A Floater Found.

The Body of Henry Mattisen Found in Slip A Wednesday Morning.

Early Wednesday morning Chas. J. Peterson and his crew of men were engaged in getting a scow in position in slip A, saw the body of a man floating in the water. Capt. Johnson of the tug Evans was notified of the find and the body secured with a rope and towed to the dock. Coroner Sattler was called and took charge of the body. He empaneled a jury from among the spectators as follows: Geo. Wetmore, Geo. Moody, Geo. E. Holstein, C. W. Danton, Norman Fox and Nelson Lapine.

The body was taken to Anderson & Co.'s morgue. Indications pointed to the fact that he had been foully dealt with as a large hole, caused by some blunt instrument extended into the brain from the base of the right ear. There was also a slight scalp wound.

The inquest was held at Dr. Sattler's office yesterday forenoon.

The testimony adduced the following facts: His name was Henry Mattisen, a Norwegian sailor, aged about 50 years. He came to Gilbert Olson's farm in Inwood township, in March of this year and remained there until a few days prior to his death. He was working for his board at the Olson farm. He decided to go to Chicago and came to Manistique for the purpose of securing passage on some schooner whereby he could earn his passage. Mr. Olson gave him $5 when he left. He walked to Thompson, and from there came to Manistique with Mr. Englebretzen. He made arrangements with the captain of the schooner Moss, loading lath for Chicago, as to his transportation, and began work on the schooner on April 27th, but after a few hours labor went up town and proceeded to get drunk. Late that night he was taken down to the dock by Antonio Stephens and M. Frankovitz, next day placed aboard the boat. The next day was a repetition of the preceding day, and at night he was very much intoxicated. He left Kingham's saloon at 9 o'clock that night after vainly seeking several parties to assist him to the boat. The supposition is that he fell off the dock into the slip when the body was recovered later. The fact remains that he was not seen alive after that time.

The jury after weighing all the testimony rendered a verdict that it was a case of accidental drowning. The wound hereinafter described leads many to think that he was foully dealt with, but as he was without money and had no ground there could be no motive for the crime.

Dea. Sattler and Patterson held a post mortem yesterday morning. We here publish Dr. Patterson's testimony given at the inquest:

"The deceased was about 50 years of age, and from appearance had been in the water about three weeks. Found a wound an inch long, extending to but not involving the skull, over the left posterior portion of the frontal bone, also a laceration of the left ear and a penetrating wound at right posterior mastoid involving the soft tissues and skull. Upon removing the skull cap and brain a fracture of the petrous portion of the temporal bone involving the $18,000 in round numbers on July 1st. (The Meridian bill becomes a law that amount will be increased to about $25,000.

The Delta Lumber Co. paid its Thompson employees this week.

Deceased. At base of skull on left side opposite penetrating wound was found considerable sand and cinders, presumably washed in. The anterior fundal lobe of left hemisphere of cerebrum showed greater evidence of decomposition than any other portion of the brain. From the thinning of the skull at various points an adherence of the dura mater to the same, should judge that there had been an acute cerebral affection of the brain. The wound could not have been self inflicted and could have only been made by some sharp instrument penetrating the brain. The wound above described in its self would be sufficient to cause instant death. The depth of the wound precludes the idea that the wound was caused by impalement. Had the blow been given under the water its force would have been sufficient to have raised the body to the surface."

How the wound was made will probably never be ascertained. Deceased was a member of the Sailors Union, Chicago, and has an uncle in Dakota. He came to America from Norway about 25 years ago. His personal effects consisted of a pipe, a knife and a handkerchief.

Was Given a Gift.

Miss Carrie Withersell, vice grand of the Rebekah lodge was agreeably surprised last Thursday evening by the members of the lodge at the hall. The brothers and sisters of the lodge, desirous of expressing their regret at the proposed departure and to show their esteem for her, presented her with a silver cup and saucer. The presentation address was read by Mrs. McLeod. Address follows:

Miss Carrie Withersell, V. G. Dear sister: We the members of Manistique Lodge No. 159, D. of R., I. O. O. Michael O'Brien, mate of the D. F. Pilar, owned by the Hines Lumber Co. of Chicago, met with a very serious accident at South Manistique Wednesday forenoon. While assisting in swinging the boom to the dock, he was caught in the tight of the line and had his right leg torn off below the knee. Dr. Sattler was called and found the limb vitally severed. He cut the shreds of skin holding the limb in place and had the sufferer taken to Dr. Patterson's hospital where the limb was re-attached by Dr. Patterson, assisted by Drs. Malmgren and Michael O'Brien is 37 years of age and his home is at 144 Lake Street, Chicago.

