WILL TO RUN ALL YEAR

Consolidated Lumber Company Prepare For All Year Run.

Beginning as early in the spring of 1915 as weather conditions will permit, it is the intention of the Consolidated Lumber Company to operate its mill during the twelve months of the year hereafter except such times as may be necessary to shut down for annual repairs, probably not to exceed two or three weeks each year, and of shutting down their saw mill for four to five months each winter as has been the custom heretofore.

economy in manufacturing and the fact that Northern Hardwoods mill equipment is the lumber manufactured by them hereafter instead of Hemlock and Pine as heretofore, calls for an all year run necessary, hardwood lumber manufactured during the winter has preference over that manufactured during the summer and it is the desire of the Company to profit by that preference as well as a reduction in the operating expense in an all year as compared with a run of seven or eight months only.

It is the policy of the Company to get all logging from its own lands owned by jobbers hereafter and it now has 50,000 acres of land, valued at $1,000,000 and a half million for the million feet of logs to be cut in one or two million feet and it also has 100,000 acres of land, valued at $1,000,000 and a half million for the million feet of logs from the Company's timber. The balance to be cut of twenty-five million feet of the year 1916 will be from purchased logs.

The Company recently purchased from the Ontario and Michigan Lumber and Logging Company twelve million feet of logs to come out to the line at Cooks, Michigan, and if satisfactory arrangements can be made with the M. & L. S. Railway for short branch line from Steuben, they will purchase an additional six or eight million feet from the same parcel to come in over the M. & L. S. Railway. This branch line will also be purchased to about fifteen million feet of timber on the Company's lands.

The management of the Consolidated Lumber Company has been retained to make an announcement of a kind which it was the duty of the company to make, now having all arrangements positively completed, they are glad indeed to announce to the people of Manistique that the mill is going to be one of the by-places the coming year.

It has been a source of much regret to the officers of this Company at circumstances did not permit operation of their mill during the recent winter but the facts are that to thirty days ago there was nothing in the outlook for a market for such that would warrant the operation of the mill during the present year. It was not a question of being able to find a market for the lumber. The officers of the company interviewed advised they were indeed to say that the prospects for the coming year seem to be much brighter than during the past two years and that they anticipate a successful and busy year during 1916.

Miss Florence Adkins was the hostess of a very delightful bridge luncheon given in honor of Miss Isabelle Kelso last Saturday at one o'clock.

The guests, eight in number, were seated at small tables, decorated with pink chrysanthemums and artificial flowers. The afternoon was spent at cards. The first prize was won by Miss Adkins. The second prize was won by Miss Kelso and the third prize by Miss Adkins. An ivory framed picture of the bride elect and Miss Kelso was presented with a beautiful celery dish.

These present were Miss Kelso, Miss Adkins, Miss Wall, the Misses Currie, Miss Holstrom and Miss Miller.

SPECTACULAR RUNAWAY FRIDAY

Fire Chief Wendland Jumps On Wagon and Stops Team After Mad Chase.

Considerable excitement was caused on Cedar street Friday afternoon when a runaway team, owned by Patrick McNamara, came dashing down the street, with Fire Chief Wendland on the wagon, holding one of the reins. When opposite the Manistique bank, the team shifted to the right and the wagon, holding one of the wheels of the wagon struck an auto belonging to Charles Miller, creating one of the most exciting scenes the town has ever seen. The team was stopped in a field opposite the Consolidated Lumber Company's office.

The team, which was standing in front of a house on North Cedar street and becoming frightened, started on a run down the street. When opposite Oliver Hart's grocery store, Chief Wendland, who was standing out of the wagon, ran out on the street and climbed aboard the rear of the wagon. There was but one rein for the chief to take hold of, as the other had fallen to the ground. The team started on the other, at a fast clip, barely missing telegraph and electric lights and the chief sat tight. When the wagon struck Miller's automobile, Wendland was thrown on his back and landed on the wagon, but still held to the rein.

The team was finally brought to a stop, when Chief Wendland climbed out of the wagon and grabbed the tongue of the wagon and grabbed the other rein which hung loose. The act required a great deal of nerve.

