A Chicago woman is suing for divorce on the ground that her husband is a fool. The process for that he married her because she was so beautiful.

Some people seem to think that because the Good Book says: "Six days shall thou labor and do all thy work," that they should only labor six days in a life time.

Senator Hill suggested that it was "all burnt powder." The Secretary of War may want to lay in a supply of it for the next war. Every load seems to have shot clear across the State.

"How would the aspect of the eastern world be changed if Turkey were to drop a plunger of Turkey?" "No," "Greece would fall." "China would be broken in two." "America would be humiliated."

An exchange says: "In the absence of a compass, a watch may be made to do the duty of one, by pointing the hour hand toward the sun, when the watch will be exactly half way between the hour and figure XII on the dial."

Senator Stewart thinks he can raise many a Cal outside than inside of either of the great political parties. At the first 2000 opportunity the people may conclude to put him a long way outside. Stewart lacks a great deal of being a necessity to the Nation's prosperity.

The Germans are not noted for their honor, but the reply of their foreign office to American protests against the prohibition of imports of American cattle is rather neat. It is that the "empire as such," has done nothing to offend the most delicate sensibility, but that the separate states, purely as sanitary measures over which they have entire control, have seen fit to keep out American cattle.

A Cure for the Grip.
If you would be attacked with the grippe stick your foot in hot water—stick a little mustard in it—put a piece of flannel dipped in hot hamamelis (witch hazel) over your chest, with a piece of dry flannel over that, drink warm sage tea and at night, every two hours, take six pellets of acetonite—the homeopathic preparation—and during the day a one grain pill of sulphate of quinine. Keep yourself warm and eat whatever you appetite calls for. This treatment will positively cure you—Chicago Record.

It is really very hard to appreciate a civilization such as is manifesting itself in Kentucky, just across the Ohio river. The people of a congressional district down there have been stirred up to the fighting point for months over the question whether an old reprobate and libertine by the name of Breckinridge should be returned to congress or not. It was decided that he should be left at home, but still the partisans of this old rascal are trying to stir up quarrels and slice some one's liver over matters growing out of the contest. All of which demonstrates that Kentucky has a great deal to learn and a long way to travel before she is ready to step up with possession of civilized states which have real business to attend to—Herald.

Good Advice.
An exchange gives the following good advice to parents: "Before you listen to the complaints of your children about the fondness of the teachers, and getting all worked up and excited over it, it is better to reflect a little. Remember your one or half a dozen cherubs drive you crazy about half the time, and hear with the teacher who is making for you intelligent men and women of you unpromising material as you were twenty or thirty years ago. Remember that beside your own boy, who of course, everybody loves is an object, she has to contend with that awful boy of your neighbor's, and you know full well what a terror he is."

The Boy Who Was Bitten.
New York Herald: A dapper young man well-dressed, second-hand clothing store on Sixth avenue, near Eighth street, and a crowd from a package, a pair of slippers, trousers. As he threw them on the counter the bundle of slippers made a noise striking that attracted the attention of the dealer.

"How much will you give for these?" asked the dapper man. "The dealer looked at the slippers and the trousers for a moment, then he looked up at the man and said: "Well, it is all right, but I don't take less than $3."

"Three dollars?" exclaimed the man. "That will buy a new pair." "All right, then," said the man. "Will you give me $3?"

The money was paid, the slippers and the trousers were packed in the box and the man walked toward the door. As he stepped into the street he felt a sharp tug at the hem of his trousers. He looked down and saw a small, dark object in his hand. It was a piece of paper and two old-fashioned pennies.

The Stars in '04 Glory.
No nation is prouder of its flag and more sensitive of its honor than the United States. Anything that touches the flag is to it as all on an instantaneous protest. Of all the flags in the world it is the most beautiful and most significant. It is natural and not arbitrary. Its stars and its stripes tell the story of our bleeding States in a National Union. Each of the thirteen colors has a distinct meaning. The patriotic sentiment of the people found literary expression in that little child's song, "The Star-Spangled Banner," the very first poem from an American pen which is likely to be immortal. But with all its merits, the flag of our country could be improved upon in particular, namely, the arrangement of the stars. At least a rearrangement has been suggested. What the Inter Ocean believes would be a change for the better.

As no distinction is made between the original thirteen states and the states subsequently admitted to the Union. As new States come in other stars are added to the galaxy, with nothing to distinguish the original from subsequent ones. A Cincinnati artist, Mr. E. D. Grafton, proposes that the thirteen should be on a larger scale than the rest and arranged in a circle, while the others arranged in groups should circle around the thirteen.

