We will wait a reasonable time for the return of those chairs that were stolen from the front of this office last Monday evening. If they are not forthcoming we will give the thief a whirl in the courts. The chairs were not worth much but the thief will pay dearly for them if the chairs are not returned at once.

Business is better than a year ago. The volume is larger and there are more people employed than prior to the last presidential election. This is from "breadstreet," which is an American paper. In fact every paper in the country, partisan as well as non-partisan, except a nole-eyed calamity shrieker here and there, sees the business improvement and mentions it.

The vast concourse of people on the streets Monday afternoon were startled by the ringing of the fire bell. It was soon learned that the house occupied by Jim Norton was on fire, but by the prompt work of neighbors the flames were extinguished before much damage was done. The fire started in the sawdust with which the house is "banked," and ate its way to the cement of a cellar window.

The Frank E. Long Co. concluded its week's engagement in this city last Saturday evening, and departed for Manitowish Lake that night on the Hart Line. The company is first class but it did not receive the patronage it deserved. Mr. Long frankly explained that he had lost money here and that he did not feel like presenting some one with the Monach bicycle as advertised and go still further in the hole. He kept the bike.

There was a cutting affray near Clio last Saturday. Hiram Kinney was employed in Geo. Austin's camp near Hunts Spur and on the day in question called for his time and left the camp. A pair of pantaloons belonging to William Burns left at the same time. When Burns returned to camp he ascertained his loss and went in pursuit of the thief. When intercepted, Kinney refused to give up the property. A fight followed. Kinney was severely slashed with a knife, and Burns was bitten about the face. He recovered his property.

The advisability of holding county fairs is being agitated again. We hear it rumored that the supervisors will be petitioned to donate $1,000 from the general fund for this purpose with the understanding that a similar amount be subscribed by the citizens. The benefits to be derived from such an enterprise are apparent to any one giving the matter thought.

The all absorbing topic of conversation is the proposed excursion to Mackinac Island Friday July 23, under the auspices of the Epworth League of the M. E. Church. The fare has been fixed at the remarkably low price of 75 cents for the round trip. The boat leaves this port at 8:30 o'clock and arrives at the island at 6 o'clock Saturday morning. That Manistique is an ideal place to spend the summer months is patent to all. It is cooler here in the summer and warmer in the winter than it is at any other lake port in Michigan.

Next Sunday evening, Rev. John M. Shank will give another of his descriptive New Testament talks, subject, "The healing of the blind man." A chorus of girls will lead the singing.

The bicycle races were the main attraction for the afternoon. The presence of three outside riders made the outcome of the event speculative, but Ekstrom, the Manistique flyer, soon settled all doubts in that regard. He won every thing he entered for and seemed to be playing with his competitors.—Soo Democrat.

That Manistique has the distinction of having within its precincts the fleetest bicyclist in the upper peninsula is an undisputed fact. Carl Ekstrom is the rider that has made that distinction possible. He was pitted against several very clever riders at the Soo last Monday, and vanquished them all. The Soc. had no local favorite in the various events, but wore Ekstrom's colors, shouted for Ekstrom, and in many ways proved their friendly feeling for Manistique and its representative. The Soo can best us in skating, but that city is "not in it" when it comes to bicycling.

The Ladies Aid Society of the Norwegian Lutheran church will hold a bazaar on July 30 and 31.

Mr. and Mrs. E. D. Beeson and family spent the 4th with friends and relatives at Masonville.

Free song and gospel services are to be held Sunday, July 11, at 4:15 p. m. cor. Cedar and Oak Sts. The same order of services will be held a later hour at the Baptist church. You are invited.

B. Y. P. U.

The famous Olaf Torbett Co., so well known here, will visit Manistique the latter part of August, if Manistique Guinan & McLeod are given sufficient encouragement. This company must have a big guarantee and it is within the power of our people to hear these actors if they signify their desire to "not in it" when it comes to bicycling.

CAPTAIN GLOSE

BY CAPTAIN CHARLES KING.

(Copyright, 1914, by J. B. Lippincott Co.)

XVI.—CONTINUED.

Then, when May came round and Lambert asked for three days leave, Minor hummed and haved and looked at his staff officer and finally requested that it be submitted to writing...

All this time he had written every few weeks to Glose, and got a very nice letter in reply, written by a young fellow who announced himself as the captain's brother, Walter. The captain was getting better and much better...

