Two Stocking, holes were in the mill. The other day when the mill was crossing when he heard some one shouting, he went out and saw a man in a hole, made a flying leap from the buggy. Just as she was fairly on her feet and was looking around for the man who had fallen, she saw the man who had fallen. He had made tracks for the buggy and whipped up the horse to get out of sight in a minute.

It will undoubtedly be found that the present military force of the United States will be insufficient to cope with the present emergency. A better force will furnish a warrant for an increase of the strength of the army. A bill for that purpose has already been introduced in congress by Mr. Draper, of Massachusetts. The maintenance of an additional thousand men will possibly be one of the means that will be used to increase the strength of the army.

The contracts for building schools will be let next week. Every road has been well kept and we would not object if the same was had of the city. It is to be kept them by the city.

The putting up of a new building here, July 18. In some places near by the only expense will be that of getting them handled.

At a meeting of the school board, Saturday afternoon, Mrs. Alice Black, of Calumet, and Mrs. Edith Mosher, of AuSable, were accepted as teachers in the public school. They were highly recommended.

Dugald McGregor came in from his farm Monday morning. He says the crops are looking excellent in the vicinity of his place. He has over two hundred acres under cultivation.

Lightning struck a house at Grand Marais, on Wednesday night. After smashing a building and tearing out the roof, it passed through a partition and killed two dogs.

Mr. Cleveland is present about his movements this summer. It is said he wishes to spend his vacation at Gray guides with his family. Under these circumstances, the Coleman house will be a landmark.

Miller Rippe, Gray, Hamble, Ed. Ash, Bill, Mr. Terrie and Bert Smith left Monday morning in Andrew Armstrong's sail boat, for Croixville, to fish for a few days. They were taken into the lake by the Agitator.

Thanks to Mrs. Williams for handling some business of mine late in sickness. We learn that her flower garden is very attractive. Flowers in a sick room, are always appreciated.

J. A. Robinson who is talking up the electric lighting matter, has not as yet left the matter for erecting the building for the plant. He is given the proper support by the village depts. He will give us a lighting system.

A move vice one of the Detroit courts this is that of a married man attempting to press that of a married man. He is charged with the same offense to secure for her $300 life insurance which the father had left.

Many of the Chicago strikers of a week ago are now trying to secure sit-down, and nothing is said about it. Many of the strikers that did not engage in the strike have little trouble in securing reinstatement.

German farmers report splendid crop prospects this season. The only thing needed now is a good road from that settlement to this city. That question ought to be agitated and something accomplished in the near future.

Capt. Nolan, of the Idaho Terr. Anderson, left this morning on the City of London for Chicago, and intends to enter the Marine hospital for treatment of an injury received while on duty in the Idaho Territory.

Mrs. W. Kinnabell, superintendent of the schools in this city, left Sunday for Charlevoix where she will visit with her parents at their summer cottage. She was accompanied by her little son. They will be away about two weeks.

Some of our democratic friends profess ignorance of their party movement, but there is not a lot in their ignorance, and none of it appears in their talk with men who are successful in being influential to vote the democratic ticket.

Frank Harwood, of the Steam Pipe Works is to move the works from here on Monday next and will locate at Red Jacket. Those wishing work here by leaving their names on the list should send their goods over at once. He will receive prompt attention.

Last winter the people of the state felt and chafed the "loggers' monopoly" who had refused to work because they cannot have high edge prices. Do they expect to be led and chilled next winter? Their conduct this summer demands a better mode of doing things.

The Union has been doing a considerable amount of business for the past few days.

The London arrived and departed this morning. She brought in a large consignment of freight, and left 11:30 p. m. with about 110 passengers. The captain reports an exceptionally fine trip up.

Hon. W. M. Caldwell, formerly superintendent of the lumber company here, delivered the oration on the Fourth at Skamania, Washington. The local paper pronounces it as a masterly address.

DOCTORING SHIPS.

PARASITES THAT SEND OCEAN VESSELS TO THE HOSPITAL.

No Sure Protection For Iron Works Has Been Found - The old and the new.

The sea is a grand and yet treacherous mother to the thousands of ships that sail over its broad expanse, and although with its steering the ships are sent to their hospital for repairs. This hospital is the drydock, and the doctors are the agents of careful workmen who look over carefully and repair every faulty seam or broken rivet.

