Proposed Soo tribe housing raises questions for county

Questions over the low-income Indian housing project scheduled to be built near Manistique have prompted the County Board to move a representative of the Sault Ste. Marie Indian tribe to the July meeting of the board.

George Nolan, housing director for the tribe, said he had been contacted by County Clerk Fred Lesica about the concerns of the board over taxes, services and the zoning of the planned project, which would house about 150 residents. Nolan said he asked that the questions be submitted in writing for his response. "And if that isn't good enough, I'll be glad to meet with the County Board."

County Board Member Bob Barr said he had drafted a list of questions for Nolan and that he would invite him to attend the July 20 meeting of the board.

The Soo tribe plans to build 30 houses for low-income members and other low-income residents on a 40-acre parcel of land on the corner of the Manistique River and Fackety Road east of Manistique.

The 38 units of housing—34 single-family houses and duplexes for elderly residents—are part of a $6-million program by the tribe to build 88 units of housing in the eastern U.P.

When the tribe began advertising for applications for housing early last month, the county was caught by surprise. Since then, Barr said he has been contacted by residents expressing concern over the project.

"I feel like we should know what's going to happen, but I don't think we should conduct an inquisition," Barr said. After first hearing of the federally-funded project, the County Board last month asked Prosecuting Attorney Bruce Plackowski to see if the county had any authority over its construction through its building code and zoning ordinance.

Plackowski said that compliance with the county building code was not an issue since regulations by the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which is financing the project, were more strict than the county's own.

As far as zoning is concerned, the attorney Dan Green said Wednesday that the development does not come under the county's jurisdiction, despite the fact it would apparently be in violation of the county zoning ordinance.

"It's a federally-funded project on federally-owned land and state and county ordinances simply don't extend to control the actions of the federal government on its own property," he said.

A four-year court battle by the city of Sault Ste. Marie against the tribe over an Indian Housing project there upheld that principle in the federal Circuit Court and Court of Appeals. In that case, the tribe has been appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court. Green said it is "extremely unlikely" it will be heard by the high court.

The current zoning on the 40-acre parcel of land is "R-2," according to County Building Administrator George Daunt. While that zoning designation allows construction of single-family and two-family dwellings, Daunt said the lots for those houses are probably too small to comply with the 15,000-square-foot

Hollenbeck named county prosecutor

Peter J. Hollenbeck, formerly of Manistique, will be returning here to be the new Schoolcraft County prosecuting attorney. His appointment to that position by Circuit Judge William F. Hood was announced Wednesday.

Hollenbeck was born in Manistique in 1949, and graduated from Manistique High School in 1967. He was awarded a bachelor of science degree from Western Michigan University in 1971 and a juris doctor degree from Detroit College of Law in 1976. From 1977 to the present time he has been employed in the Bay County Public Defender's Office, the last year and a half as Director of that agency.

Hollenbeck is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Perry Hollenbeck of Manistique.

His appointment to the office of Prosecuting Attorney will be effective on his reporting for duty, which is expected to be early in August. In the meantime, Bruce Plackowski, who resigned as Prosecutor effective July 1 to engage in private practice in Manistique, will continue to serve as acting Prosecutor.

May jobless rate drops by nearly 8 percent

The unemployment rate in Schoolcraft County during May dropped sharply from the previous month to its lowest level since November of last year, the Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) reported Tuesday.

According to the MESC, the jobless rate in the county for May was 17.8 percent, down 7.8 percent from the April rate of 25.6 percent.

The May unemployment figures, the latest available, are still running well above the figures for the same period last year and in 1980. However, last May, the county had an unemployment rate of 11.8 percent and in 1980 11.9 percent.

According to Bruce Weaver, area analyst for the MESC, the drop in joblessness here was due mainly to the recall of workers at Inland Lime and Stone Co. in Gulliver that was reflected in the May statistics. Those workers were on extended layoff due to a late start-up of the shipping season from Port Inland.

That, along with the beginning of seasonal hiring in tourist-related and other areas, Weaver said, combined to reduce the number of people looking for work in the county from 1,025 in April to 725 in May.