And then one day there came a telegram to the commanding officer of Company "G" at the barracks with the brief announcement that a soldier serving in the Twenty-sixth Infantry under the name of Roberts had been identified by Corporal Floyd Walton, Fourth Cavalry, as Private Riggs, a deserter from the tenth. Please send charges and descriptive list. Two weeks later, Lambert was summoned to Austin as a witness before the general court-martial appointed for his trial.

When your wishes are so promptly granted and you so easily get your follow you might shake hands with him, but may I'll have to do. With that he solemnly took the kitten by a furry paw and with ludicrous gravity gave it a formal shake, then down the steps and crunched along the sidewalk while she started from the stupor which had seized her.

"Well, why didn't the wide world tell you come from?" was her nonchalant greeting. "Ah, supposed you were dead or buried." (There is no such thing as spelling that word with a w.)

So Lambert made his bow to Miss Ogden, who had her own womanly intuitions as to the extent of his eagerness to see sister Esther, and who promptly declared she had to go home, and went without much delay over the leave-taking, in spite of Kate's voluble remonstrance and good-fellowly appointment. Miss Walton, in fact, hung on to her all the way to the gate and made every proper and apparent effort to detain her there, but the white head had Miss Betty Ogden; she would not delay. She had heard sister Esther talk of Mr. Lambert time and again, and had read in Eastern papers, or in silence or simulated scorn a whole volume of information. She went springing lightly, laughingly away, and Kate watched her until she was out of sight, then came dawdling slowly back. She will know it would be unlike Esther to come down inside of 20 minutes.

Lambert was seated in the big wicker chair, amusing himself with a kitten. He did not even look up when the family returned. "Hasn't Esther come down yet?" "No, but you wish you'd, ten minutes ago." "Possibly she hasn't understood. I didn't hear her answer. Indeed, I could hardly hear her call." "That's because you were listening to Dettie Avignon." "I have no denial; none offered." "She doesn't like Yankee any better, I'm told."

run and call her back and tell her she shall I tell her—that I only wanted to say good-by to her, Sergeant. "I haven't said how do you do yet." "You see between Miss Ogden and the cat, you were so engrossed that I should have time to devote to my 'Dermat' me." And carefully depicting the chair, he quickly bent low and raised toward his eyes Miss Walton, in an so glad to see you again. This fore night has seemed a year.

"Fav'n'tigh! It's five weeks to look since you were lynch." Then, suddenly and unconsciously: "Not that I can say." "It starts up in feigned astonishment and how sweet of you to keep count." (Something more than mere teasing and merriment was in the sparkle of his eyes and the twitching of his mouth.)

These five weeks have been five years. But she had sprung to the doorway, wrathful at being so scolded and surprised. "Ah didn't keep count. It was Moh'." "Ah don't say how long you stay away or how soon you go. Esthah! You ain't you any more coming down? Mr. Lambert says he's got to go."

"You haven't told me how Mrs. Walton and Mr. Sergeant, Miss Kate's, and how Cousin Bert?" "Cousin Bert's up at Quilman; he's Walton; and Moh' 'bout the same. She'll not interest in any better so long as I'd wish, which he is—wishing a Yankee jacket."

"That is queer, isn't it?" The queer thing about it is that he's just been discharged into the regular troop, he's charged into at Selma. A classmate of mine is second lieutenant in the same troop, and wrote me about it." "Miss Walton, you continually surprise, and now you delight me! This is really promising! A southern girl? Her father ought to be a Yankee officer."

But she flew at him from the doorway, her eyes flashing fire. He seized upon her and held her struggling, quadruped, paw forewent, between him and the impending vengeance. "Oh! Ah do despise an' hate you come, my'reen, spiteful, hateful! You know Ah never meant any such thing. Ah'd soon him if he was. Ah'd tain't make back on him—no Ah do on you now. Ah wish it was 'twal!"

And, suiting action to the word, the tumbling, clattering ringlets which fell upon her pretty shoulders were flung almost in his face as she whirled about and marched back to the doorway. "Wal," said Lambert, mornfully, "is an ill-wind that blows nobody good. Your wish bids to be granted, and I think I won't disturb you. I'll be glad to take it with my baggage. The hotel porter will come for it. Good-night, please. You seem to be going to Yank. Good-by, Miss Kate. When your wishes are so promptly granted and you so easily get your follow you might shake hands with him, but may I'll have to do."

