

KLIEST-BREITUNG ALIENATION SUIT.

Max Kliest Sues His Father-in-law in the Sum of $250,000 for Alienating the Affections of His Wife. She is the Banker's Daughter.

New York, Feb. 10.—Max Kliest, the publisher, banker and steamship owner, who recently caused international complications by purchasing the steamship Pacia, took the stand before Judge Hand in the United States district court today and told how Mr. Breitung and his wife persuaded their daughter Juliet to leave Kliest shortly after the elopement.

Kliest is suing Mr. and Mrs. Breitung for $250,000, the value he places on the affections of his first-wife. According to his story, the girl took a leading part in their romance, arranging the introductions through her aunt and finally telling him that she wished to marry him some day.

Kliest at the time was gardener on the estate of the Breitungs in Marquette, Mich. October 7, 1913, he said, he left Marquette for good and all, bent on achieving a brilliant future in Cleveland.

Asked if "Will Do Well."

Before he left he said, Miss Breitung said to him: "I hope you will do well, and get a good position, for I hope to marry you some time."

The night of the parting, after Juliet's Victoria had played a fond farewell song, the girl first mentioned her intention of marrying Kliest, according to his story.

"I told her," he said, "that I would have to get a good position before I could support her. She replied that she had confidence in me."

As Max unfolded the story of his marital love affair, the fair Juliet, sitting in the back of the courtroom, smiled faintly. Juliet had a little dog with her the night Kliest was introduced to her, and she was anxious that Max should share her love for the little creature.

"At the conclusion of the walk," he said, "Juliet arranged a meeting for the following night," when they took a walk "in the direction of the breaker."

Warned Not to Write.

"Then," he said, "she invited me to her house and played the Victoria. I was in hopes she would marry me at the time."

Mr. Breitung sat by the side of his wife in the courtroom. They smiled broadly when Kliest described the little dog Juliet had with her at the first meeting. A letter written by Juliet to her "dearest Max" shows she was sickly over a cold Max had developed.

"The only thing I am sorry about, she says, 'is that I ever let you get away from me. Always remember that I love you.'"

She also warned Kliest not to write to her home in Marquette, or to the hotel St. Regis, where the Breitungs reside when in New York, because "mother and father believe I don't love you any longer."

Another Letter Read.

Another love epistle from Juliet to her "dearest" was read to the jury this afternoon. It was under date of October 11, 1913, and was written at Marquette. Extracts were as follows: "I don't think anything will come of it, but I should not have let you come in and see me the way I did. I have something nice to tell you. I have made up my mind to marry you as soon as I get to New York, and have the chance."

It was signed, "With all my love—Juliet."

Max and Juliet were married, the plaintiff testified, at Grace church November 23, 1913. Kliest said he saw Juliet every day thereafter until November 30, 1913. Two days later a detective slipped him on the shoulder in the street and invited Kliest to see Mr. Breitung at the St. Regis that afternoon.

Girl's Mother Denounced Him.

The young husband testified he went to the hotel. There Mrs. Breitung denounced him, Kliest asserted.

"She said I had forced Juliet to marry me," he testified. "I said I did not ask her to marry me. She said 'You'll never have my daughter. She said I had no reputation nor education. I said 'Don't say that to me. She told me the marriage would be annulled, that Mr. Breitung would have it annulled."

"Then Mr. Breitung came in and shook hands with me. He said 'Is this the man?' Then we went into the next room. He told me he would let me go. He said 'I will accept his proposition to annul the marriage. He said he would give me some position.'"

The chauffeur saw his wife again, December 7, 1913, in response to a telegram from Mr. Breitung.

Accused of Stealing Sox.

"When I went to the St. Regis Mr.

Breitung said to me, 'I have a nice proposition to offer you. I have a new mine at Silver City, N. M. It is a fine chance for you to learn mining engineering.' I said: 'I said: "That is a long way from home." He said that I did not take the place he offered me, he would have me arrested. He said: "You stole my socks." I said: "I did not; your daughter gave them to me." He said: "I know you have worn them because I saw you have them on. You stole them." I said: "If they were stolen, your daughter stole them. Your daughter must be a thief."

