MEMORIAL SERVICES AT M. E. CHURCH

Rev. Osborne Delivers an Eloquent Tribute to the Late President.

A largely attended McKinley memorial service was held at the M. E. church last Sunday morning at which time the pastor, Rev. Osborne, delivered a powerful address.

As a motive for holding the service, Mr. Osborne stated in commencing his discourse that he had planned the service as soon as he was notified of the President's death, and before the advisability of holding a public union service was broached, and that he would touch salient features of the President's life and christian manhood not developed by the speakers at the public meeting held at the opera house a few days previous.

He began by referring to his personal relationship to McKinley. The next president was a member of the same religious body, and for years previous to his promotion to the presidency he saw in his political idealization. This prompted him to attend his first inauguration, and he has never forgotten the President's many salutations and hand-shakes when he was present.

He enlarged on the thought that McKinley was a world man, in the strictest sense. He belonged to the home, to the school, to the nation, to the church, to society and to the world.

In the life, and death of McKinley the speaker saw the call of the Master to each of us. The call of manhood; call of service to others; the call of the spirit of the times; the call to the highest; the call of Providence; the call to a growing respect for religious things; a call to a divine life; a call to the virtues of this mighty republic to put away lawlessness in spirit or action; a call to follow the illustrious examples of our past history, and a call to immediate action upon the part of all christian people, were thoughts enlarged upon by the speaker.

He saw in McKinley a manly man, good and true, who endeavored to carry out the method and spirit of Christ in every act of his life. "Thus equipped he was able to meet every emergency that arose during his first term as president, notwithstanding the fact that history was written rapidly during his tenure of office. Although born in obscurely held social conditions, he was able to concentrate to a few great ideals that when he heard the call of Providence, or the voice of God, he recognized its divinity.

The fact that McKinley was a churchman and remained true to his religious, in all the varied experiences of life has created a growing respect for religious things. This is exemplified by the secular newspapers.

True christianity is the cure for all forms of anarchy. Lawbreakers are anarchists and the tragedy at Buffalo is a call to the citizens of this mighty republic to put away all lawlessness in spirit and act, to care for the home and the individual more zealously than ever.

The time for immediate action upon the part of christians is here. The heart of the world is mellowed. The discourse was interspersed with timely illustrations of peace and poetry, and was one of the most eloquent addresses ever heard by a Manistique audience.

The church was handsomely decorated with flags, and white and black bunting. The members of the G. A. R. Post attended in a body. "Lead Kindly Light," "Nearer My God to Thee," and "America" were sung with spirit by the audience.

SAW THE PRESIDENT'S ASSASSIN.

Mr. Geo. Burdick was Entering the Temple at State When the Deed was Committed.

Mr. Geo. Burdick who was in Buffalo at the time of the assassination of President McKinley, was within forty feet of the President when the shots were fired. He was just entering the west end of the building, when he heard two shots. After the shots there was a halt in the line and police men notified the people that the President had been shot. In a very short time the officers took Colgoz out of the building through the entrance at which Mr. Burdick was standing. He saw the villain very plainly, as the officers and the prisoner passed within four feet of where he was standing. He says that Colgoz was as pale as death. Three carriage had been ordered and after Colgoz had been placed in one of them, the carriage started from the grounds in different directions so that the crowd when it realized the enormity of the crime, and decided to mete summary punishment, was unable to locate the prisoner. Mr. Burdick states that the feeling against the prisoner was intense and that the presence of soldiers alone prevented the people from wrecking the jail and lynching him.

Mr. Burdick saw the President three times during his stay at Buffalo. He saw him on the day of his arrival, Wednesday, heard him deliver his famous address on Thursday, and when the body was lying in state at the City Hall.

FIRE AT THOMPSON.

The F. & F. Co.'s Boarding House Destroyed Wednesday Afternoon.

The F. & F. Co.'s boarding house at Thompson was totally destroyed by fire last Wednesday forenoon. Sparks from the burner evidently caused the fire. Much of the furniture from the lower floor was saved.