The bicyclist's thoroughly initiated the new bicycle ordinance Monday evening. They gave a parade and most of them obeyed the ordinance to the letter by using lamps and bells, and trailing along at about eight miles an hour. Cow bells, sleigh bells and cathedral bells as well as many other varieties of bells were conspicuous by their presence. Tallow candles, old fashioned barnyard lanterns, locomotive reflectors—and in fact anything that would give light was utilized. The din was deafening but the non participants had to grin and bear it. No arrests were made and for this reason the racket will soon die of old age.

Going Too Far.

It is not clear that Turkey made the war against Greece the opportunity to strengthen her hold in Europe and to give the great powers a warning. The Turk has always had supreme faith in himself and the courage of his belief. With all Europe avowedly against him, he has managed to maintain an alien civilization in the garden spots of Christianity, and to keep his hand at the throat of the oldest and most zealous Christian communities. He has done this from the time he captured the Eastern capital of the Christians by dividing the Christian nations, by putting crusader against Greek, Russian against Englishman, Frenchman against German, and he is preparing now to turn another trick in the old game.

Having put his army on a war footing, having aroused the fanaticism of his people, the Sultan is pursuing a policy that is sure to bring him in conflict with the great powers. He is doing this in the belief that, when it comes to a question of war, the powers will divide, as they always have done, and that, in their jealousies and antagonisms, Turkey will find safety. The Sultan is a shrewd diplomatist, it is said, and has overweening confidence in himself; but there are other great diplomats in Europe, as coldblooded and selfish as he. They may not care for Greece defeated and bleeding, but they do care for the interests of their own government. They may be using the Greek incident to encourage the Sultan into a defiant attitude or into overt acts against the peace of Europe. Some of the powers have been waiting for years for this overt act for an excuse to join hands against the Turk. Except in the case of Bulgarians, twenty years ago, the Turks have been adroit enough to evade such an issue. They were invagled into opposition to the will of Europe in 1877, and, as a result, Europe gave consent to the Russian invasion, interfering when Turkey lay as helpless at the feet of the Russians as Greece is now at the feet of the Turks. At San Stefano Turkey, defeated and humbled, agreed to all that Russia asked. At Berlin, with the powers plotting against each other, Turkey was truculent and defiant.

Since that time there has been plots and counter-plots, intrigues within intrigues, and blind moves on the chess board of European politics, all involving the integrity of the Turkish empire. The Turk himself may bring about the combination of European powers against him. He may be misled by half promises of support, by rumors, set afoot to deceive him, and take the step that will precipitate a blow in comparison with which the Greek war will seem a mere incident. Then will Greece be avenged and possibly come into her inheritance. It is an easy matter to press a weak nation like Greece to extremity, but for Turkey, the experiment is a dangerous one. As the case stands, Turkey is in more danger of annihilation than Greece.

President McKinley sent a message to Congress this week asking that $50,000 be appropriated for assist the starving American citizens living in Cuba. Was the staff of the average newspaper published it would read something like this.

Greece, of course, was only fighting for her own interests, but incidentally she was representing the cause of Christendom in the East. Another small power did the same successfully over 200 years ago, when John Sobieski of Poland repelled the Moslem invasion of Europe and drove back the savage hordes. The great powers were so grateful that 100 years later they divided Poland among three of them, and have kept her in subjection ever since.—Boston Pilot.

The attempt to repeal the mortgage tax law is an admitted failure and the bill probably die in the hands of the committee. This action is to be regretted because the law merely adds to the burdens of those who are always loaded down with debt. Men mortgage their property only when their necessities compel them. The borrower has no option; he must come to the lender's terms or go without. There are always places where the man of means can make his capital profitable, and if it cannot be loaned to individuals or corporations, upon good security and at a high rate of interest, it can be turned into the banks for a moderate interest. While this option exists the lender will take care that the borrower shall pay the tax. He will demand the limit of legal interest and will care enough from the loan to take care of the interest he must pay on the mortgage. Interest is already too high considering the amount of money which is available, but the mortgage tax law piles it up on the class of citizens who most need protection and multiplies the hardship of the unfortunate.

