The mill at Whitelake resumed operations last Monday.

Less than a week in which to formulate those New Year's resolutions. Make good ones and keep them.

There is only one thing that equals having a tooth drawn, and that is to witness the dentist drawing one for another.

While sealing an envelope recently, a his up with the flap and died of blood poisoning.

The employing merchant tailors of Marquette and the Soo, have organized a protective association for the purpose of keeping out transient tradesmen who solicit for orders. Good idea. An association should be organized in Manistiquette.

The well boring operations near Rapid River are still progressing favorably. At a depth of 125 feet, water was reached last Friday, several pockets of oil were encountered, and the promoters are quite confident of striking the real thing eventually.—Escanaba Journal.

The last boats from Manistiquette to Chicago appear to have had a sorry time of it. The barg Galathea had a perilous trip and now the Worthington and A. T. Bliss come in for a share of trouble. The latter Ocean says: "Thousands of persons crossing the Wells and Clark street bridges yesterday saw a shipwreck in the Chicago river. The tugboat A. T. Bliss, with her decks and part of the hull under water, lay across the channel at the La Salle street tunnel."

When the Bliss was towed into the harbor Sunday afternoon she was waterlogged, the ice floes in the lake have cut into her bow planking and allowing the hold to fill with water. The big boat was drawing eighteen feet of water when tug started to tow her up the river to the lumber docks, and it was found impossible to drag her across the tunnel. Lighters are now engaged in removing the lumber cargo, after which the vessel will be pumped out and taken to a shipyard. There is considerable speculation among marine men as to how much salvage money the Fletcher will be entitled to for bringing the Bliss into the harbor. When the steamer Worthington, which had the Bliss in tow, gave up the job of trying to get her consort to Chicago the schooner was left at anchor. When the Fletcher came along the shore ice had moved out into the lake and the steamer had little trouble in picking up the abandoned vessel and bringing her to the harbor. It is believed the owners of the Fletcher will clear up a net sum for their trouble.

John Smith foreman of Camp 71 spent Christmas in the city.

Inventorying appears to be the principal occupation of merchants at present.

Will Shinar has resigned his position at the depot and is now employed at the First National Bank.

The public has a short memory; that's the reason that a business to continue profitable must be advertised continuously.—The Ad-Writer.

Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Van Tassel, Mr. and Mrs. Dalton and Norman W. Fox, spent Christmas with friends and relatives in Detroit. The ladies will prolong their visit while the gentlemen are expected to return this week.

Wants an Ice Boat Race. Geo. MacLaurin, who is an enthusiast on ice boating is very anxious to get others interested. He is willing to contribute $10 toward a purse of $25, said purse to be given to the winner in a race to be held during the season. The purse is sufficiently large to pay all expenses incident to building a boat, and we hope that a race will be the result of Mr. MacLaurin's liberal offer.

WOODMEN ELECT OFFICERS. While Pine Camp Woodmen of the World, elected officers for the ensuing year on Friday evening, Dec. 13th. The officers follow: C. C. G. A. Wickwire, A. L. A. A. EARTHQUAKE IN MANILA. Residents Are Badly Frightened and a Number Hurt. Manila, Dec. 17.—An earthquake which lasted six seconds and extended over a very wide area, occurred here Sunday morning. The people were terrified and rushed from the churches, hotels and houses. Many of them fell upon their knees and prayed in the streets. Quite a number were injured. General Harrison, who was occupying a ward in the hospital near that occupied by Governor Taft, rushed with nurses and attendants to the hospital to remove the governor, but Governor Taft decided to remain in the hospital.

AFTER RIGHT OF WAY.