Owing to the gate that was raging, it is fortunate that the fire was confined to the building in question. The loss will aggregate about $5,000 and is fully covered by insurance.

The company will utilize the town hall as a boarding house and the various fraternal organizations who utilize the hall will have to seek other quarters.

If you want lots of eggs feed your hens egg food and oyster shell. I have it.

Volunteer's Long Cruise.

The handsome steam yacht Volanta stopped at Detroit today on her way back to the Soo after a cruise since July 17, of 5,000 miles. She is owned by Charles Thomson, of South St. Marie, and he, with a party of friends, have been down the St. Lawrence river as far as the Saguenay river, and 75 miles up that river to Chicoutimi.

Capt. C. H. Beach, who is in charge of the Volanta, is a typical sailor, having been "aboard ship" for 44 years. "I was born in Thunder Bay lighthouse," said he in telling of the long cruise. "I have knocked around all over the world, and have seen about all there is worth seeing. I wish I was back again on the old island with my father and mother and sister. Those were the happy days."

MRS. A. A. HOUSE DEAD.

Her Death Occurred Last Monday Afternoon at Her Home.

Mrs. A. A. House died at her home in this city last Monday afternoon at four o'clock of heart failure and pulmonary troubles. The deceased has been ill since the fore portion of July, but for several years previous her health was not the best.

Mrs. House was born in Letcop county about forty-five years ago. She was married to Mr. House, who was a well-known man in the lines of a noble wife and mother. The children are Myrtle, residing at Great Falls, Montana, Lulu B. of St. Paul, and Frank, Emory, Olive, Nancy, Eugenia, Grace and Alvin, the latter being five years of age. Two brothers of the deceased, Moses, Alvin and William Wood, reside in this vicinity, and a sister lives at Mt. Pleasant.

The deceased was a consistent member of the Baptist church, and exemplified her christianity in her every day life.

The funeral services were held Wednesday—the services at the house being at 10 o'clock a. m., and at the Presbyterian church in the Woods settlement, in the afternoon, Rev. Osborne of the M. E. church officiating. All of the children except Myrtle were present at the obsequies.

Mr. House and the stricken family have the profound sympathy of their many friends in their sore affliction.

"The Irish Pawnbroker."

Mazie has been among us again and we that is, the few of us that were lucky enough to see her and her attendant fare dancers, had a rare good time. "The Irish Pawnbrokers" as presented last night at the Academy has a melody of pretty girls; good, very good music; Irish fun and just enough of a plot to hold the fabric together.

Some new and very clever songs were introduced by Miss Trumbull, the Hawthorne sisters, and Harry Tully, while the specialties of Ferguson, Parmore and the two Macs were applauded to the echo. The dancing and chorus work were exceptionally good and there wasn't a lonesome girl on the stage. Miss Jones, who held down one end of the chorus, was not only remarkable for her good voice, but also for her remarkable resemblance to Anna Held, white Grace Parmore was a very fair counterfeiter.

Immediately after the ceremony Mr. and Mrs. Swan left on an extended visit to coast cities, including Portland, Salem and others. Upon their return they will be at home at Albany where Mr. Swan, who is an attorney, has a lucrative practice. The bride is a sister of Mrs. Dr. J. M. While the play and star are seen to our theatre goes, the Eastern critics look upon W. B. Patton and "The Minister's Son" as one of the best acting attractions. His quaint and peculiar methods, together with a fine stage presence, have won for him the unstinted praise of the entire Eastern country. The play itself is a pastoral comedy, depicting the life and scenes as they actually exist in every day life. They seem of the apple blossoms and the new moon bay is ever apparent. A beautiful story of heart interest told with loving simplicity. The scenery is very extensive, each set being entirely special, thus adding to an already splendid production.

OUR PRESIDENT HAS NOT DIED IN VAIN.