The Situation as to the Tariff. It will take some little time to arrive to an estimate of the probable revenue from the Senate Tariff bill, if adopted without change, and in offering no such estimate at this time, while publishing the data which enable men of both parties to figure it out according to their own judgment, the committee shows prudence. Obviously everything turns upon two elements which are and must remain uncertain. Every man will guess for himself how much the imports of certain goods which will be reduced by a proposed advance in duties, and the only thing certain is that any estimate based upon the enormous importations caused by the Wilson tariff would be deceptive. Perhaps it would even be more reasonable to go back to the record of the calendar year following the enactment of the McKinley tariff, since the one proposed is in most features an approximation to the range of duties then adopted, though on important classes of goods much lower. But again every man must guess for himself how large a part of the demand for the first year will have been anticipated by the importations before the measure becomes a law. With imports exceeding $18,000,000 in a week at New York alone, it is evidently not possible to form any estimate of value. Much will depend on the time taken to reach final action in the Senate, which no one can predict with much confidence.

It was stated quite recently by men of experience in the woolen goods business that at this time of year foreign manufacturers and dealers would not venture to anticipate the future course of the market to a large extent, so that imports of unusual magnitude were not probable. But the arrival of woolen goods of $2,932,260 declared value in a single week at New York alone seems to render that opinion not wholly trustworthy. Knowing how such goods are undervalued, one might judge that the importations of this single week at one port were equivalent to about a tenth of the entire consumption of foreign woolens in the fiscal year 1897, and with goods already here it would not take many such weeks to anticipate a year's consumption. Of wool the quantity now in the country is evidently greater than has ever been consumed of imported wool in any full year. Now that there are proposed duties on hiles and tea, imports of those articles may also increase, though, owing to distance, not so quickly as of goods drawn from European markets.

It is evident that the duty on hiles will be strongly resisted on the ground that it will do no real good to the cattle producers of the West, but will materially embarrass the large and rapidly increasing export trade in leather. The proposed allowance of a drawback on leather manufactured from imported hides, even if it be considered practicable, would obviously involve embarrassments and inconveniences of no small importance. The duty would give a certain revenue, or might be made with others of like character for this reason mainly it has received the support of some thus far.—New York Tribune.

McKinley's Tribute to Washington. Chicago Times-Herald.

Few spectacles could be more inspiring to patriotic hearts than that exhibited in Philadelphia, where the late President of the republic was called to unveil the statue of the first, and pay his tribute to the memory most sacred in the hearts of the American people.

It was the student of history bearing witness to the maker of history; it was the follower tracing the pathway of the master, and emulous of his great example. Impossible as it is to say anything new about Washington, and difficult as it is to repeat the old as well as it has been said before, the President's address will bear easy comparison with any similar address in the past. Terse and yet beautiful in language, concise and yet pregnant with thought, it leaves nothing wanting that should be spoken, it contains no sentence that should be left unsaid. It is so perfect in form, in thought and in expression, that it will rank with the masterpieces in this form of speech.

We quote the conclusion for its perfection in language and thought: The nation and the name of Washington are inseparable. One is linked indissolubly with the other. Both are glorious, both triumphant. Washington lives, and will live, because what he did was for the exaltation of man, the enrichment of conscience, and the establishment of a government which recognizes all the governed.

And so, too, will the nation live victorious over all obstacles, adhering to the immortal principles which Washington taught and Lincoln sustained.

Soup, Soap and Salvation. "Soup, Soap and Salvation" was the subject upon which Ensign Nora Hill addressed a small audience at the Salvation Army barracks last evening, but the latter two divisions of the topic were the only ones in evidence.

She told about the soup, had scrub bucket along as evidence of the use of the soap, and at her meeting, like all those held by Salvationists, an opportunity was offered to sinners to test the efficacy of the last.

Miss Hill appears to be a very bright young woman, but if she writes as she talks her "sermons" must have been hardly less panned when she was in the newspaper business. This laxity of language may be due, though, to a few years spent in the slums, where the officers, she says, to bring themselves in more thorough touch with those they hope to benefit, adopt the dress, customs and language of the slum.

The meeting opened in the usual Salvation Army style and just preceding the ensign's address, one of the soldiers sang a parody on "Poverty Row." The parody was intended to be particularly appropriate to the work of the slum corps, as Poverty Row, and worse, is the scene of the slum officer's labors.

Ensign Hill appeared upon the stage dressed in the costume which these officers wear. It was not the usual blue shirt and red jacket but instead a dark wool skirt, a worn black jersey which was covered by a little brown shawl and a black poke bonnet, which smelted than the blue ones which the women in the army usually wear. She carried with her a large galvanized iron pail and a scrubbing brush.

She explained that officers in the Army endeavor always to adapt themselves to circumstances, and had found that they could do their best work when they followed the modes of life of the people they worked among. That was the reason that the slum officers dressed as she did. In addition to copying the dress, she said, they endeavored to copy the manners and even the forms of speech of the people. In this adapting process the ensign seems to have excelled, for she has acquired the bearing and her words have the accent of the poor but respectable slum woman.