"The reduction in Schoolcraft County was of course due to the recall at Inland as well as seasonal non-manufacturing employment," Weaver said.

Because of that, Schoolcraft County's unemployment rate for the first time this year dropped below that of the Upper Peninsula as a whole. The U.P. rate also dropped in May, to 18.6 percent from 19.1 in April. Statewide, the jobless rate was 14.3 percent in May.

Weaver noted that across the U.P., despite the drop in the unemployment rate, the actual number of people without work increased, from 26,300 to 26,400. "The fall in the unemployment rate was really pretty minimal and all it did reflect was an additional seasonal hiring in the area. The total number of unemployed actually increased in contrast to the state's unemployment rate," he said.

The surrounding counties had the following unemployment rates in May: Alger, 18.6 percent, down from 24.6; Delta 17.5 percent, up from April's 15.7; Luce 16.7 percent, down from 21 percent in April; and MacIntosh 19 percent, down from 30.9 percent in April.

Housing Commission wonders Will HUD approve Germfask housing?

Will a housing project for the elderly be built in Germfask? The answer to that question is up to officials at the federal Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD), which is financing the project, but the Schoolcraft County Housing Commission hopes to have an answer soon.

The commission approved a revised site plan for the 16-unit project Tuesday and will send the plan to HUD in hopes that approval for construction of the building will be granted. That site plan calls for the single-story building and parking lot in front of it to be pushed back 30 feet to allow room for a septic system drain field.

The location of the drain field on the seven-acre site has preoccupied the housing commission since a consultant's report submitted early last month indicated that soil in the originally-proposed location for the drain field did not have adequate drainage.

In an effort to avoid having to scrap plans for the elderly housing project altogether, the commission had the consultant take several more soil samples around the site to determine if there was adequate drainage. Those samples showed enough suitable soil for a primary drain field near the front of the site, bordering 10 curves Road in Germfask.

There was not enough adequate soil, however, to provide room for a backup drain field as required by HUD regulations. Although District Health Department officials said that the backup site could be made suitable through the addition of sand fill. HUD indicated it would not pay for the cost of the work.

That sent the commission to the County Board to ask for money to pay for the fill work and extension of a water line and driveway due to the change in building location in the revised site plan. The board approved paying the cost of the fill and site changes, estimated to cost no more than $10,000.

Tuesday approval by the housing commission of the revised site plan was the final step before asking HUD for approval to begin construction. To overcome HUD objections about the filling required for the standby drain field site, the commission will include a letter from the District Health Department indicating the site would meet the department's requirements.

Also, a report from the soil testing consultant that says in part "It is our opinion that portions of the elderly housing project site are suitable for a conventional septic system will be sent to HUD. That, the Housing Commission hopes, along with assurances by the county that it will pay the cost of shifting the drain field location, will persuade HUD to approve the new plan.

Hopefully, HUD will make its decision soon. Housing Director Eileen Males said Tuesday that she hoped approval would be granted within the next month or so, but

Maleses say 'marhaba' from far-off Saudi Arabia

Greetings from the land of King Fahd, petrodollars and summers where the mercury boils at over 120 degrees: the Bob Males family, dispatched to Saudi Arabia last October, are back in Manistique for a visit.

"Greetings" isn't the appropriate word here, really—something along the lines of "marhaba, keef/halek" is probably more fitting. That translates roughly from the Arabic as "hello, how are you," according to Bob Males, former county commissioner who last year decided to set out with his family to work as a pharmacist in the land of "The Arabian Nights."

So, how does he like it in Tabuk, Saudi Arabia, a rural area of about 20,000? "It's really nice—really enjoyable," Males said. He added that his wife, Deb, and three children, Mandy, 7, Christopher, 4, and Shelby, 3, also enjoy life in a place most Yoopers can only imagine.

Does it really get that hot? Yes, but the 130-degree, egg-frying-hot days are the exception rather than the rule. Males said, "In the area where we live, in the northern part of the country, it's really quite moderate—similar to Arizona. Dry, with a similar temperature range. In the winter it got below freezing a couple of times."

