IN MEMORY OF THE DEAD

Manistique Honors the Memory of Our Martyr President by Holding Public Meeting at the Star Opera House. At Least 1500 People in Attendance.

Eloquent Tributes Paid by Local Orators

The news of the death of our beloved President, William McKinley, last Saturday morning, enveloped our country in mourning.

The unfavorable news of his condition, received the day previous, partially paved the way for the sad news that followed, yet every loyal American citizen hoped and prayed that in some way his life might be spared for future service, but Divine Providence, whose ways your mortals cannot fathom, decreed otherwise.

When the day for the funeral, Thursday Sept. 19th, was decided upon, President Roosevelt issued a proclamation designating it as a day for prayer and service. Governor Bliss also issued a proclamation similar in tenor, as did also Mayor Crane of the city.

The mayor immediately took steps for the proper observance of the day, and his proclamation requesting all business houses to close during the afternoon was religiously obeyed. The mills were also shut down, thus giving all an opportunity of attending the services at the opera house.

Many merchants draped their windows and everywhere portraits of President McKinley were to be seen draped in mourning.

The services at the opera house commenced at 2:30 o'clock and the mammoth building was filled to overflowing by an audience estimated at 1500. Rev. Osborne who planned the program certainly deserves credit.

Preceding the service a firing squad in command of John Gayar fired three guns, and after the service twenty-five followed.

For the third time in the history of our nation the people assembled together in their appropriate places to honor the memory of our murdered President. The immortal Lincoln fell at the close of a mighty struggle, at a time when the passions of men were kindled with righteous indignation over the civilized world and after weeks and months of suffering that noble life succumbed to the assassin's bullet.

Today we deeply mourn the loss of our beloved president. When we look back over history we may possibly discover causes which led up to the martyrdom of Lincoln and Garfield, but McKinley was slain in a day of peace. North and south united, when brother was reconciled to brother, and hate and anger banished from the land. The terrible tragedy that occurred in the temple of music came like a flash of lightning from a clear sky, all the more appalling because of its unexpectedness. It almost seems as though our loss was irreparable; do not understand me for a moment that my views are pessimistic concerning the future welfare of our country for at the helm of our great ship of state stands a man who is a true-hearted American and amply qualified to assume the grave responsibilities devolved upon the President of this great republic, but what I mean to say is, there was but one McKinley and he is gone. All we have left of him is the sweet memory of his life and character and its record, and it is of those that I wish to speak very briefly today as we have thus gathered to commemorate the death of our noble hero.

It was my good fortune to see the light of day for the first time in the old Buckeye state, not far away from the home of our martyred President, consequently the name of McKinley is not new to me. How proud we were of McKinley from the time he entered the political arena, step by step he ascended the ladder of fame and distinction, until the favored son of Ohio became the nation's great ruler. One of his strong characteristics was his personal magnetism; he was a wonderfully magnetic man, his very presence illuminated and inspired every one who came in contact with him; to know McKinley was to love him and the more you knew him the closer he was drawn to you. I pity the man who could have taken that magnetic hand in his and look into the inspiring face without being animated and inspired to better thoughts and loftier motives.

Another strong personal characteristic was his great and passionate love for his country; he loved his country with all his heart and soul and ever worked faithfully and patiently for her honor and glory. He loved all mankind, his best speech in Buffalo was a prayer for the peace and happiness for all the human race. His great motive in life, both private and public was to add to the sum of human happiness; his whole life was devoted to efforts to make our countrymen more prosperous, to make life easier, happier and brighter, and say it be said to his honor today, in all these things he succeeded.

