LOCAL AND GENERAL NEWS

For Sale.
Any one wanting to buy some second hand furniture, a rag carpet and other necessary household articles will be sold cheap. Apply at this office.

How much better it would be to place convicts on the public highways to work, than to make them supplant honest workmen in the ordinary fields of industry.

Ask your dealer for Ben Hur or Record Breaker Cigars. They are the best on earth.

We sell and warrant every bottle of Beas Family Medicines. Geo. Chantler and City Drug Store.

Victoria Woodhull will remain in the United States if elected president; otherwise she'll return to England. Get your trunk packed Vic for you'll have to go.

If your hair is falling out or turning gray try Rogee's Hair Restorer. Sold and warranted by Geo. Chantler and City Drug Store.

Millions smoked annually—Geo. Moeb's & Co.'s Great Cigars. THEY ARE MADE ON THE CO.

Don't be fooled. See that the name "Beas" is on each box and bottle of Little Giant Pills as several unscrupulous dealers are getting up imitations. You can get these wonderful little pills of Geo. Chantler and City Drug Store.

Great call for laboring men all over the country and good wages are paid in honest money. A slight change from free trade times, when low wages were paid and the money of that day was subject to a heavy discount.

Welling & Thompson, the Oak street market men continue sell the finest of meats at a low price. If you want fresh lard, call on them.

"Prison Sock" agent Finn has a warm time of it in explaining his trouble with the Grayling man. Mutual explanations differ widely in conclusion. The verdict of the voters next Tuesday will be against Finn for Congressman from this district.

It is dreadful to have a dirty, yellow or greasy complexion. It is caused by a disordered liver, and can be relieved at once by a thorough use of Beas' Blood Purifier and Blood Maker. Sold and warranted by City Drug Store and the West Side Drugstore.

Democratic leaders show signs of weakening, and are directing their attention to the securing of power through state legislatures. In this district we can thwart their efforts by electing Flesheim and Taylor, and that is what will be done.

A few Good 7 per cent. Investments for sale at the Manistique Bank. In amounts from $500 up.

It is believed now that the steamer lost near South Manitowish Island is the large freighter W. L. Gilcher. She was one of the largest steamers on the lakes; an exact duplicate of the Western Reserve, that was recently lost on Lake Superior.

Sexual abuse! What is it? Let us tell you that it is one of the vilest, vilest, vilest and most effectual tooth washes on the market. Sold and warranted by City Drug Store and Geo. Chantler.

An Indiana girl born dumb got her speech about two weeks ago and enjoys it so much that they are now afraid she will talk herself to death. The strongest opiates fail to quiet her. That is not the case which the incessant talking of the Democratic candidate for vice president excites. His friends think he is in danger of talking everybody else to death.

Robe For Sale.
One of the best Buffalo Robes in the country for sale cheap. Call here and we will tell you where it can be found.

The laws of England hold that when a man has been proved guilty of murder no higher court can be appealed to in this world. The moment he is pronounced guilty no court or officer has the power to alter the judgment which is always death. In our country a man stands two trials for his life in nearly every instance, with a good show of imprisonment, followed by a conditional pardon.—St. Peter Journal.

We have a law for taxing dogs. Let it be enforced next season. Make that the rule and the assessor will not find a dog that anybody will claim.

Mr. Burnham, of Thompson, was in the city yesterday with a very unique fire kindler, of considerable merit. He will visit Manistique later in the season.

Everybody talks politics now; but there will be very little said about the matter one week hence; more than to ask how badly were the Democrats defeated?

Only two working days more before the final struggle. Republicans should look around and see if there is anything that can be done to advance the party interests.

Attention G. A. R.
Regular meeting of Geo. F. Fuller Post, No. 287, Department of Michigan, in the Sons of Veteran's Hall, Friday Nov. 11th.

D. P. KIMBALL, Com.

Eastern Star Meeting.
The O. E. S. hold their regular meeting this evening. Election and installation of officers. All officers are invited to be present.

ED. APFORD, Sec.

Pedro Party.
Wednesday evening a large party of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Miller Rose responded to their kind invitation to pass the evening hours in a social game of pedro. Seven tables were occupied and all seemed exceedingly happy. Just at the right time refreshments were served in good style and the playing resumed and kept up until near midnight. Miss Edna Tucker won first prize and Mrs. Draper took the last offered. All enjoyed the occasion and returned home voting many thanks to the host and hostess.

The votes are not yet in the box for county officers, but some people are already working up the spring campaign. Before beginning that gentlemen, we should take a short rest.

Mrs. J. B. Lewis arrived home Wednesday from Chicago. While there she bought a large invoice of Millinery and fancy goods, which are now arriving. She invites the ladies to call.

The steamers Fannie C. Hart and Hunter came neck and neck from the Beavers Tuesday afternoon. One cannot brag one bit over the other about speed. Both of them are fast boats.