While our countrymen are lamenting the untimely death of our dearly beloved President, looking at the affair in its bearing, thoughtful men will say that our President has not died in vain. It has been said for over a thousand years that the blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church, and the blood of our noble President will do more to seal and typify the brotherhood of man than any event in ancient or modern history. All countries, all peoples and all climes are expressing heartfelt sorrow that a great American has fallen in the discharge of his public duties who has lived a life so pure, so stainless and so full of benevolent deeds, that it would seem impossible for such a man to have a mortal enemy. Nevertheless, McKinley has been assassinated by a political fanatic who advocates the extermination of all races, and therefore mankind is against the anarchist and the persons of his ilk.

The superior character of our dead President is impressing the whole world. He was gentle, kind, thoughtful, temperate and wise. Such an example could not have been impressed upon the world except by an assassination without reason, and therefore his taking off has impressed millions and tens of millions who would not have remembered McKinley and his virtues had he lived out his term and died a peaceful death in the little city which he commenced his career.

McKinley's fervent and active piety has become a beacon light to the Christian world. His favorite hymn, "Nearer, My God, to Thee," will be immortal in all ages to the Christian-minded man. And his last words to his precious wife, "Goodbye, all, good-bye; it is God's way; let God's will and not ours be done," will be regarded as the significant expression of as truly a good man as he has been exemplified in the history of ages. His family virtues now stand out in so conspicuous light to the men of the present and future ages, that his example will be burned into men's memory and men's hearts so that thousands of affectionate husbands and faithful wives will regard not a few of their conjugal blessings as springing from the illustrious and popular example of a President of the United States.

Our country is vast in power, great in its resources and proud of its military and its naval strength, and these are common traits in all great nations; pride, but the moral influence of America for worth, for humanity for the welfare of the people will be everywhere immensely strengthened by the thunderbolt of assassination which carried our beloved President to his untimely grave.

Flowers of memory will rise from that grave which will never pale, and which will be fresh and fragrant to every every family in every household in Christendom.—Evening Wisconsin.

TWO NOTABLE EULOGIES.

"One touch of nature makes the whole world kin." It is related that the President Cleveland delivered his eulogy upon William McKinley to a vast audience of students and citizens at Princeton University, with tears in his eyes. His emotion was evidently profound, and his tribute to the latest of our martyred presidents was characterized by a delicacy of touch which is not usually looked for in the utterances of so sturdy and blunt a character as Grover Cleveland. He said, among other things: "He (McKinley) passes from the public sight not only bearing the wreaths and garlands of his countrymen's approving acclaim, but amid the sobs and tears of a mourning nation. The whole nation loved the president. His kindly disposition and affectionate traits, his anxious consideration for all around him will long live in the hearts of his countrymen. He loved them in return, with such patriotism and unselfishness that in his hour of grief and humiliation he would say to them: 'It is God's will. I am content. If there is a lesson in my life or death let it be taught to those who still live and have the destiny of their country in their keeping."

Equally beautiful and touching was the tribute of William J. Bryan, Mr. McKinley's great rival in two notable presidential contests. There was a time when neither Cleveland nor Bryan thought of McKinley as a political leader, although, in common with all others who knew him, they recognized his admirable personal traits. But in the crucible of a common sorrow all past differences, all antagonisms, are burned away like the dross from the pure metal, and only the memories of high qualities remain. William McKinley's life, as calmly reviewed, has left its profound impression on the world. It is a conclusive answer to all the unkind criticisms that have been made up on it, and none are quicker to acknowledge this truth than the two most prominent living leaders of the political opposition to the ideas and policies for which he labored.—Minneapolis Tribune.

HIGHER EDUCATION.

