The Death Penaly

It is highly probable that the legislature will restore to our statutes the penelty of death for the crime of murder. The utter failure of the sentipenelty of death for the crime of murther. The uttr failure of the sentimental plan is recognized and admitted, and the people of the state cull for sterness in its place. In taking action we hope the legislature will 'ere clear of he cowardly evasion of responsibility white legislatures of o her states have adopted in sonic instances—making the penulty appliculto only when specially a of directed toy jury, or judy, or governor. Proide the penulty by law-leave only o the jury the tank of deciding on the quilt or innocence of the accused; lawe to the judge only his duty, to declare the penulty prescribed by the law and se. the day for its execution; leave to the governor his power to respite, commute or pardon but do not place upon him the responsibility which belongs to the lawmakers. Let the high who is temp et to kill to evade crea's understand that to do so insures his own ignominious death if the crime is pro-cen. Let the secondthe continues are such a bad life about irrec's understand that to do so issures his own ignominious death in crime is pro-ren. Let the second-els, of all sors, who hold life cheeper use o take it costs no incre than esmiller trimes which are their r-let, be made to understand that here is a difference, that to hanker's let not no more thus hanker con no let no hanker is not all the cost that the cost of the ren, that to hanker's en of no more thus hanker and lets; we are speaking of murker—

An editor of a great city delly was pecking a lew days ago aliou: the er ices of his office boy.

"I don't belie e the e is a person in he builting who has any him against he boy," sid he. "Arthur is dways on time, always ready, and quie", and horou hly reliable."

"Oh yes!" said theeditor. Imost at once, and all over

"But what are his chances about being promoted? In large offices I should think there would be realy little chunce, yet one sees it continually stated that reliable boys are sure to be promoted."