With that he solemnly took the kitten by a furry paw and with ludicrous gravity gave it a formal shake, then down the steps and crunched along the sidewalk while she started from the stupor which had seized her. Then she sprang to the edge of the veranda, and with a gasp and a gasp of listening for the sounding of the summons for a prayer, heard, as he expected, the half-tremulous, half-tremulous hail: "Yes," said Lambert.

"Why you going?" "To Dettie. I tell you? I'm ordered to." "Well, why didn't the wide world tell you come from?" was her nonchalant greeting. "Ah, supposed you were dead or buried." (There is no such thing as spelling that word with a w.)

two hundred of 'em. They've got that stage load long before now, escort me all. The whole thing's over with. If there were any women 't would be different; every man of us would go then to try to rescue them; but there were only men. I'm as sorry for Col. Seward as you can be; but we can't get his take when the Indians have gone. We can't afford to lose any more of our people."

The speaker was the captain of the party of Texas frontiersmen—mangers they were afterwards called, when their organization was more complete; but those were the days when the Star state was uninvaded by railways and when to its very heart—as far as the capital was concerned—Keweenaw and the Comanches often railed in full force, ravaging the scattered settlements far and wide. Lieutenant Lambert, his duty of the deserter Riggs, had obtained permission to delay his return a few days and taken stage to Lampasa, where Floyd Walton was stationed with his troop.

Walton was not willing to separate without seeing him and delivering in person the little packages so hurriedly acquired at Selma. He had, however, there was no man in the army in whom the young officer now felt so deep an interest. Was he not Kate's brother-in-law, and that brother had some influence over that obstinate hermit? It was not the porter of the hotel who went for these packages. It was Lambert himself, hoping, of course, to see the young lady whom he had so successfully tormented the evening previous; but his scheme had been checked in a most absurdly unromantic fashion. The New Orleans evening paper among its military items contained a brief paragraph to the effect that Lieutenant Lambert had been ordered to Austin as a witness before a court-martial there in session, but would return to the barracks in a week or two.

inimities. Yet even those well knew the hopelessness of the situation as a whole. They were far too few in number to undertake the pursuit and attack of such a band as this. Moreover, their own wives and children as they were left in danger were they to pursue two or three of their number to ride post-haste on the trail of the cavalry, who, at the first alarm, had ridden away toward the westward. There was no chance of heading them off or driving them away from their attack the defenseless settlements.

There were, therefore, absolutely no hopes to go to the rescue of the stage party, if, as seemed beyond hope, any of them were still alive, and Lambert, burning with eagerness to do something and tormented with anxiety as to the fate of "brother Floyd," found himself hurriedly.

A sergeant and some semi-invalidated men had been left in charge of camp, and when they were gathered into a formation, but not of an enclosing nature. The nearest posts to the westward from which help might come were at the base of "brother Floyd," found himself hurriedly.

The wheat fields are in the highest condition.

It was not the porter of the hotel who went for these packages. It was Lambert himself, hoping, of course, to see the young lady whom he had so successfully tormented the evening previous; but his scheme had been checked in a most absurdly unromantic fashion. The New Orleans evening paper among its military items contained a brief paragraph to the effect that Lieutenant Lambert had been ordered to Austin as a witness before a court-martial there in session, but would return to the barracks in a week or two.

With that he solemnly took the kitten by a furry paw and with ludicrous gravity gave it a formal shake, then down the steps and crunched along the sidewalk while she started from the stupor which had seized her. Then she sprang to the edge of the veranda, and with a gasp and a gasp of listening for the sounding of the summons for a prayer, heard, as he expected, the half-tremulous, half-tremulous hail: "Yes," said Lambert.

"Why you going?" "To Dettie. I tell you? I'm ordered to." "Well, why didn't the wide world tell you come from?" was her nonchalant greeting. "Ah, supposed you were dead or buried." (There is no such thing as spelling that word with a w.)

So Lambert made his bow to Miss Ogden, who had her own womanly intuitions as to the extent of his eagerness to see sister Esther, and who promptly declared she had to go home, and went without much delay over the leave-taking, in spite of Kate's voluble remonstrance and good-fellowly appointment. Miss Walton, in fact, hung on to her all the way to the gate and made every proper and apparent effort to detain her there, but the white head had Miss Betty Ogden; she would not delay. She had heard sister Esther talk of Mr. Lambert time and again, and had read in Eastern papers, or in silence or simulated scorn a whole volume of information. She went springing lightly, laughingly away, and Kate watched her until she was out of sight, then came dawdling slowly back. She will know it would be unlike Esther to come down inside of 20 minutes.

