of our party, who on another occasion gave proof that he is possessed of excellent eyesight, and who has frequently hunted in similar localities, saw a zebra which was wounded in one of the front legs at a distance of about 400 yards, and he was able to say he mistook it for a baboon. In a letter which I received from him a few days ago, he said: "It galloped like a baboon from me, and I could only see that the color was grayish brown. At about 600 yards from me it ran to a little knoll, and mounting the highest rock, drew its body together just as a baboon does when its four feet are all together on the summit of a little rock." His remark as to the grayish brown color of the animal is the more valuable, as I believe this gentleman, Mr. Wrench, A. R. M. of Cradock, is quite unprejudiced. In my own letters to him, which drew forth these remarks, I had only asked him for the distance at which he saw the zebra, and I did not ask him how it was that he mistook a black and white zebra for a brown baboon on a perfectly clear South African day."

My own observations also show that the stripes of the zebra are of protective value. Riding along a slope, I suddenly saw four zebras within 100 yards above me. They were galloping down the hill, but stopped when they caught sight of me, and as soon as they stopped I saw their stripes pretty distinctly. After I had fired and wounded one of them they started on again, galloping down the hill around me in a semi-circle at a distance of about seven yards. At this time they presented a dull brown appearance, no stripes being visible, although I had my attention fixed on this point. They disappeared beyond a ridge, went down a little valley, and I heard afterward they ascended the next slope, which was not more than 1,500 yards away from where I stood with a native servant. Yet even this lynx-eyed native could not see them going up this slope. They had vanished from us.

Perhaps it may interest some of your readers that zebras are at it fairly plentiful on the rugged hills west of Cradock. A troop of forty-one animals was seen on the very ground over which we hunted a short time before we arrived. Our party saw eleven in two days, but I believe three were seen on two if not three different occasions. This would reduce their number to eight if not five. They are protected by government and also by farmers themselves. I am afraid that in spite of that their days are numbered. They are said to be very destructive to wire fences and as the enclosing of farms with wire fences is steadily on the increase in this colony, many a farmer will have, though perhaps reluctantly and in defiance of the law, to take up his gun and clear them off his property.

There will then probably be an outcry by the people who know the difficulties of South African farming only from books written by travelers who hurry through South Africa in a first-class railway carriage; but those who really know South Africa well will say that it is a great, great pity; but it cannot be helped unless the government provides speedily an abate for these and other animals threatened with extinction. The first step in the right direction would perhaps be the establishment of a government zoological garden, but I hope others who are more competent than I will stir the people of Cape Colony up before it is too late so that something more than mere game laws may be done to preserve them.

Vote the straight Republican ticket this fall from President to Coroner. Then you will not make any mistake.

No Republican should fail to register and vote this fall. That ticket is all right National, State and county.

Catarrh in the head is a constitutional disease, and requires a constitutional remedy like Hood's Sarsaparil; to effect a cure.

PORT TOWNSEND, Wash.—Judge W. H. Calkins, formerly of Indiana, has received a letter from Judge Walter Q. Gresham saying the statements that he would vote the democrat ticket and take the stump against Harrison were made wholly without his authority. "They are unauthorised and purely gratuitous," he adds.

The dance given at the Opera House Friday night was well attended and with good music, and management everybody present was pleased.

We express no wild boast when we say that the indications are favorable for the election of the entire Republican county ticket; but we want them to "get there with large majority."

The men stopped work on the well being drilled for Mr. Nicholson Friday. He did not succeed in getting a flowing well, but has a first-class one for pumping. We understand that he will put up a wind-mill with which to raise the water.

John Wanamaker's life is insured for exactly $1,500,000. When the postmaster general first took the public into his confidence on the subject the insurance was something less than a million, but he has been adding to it little by little every year since.

The board of Supervisors of Calhoun county passed the following resolution by a vote of 29 to 3: "All prisoners sentenced to the county jail for vagrancy shall be compelled to perform hard labor, under the direction of the sheriff during their term of imprisonment."

Persons familiar with the scriptures will remember a statement to the effect that a man cannot serve two masters, but by running his opinion plant with day and night shifts Attorney-General and Candidate Ellis appears to be keeping his democrat and populist duties pretty well balanced considering all the difficulties of so delicate a situation.—Tribune.

The Alger county Republicans have nominated the following ticket: Sheriff, Patrick Moore; probate judge, Hon. J. W. Balknap; clerk and register or deeds, August Bogren; treasurer, Chauncey C. Brown; prosecuting attorney and circuit court commissioner, Hon. H. B. Freeman; surveyor, Ira B. Weller; coroners, Edward Parrett and D. M. Parker.