But the crowning beauty of our late president, the one perhaps which endeared him more to our people than any other, was his unflinching and unselfish devotion to his invalid wife; this devotion was the very personification of chivalry and gallantry. At times when her physical sufferings were bitter and her shattered nerves, his presence would calm her in a peaceful slumber. This unflinching and ever abiding love for his wife, is a fragrant memory and a sweet example. He who was firm and at times unyielding in matters of state was ever kind and gentle to his loving wife. Much as the future historian will say of McKinley as a man, soldier, and statesman, just now in this hour of bitter bereavement these personal characteristics will leave their impress upon our hearts and lives. May it be that the deepest sympathy of every true American heart will gather about that stricken wife, crushed as she must be by this untimely and tragic death of him who was all the world to her.

No wonder he who possessed all these illustrious personal characteristics should become endeared to the American people and his name become a watchword in every home on land and sea and even the far away isle, for he was not only the greatest American citizen but one of the greatest exponents of christian civilization and liberty in the world. But time does not permit me to dwell upon these things. Great and admirable as was McKinley in life he was admirable in death. From the time he was stricken down that villainous anarchist, to the closing scene in the Millers home, he exemplified such a christian character seldom seen. His first thought after the shot was an earnest solicitude for his loving wife, his second not to hurt his assistant, and lastly, sorrow expressed that this should in any way inconvenience the officials of the Pan American. Oh, what a man! He was foremost in the hearts and minds of every true hearted and loyal American, on whom all eyes were turned, all hearts strained, for when civilized christianism prayed for his speedy recovery, should forget self, and show sympathy for a villainous and murderous anarchist.

He has been blessed into that who said, "Father forgive them for they know not what they do," and when he saw her who was the idol of his heart bend over him whose hands were already cold and clammy in death, still speaking words of comfort and endearment to her, we are overwhelmed with emotion and grief, may we not all unite to repeat his dying words, "It is God's will. His will be done, not ours."

The second speaker, Hon. Gen. P. McCallum, delivered an eloquent tribute to McKinley's public services. Mr. McCallum, while the time allotted him was entirely too short for him to give a thorough resume of his subject, yet he unfolded his subject in a masterly manner. A resume of his remarks follow:

The nation at McKinley's death and now sorrow around his bier. The gentle spirit that made no personal enemies is mourned by the whole people, regardless of creed or race or party. He was more than a great man; he was a good man. He was the well beloved.

Though dead, he speaks in Resator's ear

And in example lives.

The last scenes of his life the people thought more of the man than the statesman; more of his personal goodness and devotion to his wife than of his public career. Born in obscurity he ascended the ladder until he reached the presidency. Although on an eminence he did not feel above his fellow man. He never abandoned that faith in God that is man's compass in the wild. He achieved that higher reason that those mysteries are ineradicable, and that God does not reveal all and at once to his worshippers. He was a true christian and appealed to the moral sense and spiritual aspirations of the people. These were the charm of his personal life and characterized him in his public service. He sought no glory, it found him. Ambition was his in full measure, but unlike that of the great Cæsar to whom he has been likened, it was not a hunger for personal aggrandizement. By the upbuilding of his country did he raise himself.

Mr. McCallum then reviewed his country which he had been elected and his services in them.

"With restored peace from the Spanish American war new conditions had to be met, conditions never before presented

Manistique's Only Department Store.

SEEING IS BELIEVING

We have been saying considerable about our store and our stock, but now, when our fall stock has almost all arrived, and is being arranged to the best advantage, it is time for you all to come and make an inspection of the great and varied assortment of stylish merchandise that has been collected from the four corners of the earth for the benefit of our patrons. Our aim has always been to keep the best of everything in stock. The best not only in quality, but also the best at the prices asked, and the best in both style and desirability.

Clothing Exhibition.

Full styles of Men's Suits and Outfits, all the new creations in men's wear, made by one of the very best manufacturers in this country, considered by good judges of men's wear to be fully equal to custom tailored garments in style, fit, wear and workmanship. Call in and examine the goods.

Our Boy's and Children's clothing department needs no introduction to the public of Manistique. The majority ways know that when in want of something neat and nobby for the little fellows that this is the only place where it is to be found. This is a fact that no one can deny, and our explanation is that we take extra pains in selecting this line and make a specialty of it.