The Salvation Army, the ensign said, didn't care how a man had got down, it didn't stop to investigate the history of his fall or look up his pedigree, but it set to work to help him regain his position on the social ladder. Whether he fell through his own misdeeds or was thwarted most circumstances made no difference.

Returning to the way the officers adapted themselves, she said that she thought the human secret of the success of the Salvation Army, especially in the social work, was due to just this principle.

Ensign Hill acknowledged her indebtedness for the striking subject of her address to a Chicago newspaper man, and while referring to this she remarked she spoke from experience in both branches when she said there were two classes of people on this earth who never got their dues. One was newspaper reporters, and the other was Salvation Army officers.

The subject of her address came from a reply which the newspaper man made to an assertion that he heard made, that the army had no creed.

"Yes, it has," was the answer. "And the creed is soup, soap and salvation." This the ensign thought was particularly appropriate as the creed of the slum and social workers.

The three words, she explained, marked the steps by which the fallen were lifted up. They were usually hungry, and before they were given tracts or preached at they were given something to eat. When the inner man was satisfied they were given a chance to clean up and make themselves respectable and when this bodily reformation had been accomplished the spiritual reformation came much more naturally.—Mining Journal.

Miss Hill speaks at the local barracks on June 1st and 2nd.

CONDITIONS IN CUBA.

WORSER THAN EVEN THE FOREIGN RELATIONS COMMITTEE SUPPOSED.

Hundreds of American Starving Without a Chance Known to Treat—Present Sent to the Waiting for Some Over Act on the Part of Sp. In.

WASHINGTON, May 16.—The senate committee on foreign relations had the Cuban question under consideration on the basis of the report of the subcommittee appointed to confer with the president and Secretary Sherman. The report was prepared by Senators Davis and Foraker, the Republican members of the subcommittee. Senator Morgan, the Democratic member, declining to participate in it. The report consisted of a concise statement of the contents of official reports from American consuls in Cuba, bringing the information up to within a week of the present time. This report states the newspaper reports as to the situation of affairs in the island, and even goes further in depicting a gloomy situation than do most of the newspaper stories. Especial stress is laid upon the conditions of American citizens in the island. Of these it is positively stated that there are:

Hundreds in a Starving Condition and most wretchedly clothed. Death of Americans from starvation are daily reported. They are scattered in all parts of the island and are shown in consideration whatever, because of their American citizenship. They are generally persons who reside on plantations but who have been driven from their homes to the towns or concentration camps, and who, being among strangers without any means of subsistence, they are not allowed to return to their plantations or to pick berries or to secure the kind articles of subsistence. They are theoretically under the care of the Spanish army, but the army is without a commissariat, and they have no means of leaving the island. Their condition is pronounced wholly deplorable. The committee was especially impressed with the report and the opinion generally expressed that the situation should be remedied if possible.

Even Worse Than Imprisonment. It was considered as placing over a hundred upon the streets of Havana in relation to Cuba than the imprisonment of Americans, of which there are now comparatively few instances. It is reported to indicate that the wretched condition of all the inhabitants of the island because of the scarcity of food and money, and especially in the centers of population, and because also of the pressure of the most malignant diseases, such as yellow fever, smallpox and dysentery, these diseases the natives contract with comparative ease but they are especially oppressive to the Spanish soldiers.

The reports indicate that the Spanish army is not so strong now as it was a year ago, largely on account of these diseases, which they indicate no diminution of the insurgent forces. The reports upon which the subcommittee's brief was based were from various consuls, including Consul General Lee. They make no recommendation as to American policy but merely give the situation as they see it.

RECOMMENDED BY MCKINLEY. The President sends a message to Congress asking for American aid.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—President McKinley has sent the following message to Congress: To the Senate and House of Representatives: Official Information from our consuls in Cuba, establishes the fact that a large number of American citizens in the island are in a state of destitution, suffering from want of food and medicines. This applies particularly to the rural districts of central and eastern provinces. The agricultural classes have been forced from their farms into the nearest towns where they are without work or money.

The local authorities of the several towns however kindly disposed, are unable to relieve the needs of their own people, and altogether powerless to help our citizens.

The latest report of Consul General Lee estimates 900 to 800 Americans without means of support. I have ascertained that provisions would be made at once to relieve them. To this end, I recommend that Congress make an appropriation of not less than $50,000 to be immediately available under the direction of the secretary of state.

It is desirable that a part of the sum which may be appropriated by congress should be available in the hands of the secretary of state, also be used for the transportation of American widows who, destitute of funds, are unable to return to the United States, or who, without means to do so.

