New Registrations.
The township of Manistique has been divided into two Precincts, Districts, the dividing line being the center of Oak Street. There will also be a new registration roll for each district, and every elector wishing to vote at the coming township meeting must see that his name is registered on the proper roll. The Board of Registration of the township will be in session at the office of Dr. McKesson, on Saturday, March 18, March 25 and April 1, for the purpose of making the Registration rolls of both districts. All electors are hereby notified to appear before said Board on one of the above days for registration.

By order of

Our friends on the west side of the river are getting the political water warmer bath than as yet our hard-fame have been stirred up. Our reports Saturday found two or three that would accept the Supervising position that are on the list for Street Commissioner and occasionally we found a man that said he was not a candidate yet would qualify if elected to any office.

Our reporter was informed by one of the officers that the "spotted doves" just outside of the village on the morning, picked up their duties and departed Friday. Manistique has passed the day when such places would be tolerated for any length of time. The officers will not allow them to get a foothold here.

A Maligned Woman's Revue.
A singular mode of dealing with a scandal-monger was recently taken by Mrs. Rhoda Thumberge, a farmer's wife of this vicinity. Mrs. Lucy Briggs, a widow owning a place near the Thumberges' and within a mile of town, has it seems, for some time talked against Mrs. Thumberge's character, from reasons of jealousy. It is affirmed by the trusted lady, who, hearing of the insinuations of her neighbor, went word to visit her. This warning was unheeded, and at last, stung to fury and distraction by new reports of spiteful and untrue things spoken by Mrs. Briggs, the maligned woman set out for her falsetto's home armed with a pair of pliers and her husband's razor. Arriving at Mrs. Briggs' the angry woman found her asleep, and kneeling by her side, she deftly forced open her mouth and catching the lying tongue between the tongues of her pliers she held it there until, with a slash of the razor, she cut off an inch of it or more.

Mrs. Briggs, who had in vain endeavored to summon her husband by screaming out, was prevented by her tongue being held, fainting and was found by her daughter with the blood streaming from her mouth. A physician was called in, and she with difficulty was able to stop the flow of blood, which was so great as to endanger her life. After doing this act of vengeance Mrs. Thumberge mounted a horse of her husband's and rode at a gallop for the coast, where her brother's sailing vessel was lying and about to sail for South America.

This she had counted on in making her plans, and by the time a telegram could be sent to the authorities to hold her she was many miles out at sea. The whole affair is the outcome of Mrs. Thumberge's having courted both the women, and the Widow Briggs, resenting his marriage to a rival, began to traduce her character. While the neighbors regret Mrs. Thumberge's act, which has driven her from the court try and displeasure of the law, there is a good deal of quiet sympathy with her wrongs at the widow's hands—Philadelphia Times.

One Way of Drawing a Crowd.
A well-dressed man leaning against a lamp post, and apparently sleeping the sleep of the just, created a great deal of interest in a busy London street the other day. He sat on a box which he seemed to have been carrying; evidently being suddenly overcome with drowsiness, he had placed it on the curbstone, and, sitting down upon it fell asleep. To those who succeeded in getting close enough to the man his gentle, restless snore dispelled the fear that he might be dead. The side of his face was exposed and betrayed no sign of intoxication. It was the judgment of everyone that he was asleep in good health and simply taking a quiet snooze. When a crowd became so deep as to threaten a blockade the supposed sleeper suddenly jumped to his feet, mounded the box, and flourishing a couple of bottles over his head, exclaimed: "Now, gents, seein' that you are all here. I rise to a question of privilege, and after thankin' you for this most cordial reception, which I assure you will long remain upon the tablets of my memory, I wish to call your attention to my world-renowned corn and bunion eradiator, and so on in the usual style."—London Telegraph.

Two oxen are now in the courts for damages for being "shut up in putal folding beds," one in Portland, Oregon, and one in Wood, Texas, where a lady demands $5,000 from the man who sold her the bed. There are plenty of folding beds that don't play off tricks—why buy one that does?

A scientist asserts that "the average weight of the Chinese brain is considerably heavier than the average weight of the brain of people of other races and nationalities." People who have been observing John closely have long been convinced that he was no slouch. He makes use of his head.

Ex-Congressman Busey, of Ill., and Secretary of the same, are both from Indiana, and were in the same Legislature, and were the General commanding being killed Colonel Busey was notified that he would be promoted to Brigadier General, in place of the officer who had been killed. Upon hearing this, Colonel Busey, so the story goes, wrote back that he would not accept a promotion over the head of Colonel Graham, who was his senior in rank and an officer above respect. Nothing was heard of the matter for a few weeks, when Colonel Graham was made a Brigadier General, and a few months afterward was promoted to Major General, while Colonel Busey remained a modest Colonel. This naturally made Busey indignant, and now that he has an opportunity to reply, Colonel Busey is going to publish, so it is stated, Busey for Commissioner of Pensions with all his power.

Women May Vote.
The farthest step yet taken in the state in the direction of woman's suffrage is found in the report of the house committee on elections. They agree to a favorable report on a resolution proposing a constitutional amendment granting to women the right to vote in all elections. The committee stage, at which such measures are strangled, has never been passed the advocates of the departure have reason for encouragement. There is considerable sentiment in its favor among the legislators generally, and it is said that the members of the committee, which includes some of the most influential men in the body, will urge its passage on the floor of the house.—Bangor Tribune.