Gen. Alger has been in Kansas, talking to "the old boys." From his speech at Kansas City we quote a paragraph: "Comrades, not a single one of those who criticise you thus can be found in the ranks of the Republican party. Your friends are there, your enemies are without, and when you act with those who are opposing your interests you are simply dealing a hand to the enemy."

The rector and curate at St Martin's Episcopal church, Montreal, have preached sermons denouncing members of the choir for misbehavior during divine service. The rector said that one of the worst offenders was a lady communicant whose behavior had been such that he would in future refuse to administer the communion to her unless amendments were made. This would also apply to others should they not take warning.

The Man Who Invented Lucifer Matches Got No Patent.

It is not known that it is to Isaac Holden, member of Parliament, that we owe the invention of the lucifer match. "In the morning I used to get up at 4 o'clock to pursue my studies," he said, "and I used at that time the flint and steel, which was a very great inconvenience. "Of course I knew the explosive material that was necessary to produce instantaneous light, but it was very difficult to obtain a light on wood by that material, and the idea occurred to me put sulphur under the explosive mixture. I did that, and showed it in my lecture on chemistry, a course of which I was delivering at a large academy."

"There was a young man in the room whose father was a chemist in London, and he immediately wrote to his father about it, and shortly after lucifer matches were issued to the world. I was urged to go and take out a patent immediately, but I thought it so small a matter and cost me so little labor that I did not think it proper to get a patent.—From the Pall Mall Gazette.

WEEKLY PIONEER.

Senator Murray's Out.
The former Senator. Don't this discuss a candidate for re-election; you;
the Democratic party succeeded him on the ballot at the Ecana convention, and he became satisfied that his temperance principles were in opposition to the wishes of the leaders of that party, and he came out in the Mining Journal acknowledging his withdrawal from that party and declaring that henceforth he will act with the Prohibitionists.
Show us copy this letter.

To the Editor of the Mining Journal.
In the editorial columns of today's issue of your paper you ask where is Senator Sharp's "and
"and is he trying to fool?" I desire you to tell me where I am "and," and what I have done so I trust you will let that I am "trying to fool" no one.
That I have done with the Democratic party, as stated in the letter to which you refer, I still say, and that henceforth I am a prohibitionist and will vote the prohibition ticket this fall. I still avow, but now, having allowed my name to go before the recent convention at Ecana and thereby implicitly agreed to abide by the decision of that convention and support the nominee, I shall do it.
In voting for a democrat under such circumstances I consider myself no more a democrat than is a Republican.
A democrat because he votes for one democrat, or even two, for that matter. Now this is my position. You may say it is incompetent and perhaps it is, but this is where I am "and"
and where I shall be on election day.
GEO. W. SHARP.

Treason in Canada.
Lieut. MacDonald, the Canadian soldier who talked annexation in Boston, has been dismissed from the queen's service for that offense, and a government organ, the Toronto World, announces as by authority that any agitation of the subject in Canada, any talk of annexation, will be treated as disloyalty and treason and bring on civil war! That was the tone that the representatives of the British crown and connection took some 100 years or more ago in this country. It worked disastrously. Haven't they learned anything in 100 years? The advantages of annexation will probably result in the memorable words of the great revolutionary orator, "If this be treason make the most of it."
Journal.

The annual report of Maj-Gen. Schell,
U. S. A., says the state of discipline and military instruction throughout the army is highly satisfactory;
he earnestly recommends that regular troops and state militia be supplied with improved small-arms; urges that no lapse be allowed in the appropriation for sea-coast defenses; urges the passage of pending legislation providing for reorganization of the artillery into seven regiments, and the reorganization of the infantry arm, so that each regiment shall consist of two or three small battalions. The post schools, he declares, have failed to reach the high standard desired. The national guards are better disciplined and more reliable than ever.

Invention in Belgium.
Belgium has furnished many unique inventions, and in that country it seems necessary only to possess an idea in order to get it patented, no matter whether it be practical or useless. The year 1875 was particularly prolific in the latter kind.
During that year a Belgian patented an automatic elevator for elevating the host during the Roman Catholic service. The elevator is under the complete control of a priest or acolyte.—New York

What He Saw.
"I had always heard that there were no snakes in Ireland," remarked Twynn, "so I determined to prove it by going there and drinking whiskey ad libitum."
"Well," replied Triplett, "what was the result? Did you see snakes?"
"No; I saw green rats with bright red tails."—Truth.