Christmas day, Kliest said, he left for the west to take up his mining job. He received a letter from Juliet every day until April 7, 1914, when he returned to New York and got in telephone communication with his wife.

"I'll stand by you," she wrote, "I'll stand by you," Kliest testified Juliet assured him. "I said come away with me and she said: 'I can't; mother and father won't let me.'"

"Come on With Papers."

Subsequently Kliest met Juliet and she announced that she had left.

"I have learned that I do not love you. I realize I have made a mistake. Can't you go your way and let me be free?"

Kliest said that sounded strange to him in view of all that had preceded, and he begged her to come with him and "be happy."

"She asked me for all her letters back and the marriage certificate. I said they were in a bank in Chicago. She said, 'Well, get ready to be served with annulment papers.' I said: "All right, Juliet. I love you and will love you to the end of my days, but come on with the papers."

"She said, 'Father will give you another chance. He'll give you a job as traveling salesman.' I said: 'No more of his rotten jobs for me after my experience in the west.' And we parted," Kliest told the jurors, in concluding his direct testimony.

The court adjourned until tomorrow and the remainder of the afternoon was spent by the attorneys in the case reading Miss Breitung's letters and penning the material that under the judge's decision will be admitted in evidence tomorrow.

Mr. and Mrs. Wendland were pleasantly surprised Saturday evening by a large number of friends and relatives in the day being their 15th wedding anniversary. The evening was spent in game and music. Refreshments were served and all enjoyed a pleasant evening.

The various aspirants for official honor have their friends and supporters, and the motif that underlies their aspiration is so well known that it is not necessary to enlarge upon them at this time.

The various candidates that are seeking renomination have served the city faithfully and well. Those aspiring to succeed them are well known and would serve the city with equal ability should they win at the ensuing election.

ANNIVERSARY OBSERVED.

The thirty-fourth anniversary of the founding of the Christian Endeavor organization, was properly celebrated by the local society at the "resterian church" last Sunday evening. The meeting was held in lieu of the regular preaching services, and was in charge of Professor Colver. Several addresses were made relative to the aims, objects and growth of the society. The attendance was good.

Manistique and Escanaba bowlers contested at Brault Alleys last Thursday afternoon.

The cream of Escanaba bowlers composed a team of bowlers that contested for honors with the local bowlers at the Brault alleys last Thursday afternoon and evening. They defeated the Manistique contingent 119 pins during the afternoon game. In the evening, the Manistique bowlers took the series by 189 pins.

The Escanaba Press says: "The Escanaba bowlers returned to the city Friday loud in their praise of the treatment accorded them at Manistique."

HIS FIRST YEAR'S WORK

Rev. F. R. Leach's First Anniversary As Pastor of First Baptist Church, Celebrated Last Sunday.

Rev. F. R. Leach, pastor of the First Baptist church, celebrated his first anniversary as pastor here last Sunday. He gave a resume of the work accomplished during the year, which will be read with interest. During the year just closed fifty-nine persons were added to the membership of the church, forty of which were given the rite of baptism. The membership a year ago was 239, the net gain was forty-nine, and the present membership is 288. During the year he made 200 calls; officiated at nine funerals, and two weddings.

The attendance has been greatly increased at all of the services of the church. The Sunday schools of the parent church as well as that of the alms mission have been appreciably increased. Much interest is also manifested in the mid week prayer services. The attendance at these meetings have reached 87.

The increased membership was not the result of evangelistic services, but can be attributed to the every-day energy and evangelism of the pastor. During his first year here Mr. Leach has accomplished a great work. Not only has he increased the membership of the congregation but his attendance also. He is a believer in advertising, and his advertisements in the local newspapers each week during the past year, have contributed not a little to the advancement made.

SHROVE TUESDAY TEA.

A tea will be held at the home of Mrs. D. G. Currie next Tuesday, February 16th, under the auspices of St. Albain's (Episcopal) church. Refreshments will be served from three until seven.

SOW MORE WHEAT.

It has been proven that Schoolcraft county can raise wheat of an excellent grade. This being true, a larger area should be sown to wheat this season. Wheat is high in price at the present time, and high prices will continue as long as the war continues. Several thousand acres of wheat should be raised by Schoolcraft county farmers during 1916.