WILLIAM MCKINLEY. BAILLY OBJECTED.

Cuba Relief Bill Passed the Senate, but Was Side-tracked in the House. WASHINGTON, May 17.—The Cuban relief bill, which was passed by the senate on May 15th, was today voted down in the house. The bill provided for the relief of destitute Americans in Cuba, but Mr. Bailey of Texas, who is the author of the bill, objected to the bill, and the Cuban question was side-tracked.

House Did Not Act. WASHINGTON, May 17.—The house did not act on the senate resolution for the relief of American citizens in Cuba and at 3 o'clock adjourned until Thursday, by a vote of 80 to 71.

With many thanks to the doctor, but to had read of Chamberlain's Pain Balm and had instead of going for the physician I went to the store and bought a bottle of it. His wife did not approve of Mr. Rowland's purchase at first, but nevertheless applied the Balm thoroughly and in an hour's time was able to go to sleep. She now applies it whenever she feels an ache or pain and finds that it always gives relief. He says that no medicine which she had used ever did her so much good. The Balm is for sale by A. S. Putnam & Co. Druggists.

A THOUGHT

THAT KILLED A MAN!

He thought that he could trifle with disease. He was run down in health, felt tired and worn out, complained of dizziness, blindness, backaches and headaches. His liver and kidneys were out of order.

He thought to get well with Bright's Disease. The money he ought to have invested in a safe, reliable remedy went for a tombstone.

There is nothing else that can take its place. Allen's Foot-Powder, a powder for the feet. Cures painful, swollen, smarting feet and instantly restores the skin out of corns and bunions.

BREVITIES

Hindling trees' crews will visit the Soo this summer.

Angus McDougall of Germant, was in the city Saturday last.

A dance was held in the Germania-Castello building Monday evening.

There is a new sensation among the gossip. It is to be hoped that the story is false.

Prof Lee the brilliant editorial writer for the St. Ignace Enterprise, has resigned his position.

C. P. Hammond, representative of the Messenger Paper Co., Chicago, was a caller Wednesday.

Has it ever occurred to you that usually the persons receiving the largest salaries do the least work.

Prof Lewis will teach school in Germant township this summer having severed his connection with the St. Ignace Enterprise.

It is worthy of mention that a jury trial was held in Justice Thompson's court this week without the presence of Will P. Kefauver.

Mr. Hadenbrach complains that the scavengers are dumping refuse without regard to the limits prescribed by Dr. Duber, when he was health officer. Some of these careless fellows should be brought up with a short tune and heavily fined. Were this done in one or two cases the location of the cart preserling the limits would be learned.

A Chicago Swole by mistake applied to a Chicago dog license clerk for a marriage license. "It will cost you $1 a year for every dog you keep," replied the clerk, "Dog?" echoed the Swole. "Why, certainly," continued the clerk, "don't you want a dog license?" "Hal, no," cried the dog-licenselord. "My kaint afford to buy dog licenses any. Any want to get only a woman sex."

R. B. Waddell is the busiest man in town these days. He has the personal supervision over the hundreds of houses belonging to the Chicago and Western Lumber Companies and at this season the average tenant develops a taste or appetite for wall paper, kalsomine, and general repairs. This with his duties as manager of the Weston Mfg. Co., fully occupy every moment of his time.

The United States supreme court recently handed down an opinion to the effect that poultry running at large, in wild game and the party upon whom they trespass, has the right to kill the fowl. The decision will be good news to the people who have their gardens torn up by the neighbor's hens, but it is little to end in a scrapping match and somebody getting black eyes or a broken nose, to say nothing of the cuss words that may fly thick and fast.—Cheyogon News.

A Legion Organized. Manistique Legion No. 108, of the National Protective Legion, was organized at K. O. T. M. hall last Saturday evening. The national secretary of the order, Mr. Scott of Waverly, N. Y., was present as was also Dr. Conners of St. Ignace, the district organizer. On the evening previous Mr. Scott addressed an interested audience explaining in a concise and plain manner the workings of the Legion and the benefits to be derived from holding a certificate in same. Also on the evening of organization prior to the real work of the evening he again explained the plan. After a short recess the organization was perfected by the election and installation of the following officers:

Past President, Mrs. Minna Brooks. President, Dr. A. E. Sattler. Secretary, Geo. E. Holben. Treasurer, Geo. A. Brooks. Chaplain, John Mosher. Conductor, Angus McLeod. Inside Door-keeper, Chris Drevdahl. Outside Door-keeper, John Ekvall. Trustees—Geo. G. Rogers, John Mosher, Dr. Sattler.