PROPOSED SCHOOL BUILDINGS WILL BE CREDIT TO THE CITY

The proposal to be voted on December 28th, if passed, will insure school buildings that will be a credit to the city. It is intended to free the principal building on Cedar street. The Cedar street front will be three stories high and 156 feet long. One of the oldest residents and most prominent business men remarked "That would be absurd" when the idea of facing the principal building on Main street was mentioned. Main street is "Main" only in name. Cedar street is the principal business thoroughfare. All strangers and newcomers to the city must pass up River and Cedar streets. It would indeed be absurd to compel them to walk half a block up a side street to get a view of the best face of a public building that can be more conveniently located to "FACE THE PRINCIPAL BUSINESS STREET."

This location of the building accomplishes several purposes. As before stated, it puts the best face where it will do most to ornament the City. Secondly, the land is thus most economically used. The time is fast coming when playground space will be at a premium. The proposed location of the building provides for this. This lot will be of six stories can be well cared for without too large expense. It will, therefore, be a real beauty spot and at the same time leave a maximum of space for play and such other buildings as are necessary. The present Central Building will be so hidden as it will be unsightly while allowing its use until such time as it can be discarded.

COMPLETE SCHEME FOR MODERNIZING THE SCHOOL.

This scheme includes the high school building, the building facing Cedar street as above described, the erection of a building on the corner of Maple and Main streets to house a Gymnasium, Manual Training Shops and a Central Heating Plant, and, to complete the needs of the Central location, the erection of a Grade Building facing Main street between the high school and gymnasium. This building must be deferred for a few years at which time the PRESENT CENTRAL BUILDING WILL BE REMOVED.

To complete the plan for the whole city, the Board have in mind the erection of an eight-room grade building on the Westside and dispensing with the present wooden structure.

WHY TWO BUILDINGS FOR HIGH SCHOOL?

Two Building-Plan Cheaper to Run—In the first place, the second building is not entirely for high school use. The Central Heating Plant which is a part of this building will be used to heat all the buildings at the Central location. This heating plant would cost less to build in any case. The Manual Training Shops will be used by the seventh and eighth grades fully as much as by the high school. The Gymnasium is designed to be used for social functions, by the older grade children and by the citizens. It would be folly to increase the wear and tear by including these diverse uses in the main high school building.

TWO-BUILDING PLAN MORE USEFUL.

In the second place, the building and shops in the main building would through the assembly room 28 feet up from the ground. This would materially reduce the usefulness of the building for public meetings both as regards convenience and safety. Of still more importance, the safety and well-being of the pupils will be fostered in many ways by keeping the assembly room on the first floor.

SAY ONE-BUILDING PLAN UNWISE.

Representatives of cities that have followed the one-building plan have been interviewed. They all say to keep the shops and gymnasium in separate buildings if at all possible. Some cities that have built them in their main building have gone to the expense and trouble of erecting separate buildings for these features in order to get them out again.

TWO-BUILDING PLAN CHEAPER TO BUILD.

Thirdly, it would be much more expensive to include these features in the high school building. The architects have arranged plans in both ways and made estimates from them. The two-building plan is found to be the cheaper. The walls can be lighter than if they have to support other stories above. The steel to support a roof is much less expensive than the heavy girders necessary to carry the weight of a building. It would be as sensible to enclose a factory with the expensive walls used for heavy public buildings. The investigations made by the Board prove beyond a doubt that the two-building plan is cheaper to build, cheaper to run and of greater service to more people.

Another question that has engaged the earnest attention of the Board is the financial one. In the proposal submitted they feel that the best arrangement is made. The bonds can be distributed through a long period and will be extended as far as the law and good financing will permit. The proposal is calculated to give the most benefit possible to all branches of the city schools for the present. It is also a part of a far-reaching and complete plan for the rehabilitation of a school plant of Manistique. By passing this bond issue the expense will be made as light as possible in any one year and the other parts of the scheme can be worked out without materially increasing the yearly burden as the other city obligations are discharged.

We are confident that the voters of Manistique will rally to the Board of Education in such a well matured plan for the children's benefit.

TWO LARGE BUILDINGS 156x152 FT. AND 120x134 FEET.

One of these buildings is for high school use and will enable us to educate all the children along the lines they need instead of only a part of them while the great majority cannot get what will be of direct benefit in their future occupations. The second building will help both the grade and high school and bring both savings in running expenses and enhance the safety of the pupils.

The bonds can be distributed through a long period and will be extended as far as the law and good financing will permit. ENTERTAIN BRIDE-TO-BE.

Miss Charvelle Kelso Entertained by Friends Saturday.