Salt water is treacherous with parasites of plant and animal life that cling to the bottoms of ships, and iron alike or rust it away, while they act as a check on the speed by greatly increasing the resistance and friction of the water against the ship. The "goats" of the storms see everywhere, and pick out each weak seam or faulty rivet and slowly and surely eat into the vitals of the ship so that every few months it becomes necessary to examine and repair the vessel. To do this she must come out of the water. The drydock is just a great box of wood, iron and stone, connecting with the sea by a great gateway. When the ship is ready to enter, the gate is raised and water all pumped out; then the workmen, with practiced skill, place the blocks at the bottom of the dock for the keel to rest upon, taking the dimensions from the plans and drawings of the vessel. These in place, the dock is flooded, and the gates opened; and the ship hauled in. The gate is now closed again, and while the water is slowly pumped out and the ship settles down the dockers pull her this way or that until she rests evenly on the keel blocks. Then shores, or heavy wooden beams, are placed from the sides of the dock to the sides of the ship, and as the water is pumped away the ship stands "high and dry," and is ready to be "fish out of water," the bottom, which was below the water line, covered with seaweeds and parasites that hide the defects they have caused.

That the workmen scrape and scum the anvilstone lanterns, and all exposed areas the seams and rivets are all examined and repaired, a fresh coat of paint goes on again, and as the keel is again flooded the ship rises from her hospital bed, and the wooden supports are knocked away until she floats out - as again, "healthy and strong" to battle with the wind and sea and the enemies of the flag she proudly flies.

When wood was used almost exclusively in building ships, a very easy and convenient means was found to protect the under water portions of the ship from the insidious attacks of barnacles and parasites of plant and animal life. This was done by covering the whole bottom of the ship with a plating of tin copper, for the galvanic action of the salt water upon the copper would convert the ship and sea into a vast battery, where the copper became the negative pole and was slowly yet constantly eaten away, the tin, as the positive, taking with them the barnacles and seaweeds as fast as they formed on the ship, thus keeping the ship's bottom and sides always clean, so that the speed was not cut down by dragging the barnacles and seaweeds over the bottom of the water. Yet even then the copper needed repairs; faulty timbers rotted and crumbled away, so that every few years the ship had to go into drydock and be thoroughly overhauled, even faulty timbers replaced and many old rivets replaced with new ones. It was not until the hospital was left for the sea work upon.

With the advent of iron in the building of ships the old means failed, for where copper was placed over iron the iron became the negative pole of the great battery and was eaten away, while the tin, by rubbing the bottom of the ship with many leaks. Many devices were tried - the under water portions of the vessels were covered with a waterproof layer of wood, which was then covered as before, but wherever there was any metallic connection between the copper and iron the whole force of the battery acted there, and holes were punched, expected and unexpected places, bringing in a constant uncertainty and endangering great sums in "shelling" vessels, as the sailing men call it, and the ships still had to go more often than ever to the drydock.

Then the various methods of painting the bottoms with protective paints have been tried and are used in all of the crannies of our navy. The use of hundreds of chemicals has been exerted to find a paint that would act as the copper and throw off the barnacles and seaweeds. Great prices have been offered, and a fortune awaits the successful discoverer of such a coating for ships yet so far none has been discovered that suits completely, and the iron and steel ships which start from ports with their painted sides and bottoms return in a few months, which, as it tends in the water, very materially cut down the speed and power of the ship. Then she must be put in the dry dock and scrubbed and scraped and repainted. Still worse than the barnacles and the seaweeds is the water itself when it finds an entrance, be it ever so small, through the joint in the steel below. Slowly but surely it runs out a little pit, which extends sometimes almost through the plate before the paint scale drops off and discloses the defect, which can even then only be seen by pulling the ship into the dock and examining every square foot of her bottom plating.

This all shows how necessary it is for the ships to go to their "hospital" and how careful her "doctors" should be for millions of dollars worth of property and millions of priceless lives are carried every year on these "messengers of death" and thousands of the great shipping ports of Liverpool - Washington.

CUSTOMS OF COSTERS. They Lead a Precarious Life, but Are Not Unhappy All the Time. A writer in the London Quiver says that the costers now move in large cities. Though their coster's work is extremely hard and his profits are precarious he lives for a good purpose. When he speaks of himself as "a general looker," he means that he trades in anything which enables him to turn a honest penny. His ordinary mode of life is even lower than is meant by living from hand to mouth. When he turns out in the small hours of the morning to look round the markets, he may not even know whether this traffic for the day will consist in fish, vegetables or fruit. He may take a lastly penny breakfast in the street and then go to Billingsgate with the idea of "looting up" with the first, only to find that everything is too dear, and then he must lie away to Billingsgate or Covent Garden. When he rises with the dawn, he cannot tell whether he will have "a good day" or a very poor one.