The legion has thirty charter members and bids fair to become one of the largest organizations in the city. In the lines of sick benefits and investment it has no equal. National Secretary Scott made many friends here during his short stay. He is unassuming and earnest, and if that the officers of the parent organization are like him they should be elected for life. Dr. Conners of St. Ignace, district organizer, also assisted in the organization. There are only two legions in the upper peninsula—St. Ignace and Manistique.

Mrs. Babcock was in the city this week.

No person who will work need wear patched trousers in this age of cheap clothing.

Dr. Campbell, who has been A. Deston's bartender for several months, has resigned his position and will return to the Soo.

Manistique experienced the heaviest of a busy day Tuesday. The Chicago Lumbering Co., was informed, distributed $20,000 that day.

Gal Smith, has in times just not been an ardent admirer of Governor Pingree, and for that reason was removed from his position as member of the board of control of the Marquette prison. F. O. Clark succeeded him. The appointment is a good one.

How a Boy Succeeded. Boys sometimes think they cannot afford to be manly and faithful to the little things. A story is told of a boy of the right stamp, and what came of his faithfulness.

A few years ago a large drug firm in New York city advertised for a boy. Next day the store was thronged with applicants, among them a queer-looking little fellow, accompanied by a woman, who proved to be his aunt, in lieu of faithfulness parents, by whom he had been abandoned. Looking at his wife, the advertiser said: "Can't take him; places all right. Besides, he is to be small."

"I know he is small," said the woman; "but he is willing and faithful."

There was a wrinkle in the boy's eyes which made the merchant think again. A partner in the firm volunteered to remark that he "did not see what they wanted with such a boy; he wasn't bigger than a pint of cider." But, after consultation, the boy was set to work.

A few days later, a call was made on the boys in the store for some of the little fellow's work.

In the meanwhile of the night the merchant looked in to see if all was well in the store, and presently discovered this youthful protégé scissoring dresses. "What are you doing?" said the man. "I don't tell you to work nights."

"I know you did not tell me so, I thought I might as well be doing something." In the morning the cashier got orders to "double that boy's wages, for he is willing."

Only a few weeks elapsed before a show of wild beasts passed through the streets; and, very naturally, all hands in the store rushed to witness the spectacle. A thief saw his opportunity and entered at the rear door to seize something, but in a twinkling found himself firmly clutched by the diminutive clerk aforesaid, and, after a struggle, was captured. Not only was a robbery prevented, but valuable articles taken from other stores were recovered. When asked why he stayed behind to watch when all others quit their work, he replied: "You told me never to leave the store when others were absent, and I thought I'd stay."

Orders were immediately given once more, "Double that boy's wages, he is willing and faithful."

To-day that boy is a member of the firm.—Presbyterian Banner.

The Toller's Home. Home is the wage-earner's paradise. When, on returning from his daily task almost worn out he finds his wife cheerful, a substantial, well-cooked supper on the table, plain thought by his children clean and orderly, and his house neat and in good trim, his heart is cheered and his arms glow strong. In such a presence he soon forgets his weariness, and after a night's refreshing sleep in a clean bed he feels as thoroughly equipped for another hard day's toil as David did when with five smooth stones in his shepherd's bag, he went out to meet Goliath. God bless the homes of the Toller's of America! They are the foundation of our free institutions, the laboring man's paradise, the hope of the country. And God bless the wives and mothers who turn their thoughts from the fashions and gayeties of society and give their heart's best energies to husbanding the earnings of their companions in toil and to the making of happier homes for them and their children.—Selected.

PRAYING SOLDIERS.

SKETCHES ABOUT CHAPLAINS OF THE UNION ARMY.

Lauderous Incidents of Campaigning—Abundantness on the Battlefield—Colonel Moody's Exquisite Order—Chaplain Haggerty's Raw Remarks.

The life of an army chaplain is peculiar in many respects. In many respects he resembles the men of the ranks on the plain of their deeper sentimentality. He is a man of the highest moral and intellectual attainments. He is a man of the highest moral and intellectual attainments. He is a man of the highest moral and intellectual attainments.

"Early in the morning the chaplain of another regiment appeared on the scene. The weary Ohio chaplain had found some straw with which he was constructing a bed for the wounded boys. No sooner did he note the arrival of his fellow chaplain than he informed the latter as to the condition of the stray stock and his own plan in the work of improving beds for the wounded. Immediately after calling the boys to the straw bed he was called to another part of the field.

"I have Colonel Moody's own word for it that the unfinished portion of the monument was 'Hail Columbia,' but the later fragment of his exclamation was drowned by the roar of battle. After the engagement was over he was requested to report at division headquarters, where he encountered a redoubt and distinguished assemblage of generals, colonels and other officers.