Church Belle.
The introduction of bells into churches is usually attributed to Saint Paulinus, bishop of Nola in Campania (400 A. D.). Their use in churches and monasteries soon spread through Christendom. They were introduced into France about 550, and Benedict, abbot of Wearmouth, brought one from Italy into England about 680.

THE SWINGING GATE.
The twilight is full of sadness,
And the wind in its coat of gray
Sings a low, wailing, low, wailing,
And wails for the gates of the day.
Down on the feet of the garden
The gates are swinging slow,
As if in a dream, or a dream,
When passing the day.
And it seems to me, in my waking,
They are not of my waking day,
That will find their way to my threshold
And pass to the gate.
O my, do you bring good tidings,
Of the morning and the day,
Of the morning and the day,
Of future grief and care!
The gate swings slowly, slowly,
And the shutters creak and start;
I sit in the glowing lamp light,
But a shadow fills my heart.

THE CASTAWAYS.
On a December morning in the year 1883, a small steamer, homeward bound from a New Zealand port, was approaching the meridian of the Horn, but on a parallel more southerly than that in which the custom of New Zealanders to take in rounding that stormy, ice-circling desolate and most inhospitable all headlands.
December in those distant regions is mid-summer, and the weather of that morning was as fair and still as a breezy April day in this country, but the swell of the vast tract of ocean ran ceaselessly—reminiscent respirations of a giant whose conflict with the heavens is eternal, and whose breathing pauses are very few and far between. Indeed, over this long, dark blue, westerly swell the great metal fabric went sweeping in long, floating, launching courtesies, whitening the water astern of her with a mill of wake.
The chief officer was on the bridge; the first breakfast bell had rung and the captain, smart as a naval officer in buttons and lace trimmings, quitted the chart room and joined the mate to take a look around before going below. This skipper was a man of eagle sight, and instantly on directing his eyes over the ship's bow he exclaimed: "What is that black object yonder?"
The chief mate peered and the captain leveled a telescope.
"A ship's boat," said he, "and seemingly full of people."
The boat, when sighted, was some three or four miles distant, and the speed of the steamship was about thirteen knots. In a few minutes the alarm in the engine room rang its reverberatory warning, sending a little thrill of wonder throughout the ship so rarely is that telegraph handled on the high seas.
"I count eight men, sir," cried the chief mate, with a binocular glass at his eye.
Again the engine room alarm rang out, the pulsing that for days had been ceaselessly throbbing through the long fabric ingutted, and in a few minutes to another summons of the metal tongue below coaxed, and the great steamship floated along to her own impetus slowly "til the boat was within the loss of a biscuit of the bow, with the passengers crowding to the side, and sailors and waiters and stevedore folk blackening the rail forward.
The occupants of the boat consisted of eight wild, hairy, voracious scoundrels of men, dressed in divers fashions—Scotch caps, sea boots, toll-worm monkey jackets, and the like.
"Hout ahoy!" hailed the captain, as she slowly rounded alongside. "What is wrong with you?"
A fellow standing up in the stern sheets cried back in a strong Yankee accent:
"For God's sake, sir, take us aboard! Our water's almost given out, and there's nothing left to eat."
"Look out for the end of a line," bawled the captain. "Are you strong enough to get aboard without help?"
"Aye, sir, we'll manage it."
A rope was thrown, and one after another the fellows came swinging and scraping and scrambling up the clews side of the steamship. The passengers crowded around and gazed at them with curiosity and pity. Their sympathetic eyes seemed to find famine countenances that stared back at them through mists of hair.
"We must let your boat go," said the captain.
"Can't help it, sir; thankful enough to be here I reckon," answered the fellow who had called from the stern sheets and who acted as spokesman.
"Anything belonging to you to come out?"
"Nothing by the eternal. Let her go, sir. If sailors' sea blessings can freight a craft she ain't going to float long."
The boat was sent adrift, the engine bell rang out, once more the great mail steamer was thrashing over the long, tall wave of Cape Horn swell.
"How came you into this mess?" inquired the captain.
The man who had spoken before made answer:
"We're all that's left of the crew of the Boston bark. George Washington. She was a whaler, one hundred and eighty-four days out. It were four days ago, I was the first to smelt for some while arter two o'clock in the middle watch."