For the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistiquette Railway. The committee consisting of T. T. Bates, E. W. Hastings and S. C. Darrov, appointed to look up the matter of the right of way for the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistiquette Ry. out of the city, began its investigations Monday. R. R. Metheny and D. W. Kaufman arrived in the city Monday morning and will remain here until something definite is accomplished. There being objections from property owners to the use of the north side of Bay street, the committee will exercise every effort to let the road out of the city by some other route. It is now proposed to run the line along the shore, north of the M. & N. E. right of way, and it is believed that this will be feasible, although considerable expense will be entailed in piling and trestle work. There is nothing definite, however, and nothing can be decided until the committee has completed its investigations. In a general way it is proposed to run the line from the present track of the G. R. & I. near the Ott saw mill, thence back to the old Hannah & Lay buildings, the cold storage warehouses of J. C. Morgan & Son, and north of the water works, starch factory and J. E. Grelick Co's factory. Just whether this can be accomplished or not is now a matter of conjecture, but the efforts of the committee will be to that end. The engineers of the railroad company will be here tomorrow to go over the proposed route.—Traverse City Herald.

Health and Beauty.

A poor complexion is usually the result of a torpid liver or irregular action of the bowels. Unless nature's refuse is carried off it will surely cause impure blood. Pimples, boils and other eruptions follow. This is nature's method of throwing off the poisons which the bowels failed to remove. DeWitt's Little Early Bitters are world famous for remedying this condition. They stimulate the liver and promote regular and healthy action of the bowels but never cause griping, cramps or diarrhea. Christ, surveyors and civil engineers of Grand Rapids, arrived in the city last week Wednesday, and began at once the investigation of the outlet from the city for the Traverse City, Leelanau & Manistiquette railroad through the west side to the city limits. They drove, in company with C. E. Murray, they drove to Northport, and went carefully over the entire route of the proposed road, with a view of deciding upon its location, and beginning the actual work of laying out the road.—Traverse City Herald.

To Retail Dealers in Tobacco, etc.

Complaint has been made to the Board of Education of the City of Manistiquette that the practice of using cigars, cigarettes, tobacco, etc., is becoming somewhat prevalent among the youth of our schools.

As the use of tobacco in any form is particularly injurious to the student and interferes in a large degree with good work in the schools, it is the desire of the officers and teachers to end such practice.

It is difficult to accomplish this result without the assistance of the parents and the co-operation of the local dealers in tobacco, etc.

In the interest of the Public Schools and teachers in this matter by strictly complying with the provisions of the law forbidding the sale of tobacco, etc., to minors.

The following is a copy of the law in question: SECTION 1. The people of the State of Michigan enact: That it shall not be lawful for any person by himself, his clerk or agent, to sell, give or furnish any cigar, cigarette, chewing or smoking tobacco, or pipe, unless upon the written order of the parent or guardian of said minor. SECTION 2. Any person who shall wilfully violate any of the provisions of this act shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and upon conviction thereof, shall be punished by a fine of not less than five dollars nor more than fifty dollars, or by imprisonment in the county jail for a term of not less than ten days nor more than thirty days, or by both such fine and imprisonment in the discretion of the court.

All violations of the law as above quoted will hereafter be reported to the Prosecuting Attorney for proper action.

GOMEZ FARING BADLY.

His Meetings Broken Up and Stones Thrown at Him. Havana, Dec. 16.—According to telegrams printed in "Senor" Betrande Palma's official organ, General Gomez is faring badly on his political tour in favor of Palma. In the Puerto Principe province his meetings have been broken up, he has been greeted with shouts of "Traitor" and stones have been thrown at him. General Gomez is incensed at the same time he had a hand and is accompanied by a band and a number of veterans. The Mayor feeling it prudent to stone in Puerto Principe.

The Nation says Gomez is paid by the government to stump the country. He is not with that accusation on every paper in the country. Maso's followers have withdrawn every one of their candidates and the feeling at some points is bitter.

A Menominee Dispatch says: It is claimed that Congressman Sam Stephenson has been trying to throw the fight against Postmaster Keen, but that Senators Burrows and McMillan will not "stand for" it.

The Menominee Leader issued a very handsome Christmas number. The enterprising merchants of Menominee utilized much of its space and from a typographical standpoint it has never been excelled by any office in the peninsula.

With the advent of the Marquette & South Eastern railroad, copies of the Daily Mining Journal may be received here on the day of publication. The paper is an excellent one, and will secure a big Manistique list when this occurs.