The fact that several professors in large institutions have of late been taking elephantine spectacles of themselves has given occasion for a certain class of people, who know very little about what a college education is, are nevertheless thoroughly convinced that it doesn't amount to much to see their views disparaged of its value. They prominently pointed out prominent young men who had succeeded without having had a college education and to men who have failed tho they had and seem to think their "evidence" is conclusive. The argument is superficial. The fact that there are hundreds of college-bred people who never amount to anything is no cause for alarm to friends of higher education. The fact that cranks occasionally get into the faculties of institutions oughtn't to cause them to tremble for the cause of learning. The college is no wonder worker. It doesn't pretend to be. If a man is deficient in gray matter when he enters college 'halls he will probably be a little deficient along that line when he comes out. If he is impractical and visionary when he commences his course it will take the influence of a mighty strong institution to keep him from being flung lightly after his graduation. But don't charge the college up with the mistake of nature. In nine cases out of ten men who have succeeded without having had college training will tell you they have succeeded in spite of that fact and not because of it. And on the other hand you never hear a man who has spent four or five years in college express a regret for having done it. There is no reason under the sun why a college training—a solid thorough training should unfit a man for the business affairs of life. Most of our college professors are men who have worked their way up through many hard knocks; and the probabilities are that the fellow who is rendered imprudent by their instructions wouldn't have set the world on fire to an appreciable extent if he hadn't gone to college. Neither the possession nor lack of college education is in itself a badge of honor. The worth of a man after all, is to be measured in his ability and inclination to be of service to humanity. The true aim of higher education is to increase in a man that ability and inclination.

TEACH YOUR BOY TO WORK.

It is no kindness to your son, that you permit him to grow up in idleness. It is a misfortune to him if you are stuck up with the idea "that my boy doesn't have to work, I am able to keep him." Idleness is the devil's workshop. The man that will hunt a game of poker and find it, no matter where, it is hidden away, learned to play poker in a bar, what when he had nothing else to do and his father was able to keep him without work. The boy who goes to work at seven in the morning and works till six in the evening, when not at school, is not the boy that becomes a cigarette fiend. The young man who gets into "scraps," and brings premature gray hairs on his father's head, and too frequently makes a painful wound in his mother's heart is the one who passed his youth in idleness and shiftness. Work is a great purifier, besides no man ever amounted to much in this world who was afraid to work.

If you are troubled with inodorous breath, heart burn, flatulence, headache, indigestion, or other ailments, or if you are afflicted with constipation, nervousness, melancholy, or nervousness. REMARKABLE COINCIDENCE.

No one is on record as having suspected, much less predicted the nearness to unanimity which the people of the country show in the acceptance and indorsement of President Roosevelt. When the press took the earliest opportunity to present his claims to popular favor and confidence it was with an anticipation of emphatic opposition from a certain element that has kept up the impression that the president was a rough rider in civil as well as military life. But there has been practically no assertion of this sentiment. The extreme conservatism of Boston and the New England states, the optimism of the west and the traditional Democracy of the south are in accord. Roosevelt assumes the grave responsibilities of his office with a sympathy and support that come nearer obliterating political lines than has the backing of any American president within the century.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The reasons for a not difficult of analysis. He has a courage that amounts to fearlessness, and that counts for much in a time like the present. No man more clearly comprehends the principles in which the perpetuation of the nation's stability and prosperity are assured. His initial acts show that his enthusiasm has been sobered. He retains the wisdom of counsel that guided Mr. McKinley and, by his course as well as his declarations attracts the sympathy of all who appreciate the gravity of his position in the present emergency and of every class constituting a desirable element of our American citizenship.

If called upon to particularize we would point to the south as giving the most remarkable support to the new president, and the declarations made within his brief incumbency. He inherits the kindness elicited by McKinley in that part of the country, and has claims of his own that are not ignored, for in his visits to that section his speeches have always had the breadth and liberality of national statesmanship. He filled the eye of its people in his dashing bravery as a soldier, in his tenaciousness in the protection of the country, and in his fearless denunciation of evils within his own party. There is another tie which is exceptionally binding with the south, and which makes him more nearly a southern president than any man filling the place of chief executive since the civil war. He has not only the blood of the Roosevelts, but of the Bullocks, of Georgia, from which came his mother, a family held in high esteem throughout the south. In both lines of his ancestry he traces back to leaders in the revolutionary war, and in his own person unites names of distinguished honor in both north and south. The accord of the people in their support and well-wishing for the president is without precedent.—Free Press.

THE ONSET OF PRESIDENT McKinley'S SPEECH AT BUFFALO.