Thanks to the dry climate, the heat is easily bearable. Males said. In the dog days of July and August, when the mercury routinely climbs to over 100 and peaks at 130, it's hot, but not as bad as it sounds, Males said.

Not so in Jeddah, the Maleses point of entry to Saudi Arabia last October, where it is both hot and humid. "It was really uncomfortable. I can't imagine what we'd do if we lived there," Males said.

A bigger shock than the blistering temperatures, according to Males, was having to get used to being a small minority—American, that is—under a strict government and among an Islamic people.

Then in the company compound where Males and his family live in air-conditioned wood frame "villas," Americans make up only about 12 percent of the 800 or so residents. Most of the rest are Middle Eastern—Jordanian or Lebanese—with Filipinos, British and other northern Europeans the next most prevalent nationalities.

"We're a minority," Males said. "You notice that right away—that all of a sudden there aren't many Americans."

"When I first got there, there were no westerners in my department. When they finally did arrive, especially the Americans, I really enjoyed it. You can talk about baseball, politics, different things—you don't realize how much you are going to miss that. That's probably the hardest thing."

"There's a big culture shock, but it doesn't take long to adapt to it," he said. Males has picked up enough Arabic to hold a conversation, however broken, and said that the Saudis are "very tolerant, very understanding" when he butchers their native tongue.

While struggling with the language barrier is one element in the culture shock he experienced, Males said general differences between the western and Islamic lifestyles are a lot broader than mere words.

Because of those differences, the Saudi government attempts to keep the western and native population segregated "to a degree," Males said. Drinking alcohol and, for women, wearing typical western attire outside the compound is strictly forbidden.

The penalty for offensive dress, drinking or other forbidden activities: a shaved head, possible jailing and deportation from the country. Males recounted the story of two women who went to downtown Tabuk in tight blue jeans, T-shirts and no bras. Besides taking a lot of verbal abuse from the Saudis, they were expelled from the country with clean-shaven heads.

"They mean it," Males said of the strict rules regarding dress and demeanor. "They're not kidding, but I've never heard of or seen anyone deported that didn't deserve it."

At home, on the company compound, men can dress and behave as they would in the U.S. "They just don't want the general population to be exposed to the western lifestyle that's against their religion," Males noted.

Despite the contrasts with the more open American lifestyle, Males said "Actually, when you get there, after a while nothing seems un-

Cutbacks

Painful but necessary

Officials heading up governmental agencies and departments at all levels (state, federal and even local) really disturb us at times.

Since they work for the government, many often times give you the impression that the work they are engaged in is totally different than that of private business operations. For some reason they seem to think that there should be an endless flow of money to fund governmental operations going at the same pace in good times as in bad.

We have made the point many times before and we would like to make it again. We find no basic difference between governmental operations and operating any private business. There cannot and should not be any guarantees.

When things get bad in the private business sector, whether it be large corporate business operations or the smallest of business firms, cutbacks have to be made for business survival. Employees have to be laid off or reductions in their hours made. Steps must be taken to reduce overhead costs in a variety of different ways even to the point of cutting back on coffee break times, personnel time off and various other "perks" that are allowed in good times. Department managers and supervisors are instructed to increase productivity and reduce costs, and if they don't, they are usually rather quickly let go and replaced with someone else.

Should the situation be any different for governmental heads of agencies, departments, etc.? We don't think so.

Since we are in some pretty rough times right now, most private business operators have found it necessary to make cutbacks. Those that haven't are heading rapidly toward the need to liquidate or go bankrupt.

Don't lament any longer about how tough and harmful it is going to be to have to make cutbacks, all you government leaders and heads of departments and agencies. It's a problem private business heads need to face often as business cycles go.

If governmental departments have to be given by a few less employees, even to the point of offering a little less or little slower service, we'll understand. To all you instructors in the public schools and colleges and universities we want you to know that the understanding it's harder to teach when the class sizes are larger but it can be done. Gee, we can remember when teachers and college instructors instructed in classes with two and three times as many pupils as you now have. We don't feel we got too bad an education, either.