We have had no trouble in discovering that a great many men are sure a newspaper man is "a fearless editor—not afraid to say what he thinks, etc." when he is skimming the other fellow, but change their notion when their pet hobbies are assailed. That's different.

Cornelius Vanderbilt will not run for congress because he says he is not fitted for the office. That isn't the way to do it in most cases. There are several members of congress, who, were they as conscientious as Mr. Vanderbilt, would be cutting wood up raising hogs for to chopping—Sparta Sentinel.

Gen. Alger was compelled to undergo a serious surgical operation this week, which, and every citizen of the state hopes will be successful. Mr. Carnegie would be more highly respected were he to donate his millions to the poor working men that, in the past, made it possible for him to corral his fortune. We'll wager that in many a home of his bread winners during this season of gait and joy, there is want and sorrow. The founding of libraries and universities is a laudable act, but to gladden the hearts and brighten the lives of those who toil is greater.

A report is current in this congressional district crediting Hon. S. M. Stephenson with the intention of entering the field as a candidate for the nomination next year. There is no law against having any citizen who is ambitious of the honor making a try for it, but one would think that the honorable Senator's later experiences as a candidate would suffice to deter him from again putting himself up for the place.—Mining Journal.

What is an editor? An editor is one who reads newspapers, selects miscellany, writes articles on all subjects, sets type, reads proof sheets, prints, folds, packs and distributes papers, and sometimes carries them; prints jobs, runs on errands, saws wood, works in a garden, takes care of babies and rocks the cradle, talks to all his patrons who call, patiently receives blame for a thousand things that never were nor never can be done, has scarce time to enjoy nature's restful sleep. That's an editor.—Brookline Times.

IN LONDON TOWN.

Dr. E. B. Patterson gives at Length His Impressions of London and Its Points of Interest.

VISITED WESTMINSTER ABBEY

And Tells Our Readers What He Saw There.

LONDON, ENGLAND, Nov. 10, 1901.
FROM THE PIONEER-TRIBUNE.

As we entered Edinburgh, so we left it, in the rain. After our experience with the short, light cars, being rushed along at breakneck speed on our trip north, from Liverpool to Glasgow, it was with some degree of trepidation that we looked forward to a run of nine hours from Edinburgh to London. There are three rail routes, or, if one choose he can go by water. For some years there has been a great rivalry as to speed between the east and west coast routes, until finally the authorities were compelled to stop to stop to the racing. The other route is known as the Midland and traverses the backbone of Scotland and England from Aberdeen in the north to London in the south. We selected this route as the running time was not so fast, owing to the heavy grades traversed. Alack, it was. We had forgotten the old saying, "What goes must come down," and while the mad rushing was somewhat lessened by the heavy grades, the speed became simply terrific on the down side. We reportedly turned up a speed of 70 miles an hour.

We left Edinburgh at two p. m. and it was then dark and hazy. After we had run out of the city a little and away from the fog and smoke, the pictures cleared somewhat so that we could enjoy the rugged scenery of southern Scotland and north and middle England. By evening, however, when we had reached a level level over these impenetrable fogs settled in over everything. Our train made few stops; as we rushed by stations brightly lit, the lights, down by the tracks, lit up the pictures of the ground, and to think of rushing madly on through this bank of fog which was so thick that a snow plow was needed on the engine to clear the track, where no headlights of the last rail, nor switchlight could be seen by the engineer, was, to say the least not at all reassuring.

At supper time we went into the dining car for our evening meal and only once on our trip did we see anything that approached the way the dishes skated around the table in this dining car. On the staircase we had noticed the tables to hold the dishes, here it was a case of "catch as catch can."

We reached London, however, without mishap, but I am frank to admit that I never put in such a number of consecutive hours of mortal discomfort on any rail trip in my life and would forego the pleasure of a trip to Scotland rather than repeat this ride.

As it was nearly midnight when we arrived at St. Pancras depot in London, we spent the remainder of the night at the terminal hotel, operated by the rail road company, and my way right here, through these railroad hotels, as we have found them in Liverpool, Glasgow and here in London go a long way towards making amends for the discomforts and experiences in their coaches. They are certainly most excellent.