Men's Hats and Furnishings for Fall.

It is getting a little late for your straw hats; your summer cap looks a little the worse for wear. Why not come in and inspect in one of the wide shaped felt hats. They are very new and very popular at present. We have just received a handsome line of them.

Without three Dress Shirts, the swiftest things out, have you seen the latest ones? We have them, all new and neat patterns, fall shades, fall styles, very nobby.

Men's Neckwear, new lines received almost every week, no old patterns, no old styles, always new and fresh.

Queen Quality Shoes.

Did you read our shoe talk in this paper? It was all true. Call in and examine our lines; you know "seeing is believing," and when you see the stylishly laced, perfectly fitting, and substantially made shoes that we are showing at prices that you usually pay for cheap and poor shoes, you will soon believe that what we claim for our shoes is true.

Dry Goods.

The old saying, that "seeing is believing" has never been more truthfully proven than in our Dry Goods department. Within the next season our dry goods business has been offered to make it the most complete and perfect dry goods store in this city.

Let us show you a lot of staple goods cheap, any one can do that, but by appreciative and successful attention to the fashions and styles of goods we handle, and by securing the latest patterns at the beginning of each season, and offering them at a regular, honest price prior to the beginning of each season and restocking it afterwards, when the season is most over, like most merchants are doing.

Linings and dress findings, everything necessary for the complete details of perfect, up-to-date dress making in all the different qualities can be found in this department.

New Trimmings for fall costumes just arrived; a handsome showing.

Fall Millinery.

Exclusive designs in Ladies' Fall Suits. Plain shapes or elaborately trimmed, all of unexcelled workmanship.

Call in and examine our lines, it will cost you very little except time. You know the old saying, "seeing is believing."

In Memory of the Dead.

Of which would require more than two day's preparation and more than fifteen minutes in which to present. He clearly defined Anarchy and its tenets and urged the passage of laws that would drive it from our shores.

In opening, he said:

"When we contemplate the martyr's life from his enlistment in the army to the presidency and continued: . . . . ."

"When we contemplate his tragic death at the hand of a cowardly fanatic to whom he had just extended his hand in token of friendship, it is not to be wondered that we give vent to our feelings and cry out for Lynch law, slow torture and all conceivable punishment for the wretch who has so basely taken the life of our beloved president."

"Yet when we advocated this we were not far short of encouraging that disregard for law and order which we so readily condemn in the anarchist. It cannot be possible that we have come to such a condition in this country that we must fight anarchy with anarchy."

"He dwelt upon the fact that for years we have been offering this country as an asylum for men who believe in a philosophy which knows no God, no law, and no restraint beyond individual desire. He also dwelt upon our boasted freedom of speech which permits the anarchist to spread his pernicious doctrines openly. In dealing with this condition, he said, "we must not mistake license for liberty."

"Severity of punishment will not crush out anarchy. It is rather the certainty of punishment that acts as a deterrent or cure."

"Anarchy is no imaginary danger but is one which actually exists as today and endangers the very life of our nation."

"When we attempt to deal with anarchy and to restrict, restrain, remove or abolish it or punish it, we are confronted with the difficulty of saying just what an anarchist is. We say he is a human parasite, a Godless, religionless man, an enemy of organized society, a brute man who advocates no marriage, no home, no God, no anything."

"He dwelt upon the fact that a law should be passed reaching those openly advocating such aims either by publication or speech; and that imprisonment or deportation of offenders should be much to suppress the evil, such a law would make anarchist meetings or the dissemination of their printed matter impossible. Dealing with the question is a weighty one which should have the attention of calm and deliberate minds, unimpaired by passion or revenge. Much could also be accomplished by international agreement.

He advocated:

First—A law making it a crime to publish or circulate any literature or publicly utter any speech which advocates the death of rulers or public officials or tend to incite to crime or disobedience of law, and punishing the same by imprisonment or deportation.