Hon. J. W. McMahon, of Sault Ste. Marie will speak at Thompson to-morrow evening. Let there be a large turnout. The train will bring down the men from several of the camps in that vicinity.

Several have asked if we printed the tickets this year? We did not, and neither did we expect the job, as a majority of the board of commissioners are at present on the other side of the political fence from us.

Joseph Mason and family left here a few years ago for the west and settled there, are again in the land of the living, having arrived at Thompson Wednesday. We always thought that "Joe" would retrace his steps.

Our young friend, Charles Page, left yesterday for Ypsilanti, where he intends to put in another winter at school. Charlie has a host of friends that will be greatly pleased at his success in every undertaking in life.

Personal street corner discussions of political questions never result in good. Read and reflect over the situation and then settle all differences in your own mind on a principle that is to control your own vote and not another's.

It makes but little difference in a business way whether Carbaugh or Hixson is elected Prosecuting Attorney as they are partners. Carbaugh is a Republican and Hixson a Democrat. Of course Republicans should support Mr. Carbaugh.

J. H. Allison, the people's candidate for Sheriff is playing a very important part in this campaign. After the way the Democrats served him in their convention he certainly felt it a duty to be a candidate; and it looks as though he will lend German in the way of votes.

Thanks for a pleasant call from Father Sperlein, who came here last week and has taken charge of this parish for the Catholic Society. He is a native of Germany, but talks the English and French language fluently. That society can be congratulated over its acquisition. Mr. S. has taken hold of the work here backed up by a large amount of energy.

The celebration of Gloucester's 20th anniversary is a reminder that these events may happen in bucolic all over New England from this time on.

The more the conditions of our West and Southwestern country are studied the more apparent does it become that sound, practical agricultural education is a necessity.

There is a great deal of land, chiefly profitable for timber purposes, which exists in one state, and which ought to be taken possession of, by right of eminent domain.

Whether or no his generation revered the father for his sake, or for the sake of the Widow Curtis, he has a multitude of faithful admirers in this present generation.

The sinking of a sailing vessel by a fast steamer recently was no bit out of the fact that whenever on the high seas a collision is found to be inevitable, the fastest vessel always gets up all the speed it can for the purpose of cutting through the other.

Whether spending the day in the open air at active employment would be better or worse mentally for the prisoner we do not know, but we can have no doubt of its being better for his physical condition.

Thirty years ago we hated the sun. It might not touch with its rays the cheeks of our daughters nor the carpets of our parlors.

Much is said about the extinction of the buffalo being a national disgrace. Doubtless it was in the way it was accomplished, by a wholesale slaughter, wasteful of the portions that have since become valuable.

THAT'S THE WAY.

Just a little every day. That's the way. That's the way. That's the way.

THEIR HONEYMOON.

It was a perfect night. The silver moonlight flooded all the familiar landscape, bathing it in its soft depths of unatfathomable brightness.

Olivo and Janet had gone upstairs to their little room, and now sat upon the floor beside the low window looking out into the moonlight.

"Mother," they could hear the old man say, and there was a little tremble in his voice.

"I would be nice father," they could hear her answer, "but I guess we hadn't better think of it."

"That was a day never to be forgotten in all the country round."

"The minister who had married them was long since dead, but his son, a middle-aged dominik had been secured for the occasion."

"Congratulations and gifts were many." The bridegroom seemed scarcely to need the support of his handsomely engraved gold-headed cane.

"When the dinner was at last over, David pressed something into his father's hand—two tickets for the Western city in which his married son lived."

"Your trunk is packed and ready, and the train leaves at four o'clock, father," he said with characteristic straightforwardness.

"The other children gathered around and laughed joyfully at the bewilderment of the newly-wedded pair."

"It was that way," he said, "and the train leaves at four o'clock, father," he said with characteristic straightforwardness.

John and David were wrestling with their Sunday neckties and polishing their boots to the very highest possible shine.

Almost simultaneously Olivo's clear contralto and John's deep bass came mingling down the stairs.

"Dressing the bride," occupied perhaps an hour, and when at last the toilet was pronounced complete, the bride and groom were seated at the table.

"Mother, you don't realize how sweet and young you look! You have worn black so long!"

"Fifty years ago to-day," the old bride softly murmured, looking down at the thin circlet of gold that she had worn so long.

And as the train sped westward over the shining rails, the little old bride sat in quiet happiness at her husband's side and looked at the flying landscape.

And the bride made a soft response. "That's so father."

Then, there was a long and blessed silence as they journeyed on together.

Isn't She Lovely.

A very beautiful woman left a group with whom she had been talking, and as soon as she was out of ear-shot an enthusiastic girl observed, 'Isn't she perfectly lovely?'

'Well,' said her staunch little defender, 'how can she help knowing it when her mirror and every person she meets tell her so at least twenty times a day.'

'If she knows she's pretty then she must be vain,' said the bear in a 'that settles it' sort of tone which for a moment staggered the little champion.