"I wanted ten minutes to a six-balls," exclaimed a man, and a general, energetic, hairy sea fellow followed the interruption.
"There was a tarantula ugly sea creature the other 'eull is what heur you 'firs. I gave the alarm and all hands turned to with hose and buckets. But there was a deal of oil in the hold, and the ship's planks was slick with grease, and the crew 'ave save us so chances. By ten o'clock in the morning the flames had burst through and was shooting up mast high, and then we calculated it was time to look to the boats."
The crew stood listening with hard, solid leathery faces generally gazing with steadfast eyes at the speaker, but sometimes glancing askant at the captain and the crowd of others which stood around.
"There was a tarantula ugly sea creature running the man went on, 'and the whole wreck being deserted, the ship had fallen off and lay in the trough, and the lowering of the stern boats, 'whatsomever though they was that the handling was 'ere cost our company of twenty-eight souls the loss of all hands, saving them as stand afore ya."
"A had job! A measly, crool, bad job!" here broke in a long-jawed man, whose brow and eyes were almost unaccounted by a quantity of coarse red hair.
"Well, us eight men got away in the boat," proceeded the spokesman, "bringing along with us nothin' but a small bag of bread 'and about six gallons of fresh water. We've been waiting about since Tuesday, and now, the Lord be praised, here we be with a chance of getting something to eat, and what's more pleasurable still to our feelings the opportunity of comfortably turning in."
A murmur of pity among the passengers, several of whom were ladies, and there was more than one somewhat loud whisper to the effect that the captain ought really to send the poor creatures forward at once to get some breakfast instead of holding them starving and dry with thirst to talk. The eagle-eyed skipper, however, asked several questions before dismissing them.
"Since, then, by their own confession, the fire got that plenty time to escape from the bark how was it they had her so ill-provisioned as they represented?"
This was most satisfactorily accounted for. Other inquiries of a like nature were answered to, with sincerity and intelligence. Every sentence that one or another of them let fall was corroborated by the rest. Their tale of suffering, indeed, in the open boat was almost harrowing, and the captain could make a good deal of sympathy that his voice had taken, ordered them to go forward, adding that after a good hot meal had been served them they might turn in and sleep for the rest of the day whenever they could make a bed.
At the breakfast in the saloon, nothing was talked about but the American whaler that had been consumed by fire, the dreadful drowning of some two-thirds of her crew and the miraculous deliverance of the survivors from the inexorable perils and horrors of an open boat in the solitude of the stormiest part of ocean the wide world over. A benevolent gentleman proposed a subscription. Before the luncheon bell sounded, fifty pounds sterling had been collected. The incident was a break in the monotony, and when the eight men reappeared on deck during the afternoon they were promptly approached by the passengers with offers of food to rectify again and yet again their melancholy story of maritime disaster.
On the morning of the third day following the date of this rescue a ship was sighted almost directly in the face with the vessel's course. As she was neared she was seen to be rigged with stumpy Cape Horn topgallant masts; she was also under very easy canvas, which gave her a very short handed look in that quiet sea. Great wooden davits overhung her sides, from which dangled a number of boats. She presented a very grim, worn aspect, and had manifestly kept the sea for months. It was observed by the chief officer standing on the bridge of the steamer that the eight rescued men, who were looking at the sail ahead, along with some of the crew and stevedore passengers, disclosed several symptoms of unconsciousness and slight agitation. Suddenly the stripes and stars which the stars inverted, were run aloft to the peak end—a signal of distress. The engines were slowed and the steamer's head put so as to pass the vessel within a certain distance. A man aboard the bark stood in the mizen rigging.
"Steamer ahoy!" he roared.
"Hello!"
"I have lost a boat and eight of my men. Have you seen anything of her?"
The captain, who had gained the bridge, lifted his hand.
"Bark ahoy!" he cried. "What bark is that?"
"The George Washington, whaler, of Boston, one hundred and eighty-four days out. The captain of the steamship concealed a sour grin.

"Slow came you to lose your boat and the men?"
"They stole her one middle watch and sailed away from the ship."
"The captain of the steamship laughed."
"We have your men safe here," he shouted; "and I learn that you are not harmed down to the water's edge, and that the rest of your crew were safe, considering that they are preserved from a boat that you shall have your sailors."—W. Clark Russell in Wit and Wisdom.