The most dangerous time of all is when the market all around the looker is to allow the borrow being "loaded up." If the coster can clear 3 or 4 shillings in the day, he will not do anything, and should he earn nothing, or even make a loss, he looks at the matter as philosophically as one could expect. There are street hawkers near among the costers who rise into thriving shopkeepers. The bank establishments for these men are treacherous to them, and the evening for receiving deposits will be one of the liveliest of the week. The fact is also known that there is strength in unity, so that the London Union of General Dealers in the way of extending as far as an influence as a city guild.

The chairman might correctly have described himself in the words of one of his brethren, "I ain't a solicited person, but I ain't no one's." He proved this characteristic by rising into the ranks of a tradesman, having one or two shops, and when on one occasion his errand boy stole a box containing letters, he discovered the police would not believe that such a man had so much money to be stolen. The fact was, he had a house, and the "general dealer" still continued to make progress, while he was well known to Lord Shaftesbury, who published a notice of him as "My friend."

At first sight it may appear to be a humble thing to be a leading spirit among one's fellows, but in a way there is an ample scope for administrative ability and enterprise.

PLAYING IN THE GARRET.

Some of the Resources and Pleasures of the Theatre Under the Roof.

"There is no one delight," said a man who was reared in a small town, "that I suppose many children born in great cities are not aware of, and that is the delight of playing in the garret. My father, to be sure, had relatives in the country or in another city or town whom they have visited, who live in houses with garrets, and those know something of the delights of the garret, but there needs to be many city children who never even heard the name."

"For myself, I remember with gratitude to what I need to climb a raly ladder up a steep and narrow flight of stairs. It was warm and rather stuffy in the garret, but the rain made music on the shingled roof, and the garret itself was full of treasures. There was a room, to be sure, to spare to move about in, though you needed to look a little for the timber in the sloping roof. There was a window from two of the beams, and you used to swing and swing in that and never get tired of it."

There was a chimney up the garret, a great, big, friendly chimney, and we used to play tag around that chimney until we could not run any more. There was a great lot of old magazines, and these were an unfailing source of delight. There were old books on paper toys, and with strange looking pictures. There were queer top, stick covered trunks, with round tops, and old with brass handle and lock. In these curious old fashioned men's clothes, caps and hats of women - and, fancy comes, but the real things such as they actually were many years ago, and they were more than anything you could hire at a costumer's. We used to dress up sometimes in the things and parade around in the garret and have great times generally, and so the garret was the delight of the boys of the garret that the very world itself looked strange when we came down stairs and back to it.

PICKETT AND THE ARCHIVES. The Eight Turned out a Hidden Chapter of Wartime History. Frank Riggs, the son of the famous banker and his father's successor in the financial circles at Washington, tells us an interesting story that concerns the financial archives which many good people have carried for years. During the second term of President Grant a man of the name of Pickett sold to the government of the United States the records of the executive departments of the southern confederacy. From these documents was obtained much evidence that prevented the payment of claims by the federal government for losses growing out of the war. In a single instance they saved several millions by showing that small contracts entered into with the south had been paid from the Confederate treasury for services performed by them for the government of the United States before the outbreak of the rebellion. They proved to be of great value in many other directions, and the price paid Mr. Pickett for them, which was something like $80,000, proved to be one of the most profitable investments ever made by the government.

Pickett had been the chief clerk of the Confederate state department and held some similar office which made him an expert on the subject. When President Davis and his cabinet had from Richmond, Mr. Pickett carried the records away and hid them in some place that escaped the fingers of the Union army, and the manner of their disappearance was a mystery until they were delivered to Secretary Fish. It was always believed that Mr. Pickett pocketed the money, and he was naturally condemned by southern people for betraying the secrets of the lost cause for a price.