'You are entirely wrong. It does not follow that one need not know how pretty or interesting they are in order to keep from going about with a superior air as though they were the only people fit to live.'

'The bear refused to be convinced, but we who heard the discussion wondered if the very pretty defender was not saying one word for the absent and two for her own charming self.'

The Manners of 'Society.'

These geese in stays and starch ('society' people) are ignorant of the true philosophy of good manners, which may be compressed into a single sentence: The secret of good manners is an entire lack of self-consciousness.

If all men were born with a proper perception of justice had manners could not exist. It may be somewhat vague, but the almost universal conception of justice is that it is the interest of the stronger, as Plato's sophist has it, and a moment's review of our codes of manners will convince one that this idea is at the bottom of them all.

For a Troublesome Cough. Take an ounce of licorice, a quarter of a pound of raisins, a seaspoonful of flaxseed and two quarts of water. SEA SERPENTS.

Such Monsters Existed in the Past, Why Not Now?

Scientists of all classes without regard to creed or school, fully believe in the existence upon the earth in past ages of various grotesque and monstrous beings. The bones of these creatures, their tracks and other substantial evidences of their being and doing in the fossiliferous age of the world's changes are preserved in the rocky pages of its history, and are so convincing as to put the matter beyond reasonable question.

There were creatures half fish and half lizard, and other creatures which showed the characteristics of both serpent and scorpion. Some had wings and were able to fly. Others were possessed of both feet and fins. They were in some cases wholly confined to the water and in others able to live both in water and on the land. Others there were that lived exclusively on the land and besides these there were gigantic birds.

All these creatures were constructed on a gigantic scale, says the New Orleans Picayune. There were dinosaurs which were able to bite off the trunks of good-sized saplings and to chew up the wood as if it were grass. There were sloths that could rest their hind legs on the earth and eat fifty feet above in the trees. There were cranes and pelicans that could catch and gobble up a six foot fish, while the snakes, the snake-lizards and the fish lizards were of monstrous size, and all have their gigantic bones preserved in museums and labeled with Greek names. There is no doubt of the existence of the fossils, and it is not difficult, with the aid of a vivid imagination, to portray the scenes in which the prehistoric creatures enacted their wonderful roles.

More than this, all the most ancient writers speak of monstrous beasts in the sea and on land, which men in the early ages were compelled to fight. Dragons, sphinxes, griffins and the like ravaged the land, while the Leviathan, the kraken and other terrible creatures dominated the sea. Doubtless there was some substantial ground for these statements, because those vast creatures whose bones we have found possibly still survived to fight with primitive man for the supremacy of our planet. Evidently man was victorious but it is yet not impossible that some of these enormous beasts may still survive in unexplored seas and regions. Occasionally they may come forth to astonish and alarm our race. But they are few in number or seldom show themselves to the gaze of men.

HIS FASHION IDEAL.

A Crank's Idea as to How a Woman should Dress.

'Talk about woman's close,' he was bleating discordantly in a know-it-all voice, 'I had my way. I'd have 'em lookin' sensible and not all kerfuffle-up with gawgaws. I'd just like to dress 'em 'cordin' to my notion.'

'You wouldn't let them wear trains to their dresses?' suggested one of his auditors. 'Not much! I wouldn't.'

'Nor corsets, eh?' 'No, sir; nor stiff-boned waists, cyother.'

'Suppose you tell us just how you would have them rig themselves out.' 'Suttenly, suttenly, I'd have 'em wear a broadcloth skirt and a loose jacket for comfort. Ain't that all right?'

'Go on.' 'Short-skirts to be tidy—just comin' to the tops of their shoes.' 'Yes, what kind of shoes?'

'Soft leather shoes, shaped like a human foot, sir, and flexible like a glove.'

'All right—and their hats?' 'Somethin' like a veil or a mantilly, but no sich styles as they wear now, you bet. And I'd have the hair hang in down their backs in a nice shiny braid.'

'There's a woman that dress likes that now,' said one of his listeners. 'Show one to me and I'll marry her ter-morrow.'

'I saw one just the other day, and that was her style to a dot.' 'What was she doin'?' 'Carrying baskets and moccasins on her head.' But the crank who knew how a woman should dress had suddenly disappeared.—Detroit Free Press.

First Taste of Shad.

Amor Stone lived 'inland' all his days and knew all there was to be known about pork and beef as articles of food. His acquaintance with the products of the sea, on the other hand, was very slight. Once, however, when at the seashore, he was introduced to shad, and asked how he liked it. 'Well,' said the old farmer, with a brave attempt at a smile, 'I calc'lated I shod, when I got kinder wanted to it, madder, but I doo seem 'get at it, ye know, consid'able like tryin' t' eat a paper of buttered plums'—Argonaut.

Well Meant.

Mr. Figz—Young man, what did you mean by telling your mother such an outrageous fib this afternoon? Tommy—I meant for her to believe it, but it 'pears like she didn't.

How to Vote.