Remember, working for government shouldn't be different than working for any other type of business. The funding pot isn't endless in governmental operations any more than in private business operations. In bad times cutbacks have to be made.

Tourist council: good idea but good luck ...

Dear Editor:

A Tourist Council? That's odd! I think they are a "day late and a dollar short," to put it mildly. Four years ago my mother and father-in-law moved to Manistique from Flint, and bought the Blue Spruce Motel. At that time, they suggested to the motel owners along US-2 that they form an organization. One of their main concerns was to do away with posting their rates.

I won't elaborate on the comments they received, but it's obvious how far they got.

So now, someone comes up with this fantastic idea to organize the motel owners. This fantastic idea shouldn't have been met with such contempt four years ago.

In that four years my in-laws have found out exactly how cut-throat the motel business can get along the US-2 Strip.

They learned of one motel owner who was leaving his sign lights on after he was full. This gave him the pleasure of attracting people in off the road. Telling them no vacancy, he would suggest they stay at his friend's motel down the strip, and to skip all the dirty, cheap motels in-between.

Is this the kind of people who can be a part of a successful Tourist Council?

They can organize all they want, they'll still get the back stabbing and "taking a room from their neighbors."

Maybe to some people, if these low prices mean cheap and dirty rooms, that's understandable. If no prices were posted each motel would have the same chance at tourist business. If a motel has comfortable, clean rooms, and hospitable hosts, they'll get the price they are worth. There has to be some kind of value on a person's hard work.

A large percentage of business is repeat business. If a person gets

The plans to drill wells to supply water to all the houses in the project raised another question for Bosanic. "I'm also worried about the water situation. I've lived in another area where the water table was lowered with so many wells going in."

She also felt that the development would change the unspoiled rural atmosphere of the surrounding area.

"We looked for a piece of property where it would be nice and quiet and everything.

"I'm just losing my privacy and according to our zoning laws it's not supposed to be that way," she said.

The Manistique Area Tourist Council is a good idea, one that should have been just as good four years ago. It's awfully hard for people around here to expect any new ideas, isn't it?

HUD holds fate of Germfask housing

Delay in a decision would also hold up construction on the other part of the $3 million project, construction of a three-story, 49-unit building in Manistique. Since the two parts of the project—16 units in Germfask and 48 in Manistique—are part of the same HUD financing package, Males said approval must be given for both at the same time.

In a related matter at Tuesday's meeting, the commission approved purchasing 3.54 acres of land from the county for the Manistique portion of the site for $20,000.

Males said approval must be given for both at the same time.

A HOMEBUILT MOTOR OIL RECYCLER

Staff researcher Dennis Burkholder has come up with a dandy little inexpensive device that allows him to recycle the lubricant in his car's crankcase.

"It's really a snap to put together, since all the plumbing pieces were manufactured to fit each other," Dennis points out. "The only real fabrication involved is cutting the pieces to size, drilling holes where indicated in the illustration, and forming the 90 degree arc in the gadget's one long leg...which I did with a tubing bender, but it could be done—in a pinch—by merely hand-bending the material (carefully, to avoid causing any come-weakening kinks). Also, I chose to weld all the legs to the angle iron support. However, anyone who doesn't have access to welding equipment could readily double-bolt each limb—including the curved one, after flattening its end and fitting it to one side of the angle—to the metal stanchion."

The actual filter element is nothing more than a roll of ordinary bathroom tissue, which is mounted on a "retrieving" pole and snugly fit into the 4" diameter PVC drainpipe. A center-drilled wooden disk serves as a support platform for the paper drum, yet is small enough to allow the lubricant to pass through the filter. Finally, an old can is fitted with a porcelain light bulb socket, provided with an access hatch for re-choosing an end-drilled so the whole affair can be slipped over the two-foot-long exit tube.

"The process starts when you pour the used motor oil into the opening of the large column. The lubricant passes through the layered roll of paper, at a speed that can be adjusted by the needle valve, and then drips into the inclined copper pipe, where the light bulb warms the insulated tin chamber surrounding that conduit section.