Lambert was seated in the big wicker chair, amusing himself with a kitten. He did not even look up when the family returned. "Hasn't Esther come down yet?" "No, but you wish you'd, ten minutes ago." "Possibly she hasn't understood. I didn't hear her answer. Indeed, I could hardly hear her call." "That's because you were listening to Dettie Avignon." "I have no denial; none offered." "She doesn't like Yankee any better, I'm told."

Up to His Looks.

One of the most private secretaries at the national capital is still new to his honors. One day a newspaper woman, full of interest, burst into the office of this secretary's chief. The great man was out. "Can you tell me when he will be in?" she asked. "He'll be in this afternoon," said the secretary. "Well," said the newspaper woman, "I haven't a cent to give you, but I'll give you a look at my photograph. It's a very nice one."

Miss Hooner—Thanks, dear, but I've stopped smoking. You don't mind, I never dreamed that you would become a backslider. "Oh, that's all right," said the other. "I've only stopped till I'm better. I'm not sure of the trouble in Cholly's complaint that the doctor says is due to a yellow kid." "Yellow kid?" "Yellow kid?" "Yellow kid?"

The June rains, which were so long in coming, have been so abundant that the crops are in the highest condition. The wheat fields are in the highest condition. Particulars Are Given, but Report Says That Ten Persons Were Killed—Great Damage to Live Stock and Crops in the Surrounding Country.

DULUTH, July 7.—Disasters recorded at Duluth offices here say that a cyclone has obliterated the town of Lowry and that four people were killed and several injured. Particulars are meager, but it is learned that the cyclone traveled from southwest to northeast, and that the town of Lowry was right in the track of the cloud. A second report is that seven persons were killed and many injured, while still another report is that 10 were killed. Reports from the surrounding country show that great damage was done to live stock and standing grain. Practically everything in the path of the storm is ruined.

Particulars of the epidemic cloud were seen in Duluth about 7 o'clock. ZACHARY TAYLOR'S FACE. It appears now as it did when the old man was in the White House. On Tuesday, April 25, while New Yorkers were doing honor to the memory of Gen. Grant, a small group of friends of another president went to his tomb to look at his sturdy face and recall the stories of his stirring life, which went out almost half a century ago.

The glass covered the face of the dead executive is always exposed to the sun. The face was as white as marble, and everything about the body seemed to be unchanging and perfectly preserved.

The Taylor family burial ground is two miles northeast of St. Matthew's, a suburb of Louisville, on the Short Line railroad, and is one of the most beautiful in the state. Probably with the one exception of the first president at Mount Vernon, none of the executives of the United States lies in a more beautiful spot than does Gen. Zachary Taylor.

The burial ground is within 300 yards of the old Taylor homestead. It is within 200 yards of the Brownsville pike, and occupies exactly an acre. It slopes to the east, and is surrounded by a five-foot wall of stone. This wall has stood for many years, but not a single denary or carelessness in its keeping can be seen. It stands solid and firm and gives promise of standing for a century yet.

Just to the east of the entrance to the vault which contains the body of the general lies the tomb of his wife. It is a fine old-fashioned, plain vault, which are now seldom seen. A covering of myrtle keeps it green the year around.

Slates were taken from the vault and can be easily seen by travelers. The plain, solid iron door has no inscription, but on a marble slab above the door is a "Thick Seal."

Had a Thicker Seal. Sacramento, Cal., July 5.—Charles Yates, a Hawaiian, who conducts a saloon in this city, was shot by an enraged crowd from above at a distance of a few feet and the bullet, which was 41 caliber, was flattened on top of Yates' skull to the thickness of a dime and the services of a surgeon were required to remove it. Yates went back to his place of business and thought of four persons. They are Miss Lou Sanders and Miss Mary Arbor, both of Little Rock, and Joseph and Jacob Sanders, Miss Arbor's brothers. The brothers were in a skiff on the river, when they had gone to row the fire-throwing. A steamer ran down the skiff, throwing all the occupants into the water.

HUMMING BIRDS.