There are persons who, not understanding the new method of voting, may feel timid about attempting it. It is simple, and easily understood. The following explanation and directions enable republicans to vote correctly.

WHERE TO GET THE BALLOT.

All ballots are printed by the public and when the voter goes to the polls, an election inspector will hand him one ballot. This ballot must be voted whole.

THE BOOTH.

Having got his ballot, the voter will go into one of the booths, or closets, where he will find a desk, some rubber stamps and an ink pad. On one end of this small stamp is an + and by pressing this end of the stamp first on the ink pad and then upon paper, it will mark an + upon the paper.

THE BALLOT.

The tickets of all parties are printed upon the ballot, side by side. The republican ticket may be known by the picture of President Harrison, and the words "republican ticket" at its head. A small square will be found underneath the picture.

HOW TO MARK.

In order that the inspectors may know which of the four tickets upon the ballot to count, the voter must mark his ticket. If he wishes to vote the "republican ticket" he should make an + with the stamp in the small square under President Harrison's picture, at the head of the ticket, thus: [ ] By so doing he indicates that he wants to vote the republican ticket and no other. If he should mark the heads of two tickets neither would be counted and he would lose his vote.

FOLDING THE BALLOT.

Upon the back of the ballot, in one corner are written the first letters of the name of one of the inspectors of election. The ballot must be so folded that no part of the face can be seen and so as to have these letters on the outside, so that they can be seen by the inspectors, that they may know it to be a genuine ballot. This is easily done by folding the bottom of ballot to the top, repeating the process until it is about two inches wide, and then folding the other way. This should be done in the booth.

DEPOSITING THE BALLOT.

After folding the ballot the voter goes out of the booth at the opposite side from which he entered, and hands his ballot to the inspector of election who puts it in the box in his presence.

RECAPITULATION.

1st. Get ballot from inspector of election.
 2d. Take it to the booth.
 3d. Mark the + at the head of Republican ticket with an +.
 4th. Fold the ballot so that the letters upon the back can be seen.
 5th. Give the ballot to the election inspector.

TAKE NOTICE.

Do not confuse the words ballot and ticket. The ballot means the paper furnished by the inspector. It contains all four tickets. The whole ballot must be voted. Only the ticket which is marked will be counted.—Charlotte Republican.

Safe For Harrison.

New York, Oct. 30.—Joseph H. Manley, member of the executive committee of the republican national committee, in an interview to-day spoke as follows regarding the electoral vote:

"We can count 216 electoral votes that may be regarded as sure for the republican ticket. The democrat managers, on the other hand, cannot safely count more than 143. While we do not indulge in any rain-dog chasing, and while we do not include in our 216 sure electoral votes a single vote from the South, there are out-side of West Virginia twenty-two votes in the South that cannot be given to Mr. Cleveland except by the grossest and most glaring and outrageous frauds."

Asked regarding New York, he said: "In the great Empire State of New York it would be folly to say that the republicans are absolutely certain of carrying it. If the republican vote is polled, and every effort will be made to poll it, New York will surely give its electoral vote to Mr. Harrison."

Children Need Sleep.

Children, until they are 12 or 13 years should have at least 10 hours sleep, 11 is better; until 18 or 19, nine hours is none too much, writes Mrs. Scovil in her valuable department, "Mothers' Corner," in the October Ladies Home Journal. In this country our children inherit nervous temperaments. No hygienic measure soothes, quiets and strengthens the nerves like plenty of sleep. Children should never be awakened in the morning. Yet the demands of household convenience and the claims of school make it necessary that they be out of bed at a certain hour, usually not later than seven. To make this possible, and give them their fair share of sleep so that they will be ready to waken of their own accord, they must be in bed between 8 and 10, according to their ages. If bedtime is made pleasant to them, as mother-love can make it, with a story, a little talk over the events of the day, with loving words ministrations, the hardship of banishment to bed will be robbed of most of its bitterness.

A writer in Printers' Ink says: "An advertisement in a local paper has an air of respectability which it cannot have in the national publications. It strikes hard into the local heart. Advertising appears to be a part of the town itself. The reader knows the paper as his father knew it. He is acquainted with the editor, the editor's wife. He reads everything in it that is written especially for his benefit."

A BARRICAD CONTRAST.

IN CONSEQUENCE OF thirty years' experience with Republican financial legislation, the Democratic party have the proud boast of being the only party which have a currency which was brought by law into existence to pay with gold. They have also a national bank system which has steadily grown in popular favor and under which a dollar has never been loaned to a note holder, and only the smallest fraction to depositors.

All these great policies have been accomplished without the aid of the Democratic party. The funding act of 1870, by which the rate of interest on the debt were changed by the conversion of all classes of national securities, was passed without a single Democratic vote in either house. The resumption act of 1875 was opposed by every Democrat in both houses. The national banking act was denounced as unconstitutional by the Democratic party during the war, and its locality to the system has not ceased to this day, when the repeal of the tax on state bank issues is deliberately proposed in its national platform. That party thirty years ago defended these state issues, although they were not secured, but no more have been throughout the country, were easily counterfeited and displaced greenbacks. It advocates a return to the same system now, and apparently from a deliberate preference for an inferior currency.