A very delightful pre-nuptial party, complementing Miss Charvelle Kelso, a December bride, was given Saturday evening at the home of Miss Helga Kingsland, Lake street. The Five Hundred club, of which Miss Kelso is a member, entertained twelve young ladies at cards. The first prize in a handsome hat was won by Miss Lillian McKinney. Miss Kelso received a dainty hand-painted sugar bowl and a centerpiece as most prizes. At ten o'clock an elaborate luncheon was served in the dining room, at a beautifully appointed table. The table was artistically decorated with pink carnations and a large basket of pink carnations formed the centerpiece.

After the luncheon the bride-to-be was given a parcel post shower by the out-of-town members of the club.

DOCTOR WRIGHT SEVERELY INJURED

Horse Frightened by Auto and Rider Falls Under Animal.

While Dr. W. K. Wright was making his call Friday as usual, on horseback, the animal became frightened and started out of the Middlebrook's store on Dear street and rearing in the air fell with the rider. Dr. Wright was at once taken to his home in an auto and received medical attention. It was upon examination found that his leg was badly bruised, his back severely wrenched besides receiving a cut in the neck which is not serious.

The injuries received will no doubt incapacitate the doctor for some time especially as his injuries were found to be of a more severe nature than what was thought upon the first examination.

BUY CHRISTMAS SEALS NOW

Don't Delay, But Do it Now and Help the Good Cause.

In the war abroad, the Red Cross ministers to the wounded and the starving. In our own country there is a war being waged in which the Red Cross Christmas Seals bring relief to the suffering and dying and also defense against the enemy.

The enemy in this war is Tuberculosis more deadly than any armed force, and claims one death out of every seven from all causes. But we have learned that Tuberculosis is preventable and curable and in the light against it the death-rate has already been reduced one-half.

Tuberculosis takes people at an average age of 35, the beginning of the period of life when they are the world's most to the community in return for parental care and education. Think of those you have known in this city who have passed away with this dread disease.

Now, combat this disease with modern methods, and it can be made rare, just as small-pox and yellow fever has become rare. Dead men buy neither shoes, dry goods, nor groceries. They make no bank deposits and no houses. Mr. Business Man, have you thought of that? The whole community loses heavily by tuberculosis. Even doctors and undertakers profit in the long run by the increase in population and decrease in death rate.

Now, combat this disease NOW! If you have been busy and neglected to respond to your personal neglect, it is no longer.

If you happened to feel uncharitable when your letter came, if you were not especially interested in this cause and returned your seals, it is not yet too late to send in a contribution.

In order to gain happiness, we must realize and reflect happiness. There can be little or no real happiness without health. Will you help in the health first campaign? We advocate the purchase of some of these healthy holiday tokens to your satisfaction. Christ is spirit and an undertaking appreciation of Byron's sentiment.

All that just store it.

Happiness was born a twin.

MOVING FRUITS AND VEGETABLES TO THE MARKET

Wholesale Distribution of Commodities Often Seems to Take Circuitous Route.

CAUSES OF LOSS AND WASTE

Economic Conditions—Do Not Court Market Parasites—Consumers Demand More Elaborate and Efficient Service—Problem is Difficult One.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)
Washington, D. C.—The present abundance of fresh vegetables and fruits brings with it the perennial necessity for their rapid distribution and for encouraging a generous and steady consumption. The machinery for moving these food products is complex, and retail grocers are often accused of not handling as closely the wholesale market quotations; that in times of glutted markets they do not cut prices severely and aid in a rapid movement from producer to consumer. But the reason for slow and uneconomic movement into consumptive channels is difficult to trace. The large class of food distributors known as "middlemen" are often accused of trying arbitrarily, a heavy tribute on all foodstuffs passing from the producer to the consumer. The attention of the public has been frequently directed to the increased costs of produce which has since been rendered. The new United States Department of Agriculture Bulletin, No. 267, "Methods of Wholesale Distribution of Fruits and Vegetables on Large Markets," does not indict the "middlemen" as a class, although it points out some of the abuses in the trade. As a matter of fact, says the department's special agent, when discussing the present marketing organization, economic laws would not permit the long-continued existence of a marketing agency which was solely a parasite.

Production increases. Several important factors have contributed to the establishment of many middlemen as necessary agents in the present system of marketing. Production during the last decade has increased greatly, and improved methods and facilities for handling the increase have been introduced. Keeping pace with increased production has come the demand of consumers for more elaborate and efficient service. Seldom is the fact considered that service can become a very expensive luxury. With the widening of the distance between the city and the sources of its fruit and vegetable supplies there has arisen the necessity for special agencies to meet the changed conditions.