Second—A law prohibiting the entrance into our land of those who hold anarchistic opinions, giving to the immigration officers sufficient discretionary power to permit them to exclude persons as suspicious.

Third—An international agreement upon some plan for the deportation of anarchists who advocate revolt to violence.

The following resolutions, voicing the sentiment of the community, were prepared and read by Mayor Crane, were by a rising vote, adopted:

When death was fast sealing the lips of our beloved President, he was heard to murmur "Weary God to Thee!" No language matter how brilliant and eloquent it might be, can more fully describe the great resolution of the character of the man that there had arisen on his death bed, than these few words that came from those lips that were to be sealed by death. No wonder that every loyal heart has been stricken with intense sorrow. No wonder that tongues were almost speechless with grief, to see that beautiful life taken from our midst, and by the ruthless hand of a cowardly assassin, who under the cloak of pretended respect was given the opportunity to do the dagger deed.

The life of President McKinley furnishes his nation and the world with an example of the noblest type of manhood. As a boy he was brave and loyal soldier of the union. Fourteen years in the congress of the United States proved, in the franchise of laws under his presidency that were of great benefit to the people of that state. It was however as President of the United States that his devotion to his country shone in its greatest brilliancy; his labors and personal efforts for the safety of our nation were of such a character that they will be remembered by the millions of loyal citizens who are his country's debtors for all time. The old animosities between the north and the south had not been stirred away when he was called to fill the highest office in the gift of the nation. By his calm and the best of the southern people, and today the people of the south are deep in sorrow for him who was their benefactor and savior of a nation.

Witness—in the death of William McKinley, president of the United States, who by his loyalty to public interests, his untiring zeal for the reputation and national affairs, his patriotic fidelity to liberty in every form, his masterly treatment of issues wholly new in the experience of American statesmanship, and allied with a blameless private life, and favorable personal qualities, was a man to command the respect and love of the millions of loyal citizens of this great republic, and . . . . ."

Witness—This precious life has been snuffed by the hand of one man who thereby opposed his health and vicious judgment, and expressed contempt, love and indignation at the death of his fellow countryman, who had chosen William McKinley for the highest office in their gift, and whereas, this great loss to the nation, goes to the hearts of the individual citizens, therefore he is . . . . ."

Resolved—That we the citizens of Manistique, do hereby express our personal grief at the loss suffered upon the nation, by the red hand of anarchy, and we do hereby solemnly and heartily sympathize to the bereaved wife, in this hour of sore affliction, and we pray that she may be spared to see this nation and its people reap the benefits from the wise and noble advice given by her illustrious husband, to legislation and the policy that he advocated for the betterment of his beloved country and its people, be it further . . . . ."

Resolved, that these resolutions be adopted by this meeting as the expression of the citizens of Manistique of their love and respect for our well beloved President.

The music for the occasion, and which by the way was a very pleasing and important feature of the service, was under the supervision of Mr. C. E. Kelso.

Appropriate exercises were held in the various departments of the public schools yesterday forenoon just before the closing hours of the school.

Rev. J. P. Kunes celebrated high mass at St. Francis de Sales church at 10:30 o'clock yesterday morning, to which the members of the G. A. R. Post and the volunteers who served during the recent war were invited. The veterans attended in a body.

William McKinley.

The following poem was written by Rev. F. L. Osborne at the time President McKinley was first nominated for the presidency:

With glad acclaim we hail thee chief today,
 Hallowed ground, thy nation's soil;
 Long mayest thou truly prosper in thy way,
 And onward by a rare unselfish zeal,
 In thee champion true may Freedom dwell,
 And to thy all may patriots be faithful,
 Moved by the impulse of a master mind.

With all the eloquence, trying accents of state,
 Done by thy mission, thy friend or foe;
 Keen to perceive where Providence will wait
 In its own time, thy highest wisdom show,
 New problems will thy higher still make known,
 Let war or peace be coming days lessen;
 Each act may Heaven's highest wisdom show,
 Yet may we all thrive e'erlasting secure.