In the morning I sallied forth to look up the Abbey and Mrs. Lusk of New York, to whose place we had been directed by friends in America and which we had ordered our mail. Whether at no time could I see across the street, I fortunately stumbled upon the place quite readily and found the apartment awaiting us.

This lady caters entirely to American travelers and her house is always filled with them; generally representing a pleasant lot of people. The cooking and service were thoroughly American and the pleasure of our more than a week's stay in London was greatly enhanced by our pleasant home.

After lunch we started "to do" London and it was the last day of the great London show in Crystal Palace and we went to do both, we started for that point forthwith; taking a cab, we drove down past Charing Cross (more about these crosses later) to Victoria station and in about 40 minutes were in the palace of glass.

The wonderful piece of architecture in the suburb of Sydenham and was built by a stock company in memory of the original structure at the great exhibition of 1851. It stands in a most wonderfully beautiful park with walks, terraces and lawns, all on a grand scale. The main floor is divided into some nine or more courts each representing the art and national peculiarities of the people or period interested as Roman, Grecian, etc.

There is also an immense auditorium with seats accommodated for 4,000 persons and seating room for an audience in proportion. The organ is one of the largest in the world, only excelled in England, perhaps, by the one in Royal Albert Hall.

In the interior the halls and passages are tastefully draped with gossamer veils with palms and ferns, everywhere, so that one naturally walks through continuous waves of green.

But the dog's show! This away and above capped everything in the palace that day. Dogs large and dogs small, dogs tall and slim, dogs short and thick, dogs with overhanging jaws and dogs with underhanging jaws, dogs so low-legged that they had to turn around three times to roll either way they were going, hundreds of them, and generally speaking, all barking at the same time such a pandemonium of canine noise never before dreamed of ears, and they barked madly without previous experience in this place for Manistique has just a few.

shanty, diminutive little white post-resting on their pillows of down, attended by loving mistresses—whose babies, if unhappily they were so afflicted, were no doubt cared for by nurses. The position of the lay bag in English society, and occasionally elsewhere is striking.

We were able to see something of the evening illumination before leaving. The effect is very beautiful. Crystal Palace alone is great, but add to it a dog show, and it wins at a walk.

On our second morning in London, we had a genuine surprise. Early in the day, we were awakened by a yell and hastening to the window we saw in the sky a smoky light which later on became the sun and by noon enough of fog had been chased away so that it was quite pleasant. To many of my readers this may seem a trivial matter to mention. Spend a week in Great Britain after November 1st, then see how you will feel. We made an early start for Westminster Abbey and for several hours passed sepulchral inscriptions and wandered about. This is a strange place, for here so many of her most distinguished sons and daughters. The structure is old and plainly shows in it the feelings which reject that time has wrought even upon its massive stonework. It was begun in the seventh century by Sæber, the first Christian king of the Saxons and tradition runs that St. Peter, himself, laid the first stone to dedicate it. Tradition, however, does not state what they drank on those days. The structure has had many ups and downs, so that it is a really very complicated and the clearest, when Edward the Confessor, made it an Abbey and decreed that all future monarchs of the realm should be therein crowned, which custom has since faithfully observed ever since.

We saw the coronation chair, or chairs rather, for since the time of William and Mary there have been two, in which the ceremony takes place. The older one alone is used, and at the time is covered with cloth of gold. Beneath it rests the famous stone of Scone, upon which the coronation kings of Scotland and Ireland were crowned. Tradition comes in again with the story that this was the original "pillow of stone" upon which Jacob rested his head when he saw visions in his dream. Our guide led us down say roughly and said it was all a "pipe dream" and I guess he knows for from his appearance, I think he must date back to some time about that time Queen Victoria was the only monarch to occupy this chair twice. Once at her coronation and again a few years ago at her jubilee. They are getting warmer now for next June when King Edward hopes to get his delayed rights out of it.

An American lady, with whom we later became quite well acquainted in Paris, came near getting into serious trouble over these chairs; she did not see any one looking so pepped under the pope and into the chair as big as life; for a moment she thought herself a queen, and then the dream vanished for she could never make a descent upon her.