The present distributive machinery, with all its strong points and its weaknesses, has been created of necessity, and it has weathered the storm of much adverse criticism. Every part of the country is now enjoying the perishable products of the most remote districts. Any realignment of the marketing machinery must be based upon the fact that such agency must continue to perform the functions of the present-day middleman. The problems involved in handling food through a large market differ greatly from those of production. Usually one man or one firm cannot handle both production and distribution and succeed at both. The large volume of business transacted at large market centers makes necessary some special agencies which can devote all their energies to distribution. It is clearly the duty of the marketing machinery to become necessary when perishable goods are to be handled. Commodities of this sort must be moved rapidly, must be distributed evenly, and from their nature permit of no weakness in distributive machinery, if they are to be sold at a profit.

Causes of Losses and Wastes. With the perishable nature of a large part of the fruits and vegetables marketed there must be some loss. This often totals higher than the farmer realizes. For instance, according to the department's market specialists, the loss on such commodities as strawberries, peaches and grapes sometimes amounts to 30 to 40 per cent before they reach the hands of the retail dealer. Losses due to spoilage may be the result of the shipper's handling, or of the shipper's failure to give proper attention to the packages in order to bracing the packages in the car. Sometimes the railroad is at fault. Delay in transit, improper ventilation or refrigeration, and the handling of the packages may contribute to rapid deterioration of the shipment on arrival. The lack of proper refrigeration facilities at distributing centers is another cause of much loss. When produce moves slowly there is often such spoilage before complete sales can be made. Rough handling during unloading, or the use of inferior packing material, also causes loss. As a matter of fact, the opportunities for losses due to the spoiling of commodities are so manifold that it is impossible to enter into a complete discussion of them.

It is always well to bear in mind the really serious side of losses and wastes. The spoiling of a dozen cantaloupes, a basket of grapes, or a crate of strawberries represents an absolute loss to the community. No benefit accrues to producer, distributor, or consumer from such a condition. The loss occurring at this point must be borne by both producer and consumer, and in a great many cases the distributor must bear his part of the burden. The department's specialists think in many cases losses and wastes are entirely too heavy a tax on food distribution and that the elimination of unnecessary wastes would do much toward effecting permanent, substantial economies in marketing and distribution as any readjustment of present marketing methods could do.

Losses Can Be Avoided. The fact that a large percentage of these losses can be avoided by proper grading, packing, and shipping, together with prompt, efficient handling while the goods are in process of distribution, makes it imperative that this subject be given special consideration by those interested in the efficient marketing of farm crops. A better understanding by the farmer of the complex marketing machinery would enable him to intelligently choose between the many channels through which his fruits and vegetables might be marketed. The new bulletin, on the other hand, explains to the retailer the intricate machinery of the market and deals with methods of receiving, inspection, rejection, terminal distribution, and sales methods, the broker, auction sales, carload wholesalers, commission merchants, jobbing sales, public markets, etc.

FOR DRESSES, $5.00 WEEKLY

Demands of Wisconsin Woman Are Considered in Court at Milwaukee.

Milwaukee, Wis.—Woman and her clothes was the subject of a discussion in the District Court when George Gruenwald, wealthy farmer, was arraigned on the charge of abandoning his wife and children. Mrs. Gruenwald admitted her husband furnished her with an up-to-date home. "But he will not give me money for clothes," she said. "He doesn't give me more than $20 a year to dress with." Gruenwald's attorney demanded to know how much was required. The court left the question to Assistant District Attorney Sullivan. "I should say," said Sullivan, "that she could properly dress on $5.00 a week." "That isn't enough," Mrs. Gruenwald asserted. "I need $5 a week." Gruenwald agreed to pay $5.50. His wife agreed that the abandonment case be dismissed.