MAY BE BROKEN EARLY.
Ship's Propellers Disabled by Tremor Causes—Correction in Water.
The propeller of a steamer is an insignificant object compared with the huge body it propels against the combined forces of wave and wind, but the Brooklyn Eagle says they come to grief frequently in a variety of ways. A few days ago the red steamer Venezuela, in a calm sea, with but a breath of wind, almost suddenly lost one blade of her screw, just as suddenly and with as little cause or notice as overripe fruit drops from its parent bush. Around the dry docks are numbers of rigid propellers, all in one stage or another of dilapidation. Some are cast in the solid, that is to say, the hub through which the shaft passes and the fans which extend from it are one solid casting. Others are built, or cast, rather in sections; the hub is one and each fan or blade is another, which fits into bases made for them in the hub, where they are screwed on by huge bolts that are set in the hub casting. Where one fan or blade is broken it is easily replaced, as the makers retain the molds of all wheels or propellers, as they are indifferently called, which they cast. Then the entire wheel is not rendered useless, as in the case when a solid cast propeller is broken. The treasure would be lost. It is extraordinary to see the proportion of vessels that arrive having received some damage to their propellers. Occasionally damage is done by the shaft's racing, as it is technically called. That is caused by the steamship plunging ahead into the trough of a big sea and so elevating the stern and the propeller that it is completely out of water, and being suddenly rid of resisting the engine warms up so that instead of working ordinary engine will do upon a driving belt slips off or breaks. Occasionally a propeller is broken by striking floating logs or ice rarely by striking a whale or large fish, when it is much the worse for the blow.
But there is one curious fact always noticeable about propellers; that is that the extremities of blades are eaten away as though by some corrosive acid. They are pierced with holes of greater or lesser depth, which weaken the points of the fans so that they snap off. These corrosions are said to be caused by the action of the water, but it seems strange that the wearing should take the form of honing, so that instead of being blunt, the tip of the blade is struck by the water might be supposed to do. Recently screws or propellers are made of different combinations of brass and other metals especially for steam yachts, and are very costly. A short time ago Pierpont Morgan's yacht struck a rock in the sound. The force of the blow smashed one blade clean off, although fastened on by eight or ten two-inch bolts secured by massive nuts, and the second blade was curled up by the blow just like a sheet of lead. This wheel was only a three-bladed one, and yet it cost the comparatively enormous sum of $2,800. It was made of a composition metal resembling brass in color, called Myanese-bronze. In large ocean steamships, if the propellers are not of one solid casting, it is usual to cover the nut and bolt points which fasten the fans to the hub with a compound. This is so tenacious and becomes so hard when once set that it rarely breaks until its removal becomes necessary, when it gives the workman a hard tussle to remove it.

Curley's Joke.
There is a good story of George William Curley, which seems never to have been published. He was lecturing on a Buffalo stage once, when suddenly a heavy rope somehow broke loose from its moorings in the flies above and dropped with a tremendous thud to the floor behind the speaker. Mr. Curley looked around in mild surprise to see what had happened; then turning to the alarmed audience again, said, with a twinkle in his eye: "Ah, that must have been the thread of my discourse." Somebody on the front row caught the joke first and broke out into a roar of laughter from the whole house. It was a good many minutes before the thread of that discourse could be resumed.

Squirrel Wit.
The attribute of reason is often denied to all creatures except man; but a correspondent recently observed a chipmunk displaying a degree of intelligence that seemed to exceed anything properly covered by the word instinct.
I was visiting a farmer and had gone with him to the middle of a field, where he was planting corn. A mischievous horse in the adjoining pasture attempted to get some of the seed corn, and in reaching over, the fence for that purpose overturned a bag of seed.
We hurried to the spot and found that a chipmunk had already begun to gather the scattered grains. He was very busy, and his conduct showed that he understood the situation thoroughly. The treasure would be within his reach for a very short time; so instead of filling his pouches and hurrying to his burrow, he sat about hiding as much as possible of the corn within a few yards of where it had been spilled.
A piece of bark, a chip, or a soil served as a temporary hiding place, and in a short time he had gathered all the grain that the farmer could not conveniently collect, and began to transport it to his permanent granary. I noticed several places where he had put a mouthful, and found afterward that he did not overlook a morsel when removing the spoil to his store-house.

A Perfect Bear.

Many a man of suave and courtly presence, of genial disposition, open and generous in his estimate of men and things, becomes scorned, disappointed and makes a failure in life, because at the critical moment his stomach troubles and his digestion fail at a time when he should be ready to enjoy life with the keenest zest. All this annoyance and trouble he could avoid if he would but pay some slight attention to the laws of health. When he is attacked with indigestion or afflicted with constipation let him attend to it at once. Get a box of the laxative Gum Drops and take them regularly. If the constipation be of long standing and obstinate he should take these gum drops as going to bed for several nights in succession. He will find that they will restore his digestive organs to their natural condition. These gum drops are gentle but they will act without giving the slightest trouble. A box of any quantity contains 10 cents, the large boxes are 25 cents. Get them of any dealer.