It may be said that the thirteen stripes tell the story of the thirteen colonies which achieved independence and formed the United States, and so they do; but this star language would be still more eloquent tribute to the thirteen, detracting nothing from the honor and dignity of the younger sisters of this great family of states. The design has been sent to Washington and it certainly should have thoughtful consideration.—Inter Ocean.

NAPOLEON AT BRIENNE.
On New Year's day, 1770, the Bonapartes arrived at Napoleon. For three months the young Napoleon was trained in the French language, the polished tongue was scarcely reached. It was with a most imperfect knowledge of their language an early and firm pronouncement that he made his appearance among his future schoolmates at Brienne. There were 150 of them, although the arrangement and theory of the institution had contemplated only 150, of whom but few were to be found.

The instructor was M. de Launay, a man of letters and of high position, and the life was as regular as that of a military school. Napoleon was half obedient and half obedient. In spite of all efforts to the contrary, he was an expert in his own language. There was a certain schoolboy display propensities to the pocket money of the year, and a very keen determination among themselves as to rank, social quality and relative importance. These familiar with the rudiments of letters in their own language, and they were easily conversant with the reception of the unknown whose utility was unknown and unappreciated in France, and who knew full well what a terror he is."

It appears that the journey from Corsica to France was a most disagreeable one. Napoleon's teachers at Brienne described several teachers who were with him a soldier, thoughtful character. He played with it and took his walks. But he was apt and full of his studies. In three months he was a common place with some French, and to some extent a Frenchman.

The boys of Brienne were all of the same rank, and they were all of the same rank. Napoleon was half obedient and half obedient. A DEPARTMENT CAPTAIN TALKS ABOUT FIRE ESCAPES.

Some sensible advice to women—What to do when caught in a burning building—It is well to know how to take care of yourself in such a time.

"Wrap the rope around the body, all around the rope, then slide," was the advice of Captain McAdam in reply to "my query of how to get out of a burning building."

The question was provoked by seeing a number of blue-roofed firemen speecling down a rope suspended from the sixth story of a building. They were testing fire escapes, and their ease and confidence made no wonder why some of this headless crowd could be so important to women—or men either, for that matter—in case of emergency.

"I went inside the crowd, admiringly kept drilling rooms and interviewed the captain."

"Well," he asked, "you can proceed to women about the way to use ropes and fire escapes, but when a person is scared out of her senses you can't expect her to do calmly what she would normally do in time of safety."

"Why, I don't dare take a raw man and send him down the sixth story for his life, if I did, he would never appear again. I get him, he would never commencing at the first, then increasing his slide, and reaching the seventh story for two weeks."

"Then you don't think it silly for people to forget all which is on the top of their head?" I asked.

"Never. No one realizes more than I the horrible feeling of being caught in a trap. Fire comes to demoralize the bravest. Women are just as brave as men, for I have known a woman rush down stairs, leaving wife and five children, when if all of Hagabone's animals were placed in a boat and his child among them he would dash over the fence alone to his rescue."

"What's best to remember?"

"First, how to use the ropes that are placed in hotel rooms and should be in each room. They are being caught in a trap. Fire comes to demoralize the bravest. Women are just as brave as men, for I have known a woman rush down stairs, leaving wife and five children, when if all of Hagabone's animals were placed in a boat and his child among them he would dash over the fence alone to his rescue."

A WELL AS A BAROMETER. It is on a Cattaraugus (N. Y.) County Farm and infamously F. retelle Weather. There is a curious well on the Flint farm, in the town of Great Valley, Cattaraugus county. It is a natural barometer. Nobody ever knows that farm, winter or summer. If the weather is cold, without seeing something like this:

"Does the well threaten a change?" For every one knows that if there is bad weather coming the well will let them know it, size of the water in it.

They call the well up, take the "whistling well," although it doesn't whistle. The water in the well is 60 years ago by the father of Colonel Platt and occupies the farm. It set it down 45 feet, but found no water and dug no farther. Instead of water, a well of air came from the well at that time. The opening was covered with a big flat stone, and for a moment a hole was made in the stone and a tin whistle fitted into it. This whistle had two tones—one when the air rushed up from the well, and a different tone when the air came out of the hole. It wasn't long before the tin whistle started the whistling current from the well started the whistle whistling.

When the tone of the whistle was changed by the reversing of the current, it was discovered that the change meant a change and the coming of fair weather. These weather signals never failed. When the weather was settled, the whistle was silent. The whistle got out of order some years ago, and for some reason was never repaired. It was the cause and going currents of air will probably the cause of their respective "spells of weather" with unerring infallibility.—New York Sun.