"Naturally, the heat is transferred to both the copper and the fluid passing within, and as a result of the 215 degree temperatures achieved, water vapor and—of course—higher volatiles such as unburned gasoline are driven from the liquid and exit out the high end of the tube as fumes. I've achieved my best processing results when operating the device with the control valve nearly shut to maintain a drip...simply because both the filter and the evaporator are then given more time to work."

The researcher has also discovered that a 60-watt bulb may not provide enough heat to maintain the necessary temperature (above the boiling point of water) in the vaporing chamber...so, if your work area is especially chilly, he suggests you use a 75-watt lamp.

Despite its "Rube Goldberg" appearance, MOTHER'S device has proved to be fairly effective. We sent "before" and "after" crankcase oil samples to an independent petroleum analysis laboratory, and the results—though not earth-shattering—indicated that the homebuilt recycler did an adequate job.

For instance, wear-causing iron, silicon, and chromium particles were reduced by 31, 7.4 and 16.6 percent, respectively. At the same time, the concentration of some beneficial additives—including magnesium, boron, and phosphorus detergents—increased to the tune of between 200 and 389 percent...while the Total Acid Number (a measure of low pH) decreased by 9.2 percent, probably as a result of the alkaline effect of the detergents. The final test showed that the viscosity was reduced by 10.4 percent...but it was still well within the acceptable limits, having an equivalent of about SAE30W.

Dennis prefers to recycle the oil from his own vehicles, rather than collect "strange" lubricant from the service station (where it may contain higher levels of dirt, antifreeze, and gasoline than does his "used" lubricant). But either way, he's saving cash with his T.P. reprocessor.

JOHN HALLEN was owner of the old Park Hotel top as well as wood worker extraordinaire, as shown by the model of an old British convict ship (bottom) that he carved, apparently inspired by what he saw as a sailor. (Photos from Mrs. Peter Bur-

Moral decay inspired Hallen's model ship

The ship's model pictured with its builder, John Hallen, was on display in the old Park Hotel. The legend on the back of the postcard reads:

MODEL OF THE BRITISH CONVICT SHIP "SUCCESS"

"A one-time floating museum visited by over 21 million people, while in the most important parts of the world, and receiving recognition by the nation's largest newspapers. A symbol of lives lost in destruction. Now is the time for all God-fearing men to come forward and help save the children of today from crime, sin and careless accidents, that we may not have a repetition of such days as that of the Convict Ship."

"Crime Does Not Pay"
Capt. John Manistique, Mich.
U.S.A."

John Hallen (pronounced Hollen) was proprietor of the old Park Hotel and his hobby was wood-working, at which he was quite adept. The urge to build this particular model was apparently inspired by what he considered to be a dangerous trend in the morals of our young people. It certainly was an attention-getter and as I recall was on display in the lobby of his hotel for several years. (Speaking of morals, what would he have to build today to get some attention?)

Mrs. Anna Wilson lived next door to the hotel and worked there to "help Mrs. Hallen." She reports that there were about 30 guest rooms, plus a large dining room on the second floor.

As you probably already know, the Park was originally the Chicago Lumbering Co. main office, and later the office of the Consolidated Lumber Co. when they purchased the interests of the original company. Mrs. Hallen often said they had made a good bargain when they took over, having bought the building for one dollar when the lumber company quit.

The hotel clientele at that time was mainly lumberjacks; then, as the timber operations tapered off, tourist traffic gradually replaced the "jacks," plus an occasional travelling salesman. I recall seeing old John hailing foreign cars as they entered the business district, to make his spiel on behalf of his business and sometimes he worked. By then, and before the big motel boom out on the highway, "tourist rooms" were quite a thing and many a family helped to make ends meet during the depression years by catering to the tourist trade.

The Hallens came to Manistique during World War I. Mrs. Hallen's name was Elizabeth, and you may remember the children: Maile (pron. My-le) and Arnie. Haven't heard about them for years but I remember the pony they used to keep out back of the hotel.