The Republican party stands for the principle of equal political rights throughout the Union. The Democratic party not only repudiated the doctrine which its representatives in congress voted against the constitutional amendments at the close of the war, but in its political practice it has continually followed the worst traditions of slavery in fomenting race prejudice and establishing minority rule.

The Republican party throughout its history has been fighting the battle of free labor. In the beginning it was a popular religion to prevent the extension of slavery to the territories, and subsequently it was a terrible battle with a slave owners' rebellion, but in the end it has been a prolonged campaign in the interest of American labor menaced with destructive and degrading competition from the labor of less prosperous and enlightened European states.

Since the first election of Lincoln 10,000,000 slaves have found homes and workshops in America, yet notwithstanding the immense addition to the working force of the nation there has been a gain of nearly 50 per cent. in the average rate of wages. That result could never have been accomplished without Republican legislation for internal improvements and the operation of the tariff laws, and above all without systematic protection of American labor employed in home industries. For this comprehensive national policy, which has not only converted the older eastern states into hives of manufacturing and filled the wild reaches of the west with the pulling huts and tire of industrial energy and American enterprise, but has also created the new south, with its boundless resources, credit is wholly to be given to the Republican party.

The Democratic party has never lost the impress of the domination of the slave power. A low tariff and free trade were the economic doctrines of the southern planters and were embodied in the Confederate constitution. The Democratic party has remained loyal to these malignant traditions, and its only recent success since Buchanan's election on a platform of "progressive free trade" lost no time in giving the signal for a tariff reform campaign, which, if successful, would leave American industry and labor without protection and support. The party stands today fully committed not only to the low tariff cause to which both Douglas and Breckenridge were pledged by the platforms of 1860, but also to the extravagant vagary of Calhounism that protection is unconstitutional. As it was the friend and ally of slavery, so also it is the irreconcilable foe of free labor.

The history of the two rival parties since Lincoln's first election offers a startling contrast between survivals of the worst and the best traditions. Equality of rights and sympathy for the masses of the common people were the leading principles of Jefferson. A latter day Democracy stands in the south for unequal rights and minority conspiracies and throughout the Union for a tariff policy by which American labor will be degraded to the European level. Jackson's great strength lay in his intense devotion to the principle of nationality, and in his abhorrence of sectionalism. A latter day Democracy, by the revival of the constitutional quibbling of Calhounism and by its persistent hostility to national policies, has repudiated his principles. What has been best in the tendencies of history has fallen into innocuous desuetude. What has been worst in the theories and practices of its slave owning and sectional leaders is temporarily preserved.

It seems a little hard to quote what a man says when he is evidently under the influence of liquor, but a few remarks made in this city by a Democrat of national prominence who had loosened his tongue by getting plimented by Pacific railway legislation, attracted settlers, stimulated immigration and transferred the center of industrial power from the east to the west. Even in war time the foundations were laid for that marvelous material prosperity, of which the first fruits were to be the resumption of specie payments and the cancellation, during a single generation, of two-thirds of the national debt.

In like manner the tariff has ministered to the highest interests of the nation. At the opening of the war the Democratic party, under the direction of southern slave owners, was committed to the policy of a revenue tariff resulting in the direction of absolute free trade. The cotton, sugar, tobacco and rice planters of the south, having what they considered the cheapest of all labor in their slaves, were the natural allies of free trade England. One of the economic curses of slavery was ever its insistent demand for profitable export in developing two or three great agricultural interests and in preventing the diversification of industries. Southern planting interests and economic policy blocked national development of industries. This policy of a low tariff which has always been southern rather than northern, was abandoned when the Republican party was confronted with the necessity of obtaining an income adequate for meeting the cost of a great war.

Now, while honest men may differ over details of the tariff controversy which has been conducted in this country over 100 years, they must at least agree that Republican legislation provided a most efficient instrument for the collection of the large revenues needed for war expenses and the rapid payment of the national debt. They must also recognize, without dissent, the extraordinary expansion of domestic manufacturing and the development of foreign and internal trade which have accompanied protective legislation. They must also concede that the benefits of a high tariff have been generally distributed in the course of time so as to be equalized among all classes through the cheapening of prices for consumers. They must, moreover, be prepared to admit that the protective system has promoted that wonderful diversification of industries which now affords resources of remunerative employment for the largest and most prosperous body of working people on the earth.

It is characteristic of the malign genius of the Democratic party that after all the miracles of American industrial progress have been accomplished it should turn back the hands of time and take its stand today with the nullification leaders of 1833 in proclaiming the unconstitutionality of the protective tariff. Even Jackson's authority has not sufficed to convince it that Calhoun was wrong, and the decisions of the United States supreme court have been of no avail to reconcile it to the prosperity of the American people under the protective system.