Be what you are, and do not be ashamed of it. If Heaven made you this or that or the other, you are that and nothing else. You are only a plain person. Very well; it is good to be a plain person. You have no "grand aspirations," no "yearning after lofty things," so don't pretend that you have. Out with your opinions. If you think a thing wrong, say so; don't wink at it because it is fashionable. Take the common sense which God has given you and use it. Silly fables may smile; but you will meet with someone; after a while, you will appreciate your truthfulness, and say: "No humber there," and take you at your true value. And if not, why you will respect yourself, and that a humber never does.—Lex.

To Fatten a Bird.
A girl in Tunis, after she is betrothed, is cooped up in a small room, with shackles of gold and silver upon her ankles and wrists. If she is to be married to a man who has discharged, despatched or lost a former wife, the shackles which the former bride wore are put upon the new bride's limbs, and she is fed till they are filled up to the proper thickness. The food used for this custom, worthy of barbarians, is a seed called dough, which is of an extraordinary fattening quality. With this seed and their national dish, cuscusse, the bride is forcibly fed, and many actually die under the spoon.—Eastern Age.

Sheathing for Ships.
The proposal to sheath ships with copper coated with mercury is attracting attention. The idea is that such an arrangement would effectually prevent barnacles from adhering to the bottom of vessels. In order to keep the mercury on and to prevent oxidation the copper would be constantly charged with electricity. This would bring about another interesting possibility. Any gold or silver that might be in the water would be precipitated on the bottom of the vessel, and it could then be scraped off when the vessel arrived in port.

Kiehlentworth, a village of 1,100 inhabitants in lower Austria has been swept by a terrific thunder storm, which lasted fifteen hours. During the storm lightning was almost incessant. Twelve persons were struck dead in the streets and seven perished in burning buildings. All the trees near the town were leveled to the ground and many cattle killed.

Don't Worry.
One day at a time, sometimes twenty-five or so, will keep the eye bright and the cheerfulness and rosy. Don't begin to worry about things days beforehand. It will be time enough when it happens. It is the dread of what may come, not what is, that makes old before the time. If you lie awake half the night worrying about something that is going to occur the next morning, you will be far less able to face bravely and coolly the same problem than if you had made some effort to get rid of some of your bad habits every time you try it. Perhaps, after all, the disaster will not befall you, or will be less awful than you anticipated, and just think what a lot of unnecessary wrinkles you have worried into your face.

Another thing, don't torment yourself about what people are going to think about this and that action. No matter what you do or leave undone, someone will criticize you severely, and the best rub for getting through life with comparative comfort is, after you have made up your mind as to the propriety and advisability of a certain course, pursue it calmly, without paying the slightest attention to the criticisms of the lookers-on from the outside. You see, just because they are on the outside, they only see the surface. It does not matter in the least what they think.—Farm and Fireside.

Gold in Nevada.
Recent reports, mainly in the nature of sober statements of facts, indicate a considerable quantity of gold in Nova Scotia. At Carleton, Halifax county, in the first week of this month, a little over 750 ounces of gold, was assayed from a little more than 30 tons of quartz. The gold was worth $15,000, and represented a clear profit of $14,000 over working expenses. Fourteen men were just 26 days getting out the quartz. It is estimated that the principal gold strike there is worth 125 ounces to the ton of quartz.

A Popular Contribution.
A New York clergyman told his congregation the other Sunday that all these who put $5 in the contribution box would get $50 back in their business within a year, and that if they failed to realize that promise they could draw on him personally for that amount. The box promptly filled with crisp $5 notes, and if the contributors realize the tenfold return it is probably safe to say that this church will not be large enough to hold the congregation next year.—Chicago Tribune.

An Ironical Inscription.
An eighteenth century tombstone in the old Catholic burying ground at Concord, Mass., proves that the best intended epithets may with the lapse of time take on an ironical significance. The stone stands over, is fast crumbling and shows the discoloration of a century's exposure to night, but it still bears in legible characters the following incongruous inscription: "This stone is erected by its durability to perpetuate the memory, and by its color to signify the moral character of Miss Abigail Dudley."

Yucatan was discovered by Francis Hernandez Cordova, who with three arabs and 110 men, sailed from Havana on February 8, 1517. The first saw land at Catoche, the eastern point of Yucatan, an Aztec name for the great peninsula. He landed at several places but was driven off by naked barbarians, who used bows and arrows skillfully. Cordova was afterwards mortally wounded by some natives north of Canapey, who killed forty-seven of the Spanish intruders, only one man escaping. On his return from Yucatan Cordova's vessel touched the coast of Florida.

Electricity has been successfully applied to the resuscitation of apparently drowned persons. A man in Scotland while bathing was seized with cramp and sank, remaining below water for two minutes. When resuscitated he was believed to be dead; but two applications of the electrical current, passed between the nape of neck and the heart, restored him to animation and ultimate recovery.

Art is advancing in the south. A