DNR REPORT

by Carol Smith
Newberry DNR Office

In the spring, does leave their wintering areas in small groups along with the young of the year before. The green succulent forage is a welcome change from winter fare of twigs, dry grass and assorted dry vegetation. Winter coats are lost, the does and fawns grow fat.

Old does often have two fawns, rearing does often have one fawn born close to the mother's second birthday. The gestation period is 205 to 212 days. The bulk of the fawning occurs during the last two weeks in May and the first two weeks in June, with the peak of birthing being around the first of June.

The doe strains off by herself to a secure, secluded spot where she has her fawn inside; except by the age old imprinting that tells her exactly what to do for food supplies and the home range - a good sealings have one fawn, older deer have two and often three fawns. Once in a while, in prime deer range, a doe can be born on July first - be bred that very fall and give birth to a fawn on her first birthday. On rare occasions a large, healthy doe has been known to produce four healthy fawns.

The doe leaves her fawn (7-8 lb. average) in a reasonably secure place, visiting from 5 to 15 times a day to nurse the newborn. The fawn's defense is to lie limp and go into a so-called "play dead" act. At first, fawns seem to have very little scent, do not travel, so leave no foot prints. These things, along with their camouflage spotted coat are their main defense. Once in a while a fawn becomes lost from its doe as a rule, the doe makes a frantic search and finds her offspring.

At 4 to 5 weeks of age they begin to follow their mother about, learning all the things that a young deer must know if they are to survive. Summer is spent growing, eating, frequenting their favorite water holes. Cud chewing, avoiding danger, laying up fat for the winter is the business of the summer.

Atlas' summer!

To date, 25 wildfires in District 4 have burned 268.1 acres. Causes were 13 fires - debris burning; 8 - campfires; 1 - smoking; 1 - equipment use; 1 - railroad; 1 - children; 1 - lightning; 1 - incendiary.

The Michigan Fisheries Division Master Angler Award Program for 1982 has accepted the following two brook trout entries for District 4: 3 lb. 1/2 oz. brookie caught in Ned's Lake Schoolcraft County by Greg Schweigert of Midland, Michigan and a two-pound ten ounce brook trout caught in Lost Lake, Schoolcraft County by Paul Magnusson of Gormfask.

HERRING - Hitting in the Cedarville-Hessel area - most of the boats checked last week had 40-50 herring each. "Run" should be moving up towards the lower St. Marys River and Drummond Island area as May fly hatch occurs.

PERCH - Are biting at the north end of Lake George, east of Sault Ste. Marie. Perch fishing has been good though spotty, throughout the channels at Les Cheneaux.

TROUT, SALMON - Lake trout are still hanging on at Cedarville off Gravelly Island; should be falling off soon. Brook trout fishermen have had the best success in the headwaters of the Tahquamenon, and up from McMillan Bridge, also, the Main Fox, Penfills and Halfday Creeks. Also productive are some of the trout lakes such as Banana and Bear Lakes, Schoolcraft County and others in the same vicinity.

WHITEFISH - Fishermen are getting a few by the power canal at the Soo; fishing expected to improve when the warm weather triggers the fly hatch.

MEMORINEE - Intermittent success Blind Sucker and Two Hearted River; a few have even been caught upstream in the Two Hearted.

"BUD" BURTON HONORED: Norman "Bud" Burton of Gormfask was honored by the Gormfask Men's Club recently at its annual awards night. Club President Jack Leach, left, presented Burton with a plaque for his work with the club's Little League team and other community projects. (Emily Leach photo)

In May of 1981 he organized the Little League Baseball Teams with 24 boys from the community. He also made the arrangements for a team to be entered into the Newberry VFW Little League with the help of coach Gordon Burns.

Leach also cited Burton for the following: helping to paint the bridge in Gormfask, building a fish shanty to be raffled by the Men's Club to raise money for the Little League team and other club projects. When the Men's Club cut and stacked wood for John Lesnjak, Burton operated the chain saw and kept four men busy splitting and stacking wood. He also helped his neighbors in getting wood put up for the winter, Leach said. Burton and his wife, Mary Ann, spent many hours working with the Little League Team as well as turning bottles and cans in for refunds, which were donated by Leffer's Grocery of Gormfask. Cake and ice cream were baked and served by the wives of members team to be entered into the Newberry VFW Little League with the help of coach Gordon Burns.