The financial legislation of the Republican party constitutes a series of landmarks of American progress. The great measures of the war period were those providing for the issue and ultimate redemption of the legal tender greenbacks and for the establishment of the national bank system. These were followed after the war by the refunding and resumption acts. The success of the refunding act was largely dependent upon the resumption of specie payments. That was a supreme act of good faith which established public credit on a high plane that refunding operations were conducted with extraordinary facility.

in consequence of thirty years' experience with Republican financial legislation, the Democratic party have the proud boast of being the only party which have a currency which was brought by law into existence to pay with gold. They have also a national bank system which has steadily grown in popular favor and under which a dollar has never been loaned to a note holder, and only the smallest fraction to depositors.

All these great policies have been accomplished without the aid of the Democratic party. It seems a little hard to quote what a man says when he is evidently under the influence of liquor, but a few remarks made in this city by a Democrat of national prominence who had loosened his tongue by getting two minutes with the treacherous individual known as John Derby, was so pertinent to the situation that it would be hard to suppress them. The talking was in a Washington hotel, where the Democrat just returned from a stamping tour in New York for Cleveland, was in company with a half a dozen other gentlemen, several of them Republicans. The direct cause of the speech was a little good natured quip on the part of his Republican companions on the absurd Democratic outlook. "The fact of the matter is," said the Democrat, "the growing prosperity of the country under the McKinley tariff law is what we find it the hardest to talk against, and that will elude Harrison. A big mistake was made by the Chicago convention in not adopting the tariff straddle prepared for it by Whitney, instead of that infernal free trade plank; it was another big mistake to have inserted that confounded state bank plank. Were Cleveland a saint, instead of a very ordinary man, almost entirely lacking in tact, he could not be elected on such a platform, and nine out of every ten men on the stump for him know it as well as I do. We were licked the minute that platform was adopted; but, of course, we shall fight to the end, hoping that the closing hours of the campaign may produce another Burchard, without whose intervention Cleveland never would have been president any way." It would not be fair to print the name of the Democrat who thus freely spoke his mind, as the talk was entirely among personal friends and not intended for publication.—Washington Correspondent.

Since the Republican party came into power the country has had a currency whose notes were worth as much in Oregon as in Maine, as much in Vermont as in Texas. Not a dollar was ever lost to their holders, and their value was never destroyed by the failure of a bank whose name they bore. It is a national currency, and it is as good as gold in every part of the world. The Democratic party proposes to destroy this currency and establish in its place a State bank currency of rags—a thing of shreds and patches. The proposition is an insult to the commercial intelligence and the business integrity of the country.

This is what Robert McClelland, governor of Michigan in 1855, had to say of wild-ent state banks: "At present we are giving charters to the issues of banks about which we actually know nothing, in whose management we have no participation, and are thus literally paying a large tribute for what generally in the end proves to be a great curse."

For every belated free trader like Wayne MacVeagh, who makes up his mind that he must vote for Cleveland this year there are a dozen stalwart Democrats who have determined to let the party slide and vote for the party of prosperity and high wages. Cleveland Leader.

The sweetest thing in neckties now is a four-in-hand of heavy satin in dark changeable hues, with an all-over design of a bizarre or Oriental character. Some beauties look like green in one light and purple in another, with the design in two shades of olive yellow.

The Democrats who urge that the existing prosperity of the United States is not due to protection, and attribute it entirely to the natural richness of the country, overlook the important fact that the same riches were in existence in 1857, 1859, 1869, and 1880, when pauperism flourished in the United States. San Francisco Chronicle.

There are three important times in a man's life when he is born, when he marries and when he dies. And even then his own importance is overshadowed by the curiosity to know if he is a boy or a girl, what the bride wore and what he left in his will. Yain man, you don't cut much figure in this world.—Bradford Era.

It is amusing to listen to Southern Democratic newspapers defining "the Constitution" against "Republican destroyers of the sacred instrument." The same parties, within the memory of living millions, shouldered their guns and for years did their utmost to destroy the Constitution. If they love it now it is well, but they might well afford to be chary of criticism upon the party that defended it and secured it as a blessing to the nation.

Electrical science is yet in its infancy. The best of the experts are not sufficiently acquainted with the phenomena and laws of electricity to be granted an unlimited license for its use, and the lower orders of intelligence make and work of it. It is a grave question whether the gathering of this power in such large quantities, by its disturbance of the equilibrium of forces in the atmosphere, has not increased the number and violence of cyclones and hurricanes during the last few years.

The recent placing of American bonds in London, the higher rates for money there, and a moderate demand for American securities from that center, are assumed to indicate that London investors and speculators are now ready to again take an active interest in Americans. This, however, is a little premature, says the "Investigator." For two years the English investor, as well as the operator, has held aloof from our market, and while he fully realizes that Americans are the safest stocks to hold, he is willing to wait for a further turn in the tide of South Americans, in which he has sunk so much capital.