OUR ST. LOUIS LETTER.

A Convention of Skilled Detectives—A Metropolitan City—Singing at the World's Fair.

St. Louis, Oct. 13.—There was a popular gathering at the office of the Chief of Police this week. Seventeen detectives, representing every one of the large cities of the United States, were present and talked from noon to six each other. They were exchanging descriptions of criminals whom they had arrested for various offenses. They had been in St. Louis watching the parade in order to enjoy the carnival. All large cities exchange detectives this way in times of great convulsions of people. This year the detectives from abroad have found some of their own. Chief Desmond, of the Detective Bureau, says that it is because the negroes are giving St. Louis a wide berth during the Fall Festival, by desiring how well the town is policed. "The proof of this is the very few arrests that we have had to make of thieves who had robbed strangers," says the Chief. "There have been no robberies on the streets, but a number of pockets have been picked up. When you consider the very large number of people there have been in the city, and how many of them were out late at night, in the rough parts of town, sight-seeing, the showing is something remarkable."

This is a most cosmopolitan city. When it was announced a few weeks ago that there would be a meeting of Swedes, Danes and Norwegians to arrange for a celebration on the evening of Oct. 21, of the discovery of America, it was expected that a hundred men, perhaps, would respond. To the surprise of everyone, the hall selected for the meeting was unable to hold the crowd that came. There were several thousand of them. Their celebration will be mainly speech-making in the three languages. Nearly all of them are of good circumstances. They are mostly mechanics, but there are many clerks among them, and few laborers.

Most of the multitude who were in the city last week and this went to the parks and feasted their eyes on the cres of green sward in them. The park commissioner is now planning to make these broad expanses bloom with flowers to the visitors who come to see the greatest festival season of all next year. Every level place in the park will be planted with shrubbery and flowers in the form of Columbian mottoes and inscriptions of welcome, which will appear next spring and all through the summer and autumn of various colors. In addition to the inscriptions, in places where the space will permit it there will blossom designs illustrating the great discovery.

From the score of strong singing societies of this city, the Choral Symphony association each year picks about five hundred of the best voices, and drills them for a series of half-dozen concerts, which take place in the fall. The fame of the city as a training school for good voices is so widespread that the director of the society, Mr. Joseph Otten, has been asked by the world's fair managers to send them a complete chorus for the opening exercises in June. The society has decided to put 200 voices in training at once. They will make a thunderous chorus of themselves.

HIS LAST BATTLE.

The Old Dog Whipped the Mink and Then Lay Down and Died.

About the middle of last May Farmer Jeremiah J. Pomeroy and his hired men were laying a stone wall within a few feet of Cranberry Creek on Mr. Pomeroy's farm near Soranton, Penn. Josh, an old black and white mongrel dog was with them. Mr. Pomeroy had raised Josh from a pup and the old dog would have been 15 years old last day. Josh was still lame, but his eyes were bright, his snout was keen, and he had as great desire to slay snakes and small animals as he had when he was young.

He was lying on the grass in the sun near the man were working, relates the New York Sun, when all of a sudden he spied a mink and dashed at it. The mink darted into a heap of stones that had been piled on the bank of the creek, and the old dog pawed in the stones and whined. The man pulled the stones apart and out popped the mink. Josh nabbed it lugged it a couple of rods from the creek and laid it savagely. His teeth were so blunt and smooth that he could bite through the mink's hide, and while he was shaking the mink it bit him in the nostrils and jaws till the blood came. The hired men wanted to help the old dog, but Mr. Pomeroy ordered them to let him alone.

Josh lost his hold on the mink a number of times, but he repeatedly snapped it up, and whenever he did so the mink tore a slit in his nostrils. As they fought the mink worked its way toward the creek, but the old dog made the battle so lively that its progress was slow. The mink wanted to let alone but Josh continued to tackle it fiercely, although his jaws and nostrils were covered with his own blood. He couldn't keep a tooth-hold long enough to break the mink's back, and he hadn't badly crippled the little animal when his hired men again offered to kill the mink. Mr. Pomeroy told them to stand back. He had faith in the old dog's strategy, and he wouldn't say any more. The mink was then within three or four feet of the creek and the dog was still trying to get a death hold on the slippery little fellow, but in vain.