Contests highlight Thompson centennial

At a recent meeting of the Thompson Township planning committee for the centennial, guidelines were drawn for the various contests at the Aug. 7 celebration.

Dress contests for the best late 1800's costume will be decided on the basis of age groupings. Children under 12 years will comprise one contest; 13 and over will be judged as adults.

Boys, girls, men and women will be presented awards. Everyone is urged to participate.

The oldest man and oldest woman present who were born in Thompson Township but not necessarily current residents will be honored as senior king and senior queen. A junior king and junior queen will also be chosen. The children must have been born and raised in Thompson Township and be current residents. The age grouping is 2 years to 7 years, inclusive. Centennial dress is suggested. Anyone wanting to register for junior king or junior queen should call Carol Jamieson at 341-6821 on July 12, 13 or 14 between the hours of 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.

Centennial lapel buttons are now on sale or can be purchased at the celebration. A button purchase enters your name for the door prize drawing.

Plans are shaping up for a happy celebration on Aug. 7. Plan to attend.

There will be a final meeting of the committee on July 27 at 7 p.m. at the town hall. Volunteers to work August 7 are still needed. Everyone is welcome to attend the meeting and offer assistance. Even an hour will be appreciated.

Memories Jack Orr

Speaking of salesmen and the Park Hotel (No, this isn't going to be a travelling salesman story): Homer told me a good Prohibition story. One day as he stood in the Ford Garage helping Ted watch the girls go by, he noticed a strange vehicle pull up in front of the Park Hotel. It was sitting pretty low on the springs and his mind dawned the enticing suspicion that maybe . . . just maybe . . . this was due to an interesting cargo. Well, to play it safe, and to satisfy his curiosity, and maybe just for the hell of it, he called the law in on the case and sure enough this out-of-town visitor was a courier of Forbidden Fruit - real Canadian booze. To make a long story short, the law took its course, the contraband was confiscated, and our informer was rewarded. Said he still had some of that good stuff up in his attic!

Ah, yes; those were the days.

You must have heard the nickname for TV. The other day while I was the "boob" part of the monicker here suddenly appeared a good-looking young guy playing a harmonica. Instantly the name Hohner flashed through my mind. You remember too I'm sure that this was the trade name of the company that made the instrument years ago. Sure as you're a foot high this was a commercial for the Hohner company, still making their instrument after all these years. The only difference was that one of these little gadgets now costs you $12.95; no doubt the same gadget that my granddad sold for a quarter. And I still couldn't play one no matter what the cost.

Hope everyone had a grand Fourth of July.

I'm so excited to tell you about our profits from downtown bingo Friday and Saturday. It was hardly wait for this paper to be printed. But before I tell you our grand total I want to give you some background information.

We started playing bingo Friday evening about 6 p.m. and played until 11 p.m. On Saturday we started at noon and played until 10 p.m. A total of 200 games were played. Bingo cards were sold at 4 cents a piece or 6 for 25 cents. We played four split pots and there a winner take-all. For those of you who don't know bingo lingo, split-pots are when we collect the money and then pay half of the amount collected to whoever has a bingo. A winner take-all is just what it says—winner takes all that is collected and we keep nothing.

Now think about it for a minute: Two hundred games for every 100 game we played we kept nothing. Six cards for a quarter. How much profit did we make? If you guessed $446.75, you're right. I think that's great!

I've also got to extend thanks to some special people. We never would have been able to achieve what we did without Elton Sample. He called bingo many, many hours this weekend and we couldn't have done it without him. I think he was born with a bingo ball in his hand. He's a born bingo caller.

good things growing in Michigan

But Elton, I did have one complaint and I'm sure you'll know who it came from when you hear. A few people said you didn't call the right numbers. But I'm sure you've heard it all before. In all seriousness I want to thank you for a job well done. You really made the job alot easier on me and I truly appreciate you giving of your time so freely.