"Colonel Moody," said the general of the division, "I am sure that you understand that the regulations of this army forbid swearing. I have learned that your regiment was most to go into action, you made use of very emphatic language, which might possibly come under that class of our regulations."

"There were several moments of profound silence before the general continued. "But, colonel, your boys cheered your command so gloriously that I forgive you, any regulations or no army regulations, and I congratulate you on having such a regiment."

"But I must tell you a story of Chaplain Engert's first experience of soldier life. It is one which he never tires of repeating. The regiment was from Missouri and was stationed along the thirty-second Wisconsin, of which I was chaplain, while we were in camp at Memphis. Both regiments were new in service, but the thirty-second was a little the greener if anything. The encampment continued at that time nearly 600 troops, with General Sherman in command.

"For the first time the thirty-second was called upon to furnish pickets along Sherman's line. The boys managed to get through the night all right, but as they were returning to camp they were ordered to go into a ravine near at hand and discharge their muskets. Instead of firing them simultaneously in a single volley they should have done, one soldier started the discharge, another quickly followed him, and then the entire detachment broke into a haphazard fusillade.

"Suddenly the long roll was sounded by Engert's regiment, and was then taken up in turn by every regiment in camp, and every corps was drumming for dear life. Next the alarm gun of Fort Pickens thundered out its warning. General officers with their staffs began dashing hither and thither in the hottest haste. General Sherman was instantly on the scene and began to make disposition of the troops.

SINGING IN CAMP.

Songs of the Alps That Found Favor With the Boys in Hinc.

Supper is at last over. The phelids are stationed, the pipes are lit, the moon rises in all the brilliancy of an Indian summer night and the deliciousness of the surroundings sweeps us in song. There is no more question who will lead the singing than there is who will lead the marching in battle. He got an unwritten and irrevocable commission as regimental singing master of the first which regiment went into such a camp as this and all the finely-mindful litted up their voices in song. He was the first that rang out prominently, over all the others. It is a tempo robusto, or tempo presto, to be sung in a strong, full, and strong voice. Oh, say, can you see by the dawn's early light what so proudly we hail'd in the twilight's last gleaming, whose colors so brightly wave up from his throat like the pipe of a church organ and whose as the strains from a French horn. Possibly he is a model of home and the shaly phelids of the world, through the woods to the singing school, the least noted a pastor, like a phelid of silver bells, he brills an apostrophe to the queen of night:

Bill us, silver moon! Bill us, silver moon! While the nightingale's sag is in her throat.

For I never, never may With my true love will stray By the sweet silver light, Honey moon, honey moon!

Then the music and the moonlight struck him in the forehead, love and Linn tangle in his tangled memory, for, unawares, he and half under his breath, he sings to his sweetheart:

Oh, I loved a little boy, Bob, I loved him, And I told her 'neath the old Apple tree—

And then, as if framing in music the thought of the "little beauty" in her fatherly mother's home, he sings to his sweetheart:

Dearest love, do you remember When we last did meet? Have you still one that you loved me Knowing at my feet?

Laughter and innuendo have long since ceased. Flat on their backs, the phelids and the stars through the pine and hemlock boughs, the boys lie quiet snoring while the soldier sings. "Willie, We have a Soldier's Son," "Mother, is the Battle Over," etc. This all frayed concert goes on for two solid, happy hours, all too soon, and much unutilized halcyon, which are always breaking in upon the pleasures and occupations of the men, strike up the wall!

Two Federal Flags. The museum at Governors Island, New York harbor, is full of glorious relics of old battles, but to the student of history the most interesting of these is by far the most interesting.

In front of the collection of battleflags are two small standard on them are two flags carefully displayed. One of them is the Federal flag of General Grant, the other that of General Sherman.

Make Your Mark. He who makes up his mind that he can't into the world to do something, and then goes to work to do it, will be of service to mankind. It is the one who will make his mark among men. It may be a humble mark, but it will be well worth preserving. He will not be forgotten when his life is ended.

The body of Fred McCallum, whose death by drowning at McDonald Lake was extensively chronicled in The Pioneer-Tribune weeks ago, was found on Friday forenoon of last week, by Andrew Linberg. The portion of the lake where the accident was supposed to have occurred has been frequently dragged but without result. On the day in question, Mr. Linberg grappled a bag of beans a portion of the load of provisions that Mr. McCallum was taking from Ross' camp to his home at the time of the fatal fall. The dragging was then confined to that spot and the body quickly found. The body was brought to this city Friday evening and prepared for burial by Amerson & Co. The remains were taken to Gaylord for interment. The widow is in straitened circumstances, and the men employed at Ross' camp raised nearly $40 so that her wishes as to the place of burial could be gratified.