A diminutive flier and its tiny little legs. Suddenly a glint shot from the point where my gaze was dreamily focused. There was a flash and a hummingbird was fast in my eyes followed the contour of each of the small boughs 10 feet above me, more twice from a stem to a greater branch, which in turn deflected from a mighty outstretched arm of the giant. Presently suspicion centered in an insignificant, lichen-covered twig on the upper side of a branch as large, perhaps, as a lady's wrist. It was like a dozen others, yet not exactly like them. The lichen seemed to me just a shade grayer and more regular, and the knob was a trifle too round. I feared to take my eyes away, lest it were before I had proved it to be only a natural occurrence. The sudden glint again struck my eye, though I was watching her, with wings vibrating themselves in a mazy point, an exquisite ray-through-thrill, it settled on the diminutive cup of lichen, and I had found my first hummingbird nest. By a sudden upward above, and then crawling carefully down on a separate limb, one could look over the nest, scarcely a yard away, to admire the tiny white eggs and even more fairy-like nest, marvellously woven inside with the finest and softest of spider webs, and a tiny pellicular against the weather with delicate lichen, which just turned the rim, so as to shed any insistent rain-drops, and a tiny white web of white gauze, which was fastened to the whole wood, having fitted in a circle made by joining the index finger and thumb.—C. L. Lauer, in Scribner's.

GAVE THE WATER HIS FEE. An irascible man's ignorance of the law costs him a fine of $10. The glibular and florid old gentleman, as he sat down at the table, pulled a dollar bill out of his pocket and handed it to two, handed one piece to the waiter, replaced the other in his pocket, and said: "Water, I am anxious to see you, the other bill. Do you understand?" "Yes, sir," replied the waiter, and became as assiduous as a mother with her first child.

But some inexplicable reason the old gentleman grew more and more dissatisfied his meal progressed to the point where he recalled the stories of his stirring life, which went out almost half a century ago.

One of the recently-arrived Irish girls obtained a situation in a fashionable house on Madison avenue, where there is a room, something that was utterly unknown to Bridget. After she had been in the house a day or two she appeared before her mistress with her wardrobe under her arm.

"In after'n' h'm, yer min." "This is after'n' h'm, Bridget," remarked her mistress. "Can you remain in my room until I supply you with a new dress?" "Not another hour, miss. Me sowl is aye distressed out of me. There is a bare shlee in the house."—Jamaica Reporter.

Floored Again. Mr. Hicks—a burned child dreads the fire. One of his neighbors military services and makes out a strong case for the use of motor wagons for such purposes, and advances arguments to show that electricity is a power being developed from such service, owing to the impracticability of properly charging in the field or on route, so that steam and gas engines are more reliable, and that between these steam has the preference for great powers, at least, since the present motor factories at present have not proved satisfactory for the same purpose. Iron tires alone meet the requirements of this service. Practically all automobile vehicles for military service must be carefully designed steam traction engines capable of drawing trains where horses can go. In the opinion of the writer it is probable that machinery in warfare may soon enter the field service as extensively as it has already entered other departments.—Chicago Chronicle.

OUR INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Its Celebration a Great Success. Only One Accident to Mar Its Enjoyment.

The most successful Fourth of July celebration ever held in Manistique was the one held last Monday. The day was perfect, and although the air was surcharged with the smoke of burned powder the whole day, but one serious accident was reported—that of Russell Mosher. The large crowd was good natured to a remarkable degree and no arrests were found necessary.

The average small boy was up with the lark that morning and with all the loud noised inventions deemed necessary for the proper celebration of the day, banished sleep from the eyes of the older patriots, who while they are patriotic, do not allow an excess of it to interfere with their hours for slumber.

The procession was formed in the vicinity of the Western Mfg. Co. plant under the auspices of Mr. Norman Fox who acted as officer of the day instead of Dr. Burdick, who found it impossible to act in that capacity.

The procession consisted of the Manistique Cornet Band; G. F. Fuller Post G. A. R.; a float containing "Columbia," "Uncle Sam," and a boy of charming little Indies each one representing a state of the Union; the Macabees; Calhounians; floats representing The Star Opera House "bovery," and the C. L. blacksmith shop, while scores of bicyclists followed in the rear. After traveling the principal streets the procession halted at the Central School grounds where the program as published last week was followed. Rev. J. M. Shaak delivered a spirited address.

Miss Percy Garner impersonated Columbia—she was an ideal Columbia too. W. A. McKinney was "Uncle Sam," and his suit was an exact reproduction of what the fashion plates claim is the correct thing for "Uncle Sam" to wear.