Soon the mink got to the edge of the bank just above the stone heap. When Josh saw that his spunky little antagonist was about to seek safety in the heap of stones, he gave a shrill yelp of anger, sprang upon the mink and caught it by the back. The mink jumped and curled up and bit the dog's jaw, but Josh didn't offer to shake it then. He hobbled down and round the heap of stones to the edge of the stream, while the struggling mink tore at his nose at every step. Josh wedged it up to his belly, and then he shook the mink violently for a moment and drove it under the water where he held it longer than he had shaken it. Then he raised it to the surface, shook it to him. Never was a greater bit. Hearty preserved and grace retained can never lose their charm or their empire. The dainty but will maintain the blooming rose, and old age will find her blessing the day she first uses "Mother's Friend." Sold by all druggists.

When Josh saw that it was lifeless he waded out, placed the mink on the grass near Mr. Pomeroy's feet, and wagged his tail when Mr. Pomeroy praised him. He licked the blood from his nose, and lay down with his paws on the dead animal. In a few minutes the old dog had a spasmodic and stretched out as dead as the mink was. The mink's hide hadn't been torn at all by the dog's teeth.

AN IMPORTANT CHANGE.

Trousers Made in Germany and Those Evolved in Paris. A gentleman, who believed that an important extent clothes made the man, even when the man is a royal personage, visited the Comte de Chambord at Frezardore, a few years ago. The Comte de Chambord was the grandson of Charles the Tenth, the last Bourbon King of France, and the French Royalists called him Henri the Fifth and hope to see him on the throne in 1870. To restore him to the throne. The marquis of whom this story is told was a Parisian, a man of fashion, and an ardent Royalist, says the Argonaut. The Comte de Chambord was glad of an opportunity to talk over political affairs with a man who must know what was going on in Paris, so after a few minutes' chat he said: "Marquis, it is not often that I have a chance to talk with any one so well informed on the signs of the times in Paris as yourself. Now, in case I return to Paris, what would you advise me to do?" He wanted for a bit of profound political philosophy. The marquis looked at "Henri the Fifth" and hesitated. Should he venture on a great liberty? But his advice had been asked: as a loyal subject, he would give it frankly. "Sire—monsieur," he stammered, "I think you had better give up your German tailor and have your trousers made in Paris." "My trousers!" cried the Comte, "pardon me, but your trousers are out of fashion."

THE SEMI-WEEKLY PIONEER

The Y. P. S. C. R. of the Baptist church will give a tea social at the residence of Aaron Quirk Wednesday evening, October 26. All are invited to go and take your tea with us.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of the Presbyterian Church will meet in the church parlors at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon, October 28. From 5 to 8 a conuadrum tea will be served, to which all are cordially invited.

Now for Victory.

The Republican of Schoolcraft county presents this fall one of the cleanest tickets ever formulated in the county. Every candidate capable and will attend to all our business carefully and honestly, if elected. Every man is a tower of strength unto himself. All that remains to be done now for the Republicans is to get out and work. The county is naturally Republican, and our enemies only succeed in carrying the elections through republican inactivity. Let us see to it that they do score anything but defeat this fall.

"It is an open question now which of the two great parties will poll the largest colored vote," says the New York World. There is never any question as to which of the two parties will count the largest colored vote for their side.

Highest of all in Leavening Power.—Latest U. S. Gov't Report

Royal Baking Powder
ABSOLUTELY PURE

Sorry to hear that our friend Putnam is ill.
Mr. Nicholson, the contractor, is acting along nicely with that track for the Trotting Park Association.

The attempt made in behalf of our candidate to smirch the character of an opponent will not pan-out well this fall. The candid voter is not anxious for slander or slime. Stop it.

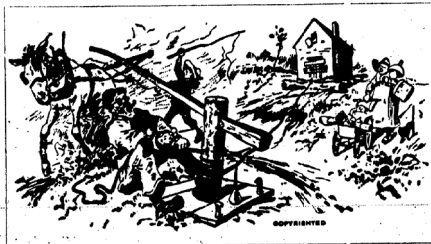

Peaslee & Douglas have sold the Iron Mountain Tribune to a Company, and retired. Tom A. Hanna who has been in charge of the editorial management of that paper for months, and has put it where it is now, at the head of Upper Peninsula Journalism, takes the same position in the new Company. The Phoenix certainly congratulates all hands.