"Such an outrage had never before happened," she said. She finally squared matters without getting into real hot water, but it was a close shave. I can square almost anything sort of actual crime, and I would not gamble on stopping there, if you have the price.

Everywhere we have visited in Great Britain or on the continent they all have their hand out and it is only a question of amount.

In reality but little of the building as left by the confessor remains, so extensive have been the additions and improvements.

The Abbey as it now stands is, it is nearly a creation all its own. It is largely the work of Sir Christopher Wren. This western part of two towers so familiar in all pictures are a disservice and do not afford the imposing impression which the rest of the structure merits and certainly are not at all in keeping or harmony with really beautiful east front. The great dimensions of this great Latin Cross are 203 ft. Of the many magnificent windows, the west, illuminated with figures of the Patriarchs, and the "great rose" window of the north transept, are, perhaps, the most notable, and the others are simply memorial windows.

The tombs are simply legend, dating from the spot that of King Robert, 16th century. Probably the most noted is that of "Poet's Corner" where rest either the remains of some memorial tablet of the many of England's most noted men of letters, from Chaucer down to Tennyson.

Soon after entering the abbey while I was gazing at the graves of the north transept, there occurred a little incident which impressed me greatly. I was simply standing there, getting my bearings, and allowing my eyes to roam across the tombs, when a man in a military uniform, in passing, recognizing his rank, touching me on the arm and pointed both hands for a moment at the tomb upon which I was standing. "William R. Gladstone 1808." It thrilled me like an electric shock and instinctively I reached for my already buried hat and stopped to look at the tomb. "Who was that?" I was just starting to ask when I was already directed, "Impertinent! Cesar dead and turned to clay" ran through my mind. I thought that I, a simple American, should be so highly complimented upon the grave of this mortal and mortal of modern times. But there he rests in the middle of the aisle and by his side his grave is so high and dignified which has imposed upon the attention of his own tombstone, there, over his grave, yearly, will be thousands of thousands tread, and none but the few who are permitted to see the tomb, will be no longer legible, but through this material inscription they soon will be worn away and disappear. The name which this great one has inscribed for himself in the history of England and in the hearts of the English people, will never be effaced.

Henry VII was, I believe, the last of English royalty to be interred here.

Many of the most beautiful of the imperial tombs and monuments prior to the reign of Queen Elizabeth have suffered destruction, either at his hands or his over zealous followers during the commonwealth.

Cromwell was here interred at his death, but later, after the restoration, his body was removed and first hung, then beheaded, and then, getting my bearings, and allowing my eyes to roam across the tombs, when a man in a military uniform, in passing, recognizing his rank, touching me on the arm and pointed both hands for a moment at the tomb upon which I was standing. "William R. Gladstone 1808." It thrilled me like an electric shock and instinctively I reached for my already buried hat and stopped to look at the tomb. "Who was that?" Henry VII was, I believe, the last of English royalty to be interred here.

Many of the most beautiful of the imperial tombs and monuments prior to the reign of Queen Elizabeth have suffered destruction, either at his hands or his over zealous followers during the commonwealth.

Cromwell was here interred at his death, but later, after the restoration, his body was removed and first hung, then beheaded, and then, getting my bearings, and allowing my eyes to roam across the tombs, when a man in a military uniform, in passing, recognizing his rank, touching me on the arm and pointed both hands for a moment at the tomb upon which I was standing. "William R. Gladstone 1808." It thrilled me like an electric shock and instinctively I reached for my already buried hat and stopped to look at the tomb. "Who was that?" I was just starting to ask when I was already directed, "Impertinent! Cesar dead and turned to clay" ran through my mind. I thought that I, a simple American, should be so highly complimented upon the grave of this mortal and mortal of modern times. But there he rests in the middle of the aisle and by his side his grave is so high and dignified which has imposed upon the attention of his own tombstone, there, over his grave, yearly, will be thousands of thousands tread, and none but the few who are permitted to see the tomb, will be no longer legible, but through this material inscription they soon will be worn away and disappear. The name which this great one has inscribed for himself in the history of England and in the hearts of the English people, will never be effaced.