MUCH WOODED GIRLS IN COURT

Older Sister Charges That New York Pair Have Too Many Admirers. Newburgh, N. Y.—The Misses Jennie and Grace Babcock, nineteen and seventeen, of Ramapo, were arraigned in the Newburgh police court because they have too many wooers. The complainant was their older sister, Mrs. Jessie Thompkins of this city. They went to visit her and then accused her, she alleges, of going home and charged them with receiving the attentions of several young men. "Both girls denied being courted, and asserted that the complainant was simply jealous of her husband. Formerly Justice Cantelmo deferred final action in the case because the defendant sister, who sided with them, said she wished to retain counsel for the girls." The Parsonage High. Albany Ore.—A hen which insists on laying her eggs from the top of a cherry tree is owned by Frank Vall. This peculiar fact was reported here recently by Fred Purinton, a well-known Albany business man, who had returned from a visit at the Vall farm.

WAR WORKS BIG CHANGE AMONG FRENCH WOMEN

From the Highest to the Lowest All Are Working for Their Country.

GET NEW OUTLOOK ON LIFE

They Have Seen a New Vision and Have Learned the Joy There is in Doing for Others—All Find Work to Do and Are Doing It Well.

By EDWARD B. CLARK, Staff Correspondent of the Western Newspaper Union. Paris.—It is to be wondered if the world knows the work of the women of France. In this great city of Paris every woman who is capable of work for her country. It may be true that the thought of the nations on the women of Paris has been that they are given to frivolity. In a large measure this thought never was true. Today it has no shred of truth in it for the women of Paris from the humble quarters to the avenues of the St. Germain district are working for the cause of the country which they hold to be holy.

The St. Germain section of Paris, spoken of usually as the Faubourg St. Germain, is the residential district of the men and the women of what sometimes is called the old regime. Here dwell the titled people of Paris, the counts and countesses and even the nobles of the old regime. Under the old system of government, hold not only titles intact but the honors which went with them. The women of the Faubourg St. Germain today are working side by side with the shop girls, the milliners and the dressmakers in an effort to do what they can for their country.

All is Different Now. Always in Paris the housewife busies herself with domestic affairs for three hours each day. This was no true of the titled women as it was of the wife of the Seine boatman, but beyond looking after her domestic affairs the woman of place and fashion in Paris did little other work. As the open air of the hall claimed her attention, it was the life to which she was born.

Now all is different. There was an awakening of the fashionable women of Paris during the outbreak of the present war. They found that conditions had changed since the last war with the Germans in 1870. Then the sisters of charity did most of the nursing work. It was their work to look after the poor and the needy. There are not as many sisters of charity in Paris today as there were years ago, and those who are left are able to do only a small part of the duties which today confront the women of the city. The women of fashion and title in Paris last August went out rather indifferently to work in the hospitals. They were not trained nurses, but they could do something. They found an interest in what in many cases was manual labor. They got a new outlook on life. Today some of them confess that they hold their past lives wasted. When this war is over the women of Paris will continue to work for the good of mankind. They have seen a new vision and they have learned the joy that there is in doing for others.

Find Other Fields for Endeavor. After the first work in the hospitals the women of Paris learned that there were other fields better fitted for their endeavor. The trained nurses came to the front and the men to take their places at the bedside of the wounded. "What else can we do?" This was the question that the women of fashion asked themselves. They realized suddenly that all the able-bodied men of the city had gone to the front and that they had left their wives and children behind them who needed help and guidance and in many cases, work.

The women of the Faubourg St. Germain went into the byways of war and ministered to their more lowly sisters. Many shops in Paris have closed because of the war, thus throwing many women and girls out of work. The women of fashion, however, did not let this stop them. They established social settlements and to all intents and purposes they are doing to help those who seemed poorest. It is true that the war is over social settlement work in Paris will be upon a firm foundation, the stones of it being laid by women who in many cases hardly knew what social endeavor meant except in a society sense. There is only one woman's club in the whole city of Paris, and that is little more than what might be called a "ladies' club." An American woman who is the president of a woman's club in the city of Washington came to Paris recently. The French women of high cast, a asked her to tell them all about woman's club life in America, the so-called social work, and the general plan of American women to do good in the communities in which they dwell.

The women of Paris were told what they wanted to know. They showed deep interest in the effort of American women to make life easy, to do something for the mothers, and to make the way of the young girl easier. It is perhaps almost startling to say that the women of Paris are showing an interest in woman's suffrage. Thirteen months ago a sister woman of Paris would have been hooted almost as a anarchist if she had expressed a desire to know of woman's suffrage with a view of possible conversion to a belief in it. When this war is over there can be no doubt that woman's clubs will be founded in Paris, that they will have large memberships and that into their work will be thrown a spirit of devotion.