Sticks made of plaster-of-Paris and cast in any form, and construction of pottery and glass, are not only used for architectural and decorative purposes, but also for small articles of utility and for toys.

The hardest times ever known in the United States were under the Confederation, 1783-99, when Congress had no power to pass a general tariff act, and when there was far less restriction on foreign commerce than England practices to-day. As a consequence, imports rolled in, specie rolled out, distress was brought into existence, discontent was established, insubordination to government was set on foot, disintegration began, and anarchy was impending. Such were the disasters which constituted the ripe fruits of free trade. Out of the very bitter experience in those years of open competition came the present Constitution of the United States, and following Congress with the protecting power in words of which the meaning had been fixed by a quarter of a century of controversial, diplomatic, legal and popular use. Daniel Webster said: "Without that provision in the Constitution it never could have been adopted."—Industrial World.

Nothing Republican about Him. The crowd of applicants before Judge Hutchinson the other morning waiting to be made citizens was unusually large, and his honor was swearing them in at the rate of about three a minute when an amusing incident happened.

"Has he been in this country five years?" asked the court of a fitness.

"Uh, huh."

"Think he'll make a good citizen?"

"Uh, huh."

"Believes in the constitution of the United States and a republican form of government?"

"Ah, an' faith an' he don't your ammer. He's a Dimicrat.—Chicago News.

STATE OF MICHIGAN. OFFICE OF THE SECRETARY OF STATE. LANSING, AUG. 13, 1892. To the Sheriff of the County of Schoolcraft:

You are hereby notified that at the general election to be held in this State, on the Tuesday succeeding the Monday next, the following officers are to be elected, viz: By the electors of the district hereinafter defined, one elector of President or Vice President of the United States in each District; who shall be known and designated on the ballot, respectively, as Western district elector of President and Vice President of the United States at large, and Western district elector of President and Vice President of the United States at large.

You are also hereby notified that at said election there will be submitted to the people the question of a Convention for the purpose of a general revision of the Constitution of this State. That each person voting for or partly voting shall have written or printed on his ballot the name of the Convention for the purpose of a general revision of the Constitution of this State. That each person voting against said proposition shall have written or printed on his ballot the name of the Convention for the purpose of a general revision of the Constitution of this State. No. 1.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and affixed the Great Seal of the State of Michigan, at Lansing, this day and year first above written.

Some people buy Fruit Trees of any agent that comes along, then kick themselves afterwards because the trees die. One great trouble is the trees are exposed to the sun and wind to long before the purchaser gets them, then not knowing just how to care for them they die after they are set out. Now if you want to overcome this difficulty and get satisfaction, patronize home trade and call on GREENWOOD & SON, Manistique, Mich. Remember their prices are well down and they guarantee all their stock.

Practically Democrats, and thousands many, will give Cleveland and Stearns the go by next Tuesday. See if they don't.

Candidates must now make up their minds to take the medicine that will be doled out to them next Tuesday.

Every Scandinavian should vote for J. W. Jochim and for all the other candidates on the Republican ticket. Then you will be sure of having your vote counted for the right.

It is a shame that there are not two voting precincts in Germfask township. The polling place is 30 miles from the railroad, which practically disfranchises nearly 100 voters in the south part of the township.

J. Maurice Finn has a hard row to hoe. He is charged with many shortcomings and the trouble seems to be increasing. Well, as he will be left behind in the Congressional race, he can turn his attention to personal reconstruction.

One thing we admire about the local candidates on the Republican ticket this year: they work for the general ticket. We have yet to hear of any attempt at trading or throat-cutting. With them the campaign has been honorably conducted.

The Canisteo and Stewart arrived Wednesday noon; but the Pomeroy is high and dry on the beach below Cheyogan. The Canisteo did not go on as stated, and with the tug Favorite pulled the Stewart off. The Pomeroy will have to be got afloat with Jack screws.

Dr. Byron Taylor, of Menominee, the Democratic candidate for State Senator, was in town Wednesday. He will not carry the strength of his ticket, as all admit that Hon. Joseph Flesheim suits them. He has been tried and all know him to be the right man for that position.

A mugwump paper is very much gratified at the "few departures from decency and rationality" with which the campaign has been conducted. It then proceeds to show its own idea of decency and rationality, by accusing the Republican party of being guilty of these "few departures."

Surprise Parties. Two genuine surprise parties came off Monday night and our reporter says that the results were very enjoyable. One was on our young friend, William Buchanan and the other on Miss Mattie D. Clarke, of the PIONEER. The young people of Manistique are a happy lot when they get together.

Political falsehoods should receive a set-back next Tuesday. Some of the small politicians of the Democratic persuasion, have been busy circulating base falsehoods about Ashford, the Republican candidate for County Clerk ever since the campaign opened. They were undoubtedly paid to do it; but still their lies were so ridiculous that no person took any stock in them and will only serve to increase Mr. A's strength. Edmund Ashford is known to be an honorable and upright citizen.