The genesis of President McKinley's famous speech at Buffalo is interesting. About three weeks before his visit to the exposition city the president sat one evening at Canton, smoking and thinking. At the table opposite him was Mr. Cortelyou. Soon the president, without uttering a preliminary word, took his cigar from his lips and exclaimed: "Amity is better than a fist."

Now a young woman has lost her life in trying to go through the Niagara rapids in a barrel. The theory that women are more intelligent than men gets a hard knock every once in awhile.

A distinguished dancing master assures the public that dancing will be more in vogue this coming winter than ever before. People who do not dance should prepare to act as waitresses with such grace as they can muster.

Russian officers have reported to the czar's government that there is no doubt that a great Chinese national conspiracy is brewing, and that a great "help" is intended for next year for the purpose of driving all foreigners out of the country.

He walked in perfect and noble self-control, and his address was his address over the bier of President McKinley in Washington. "This man had somehow brought in to him a great and generous love for his fellowmen." All the world seems to have grasped the truth of this estimate.

Unless all the odd and reliable signs fall us the football season this year is to be one of the best. There certainly promises to be a breaking of records in everything but the style of wearing the hat and of the feebly and wonderfully contrived uniforms, the only predicted change in the latter being that they must be more so.

The messages from foreign countries in relation to the assassination of the life of President McKinley speak of the crime in varying terms. England refers to it as "a national tragedy," Germany "a crime," Italy "a crime," the "grievous," Greece "a crime," Turkey "a crime," Japan "a crime," China "a crime," France "a crime," Belgium "a crime," Denmark "a crime," Norway "a crime."

Mrs. Resides Feinlinghoff, aged 23, who resides at the fashionable Bath, beach, near New York city, had brought suit for divorce on the ground that "when she married him she made the greatest mistake of her life." Feinlinghoff represented himself to be an Italian count, but after the wedding the young American bride found that he was a waiter in a cheap New York restaurant. The month and the fame.

Mrs. Mary Berry, a wealthy Greek, who was arrested on an annual income of $30,000, must serve a term of five years in prison. She was arrested a year ago on a charge of stealing a house, was tried, convicted and sentenced, and now the supreme court has refused to interfere. It is the old story of harem and eunuch, who being satisfied and always reaching out greedy fingers for more and more.

A report submitted to the International Educational conference in London shows that there are $4,989,621 adherents of the Methodist faith, and that the total value of the property held throughout the world by churches is $200,000,000, there being 30,087 Methodist churches and 43,314 Methodist ministers. It is estimated that during the past ten years the church has added 4,500,000 members.

Mr. Joseph McHugh, of Greenville, Ark., is an iconoclast. He is the author of the ancient custom, Rev. James Porter, upon the conclusion of the marriage ceremony, proceeded to kiss Mrs. McHugh. Thereupon, Mr. McHugh's fist came into violent contact with the minister's jaw, stretching it to the limit of the cord of the room. Mr. Porter would not want to be an idol if Mr. McHugh is to die the idol-smashing—and that's his thought.

An Indiana editor returned to the scene of his boyhood a short time ago and found that the little village schoolhouse from which he had been graduated was being used as a hen-coop and a pigsty. "It may be a little taken," he says, with evident feeling, "and we hope we are, but it looks to us that poetry is fast becoming a lost art in this country when a man's alma mater can be yanked around an aisle and eventually used as an asylum for hogs and old hens."

The death of President McKinley should serve as a reminder to writers and talkers to make a sharp distinction between the presidency and the occupant of the presidential chair. Criticism of the president should always be respectful of the nation and mindful whatever the president's personal character the fact that he is the chosen head of the nation entitles him to the highest treatment. Of course, it is hardly conceivable that an utterly unworthy man might be elected president, and if far from probable.

There are all kinds of stories floating round about the growth of wheat, but about the biggest of the whole series comes from West Stockholm, Mass., where a single stalk of wheat is a maple tree which measures 11 feet 3 inches in circumference a foot from the ground. The stalk grows from the ground there are one or two thick limbs growing, and it is alleged that higher up on the tree are cupules and rambunctious bushes that break forth each year. Massachusetts still "breaks for herself," it is a story which indicates that it is talking too much.