A Manistique woman says that she thinks of her friends as flowers and treats them accordingly. Some of them require care and culture of a delicate plant, while others are hardy and strong and do not need much attention.

A "circulating library" social was given under the auspices of the Methodist congregation, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. A. Brooks, last Tuesday evening. A 25 cent supper was served, for 10 cents, and the net proceeds exceeded to $1.

A juvenile bicyclist says that jealousy prompted Alderman Rose to request the passage of an ordinance limiting the speed to 8 miles an hour. He hinted that Miller wanted company, and was never assured of that before the speed was regulated.

Why send money to the heathen when so much work remains to be done at home. Rev. Rogers made a tour through a portion of the country last week and preached at several school houses. A number of the auditors told him that they had not heard a sermon in seven years.

Barns the chimney sweep, who has been cutting a wide swath in police court circles recently, was fined $5 last week for disturbing the peace of his fellow tenant, Rev. Tennessee. He was given twenty days in which to pay the amount, and the result was the disappearance of this troublesome character.

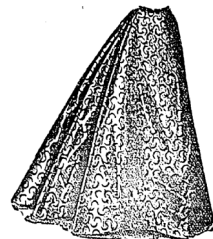

The advertisements on the opera house drop curtain are well signposted. There have been so many business changes during the past few years or since the curtain was placed in position that the firm names are misleading. Messrs. Guinan & McLeod are contemplating revising the advertisements. A good idea.

Nothing strange in this item: A professional carpet layer committed suicide at Battle Creek last week. A semi-annual tilt at that sort of business almost drives the average householder to desperation. But when a man attempts Providence by making it a daily diet, suicide is not an unlooked for sequel.

The bicycle manufacturers' labor under the indication that country editors are clumps, and endeavor to make contracts with them asking for sufficient cash to pay for the wheel and a bonus of $50 or $60 in free advertising. Such propositions invariably find a resting place in the waste basket. There are editors however, that are not posted as to the uses of waste baskets, and persist in paying $40 in cash and $60 in advertising space for a $40 wheel.

Girls are awfully blind to their own interests. It is claimed and proven that the boys who are petted are almost without exception dependent upon their parents, and that not one earns more than enough to keep himself in clothes and new cans. The boys who will be the future rich men can't dance because they have never taken the time and money to learn, and never appear in society. They are the boys seen going to work early who have bank accounts of their own and who give money to their mothers instead of coaxing money from them.

The Frank Tucker dramatic company disbanded at Kalkaska last week. Mr. Tucker has finally decided to have his injured leg amputated below the knee, and hopes to return to the stage next winter.

Queen Victoria will have three queens and two kings at her jubilee. We know a Manistique man who once held that kind of a hand but he was prevented from coupling on to a jubilee by a man who had four sevens.

The Grehm general game law has passed the state legislature. The open deer season is from Nov. 8 to Nov. 30 inclusive. The partridge season will be from Oct. 1 to Dec. 1. There will be no open season for duck shooting in the spring time.

An old cyclist says: From the frequency with which requests for the 'loan of your wheel' are made by some people one might be pardoned for thinking that the sole mission in this world of the owner of a bicycle was to lend it to all his friends and acquaintances. Now, as a matter of fact, no one has the least excuse for making such a request of the owner of a bicycle, and owners should firmly and emphatically refuse to comply with them when made. If a man or woman can not afford to pay for the amusement of cycling they ought to forgo it. I do not mean by this that if an unusually good natured friend offers to lend a 'bicycle' one is morally bound to refuse, but I do mean that no one ought to be surprised or offended if the request for the loan of a wheel is refused. A bicycle is not a cheap, easily replaced article, such as a baseball bat or a pair of skates. Against the borrowing of such things there is no law, but your wheel is a different matter. No one, not even the most expert rider, can guarantee it against mishap, even if the accident be only the puncture of a tire. Few people enjoy the process of confessing that the borrowed wheel has come to grief while in their hands, and I suggest that, for even of the most good natured of friends, are not moved to regret their unskillfulness when the mangled remains of their machines are brought home. Never lend your wheel, and set down most aggressively on all who make a request for the loan of it. These frantic bicycle borrowers should be taught lessons.

Tuesday last was the tenth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. George Austin. The anniversary was appropriately celebrated by a party at Mrs. Austin's lady friends who spent the afternoon with her. Sufficient tuncare to supply two or three families was presented her as a reminder of the occasion.