Thanks for the following endorsement of work turned out at this office, from a gentleman that knows what he is talking about. The writer Rev. O. J. Blackford, is one of the best job printers in the country. He says in a letter to us: "You may say that the pamphlet job you sent me is pronounced a 'veritable work of art.' My judgment is based on ten years experience at book and job printing in some of the best offices in the country. Your note and letter needs were representations of fine workmanship, good stock, and care. The envelopes were good stock, and the work on them would compare favorably with the average country office, etc." O. J. B.

Our lack of egotism would prevent our publishing the above were it not that the credit for the execution of the pamphlet belongs exclusively to our job printer, Ephraim Fvdel, a young man that took his first lessons at the case in this office. The only credit we claim is in furnishing him with best class material with which to do the work.

Washington Letter.
A very conservative estimate of the result of the election, which gives the three votes of Nevada to Weaver and puts Delaware, Connecticut, New Jersey, New York and West Virginia, several of which are certain to go republican, into the doubtful column, gives Harrison and Reid a certain vote in the electoral college of 225, or two more than is necessary to elect. This estimate concedes Alabama to Cleveland, which is more than the average republican will do; it also gives Cleveland Tennessee and North Carolina, in which states many well informed people believe that there is a fighting chance to elect anti-Cleveland electors.

This week every member of the cabinet, except Secretaries John W. Foster and Tracy, will make one or more speeches for the national ticket, and the latter may consent, as he is being warmly urged, to make one speech in Brooklyn, his home. Secretary Rusk will do his talking in Wisconsin, Secretary Noble in Missouri, Attorney General Miller and Secretary Elkins in West Virginia, Postmaster General Wammaker in Pennsylvania and in Indiana and Secretary Chas. Foster in Ohio.

All of the news received in Washington tends to increase republican confidence. Indiana is now conceded to the republicans by many democrats, likewise Connecticut, whereas ten days ago they were stoutly claiming both states. Of New York, without which Cleveland cannot possibly win in the electoral college, no well informed democrat, speaking privately, will claim more than that it is doubtful and that Cleveland has as good a chance to carry it as Harrison. Only a few days ago the same democrats refused to admit that Harrison had even a chance in New York.

Another straw showing the direction of the political wind was blown to the surface when within the last forty eight hours the Washington Correspondents of a dozen of the biggest newspapers in the country, covering every shade of political opinion, were instructed by wire from their home offices to ascertain if possible what, if any, changes there would be in the Cabinet if the President were re-elected. You may be sure that this would not have been unless those editors felt reasonably certain that Harrison would win.

An honest Swede tells his story in plain but unmistakable language for the benefit of the public. "One of my children took a severe cold and got the croup. I gave her a teaspoonful of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and in five minutes later I gave her one more. By this time she had to cough up the gathering in her throat. Then she went to sleep and slept good for fifteen minutes. Then she got up and vomited; then she went back to bed and slept good for the remainder of the night. She got the croup the second night and I gave her the same remedy with the same good result. I write this because I thought there might be some one in the same need and not know the true merits of this wonderful medicine." CHARLES A. THOMPSON, Des Moines, Iowa. 25 and 50 cent bottles for sale by Thompson and Putnam. Small heads get big the quickest.

A Good Rule.

If you would increase your happiness and promote your life, forget your neighbor's faults. Forget the slander you have overheard. Forget the temptations. Forget the fault-finding, and give little thought to the cause that provoked it. Forget the peculiarities of your friends, and only remember the good points that make you fond of them.

Forget all personal quarrels or histories that you may have heard by accident, and which, if repeated, would seem a thousand times worse than they are. Obliterate everything disagreeable from yesterday; start out with a clean sheet for to-day, and write upon it, for sweet memory's sake, only those things that are lovely and lovable.

To those who have read any of the prior numbers of "Tales From Town Topics," it is quite sufficient to merely announce that No. 5 (Sept.) is now out, and they will hasten to get a copy. To those who have been so unfortunate as not to have seen this brilliant quarterly, we can say that a rich treat is in store for them. No collection of short, racy, intense stories, charming, bright poems and sketches, cracking jokes and witticisms, comparing with this, has ever been produced. Town Topics is world-famed as the spiciest, boldest, most entertaining of weeklies, and the "tales" are the best gleanings from its numbers of past years. No. 5 is fully equal to, if not better than, its sparkling predecessors. Price 50 cents, post-paid. Town topics 21 West 23rd street, New York.

Stub Ends of Thought.

The pain of losing is softened in the memory of pleasure in winning. Take care of your living and your dying will take of itself.

The condition of humanity rests with humanity.

Some people smother their sorrows in words.

Pleasure shortens life; happiness prolongs it.

Men who hate women hate a sunshine. Being beautiful is the best of being. He who loves art must love nature first.