RICHTER-GRENEY WEDDING.

Was a Great Event in Saginaw Society Circles.

(Saginaw Evening Herald.)

A happy nuptial event occurred at 6:30 p.m. evening at the Warren ave. Presbyterian church, when Dr. E. P. W. Richter and Elizabeth R. Greney were joined in wedlock by Rev. J. H. Tewel.

Before the ceremony and while the 200 invited guests were assembling, a pipe organ recital was brilliantly rendered by the talented musician, Dr. Stanley Gaines, a cousin of the bride, who soon sailed for Europe to more highly cultivate his talents. The program, as rendered and which so delightfully entertained the auditors was as follows:

Festal March . . . . . Thomas Amante Cantabile . . . . . Tebalist's Introduction to third act, Metastase . . . . . Wagner

Romance in D . . . . . Harper Nuptial March . . . . . Gilmann

As a finale a quartet rendition of the Bridal Chorus from Wagner's "Lohengrin" was given, with Miss Eva M. Dacey, soprano; Miss Penney, of Bay City, contralto; W. D. McLandress, tenor and Bertram Schwab, bass.

The interior of the edifice was lavishly beautified with flowers, feathery smilax and exotic plants, which blanketed the organ and altar and arched the aisles with a radiance of color and sweet fragrance. Four ushers, in the persons of George J. Nicholson, Dr. A. J. Beckmann, Dr. R. J. McMeekin and Ray B. Telfs, seated the assembling company as they arrived, and when the hour came for the ceremony they escorted the bride party up the aisle, a passage was bandied on either side by ribbon drops of shimmering white.

Preceding the contracting parties came the bridesmaid, Miss S. Helen Hall, in company with the groomsmen, Mrs. George Greney, brother of the bride. Next in the train was Miss Helen G. Ersson, the maid of honor, and then followed the pair so soon to be one in life and destiny.

As the party moved to the altar, where Rev. Mr. Tewel, awaited, the sweet strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march filled the air, the music continuing during the service.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the company repaired to the home of Mrs. William Greeney, the bride's mother, 434 South Fifth street, where a reception was tendered to the newly mated couple from 8 to 10 p. m.

Many handsome gifts and remembrances were received and perhaps not the least appreciated by the winsome wife, was a handsome diamond ring, a tribute of affection from the groom. He also bestowed remembrance tokens upon guests, groomsmen and maids in the shape of dainty stick pins to the men and pretty pearl rings to the maids.

Dr. and Mrs. Richter are well and favorably known in Saginaw, where they have grown to maturity. The groom is a physician on the west side and the girl, his choice, who has for several years held a position in the city schools, is possessed of the many womanly virtues and happy qualities of mind and person to make her mistress of an ideal home. She appeared modestly winsome indeed in her modest gown of white muslin, a perfect cocoon in its suggestion of maidenly purity. She carried American Beauty roses. The maid of honor was garbed in white Swiss muslin over pink tulle and the bridesmaid wore white organdy. Both carried pink roses.

The guests from abroad were: Rev. Frank S. Richter, of Chesaning, brother of the groom; Geo. C. Greney, brother of the bride; Geo. Nicholson, Jr., of Manistique, Mich.; Arnold Greeney, Cleveland, O.; Mrs. John Dunlop, Clare, Mich.; Mrs. Frank C. Greeney, Pittsburg and Mr. and Mrs. John Cameron, of Bay City.

Mr. and Mrs. Richter left today on a bridal tour east and upon returning they will be at home to their friends at 1202 Court street.

Resolutions Passed by the G. A. R. Post.