Put in Regular Hours. From eight o'clock every morning until five o'clock in the afternoon the titled women of Paris were either in the hospitals or in the shops where employment has been given to those whom war has deprived of the opportunity to earn their daily bread. At five o'clock the society women went home to enjoy the only relaxation of the day. To a considerable extent, Paris has taken over the English custom of tea drinking. The women of the city drink tea at five o'clock, and with it eat bread very lightly spread with butter. No cake is served, because cake is an extravagance as they view it, and the society women insist to practice self-denial. Anything that the French woman can do to save money she does, and the money she saves she gives to the cause of her country.

The readers of correspondence from Paris will remember the tragic death of a fall from an airplane of Henry Beach Needham, the well-known aviator for American magazines. Needham was my close friend. He was a man, and a writer of sterling stuff. He always was keen for a story, and when he got it he knew how to write it. He stuck to the truth and he always made the truth attractive.

Just before Needham was killed I dined with him and he discussed with me the airplane trip which he hoped to take. His plan was, and the military authorities had assented to it, to make a trip over Paris at night in a military machine with a military aviator. It was his wish to write a description of a view of a great city partially hidden under the blanket of night.

Tribute to Henry Beach Needham. He wanted to determine whether or not it was possible for an enemy aviator to pick out specific objects upon which to throw his bombs. Of course it was not Needham's intention to tell what buildings could be discerned, and separated from their fellows by the eye of the aviator. His thought simply was to answer the disputed question as to whether or not an aviator could tell a hospital or a military barracks from the peaceful residence of a civilian.

Needham was full of his project. He knew absolutely nothing of fear. He had been at the front where the bullets were flying and the shells were falling. His courage was proof. His whole plan was changed by the arrival in Paris of Lieutenant Warneford, an aviator of the British army. Warneford had won for the Victoria cross, and the cross of the Legion of Honor by his daring flight exploit, when he destroyed a Zeppelin in mid-air.

Henry Beach Needham asked the military authorities to let him go up in a new airplane on a trial trip with Lieutenant Warneford. He rose before the ground waiting his hand to the bystanders. In less than two minutes the machine collapsed and both its occupants were hurled to the ground and killed. The newspaper man had been through almost every form of danger that Europe's war field holds. He met his death in what was believed to be the most perfectly safe aviator's flight. He died before he had returned to America. Immediately after this, his last wartime story—getting assignment. He was a close friend and a loved companion.

Generals Are Helpless. The French generals are not very hard on a correspondent. When you go to the front you always are accompanied by an army officer who almost invariably also acts as censor of what you write. He gives you some words of advice concerning what you may say and what you may not say, and that makes your writing very easy. He gives you a great deal of liberty and the only thing that he requests is that nothing shall be put in your articles which may be of assistance to the enemy.

The censor has been painted as a very formidable and frequently very roughly dictatorial person. He is not. More often than not, a correspondent is allowed to sit by the censor and to watch him while he goes over the manuscript with a blue pencil. The pencil is infrequently used, and the military officers who go to the front with the correspondent all speak English, and everyone of them has a keen curiosity concerning things American.

Returns From Dead. Carthage, Mo.—Mourning for dead, John Hughes, now a resident of Carthage, Mo., returned here a few days ago after an absence of more than twenty years. During that time he had never written home. When he walked into Carthage, Mrs. E. Mansfield, his ex-wife, recognized him. He was immediately recognized.

After the meeting an oyster supper was served in the dining room followed by a smoker.

GASOLINE GOING UP

With gasoline advancing from 10 1/2 cents per gallon retail three months ago is 17 cents this month, the prediction that the fluid would go to 25 cents this winter may be verified. This territory is dependent entirely upon its supply from the Standard Oil company, none of the independent concerns having agencies in the north. In the southern oil producing states a fight between the independent companies and the trust has held prices down.

We are now informed that putting the Panama canal out of commission is responsible for the latest advance in prices. There has been a constantly increasing demand for gasoline from the English and French, but this would hardly overcome the falling off of local trade since the close of the launch and automobile season in many parts of the country. It is claimed that the prices will remain firm for the rest of the winter.

Beginning with this issue the half page ad of the Peoples Store will appear on the editorial page which generally is considered to be the most important page in any paper and therefore the most valuable place for advertising purposes. This new innovation will also enable the paper to run its most important news on the first page where before only five short columns was all that was at disposal of the make-up man in making up the pages of the paper.