The ladies representing the various states were—

Addie Hill, Winnie Orr, Mildred Quis, Olga Jorgensen, Agnes Klugstad, Edna Zezema, Pearl Parkerson, Minnie Macaberts, Leona Quis, Grace Burnett, Christian Stoerer, Kattie Kearns, Maud Kearns, Hilda Ekberg, Clara Goldberg, Gertrude Greenwood, Miss Langens, Beata Oberg, Mary Hough, Arvida Aralastran, Esther and Jennie Matties, Olga Strandell, Minnie and Lucille Roberts, Hannah Christensen, Frank Ness, Ananias Ness, Max Norberg, May Austin, Wannie McWilliams, Gladys Currier, May Hanes, Cassie McMillan, Annie E. Fiedt, Edith Smith, Carrie Loosa, Edna Jackenbrach, Tera Garner, Alva and Beryl Kinnear, Jessie Johnson.

The bicycle races at the Driving Park began at one o'clock and a crowd variously estimated at from 1500 to 2,000 was in attendance. The races were all hotly contested and the winners enthusiastically cheered. Summaries of the various events follow:

After the races the crowd congregated on Cedar street where the running and sack race were conducted. The tug of war between the East and West sides was declared a draw and the purse divided. Fred King, Geo. D. Wolf and Godfred Olson "double-teamed" on the grassed pole and secured the $8 bill placed on the top.

The display of fireworks was given in the triangle west of J. S. Shippeny's home. It was quite elaborate and was witnessed by thousands. A number of private displays throughout the city added to the enjoyment of those participating.

The success of the celebration is in great part due to Mr. Norman Fox, who as president of the organization having the matter in charge, was unrelenting in his efforts.

The sport feature of the program was in charge of Andrew Ekstrom. That portion of the program was faithfully looked after.

A Deceptive Victory.

Geo. Savor umpired the game, and Dr. Heslop was the official scorer. Atty Pardee is in Seney.

A Terrible accident.

Russell, the fifteen year old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Mosher, met with an accident early Monday morning which may cause the total loss of sight.

Russell purchased a toy cannon several months ago and also acquired a liberal supply of powder with which to celebrate the Fourth of July. He was up before sunrise, so eager was he to enter into the festivities of the occasion. He went to the residence of Ed. Brown and fired a salute for the purpose of awakening his playmate Ralph Brown. He next moved his artillery to the residence of Mr. Fuller for the purpose of calling out Ralph Fuller. While in the act of firing the cannon he noticed that his pantaloons were on fire. He hastily brushed his hand over the scorching cloth and in so doing threw a spark or ember into the can of powder. His face was in close proximity to the can at the time of the explosion and he received the full force of the fiery wave in his face. His face was frightfully burned and he will no doubt be disfigured for life if not lose his eyesight.

He was unconscious for some time and when Ralph Brown found him he was groping about the yard. Drs. Sattler and Patterson were called and all that human skill can do for him is being done.

A Camera Club Organized.
A number of the amateur photographers of the city met at Ed Ashford's office last Friday evening for the purpose of perfecting an organization. The following officers were elected:

President, C. E. Kelso.
Vice President, W. C. Bronson.
Secretary, Ed. Ashford.
Treasurer, T. L. Baxter.

Committee on bylaws, consisting of C. E. Kelso, Ed. Ashford, and W. L. Loranger, was elected.

The membership of the club is eleven, which number will increase to at least twenty-five at the meeting to be held this evening at Mr. Ashford's office. At this meeting an executive committee will be elected.

The spirit that prompted the organization of the club was for the mutual benefit, of its members. An exhibit of work will be presented.

Mr. and Mrs. Will E. Holbein.
On Wednesday of this week, at the Superior street home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Thompson, occurred the wedding of Miss Maud Thompson to Mr. Will E. Holbein, local editor of The Republican.

The ceremony was performed by Dr. Campbell, of the First Presbyterian church of this city and was witnessed by the near relatives and a few of the most intimate friends of the young couple. Mr. and Mrs. Holbein led the same day for a few days visit with relatives in the east end of the peninsula. The train that carried them away was loaded with rice.

The marriage of the young couple was an event which has been awaited with much interest by their numerous friends here as they are two of the most popular young people in the city. They have the hearty congratulations and best wishes of all—Munising Re. publican.

Three healthy boy babies weighing a total of 18 pounds were given birth to Wednesday morning by Mrs. J. F. Deadman, the wife of Veterinary Surgeon Deadman of the Soo.

It was so hot in Detroit last Saturday that the plugs of automatic water sprinklers in the building occupied by the Peerless Mfg. Co. were melted, and 40,000 gallons of water allowed to soak the interior of the building as well as the goods. The plugs in question melt at 130 degrees.