"The facts have never been told," said Mr. Riggs, "of Mr. Pickett's conduct of the strictest pledges of secrecy from my father in regard to the disposition of the money, but both of them are dead now, and there is no reason why the truth should not be known. Mr. Pickett was an street business man among the widows of Confederate officers. Each one was accompanied by a letter, which he prepared and which was father signed, and that the fact was forwarded at the request of a gentleman who felt an interest in their welfare, but for reasons of his own desired that his identity should not be disclosed. The account was carried for several years, and the checks on the money were now packed away in our bank." - Chicago Record.

By a Small Margin. Well, we lost, but we are good losers. never kick when we get a lead for ourselves.

All through the usual nine innings of the ball game, Saturday afternoon last, between the Eastern aggregation of ball players and the home nine, the contest had been a struggle to the utmost extent. The game was low and hot, pitched from one team to the other, which kept the matter very exciting to the end.

To say that the home boys cannot play ball could be doing them an injustice, as their play of the professional order, and with better coaching, they would be in the lead. Their game is faultless, base running good, but they are somewhat weak at times at the bat. With a weak pitcher in the game, Saturday, the game would not doubt have been different, as before, who had been pitching a great game up to the seventh inning, apparently he had a little more in the tank.

McWilliams or Long, who had a stone wall, advertising and throwing being prominent. The Golden Boys, without a doubt, are much in the lead, and the good ones, those that have been in the home line, and the best of the game, the Manistee, first baseman, who played his position like a veteran, making one of the best plays of the game by catching a red hot line in the eighth inning and knocking a double play at the same time.

The Jugglers. The pretty Mexican lady recently purchased some yards of "material" at one of our large dry goods stores. At the time of her visit she was not fully conversant with English, and an American friend made her purchases for her. Last week, happening to be in the city and in want of "gingham," she went to the same establishment. This time she said: "Had you any gingham?" she inquired. "Of course," the gentlemanly clerk was very much astonished. "No," said he, "never."

Latins Fed the A. P. A. Last Saturday night the A. P. A. organization held a meeting at their hall which was largely attended and at which time ten new candidates were permitted to deliver into the mysteries of the order. During the evening the members of the organization were addressed by Mr. Hearty, Suginau, state organizer of the order, also supreme secretary, and John H. D. Stevens, of Ironwood, who is a candidate for anti-organizational duty but whose subjects were called not long, but they may have talked politics or something more elevating to the order. Before the evening's business was gone through with, a number of ladies, carrying suspicious looking packages and baskets, asked admission to the hall. After consulting the questioning they were admitted and their wares were examined in the baskets, etc. It is rumored that everybody had a good time.

Literary. The Epworth League, of the Methodist Episcopal church, will give a literary entertainment at the Methodist church, Wednesday evening, July 25, commencing at 7:30. The entertainment will consist of recitations, music, etc. and refreshments will be served in front of the church. Admission, 25 cents, including refreshments. Presiding Elder Whelan, of the "Sho," will be present and address the audience. A good time is expected.

A New Church Organized. On Friday last Rev. Mr. Louisa of this city, organized a new church at Thompson, made up of the Swedish and Finnish people of that locality. They take the name of Emanuel Lutheran and started with 24 members. With bright prospects for the future. For the present their meetings will be held in the Town hall. Rev. Mr. Louisa will preach there on each alternate Sunday, beginning on the 29th.

The furnace men after a long and hard day's work, were at the furnace, and the furnace men, the furnace and charcoal kilns employ many men, and increase business at the mine and on the railroads. The plant here is one of the best, and the modern apparatus and the product stands well in market when there is such a thing as a market. The management of the furnace is in good hands and everything about it is in good hands, with no exception. Our old friend, Harry DeWitt, can always be found either in the office, paying street attention to outside business, and nothing except the production of Patrons' attention in and around the furnace proper. The Western furnace is a leading for Manistee and Schoolcraft county.

Bishops of Marbles. Most of the stone quarries used by the marble industry in the West are in the hands of the same few hands, and this is true in such a way that there is practically no waste. The marble quarries are employed, and this is true in such a way that there is practically no waste. The marble quarries are employed, and this is true in such a way that there is practically no waste.

Her Way of Telling It. We have seen in print this little story about a young Bishop Brooks. The child was 3 years old. The mother was preparing her for bed when she had a cold down stairs. She said: "I am very tired, dear, say your prayers while I am here." When she returned she asked the child if he had said her prayers. The little one replied: "I did and I didn't." "Why, what do you mean, dear?" asked the mother. "I told the Lord 'I was very tired and couldn't say my prayers, and He said, 'Don't mention it,' Miss Brooks."