An editor of one of our exchanges seems to be laboring under a sore dilemma, as the following would indicate: "Last Saturday as we strolled on the streets of this beautiful village we could not help but shudder for ourselves as we observed the ladies, God bless them, as they passed by. A year or two since they captured our shirts: collars, and ties, now they have got our suspenders, and perhaps before the season is over they will have our breeches, and then, oh, Lord what shall we do?"

A clergyman in Oxford has invited the men who frequent the rivers on Sundays to come to church in their boating flannels. Hitherto such costumes had been frowned upon and the boatmen had not gone to church.

OUR STOCK IS BOUND TO GO.

WE BOUGHT CHEAP

WE SELL CHEAP

There is nothing like a slim Figure to put it in motion. We have laid in a Very Large Stock of Seasonable Goods.

A lot of goods turned quick at a close margin is plenty good enough for us. Now is the time to buy A No. 1 Goods (none better on earth) at a very close to Manufacturers prices.

WE DO BUSINESS TO LIVE; WE LIVE TO DO BUSINESS.

And the way to do it is to offer the very best grade of goods at prices that make them jump. Commencing right now we are going to give bargains to all comers. Until the goods are gone.

WHERE DO YOU COME IN ON THIS BIG CHANCE?

There must be some thing you need in our line. There can't be a better time or place to buy it as at

M. P. WINKELMAN'S Dry Goods Store.

Men's and Boys Clothing, Gentlemen's Furnishing Goods, Boots and Shoes, Hats and Caps, etc., always the Cheapest.

Anniversary Meeting.
The celebration of the first anniversary of the Scandinavian Temperance Society at the Scandinavian Baptist Church Saturday evening, was one of the pleasant events of the season, and the church was crowded with people. The exercises began with music, furnished by a choir of splendid voices and accompanied by both the organ and guitars. Pastor Johnson delivered the address of the evening which was well received; the solos sang, and those played on cornets were loudly applauded; fraternal greetings were extended by representatives from a like society at Escanaba, and the G. L. of Lake Superior. Most of the speeches, recitations and singing were given in the Swedish tongue still all were of interest to the English-speaking persons present. The whole affair wound up by partaking of a magnificent supper spread in the session room. This society, now only one year old, has accomplished a vast amount of good in Manistiquie. May it continue to prosper and double its numbers by the time it celebrates its second anniversary, one year hence.

A. C. Carpenter spoke at Seney last Saturday night to quite a large audience made up of Republicans and Democrats. They are noted there for giving every speaker that comes along a fair hearing.

Prof. Graves in Trouble.
The great head of the People's party in northern Michigan has struck a stump that is liable to cause him much trouble. It was a sharp thing to manipulate a People's convention here a month or so ago, by getting one Democrat to act as President, another as Secretary, and then on his own motion elect his brother-in-law a delegate to the State Convention and then go himself with the proxy in his pocket. That is the way it was reported to us; but that kind of scheming led him into trouble when it came to certifying to candidates nominated for office, as the following telegram shows:
CROBOYGAN, Mich., Oct. 22.—Prof. Graves of Petoskey, was brought here this morning by the sheriff and placed under bonds of $500 for examination at 3 p. m. charged with fraudulently certifying to the nomination of P. B. Wachtel on the People's ticket for representative. Rich developments are expected. The case will probably go to the supreme court unless a compromise be effected.

A New York paper says that the preparations for the production of "The Lady or the Tiger" in that city are elaborate and promising. This looks very much as if Mrs. Cleveland would be present with her husband at the meeting in Saratoga Hall.

Another "serap" reported for last evening: several men brutally battered and scratched up. Poor business.

Catarrah in the Head
Is undoubtedly a disease of the blood, and as such only reliable blood purifier can effect a perfect cure. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the best blood-purifier, and it has cured many very severe cases of catarrah. It gives an appetite and builds up the whole system.

Hood's PILLS act especially upon the liver rousing it from torpidity to its natural action, cure constipation and assist digestion.

The electric current was applied to a drowned Scotoman the other day and on two applications restored him to life. He was two minutes under water. However true it may be that some men are not born to be drowned because they are certain to be behanged, it now looks as if those who are born to be drowned might be electrocuted also and revived.

Robert Bonner is determined to test thoroughly the merits of pneumatic tires. He has had a sulky built which has three pairs of pneumatic-tired wheels. One pair is 36 inches, the other 48, and the third 36 inches in diameter. He will try Maud S. in the sulky with the big wheels.

Marjorie has been puzzling over something for a long time, and finally she said: "Mamma, is it my flowers' fault of wild flowers, like tame animals is of wild animals?"