We also had other workers that helped. I also want to thank them for all their help: Darlene Welch, Pam Mulligan, Joe, Mrs. Thelma Rogers, Bill Washburn, Thelma Brauer and Ann Willoughby. Also a special thanks to the Masons for the use of the building. It takes a team to be successful and our team this weekend was unbeatable.

Congratulations are in order for Coral LeBlanc. She was our winner of the June Timepiece puzzle. We also thank Gloria Schubring, owner of the Flower Cottage for donating the prize of fresh flowers.

Don't forget, Friday is your last day to purchase tickets for the picnic at the Pines. Hope you all planning on attending. Remember we'll start setting up around 4 p.m. and plan on eating about 5 p.m. In case of bad weather we'll have it here at the Center.

Also, one other reminder is our bus trip to the Pine Tree Mall on July 22. We only have 14 people signed up and we are in need of 40 persons in order to take the trip, so please stop into the office if you are interested.

Memorials were given to the Center in the name of Chester Rivers by Herb and Shirley Asp; in the name of Chester Rivers by Liz Hamill; in the name of Agnes Forslund by Robert and Eileen Arrows; in the name of Lawrence Strasser by J.L. and Margaret LeDuc; in the name of Edith Olson by J.L. and Margaret LeDuc; in the name of Wanda Dehlin by J.L. and Margaret LeDuc; in the name of Kay Van Gode by Norm and Mabel Patz and in the name of Clyde Dixon by Diane Swanson.

An anonymous person donated newsletter postage to help defray mailing costs and also gave a monetary donation towards bingo prizes.

A monetary donation to our building fund came from one person who wishes to remain anonymous. "Grandma's Attic" donations came from Irene Winkler, Irene Stovick, Martha Cool, Margaret Beach, May Stovick, Roy and Germaine Wester, Todd and Stella Anderson, Nellie Massey and Grace Rudkosoff of Coak.

Files Publishing, Inc. gave a generous donation of plastic cups that we used at our downtown bingo over the Fourth of July weekend.

Mabel Patz stopped into the Center for a visit and dropped off some pictures that he took at our Arts and Crafts Fair.

Lydia Bouschor and Kay McDermott dropped some cards off at the Center to be used by our card players.

We wish to thank each and every one of you for your concern. Birthday greetings go out to: Amelia Graphos, Florence Lakbeer, Mary Popish, Eric Webb, July 9; Ray (Dude) Rauguerie, Maude Carrelle, Ella Crawford, Alice McNamara, July 10; Vivian Auvinen, Art LaMontagne, Ferrera McCarty, July 11; Wells Bowers, Beatrice Buzzo, Leon Duquette, Thor Reque, Mgr. Francis Scheninger, Evelyn Weber, July 12; Roy Briggs, July 13; Alma Bundy, Lillian M. Caffey, Gerry Hehola, Nellie Massey, Olive Rogers, July 14; and Lorna Rochefort, July 15.

Direct deposit has advantages

by Amy Bliski

People in the Schoolcraft County area who receive Social Security checks can easily arrange to have them deposited directly into an account at any financial institution. Direct deposit can be made to a bank, savings and loan association or similar institution, or Federal or State chartered credit union.

Having checks deposited directly into an account has several advantages. They include:

- The person does not have to stand in line to cash or deposit the check.
- Money is immediately available if the person is away from home.
- No check cashing problems.
- No chance of a check being stolen.

To arrange for direct deposit, a person should contact the financial institution and ask for direct deposit form SF-1199. Completing the form only authorizes deposits; it does not authorize withdrawals from an account.

People considering direct deposit should ask the financial institution how it will handle direct deposit and once a person has his or her check deposited directly, he or she should continue to notify Social Security of any change in address or other event which may affect receipt of checks.

This is important since Social Security needs a person's correct address so that notices can be sent properly. For more information about direct deposit, get in touch with a financial institution or ask one of the social security representatives who will be at the Manistique courthouse every first and third Wednesday of the month from 10 a.m. - 1 p.m. Most social security business can be handled by telephone. The toll free number is 1-800-562-4820.