At a regular meeting of Geo. F. Fuller Post No. 257, held at their hall, the following resolutions were passed and adopted:

Whereas, it is with the deepest regret that we learn that our president of the United States and comrade in arms of the civil war, has been removed from this world at the hands of an assassin. Therefore be it

Resolved that we, the members of Geo. F. Fuller Post No. 257, G. A. R., extend to the widow of our departed comrade, our heartfelt sympathy and be it further Resolved that we draper our Post Room in mourning for a period of sixty days.

THE PUBLIC FUNERAL.

Impressive Ceremonies in the Rotunda of the Capitol.

Washington, Sept. 18.—All that is mortal of William McKinley in quickened his last earthly resting place toward its beloved home in Canton after the nation had only once seen a state funeral paid its tribute of respect and love to the memory of its first chief magistrate.

A Memorable Scene.

Despite the fact that so important a ceremony had to be held in the rotunda of the Capitol, beyond the arrangements made for the funeral, the assemblage presented a picture of the nation's grief.

Eulogy by Bishop Andrews.

The venerable bishop, Edwin G. Andrews of Ohio, at the oldest bishop of the Methodist Episcopal church, took his position at the head of the bier.

A Last Glance at His Face.

At the conclusion of the funeral services in the rotunda the casket was removed in order that the immediate friends of the dead president might be afforded the comfort of a last glance at his features, and that the people whom he loved and who loved him might see his face for the same purpose.

A Hundred Are Injured.

Despite the efforts of the police and military and the crowd leads in the front, approximately 100 people were injured. Some of the injury was due to the fact that the crowd was so dense that many were carried into the rotunda and into various adjoining apartments of the Capitol.

property to-day.

Andrew Nelson, who resides in Indianapolis, is in the city.

There has been a slight change in Monday's work. Most of the theatricals have a period for sale of the day. The papers now in the city are the Star and the Herald.

Mr. M. L. in and daughter, who reside in the city of Gray, arrived in the city returned home Wednesday.

The annual report of the Star Lane shows that there is a loss in earnings of about $7,000 this year as compared to the previous year.

The Ladies' Missionary society of the Presbyterian church will give a tea at the church parlors next Wednesday evening to which all are invited.

A Polish family living in Monmouth hoisted the red flag upon receipt of the news of the President's death. The police tore down the flag and arrested the outfit.

Mr. John Sattler purchased the interest of his partner, Johnson, in the Westside blacksmith shop. He has also assumed the services of Charles Ayer, an expert horse-shoer who has a state license and is now prepared to show-horses as they should be shod.

Mr. Sather urges farmers and others to look over their shingles and if they need repairs to bring them in now.

Mr. Ben Hendricks contemplates introducing his well known stage character, "Ole Olson," in other countries and is arranging to present it in England next season. His present tour through the country will give added interest to his appearance at the Star opera house, Monday night, Sept. 23. An excellent company including the Swedish ladies quartette will add him.

Unless the G. R. & L. and the American railroad have formed a traffic agreement, Menashaque will have two cut-off lines in operation this winter.
The former road is building a branch line from Traverse City to Northport and is building two cut-off lines at a cost of $250,000 each to ply between Manitowish and Northport. The American Co. expects to operate a line of cut-off lines between this city and Frankfort.

nesday morning for Hornby, N. Y., where they will visit relatives for three or four weeks. During their absence they will see the Pan American exposition.

Ben Hendricks will appear at the opera house next Monday in the first and best of the Swedish diact comedies "Ole Olson."

Mr. Hendricks is admittedly the best Swedish diact actor of the American stage, and his delimitation of the part of "Ole Olson" is a masterpiece in its way. He has a company of reputed excellence, including the Swedish Ladies Quartette.

Gorniak, once a stronghold of bachelorism, is fast being converted to reform. Thursday of last week our popular young building contractor, Amos Staastrom, was united in marriage to Miss Ethel Nicholson, the charming step-daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Krages, the ceremony taking place at Marquette. After enjoying the sights of the fair, the bridal party returned home Saturday. The young couple are universally esteemed and good wishes are freely showered upon them, young and old earnestly hoping that a happy future lies before them.—
